SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The special committee appointed relative to the extending of an invitation to the president to address the convention will meet immediately after the session in the conference room. Mr. Romney, chairman.

The scheduled meeting of the miscellaneous provisions and schedule committee will begin at 8:30 tomorrow morning instead of 9:00 o'clock as previously announced. Mr. Erickson, chairman.

You are reminded that at the meeting of the subcommittee on higher education, Thursday, tomorrow morning, any delegate wishing to appear on behalf of his or her proposal will be welcome at 9:00 a.m. in room J. Mr. Bonisteel, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on local government will meet at 7:30 p.m. this evening, room A; 8:30 a.m. tomorrow; 1:00 o'clock p.m. on Friday. Arthur Elliott, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet Friday, right after the session. Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, there will be no meeting of the education committee after the session today.

Mr. President, I sent to the desk certain subcommittee reassignments for the committee on education and ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be printed in the journal.

Following are the subcommittee reassignments for the committee on education:

Subcommittee reassignments:

Miss Vera Andrus (libraries) — higher education

Theodore S. Brown (libraries) — higher education

Richard D. Kuhn (libraries)—elementary and secondary education

Bert M. Heideman (libraries) — higher education

H. Carl Spitler (elementary and secondary education)—school finance

Jack Faxon (libraries)—elementary and secondary education

The subcommittee on libraries and other provisions has been dissolved.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following request for leave: Mr. Romney requests to be excused from the sessions of Thursday and Friday, January 18 and 19, to keep long time commitments in Argentina and South America.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. President, sometimes it becomes incumbent upon one to make a motion before a body that brings down the wrath of the organization upon his head. However, there is one very pleasant motion that can be made and I will make that motion now, that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

We are adjourned until tomorrow at 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 5:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Thursday, January 18, 1962.]

SIXTIETH DAY

Thursday, January 18, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation will be given by the Reverend Dr. Seth C. Morrow, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Lansing. Will you please rise.

DR. MORROW: Eternal God, our heavenly Father, save this moment from being merely a gesture to custom or convention; make it a real experience for each of us in this place, as we call uopn Thee for guidance and for help.

Grant to the members of this convention a sacred moment of quiet ere they take up their duties. Let them not think, when this prayer is said, that their dependence upon Thee is over, and forget Thy counsels for the rest of the day. Rather from these moments of heart searching, may there come such a sweetness of disposition that all may know that Thou art in this place, the unseen delegate, present and voting. Speak to these men and women, O Christ, that what they say, and what they do may be in accordance with Thy will for this great state; and through their dependence on Thee, may they have wisdom in their decisions, understanding in their thinking, love in their attitudes, and mercy in their judgments. So help us all this day, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Romney and Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, submits the following report and recommends its adoption:

1. That the constitutional convention prepare a single convention record which would include the verbatim proceedings and debates plus those portions of the daily action journal needed to make the convention record complete.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, may we vote on these recommendations separately, please?

PRESIDENT NISBET: If you care to.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and members of the convention, to give you the background on this recommendation, the 1907 and '08 convention printed 2 records of their activities. One was called an action journal; another a verbatim journal.

At present in this convention we will have 3 records. We will have a daily action journal that you receive every day; we will have a corrected action journal, and then a verbatim journal which includes the debates of this convention in plenary session. The decision of the committee on administration to combine all 3 of these, thereby having a complete record of all the spoken and written words of this convention in plenary session, is to synchronize in logical sequence everything that we have done on the floor of this convention. We estimate that this will go to 3 volumes. I move the adoption of this recommendation of the committee on administration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the recommendation of the committee. All in favor, please say aye. Opposed, no.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I just wanted to ask, this does not mean we will not continue every day to get our action journal as we are now, does it?

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, Mr. Wanger, this refers to the record of convention after adjournment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Dr. DeVries. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: I don't want to interfere with the motion. I just want to ask a question. Is there a contemplated action of the committee regarding the distribution of such copies, the number of copies and all the rest of it?

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, that is the third recommendation, Dr. Norris.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The first recommendation is concurred in. Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: 2. That the constitutional convention include in the preface to the convention record a section presenting the pictures of the delegates and staff, and a short biography of each delegate.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates the 1907 and '08 convention published a manual, and this is it right here. And in the manual is a copy of the constitution and a picture and biography of all the members of that convention. There were 1,250 copies distributed. Now, the committee on administration felt that we should do the same, but we shouldn't publish a separate manual, so we have provided in this recommendation that in the preface of the convention record would be a picture and a biography of each of the delegates, and pictures of the staff with their titles. This would be, as I said, put into the preface to the record. You will have a choice of the picture to go into this convention record. If you do not have a picture and you want one taken, we have made arrangements with a commercial photographer to take a new picture—or to retouch an old one. (laughter) I move the adoption.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the second recommendation of the committee.

Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. President, I question the desirability of including pictures of the delegates in the manual. It appears that there is a definite, good, valid reason for having a biography. If a historian in years to come should want to look back to see what our background was to ascertain why we took a certain stand, he can do so from our biography. But it appears to me that a picture of each delegate would only serve a very vain purpose of each delegate wanting to have his face before people in the future. I can see no desirability in spending the taxpayers' money for this kind of a thing.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, fellow delegates, Mr. Walker, we did consider this problem carefully. Mr. Beaman noted that he would like to have his picture omitted if this constitutional draft did not pass. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the second recommendation of the committee. All in favor please say aye. Opposed, no.

The second recommendation is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: 3. That the constitutional convention produce at least 3,000 copies of the convention record by letter press printing.

[Walter DeVries, chairman.]

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the committee has tentatively decided on the distribution of 3,000 copies of the convention record. Briefly, they would go to these institutions or people: 4 year college and university libraries, county law libraries, public libraries, the state libraries; delegates would receive up to 5; staff would get 1; legislators, supreme court justices, executive officers, circuit judges and miscellaneous. This would leave for sale 1,230 copies of the convention record. I move the adoption of the committee recommendation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is concurring in the third recommendation of the committee. Is there any discussion? Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, I suggest you change the words "letter press" to "publish" so any means can be used. A broader word, "publish."

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, Mr. Lesinski, the constitution requires that this record be printed.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is there any further discussion? If not, all in favor of the recommendation say aye. Opposed, no.

The third recommendation is concurred in.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, if I may make an oral report on behalf of the committee for information purposes, the committee has authorized the purchase of an alarm system to be used in notifying delegates when a session is about to start or when we are about to reconvene after a recess or when a vote is to be taken. We hope to have this installed by Monday. It will extend to every corner of constitution hall. The secretary will make a detailed explanation of the signals to be used in this system. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, any further report?

SECRETARY CHASE: Following the installation of this bell warning system, the signals to notify the delegates of pending business will be as follows: 3 rings will be given about 2 minutes in advance, which will indicate the calling of the convention to order either at the opening of a daily session or before the termination of a recess; 2 rings will indicate the committee of the whole is about to rise and make its report; and 1 ring will indicate that a record roll call vote is about to be taken.

Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule introduces Committee Proposal 25, A proposal to amend article XVI, section 2 of the present constitution pertaining to oath of office; with the recommendation that it pass.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 25 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 708.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Some time ago this convention passed a resolution inviting former presidents of the United States to speak to our convention. Included in those was President Hoover, who notified the convention that because of his age and difficulty, he did not think it wise to attend, upon advice of his physician. At that time he was asked to send some communication to us in the form of advice or suggestions. It has been received. It has been in the hands of the committee and this afternoon, with your permission, I would like to ask Vice President Hutchinson to read this letter from former President Hoover. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, members of the constitutional convention, the following letter was received by the president from former President Hoover:

The Waldorf Astoria Towers
New York 22, New York
January 15, 1962

Mr. Stephen S. Nisbet
President
Michigan constitutional convention
Constitution Hall
Lansing, Michigan

My dear Mr. Nisbet:

I have before me your invitation on behalf of the Michigan constitutional convention to attend its sessions. I regret that the limitations of 87 years, plus, prevent me from accepting that great honor.

From your vice president, Mr. George Romney, I have received a request that if I cannot attend I should send some suggestions on the matters before the convention. It is with some diffidence that I make suggestions to such an able body of delegates. And no doubt, any suggestions of mine are already before you. However, I respond by touching upon certain basic concepts of representative government.

I

The overriding need is to create a succinct, flexible document of guiding principles which will enable their expansion by legislative action.

The separation of powers is of course essential to any American constitution. In this light I suggest that the convention avoid the so called "referendums" now current in certain state constitutions. One result of such procedures is confusion of legislative and executive powers, and to clutter the constitution by legislative actions based on emotion and propaganda, which circumvents the safeguards of legislative consideration and any check by the governor of the state.

II

Restatement of a bill of rights

Some of the rights of the individual are no doubt inherited from the Declaration of Independence. The actual Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the United States was adopted from the Constitution of the State of Virginia, and all state constitutions have given leadership to the nation in this field. But since the original federal declaration and your state Constitution of 1908, these rights have been expanded, and in some particulars they have been curtailed.

I suggest that it would be a service to the whole country if you would reexamine our basic "rights" and reenumerate them in your constitution.

I also suggest that consideration should be given by you to the definition of an additional right. That is, that there should be no inhibitions to the right of any individual to choose or to practice his calling, trade, or profession. No doubt, in certain callings, such as teaching or medicine, the state must reserve the right to determine the fitness of individuals to enter upon such a profession but this is no limitation on such a right by competent persons.

III

Restatement of state rights

Obviously state government involves constant problems arising from the relations of the states to the federal government. I do not need to state that it is vital to the public welfare that the efficiency and vigor of state and local government be preserved.

Since the Constitution of the United States was adopted, these rights have been greatly limited by constitutional and legislative action of the federal government. I suggest that a concise restatement of the present rights of the states would also be of service to the whole nation.

Further, a public statement from your convention as to prospective encroachments by federal legislative action, such as control of the public schools, would give leadership to our country.

IV

Administrative problems amid the changing American life

Our problems of government are steadily increasing because of the growth and movement of population, and because of new scientific discoveries, inventions and ideas. All of these forces impose new complexities on the government of the state.

These complexities demand men and women of more and more experience in administration. These administrators obviously fall into 2 groups: first, the elected officials and second, officials selected to administer the special agencies which may be created to meet these problems.

As to elected officials, no doubt you will consider the extension of terms of office and the privileges of reelection.

As to special agencies dealing with the promotion of economic and social welfare such as education, support of the needy, advancement of scientific, agricultural and mineral production, I suggest that experience shows that these agencies should not be created in your constitution, but that full authority to do so should be vested in the legislative arm.

In passing, I may mention that their legislative creations should so far as possible stipulate nonpartisan administration. Furthermore, while the creation of advisory boards is often desirable, the administration of such special agencies should not be placed in the hands of boards or commissions except in the regulatory field. The top officials of such agencies as I have mentioned should be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the state senate, and should be continued in office so long as they prove competent.

V

Law enforcement

Our law enforcement machinery has been steadily undermined by legislative action or judicial decisions until it is no longer a deterrent to crime. Crime is increasing steadily —and faster than the population. Only a minor percentage of the persons arrested reach actual conviction and punishment. I suggest that in the creation of law enforcement agencies in your constitution, you give consideration to the tortuous delays of legal procedures, the practices of suspended sentences, pardons, and paroles. Our system of law enforcement came from the English common law. The British still make it work. We need to get tough.

With good wishes and great respect,

Yours faithfully,
Herbert Hoover.

(applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you very much, Senator Hutchinson.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing there.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions. Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. President, I would like to move that item 1 on general orders, Committee Proposal 15, be placed on special orders for Monday of next week, January 22.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Iverson. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, the committee has no objection to this, but I would like the record to show that our report was ready to be presented to the floor of the convention December 15. At the request of the president it was put over until after the holidays. It was debated thoroughly here. Now is the second time of postponement, and I believe it is now January 18. I just want the record to show that.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Dr. Pollock.

The question is on the motion of Mr. Iverson. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Are there any further motions or resolutions?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries offers Resolution 65, A resolution of the constitutional convention requesting action by the legislature pertaining to the orderly completion of convention business in the carrying out of the convention's obligations after adjournment.

Following is Resolution 65 as offered:

Whereas, The constitutional convention has constitutional and statutory obligations after it adjourns to do the following things:

a. Carry out the convention's constitutional obligations to provide "for the printing and distribution of its documents, journals, and proceedings";

b. Provide for the dissemination of information about, and an explanation of, the proposed constitution to the people of the state (address to the people);

c. Make all necessary arrangements and perform all necessary duties in order to restore the civic center in accordance with the terms of the lease by which it is occupied;

d. Take such other steps as may be necessary and desirable to bring the "business of the convention" to orderly completion and preserve its records, documents and papers; and

e. Employ staff to perform the tasks and obligations herein described and compensate such staff and convention delegates designated by convention resolution to perform the tasks herein set out; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the convention request the legislature to enact legislation:

1. To create a constitutional convention post adjournment commission, consisting of the president of the convention as the chairman, the vice presidents of the convention, and 6 additional convention delegates, to be appointed by the president of the convention; that the commission be authorized by law to carry out tasks and obligations stated above after the convention adjourns; that the life of the commission expire on the date of the election on the proposed constitution;

2. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to expend any balance remaining at the time of the adjournment of the convention from the appropriation heretofore granted the convention to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated;

3. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to dispose of property acquired by the convention in such manner as may be determined by the commission so as to insure a fair and reasonable return for the property disposed of and to permit the commission to use the funds thus received to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated; and

4. To provide that moneys not expended or obligated at the time of the termination of the life of the constitutional convention post adjournment commission revert to the general fund of the state; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The resolution is referred to the committee on administration.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege. Yesterday, when we were discussing the upper peninsula and the Mackinac bridge, one of my colleagues suggested that those who couldn't make a living in the upper peninsula better move west. (laughter) This bothered me quite a little, not being a squatter, but being a fourth generation homeowner. Last evening I gave this matter a great deal of consideration, so I have a new plan for the upper peninsula, and I am sure it will receive favorable comment. I feel that we should secede from Michigan and the nation and set up the United States of Superior. (laughter) As such we would be a foreign country and eligible for foreign aid. (laughter and applause) So under those conditions we would get a free bridge and all our financial troubles would be over. Thank you. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I rise to support my good friend, Mrs. Butler. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: It is nice to have comments like that before we get into real serious material. (laughter)

Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar for today.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of certain items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. DeVries. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. DeVries assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The committee will come to order and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. Amends article VI, section 22.

Following is Committee Proposal 22 as read by the secretary and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The state civil service shall consist of all positions in the state service except those filled by popular election, heads of departments, members of boards and commissions AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER THEREOF, employees of courts of record, of the legislature, of the higher STATE educational institutions [recognized by the state constitution], all persons in the [military and naval forces] ARMED FORCES of the state, 8 EXEMPT POSITIONS IN THE OFFICE OF GOVERNOR, [and not to exceed 2 other exempt positions for each elected administrative officer, and each department, board and commission,] AND WITHIN EACH DEPARTMENT, WHEN REQUESTED BY THE DEPARTMENT HEAD, 2 OTHER EXEMPT POSITIONS, ONE OF WHICH SHALL BE POLICY MAKING. THREE ADDITIONAL POSITIONS OF A POLICY MAKING NATURE MAY BE EXEMPTED WITHIN EACH DEPARTMENT AS DETERMINED TO BE NECESSARY BY THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

There is hereby created a nonsalaried civil service commission to consist of 4 persons, not more than 2 of whom shall be members of the same political party, appointed by the governor for 8 year, overlapping terms[,]. [the 4 original appointments to be for 2, 4, 6 and 8 years respectively. This commission shall supersede all existing state personnel agencies and succeed to their appropriations, records, supplies, equipment, and other property.]

The commission shall classify all positions in the state civil service according to their respective duties and responsibilities, fix rates of compensation for all classes of positions, approve or disapprove disbursement for all personnel services, determine by competitive performance exclusively on the basis of merit, efficiency and fitness the qualifications of all candidates for positions in the state civil service, make rules and regulations covering all personnel transactions, and regulate all conditions of employment in the state civil service. THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION SHALL RECOMMEND TO THE GOVERNOR AND TO THE LEGISLATURE RATES OF COMPENSATION FOR ALL APPOINTED UNCLASSIFIED POSITIONS WITHIN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. No person shall be appointed to or promoted in the state civil service who has not been certified as so qualified for such appointment or promotion by the commission. [No removals from or demotions in the state civil service shall be made for partisan, racial or religious consideration.] THE EXECUTIVE MAY CREATE OR ABOLISH POSITIONS FOR REASONS OF ADMINISTRATIVE EFFICIENCY WITHOUT THE APPROVAL OF THE COMMISSION. NO REMOVALS, DEMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS OR PROMOTIONS IN THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE SHALL BE MADE FOR PARTISAN, RACIAL OR RELIGIOUS CONSIDERATIONS. NOR SHALL THE CREATION OR ABOLITION OF POSITIONS BE MADE FOR SUCH CONSIDERATIONS.

The administration of the commission's powers shall be vested in a state personnel director who shall be a member of the state civil service and who shall be responsible to and selected by the commission after open competitive examination.

To enable the commission to [execute] EXERCISE these powers, the legislature [shall appropriate for the 6 months period ending June 30, 1941, a sum of not less than ½ of 1 per cent, and for each and every subsequent fiscal year, a sum not less than 1 per cent, of the aggregate annual payroll of the state service for the preceding fiscal year as certified to by the commission.], AT THE FIRST REGULAR SESSION SUBSEQUENT TO THE ADOPTION OF THIS CONSTITUTION AND AT EACH SUCCEEDING REGULAR SESSION, SHALL APPROPRIATE TO THE COMMISSION FOR THE ENSUING FISCAL PERIOD A SUM NOT LESS THAN 1 PER CENT OF THE AGGREGATE ANNUAL PAYROLL OF THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE FOR THE PRECEDING FISCAL PERIOD, AS CERTIFIED TO BY THE COMMISSION. THE COMMISSION SHALL RETURN TO THE STATE TREASURY WITHIN 6 MONTHS ALL FUNDS UNEXPENDED AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF THE FISCAL PERIOD.

[After August 1, 1941,] No payment for personal services shall be made or authorized until the provisions of this amendment have been complied with in every particular. Violation of any of the provisions hereof may be restrained or observance compelled by injunctive or mandamus proceedings brought by any citizen of the state.

[This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January following the approval thereof.]

THE COMMISSION SHALL FURNISH REPORTS OF EXPENDITURES, AT LEAST ANNUALLY, TO THE GOVERNOR AND THE LEGISLATURE AND SHALL BE SUBJECT TO ANNUAL AUDIT AS PROVIDED BY LAW.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 22:

The proposed revision of the civil service section of the constitution now before the convention is the product of a thorough inquiry by the committee into the history, the philosophy, and the day to day operation of civil service in state government.

At the outset it should be understood that when our inquiry started, one or 2 members of the committee viewed civil service with reverence but a majority viewed it with skepticism and inquisitiveness. A majority of the members of the committee approached the task with a feeling there were abuses in the Michigan system which needed correction. From those who maintained the contrary, we demanded proof. In most cases, proof which was given satisfied the majority of the committee. In those cases where it did not satisfy the majority, changes were approved.

The committee, over a 2 month period, questioned more than 40 witnesses, with reference to civil service, including officials of the civil service commission, former governors and administrative board members, past and present members of the legislature, representatives of state employee organizations, state administrators, and experts from other states.

All witnesses advised and the committee was unanimous in deciding that the civil service merit system should be retained and that the Michigan constitution should contain a detailed civil service provision.

The proposed revision is designed to continue Michigan's national leadership among the states in public personnel practice, and to foster and encourage a career service in state government, effecting rigid limitations on political patronage, yet strengthening the role of the chief executive and the administrator.

* * * * *

"Sec. 22. The state civil service shall consist of all positions in the state service except those filled by popular election, heads of departments, members of boards and commissions AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER THEREOF,".

Because of an ambiguity in the constitution, the civil service commission classified the chief administrative officers of 9 boards or commissions at the request of these boards or commissions. This language will permanently prevent such classification and reserve these positions for political appointment without tenure.

"employees of courts of record, of the legislature, of the higher STATE educational institutions [recognized by the state constitution], all persons in the [military and naval forces] ARMED FORCES of the state, 8 EXEMPT POSITIONS IN THE OFFICE OF GOVERNOR,".

Line 8, page 1:

No state higher educational institution not recognized in the constitution is presently operating under the state civil service system. The proposed change in language merely brings the constitution into line with existing practice. The committee recognizes that all present higher state educational institutions may be recognized in the new constitution. Nevertheless, the committee recommends the present revision in order to provide for future educational institutions.

Line 10, page 1:

The committee is not aware of any dissent from the principle that the governor's office should be staffed with policy personnel of the governor's choice. In the past, the governor's staff (with the exception of the 2 exempt positions allowed under the present constitution) has been given provisional civil service appointments. After such appointments are made all parties concerned have winked at the constitution by not requiring such provisional employees to obtain permanent civil service status through examinations as would seem to be required by the present constitution. The committee is not overly critical of the practice but we do feel that such situations should not be continued. Therefore, the committee recommends the suggested new language to make the constitution accord with practice.

Eight exemptions are adequate in the committee's best judgment. The figure corresponds with the general practice of the governor's office in the last few years. Language such as "all positions in the office of the governor" was rejected because such an open end arrangement invites abuse in the form of a mushrooming expansion of functions in the governor's office.

"[and not to exceed 2 other exempt positions for each elected administrative officer, and each department, board and commission,] AND WITHIN EACH DEPARTMENT, WHEN REQUESTED BY THE DEPARTMENT HEAD, 2 OTHER EXEMPT POSITIONS, ONE OF WHICH SHALL BE POLICY MAKING. THREE ADDITIONAL POSITIONS OF A POLICY MAKING NATURE MAY BE EXEMPTED WITHIN EACH DEPARTMENT AS DETERMINED TO BE NECESSARY BY THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.".

The whole exemption section as proposed is based upon the presumption that administrative agencies and departments will be mandatorily reduced from the present 120 to a figure in the vicinity of 20. The initial question centers around the 2 exempt positions. Should there be 2 exempt positions which cannot be classified? Keeping such positions unclassified would provide personnel sensitive to policy changes. Weighed against this obviously desirable result are the following:

1. It is conceivable some departments would not need this many nontenure personnel.

2. It is difficult in some technical areas such as mental health to get a nonpolitical deputy unless tenure can be offered. This applies particularly to personnel that would be brought in from outside the state of Michigan.

In allowing any department head to have 2 exempt positions on a request instead of required basis we are attempting to escape the evils involved in a mandatory number of exemptions and yet provide flexibility in order to facilitate response to policy changes.

The requirement here that one of the exempt positions be policy making is a further attempt to insure that the exemption is used for an important position. No restriction is placed on the other exemption in order to allow the department head to select a confidential secretary if one is desired.

It was felt that there should be some flexibility in the number of policy making exemptions in order to take into account variances in size and types of the departments. Discretion in this matter could be given to the governor, legislature, department heads, or the civil service commission. None of the above have indicated any great interest in being given this chore. The committee felt that the civil service commission was the best equipped and the most desirable agency to handle this responsibility.

The figure of 3 is a consensus view of the committee. Some members of the committee feel the number is too lenient; and some favor a limited expansion. It should be realized that consolidation of departments with a vertical integration of function requires fewer policy personnel as opposed to the horizontal organization presently experienced in Michigan. Commissioner Mackie, head of the department most often mentioned in connection with increased exemptions, testified before our committee that 5 or 6 exempt personnel would be adequate for his department.

The stricken language is transitional material which was necessary when the amendment was adopted but is no longer required.

"The commission shall classify all positions in the state civil service according to their respective duties and responsibilities, fix rates of compensation for all classes of positions, approve or disapprove disbursements for all personnel services, determine by competitive performance exclusively on the basis of merit, efficiency and fitness the qualifications of all candidates for positions in the state civil service, make rules and regulations covering all personnel transactions, and regulate all conditions of employment in the state civil service. THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION SHALL RECOMMEND TO THE GOVERNOR AND TO THE LEGISLATURE RATES OF COMPENSATION FOR ALL APPOINTED UNCLASSIFIED POSITIONS WITHIN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.".

A substantial majority of the committee recommends that no additional provision leading to direct legislative control or veto of wage determinations be added. The legislature has control, as it properly should, of appropriations. Thus there is a control on the total number of dollars expended on salaries for state classified employees.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

It is not a question of economy, as many would suggest, but rather a question of objective. Is our objective a civil service of quantity or quality? When necessity requires, we live within our budget by holding wages down and the number of employees constant or we allow necessary wage increments to keep wage rates competitive and live within the amount of available dollars by adjusting the number of employees. That either of the alternatives is necessary is unfortunate. Reality dictates that they must be considered.

It has been claimed the present amendment forces the legislature to appropriate money for pay raises. The best refutation of that argument is the performance of the 1961 legislature, which in fact did just the opposite and struck out of the governor's general fund budget items for a 3 per cent pay raise. In this case, a number of agencies financed by general fund moneys had to cut back either in employees or through other economies to fill the gap.

The committee believes that quality is preferable to quantity. This the present system tends to accomplish. The feeling is evident, though not absolutely provable, that legislative control of wage rates would ultimately result in the opposite, i.e., the quantity principle being predominant. The 1936 civil service study commission found that the quantity principle was the general Michigan policy in 1936 and prior thereto when wage rates were set by the legislature. Present and former state legislators appearing before the committee also expressed the view that direct legislative control of wage rates was undesirable because it was likely to result in a chronically depressed wage scale. A modification was proposed to the committee which would establish a system whereby the legislature could veto or adjust by a 2/3 vote of both houses any wage scale established by the civil service commission. A large majority of the committee felt, however, that this concept of direct legislative control is in conflict with the type of civil service system which Michigan wants and needs. It can be legitimately asked whether the 2/3 proposal pays any more than lip service to the principle. In a state with nearly equal political division, a 2/3 vote in both houses on a question of salaries for civil service employees would be very exceptional. It may then be legitimately asked that if the 2/3 vote idea does no harm and yet gives some recognition to the principle of legislative control, why not put it in.

The committee members had many complicated and varied reasons for their stand. Certainly, the feeling was strong that ultimately the 2/3 requirement would be lowered as a result of political pressure to a majority with the consequent damage to the system discussed above.

It is the majority view of the committee that the civil service commission should have authority to establish geographic wage differentials. The present amendment makes no mention of geographic wage differentials. There is a 1945 attorney general's opinion which interprets the word "classes" in line 3 so as to prohibit geographic wage differentials.

The committee feels the matter can be handled without adding additional language by the convention specifically recording itself as intending that the language of the section does give discretion and authority to the civil service commission to establish geographic wage differentials and that the word "classes" used in the section is not intended to prohibit such geographic wage differentials.

"No person shall be appointed to or promoted in the state civil service who has not been certified as so qualified for such appointment or promotion by the commission. [No removals from or demotions in the state civil service shall be made for partisan, racial or religious consideration.] THE EXECUTIVE MAY CREATE OR ABOLISH POSITIONS FOR REASONS OF ADMINISTRATIVE EFFICIENCY WITHOUT THE APPROVAL OF THE COMMISSION. NO REMOVALS, DEMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS OR PROMOTIONS IN THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE SHALL BE MADE FOR PARTISAN, RACIAL OR RELIGIOUS CONSIDERATIONS. NOR SHALL THE CREATION OR ABOLITION OF POSITIONS BE MADE FOR SUCH CONSIDERATIONS.".

Under the authority of the case of Kunzig vs. Liquor Control Commission, 327 Michigan 474, all changes in numbers and types of positions are subject to the advance approval of the civil service commission. As it now stands under the Kunzig case, state agencies must demonstrate that the desired abolition of a position is not for any racial, religious or partisan reason. The effect of the new language is to allow the administrator greater leeway in the establishment or abolition of positions. Under the new language, abolition or creation of positions for partisan, racial or religious considerations is still absolutely prohibited. No member of the committee disputes the idea that there should be vigorous enforcement of this section which prohibits changes for partisan, racial or religious considerations. The committee has also provided that no appointment or promotion shall be made for partisan, racial or religious consideration.

"The administration of the commission's powers shall be vested in a state personnel director who shall be a member of the state civil service and who shall be responsible to and selected by the commission after open competitive examination.

To enable the commission to [execute] EXERCISE these powers, the legislature [shall appropriate for the 6 months period ending June 30, 1941, a sum of not less than ½ of 1 per cent, and for each and every subsequent fiscal year, a sum not less than 1 per cent, of the aggregate annual payroll of the state service for the preceding fiscal year as certified to by the commission.], AT THE FIRST REGULAR SESSION SUBSEQUENT TO THE ADOPTION OF THIS CONSTITUTION AND AT EACH SUCCEEDING REGULAR SESSION, SHALL APPROPRIATE TO THE COMMISSION FOR THE ENSUING FISCAL PERIOD A SUM NOT LESS THAN 1 PER CENT OF THE AGGREGATE ANNUAL PAYROLL OF THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE FOR THE PRECEDING FISCAL PERIOD, AS CERTIFIED TO BY THE COMMISSION. THE COMMISSION SHALL RETURN TO THE STATE TREASURY WITHIN 6 MONTHS ALL FUNDS UNEXPENDED AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF THE FISCAL PERIOD.".

No substantive change is intended here. Unneeded transitional material has been stricken and new language added to put this section into operation. A substantial majority of the committee approached the matter of the civil service appropriation in a searching manner. The burden of proof, so to speak, was on the civil service system to justify the present provision. The committee, individually and collectively, studied the civil service budget, made cost comparisons with other states, and inspected the civil service quarters. Everything pointed to an efficiently operated civil service system.

Present figures indicate that civil service is operating on approximately .85 per cent of the aggregate annual payroll. The percentage figure has dropped as the size of the state payroll has increased, reflecting a spreading of fixed overhead costs. Undoubtedly the obvious reaction under these circumstances is to cut the constitutional appropriation to accord with actual usage. The committee, however, reasoned to the contrary that the preservation of the .15 per cent margin was desirable. The commission does not appear to have abused its extraordinary privilege of a mandatory appropriation. It has acted, as far as can be determined, very conscientiously. Its restraint in the handling of its appropriation should not be rewarded by hamstringing its budget for the future.

It should be further understood that the unexpended balance of the civil service appropriation is a "paper balance" on the books of the department of administration. In other words, the commission does not collect its 1 per cent appropriation at the start of the year, thus draining the state treasury.

The requirement that the commission return any unexpended funds within 6 months after the end of the fiscal period was felt by a majority of the committee to eliminate one possible abuse. In practice the commission has regularly released its unexpended balances.

It seems reasonable to assume that reduction of the civil service appropriation could result in the commission forcing itself to spend the whole appropriation every year in order to prevent its economic operation from being rewarded in the future by a further constitutional cut in its appropriation. The committee believes that a reduction could well be a "penny wise, pound foolish" proposition.

"[After August 1, 1941,] No payment for personal services shall be made or authorized until the provisions of this amendment have been complied with in every particular. Violation of any of the provisions hereof may be restrained or observance compelled by injunctive or mandamus proceedings brought by any citizen of the state.

Although there was no testimony to this effect, a number of the committee members were informally advised the civil service commission expended its money without any accountability. We found, however, that they have an annual audit by the state agency division of the auditor general's department and that further they do their purchasing through standard channels in the department of administration. However, because of the unique manner in which they receive their appropriation, it was felt this section would be desirable to close the door to any possible future abuse.

Following is the minority report to Committee Proposal 22 as offered, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 22:

We propose that the following language be inserted in the so called civil service amendment (article VI, section 22) following the language "conditions of employment in the state civil service.", on page 2, line 7, of Committee Proposal 22:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

INCREASES IN RATES OF COMPENSATION IN THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE SHALL BE PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION AND WILL BECOME EFFECTIVE UNLESS REJECTED, MODIFIED, OR REDUCED BY 2/3 VOTE OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF BOTH HOUSES OF THE LEGISLATURE WITHIN 60 DAYS AFTER SUBMISSION OF SUCH PROPOSED INCREASES TO THE LEGISLATURE. NO INCREASES IN RATES OF COMPENSATION SHALL TAKE EFFECT UNTIL THE FIRST DAY OF THE FISCAL YEAR FOLLOWING SUBMISSION OF SUCH PROPOSED INCREASES TO THE LEGISLATURE. SUCH PROPOSED INCREASES MUST BE SUBMITTED TO THE LEGISLATURE AS PART OF THE GOVERNOR'S BUDGET FOR A FISCAL YEAR IN ORDER TO BE EFFECTIVE ON THE FIRST DAY OF SUCH FISCAL YEAR. THE LEGISLATURE MAY NOT REDUCE RATES OF COMPENSATION BELOW THOSE IN EFFECT AT THE TIME OF THE SUBMISSION OF A PROPOSED INCREASE.

Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 22:

Testimony has been heard by the committee on executive branch to the effect that no change should be made in the rate fixing powers of the civil service commission. There has also been testimony to the effect that fixing rates of compensation for classified personnel is a legislative function. The undersigned minority of said committee recommend amendment of the committee proposal as hereinafter indicated, in the belief that there should be some accountability to the legislature with respect to the rate fixing process.

To those who believe civil service should be accountable to the legislature, this accountability is provided by granting the legislature a "veto" power over rate increases proposed by civil service. For those who favor retention of this power by civil service it should be pointed out that civil service retains the initiating power to raise rates under the proposed language. Also, as a practical proposition, the requirement of a 2/3 vote of both houses to reject, modify or reduce the commission's recommendations, means that the veto power could not be exercised readily, and would undoubtedly be exercised only in the event of a real abuse by the commission. Additionally, the legislature is prohibited from reducing salaries below those existing at the time of the proposal for increase.

The proposed amendment also requires that proposed rate increases be submitted to the legislature along with the governor's budget. This would give constitutional affirmation to the practice followed by the commission during the past few years, and also ensure that the commission did not lapse into practices followed earlier of declaring a pay raise at any time. It is not intended that the governor would have the power to control pay rates by virtue of the requirement that proposed increases be included as part of his budget. Only an orderly procedure is sought and intended.

The amendment is not offered as a means of undercutting the merit system, nor should it be construed as an attempt to return to the spoils or patronage system. On the contrary, it is believed that the merit system must be maintained, and that it has proven itself a valuable asset to the state. The amendment is offered in the spirit of providing accountability to the legislature, and to the people, by a fourth branch of our government which heretofore has not in many respects been susceptible to the normal checks and balances. It is our hope that if adopted, this language would lead to a greater understanding between civil service and the legislature, and ultimately mutual respect for one another, which apparently has been lacking in the past.

SECRETARY CHASE (continuing): The secretary would like to announce that there have been filed with the secretary 2 amendments that are proposed by the committee on executive branch, an amendment by Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer, in accordance with their minority report; an amendment by Mr. Yeager; an amendment by Mr. Tubbs; an amendment by Mr. Marshall; and 2 amendments by Mr. Downs.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Without objection, they will be considered in that order. I hear none.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

[Committee Proposal 22 was read by the secretary. During the reading, Mr. Baginski moved that the proposal be considered read, to which motion Mr. Martin objected.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, if I might make a statement on this proposal, I would like to do so. It is Committee Proposal 22, section 22 of article VI of the constitution. By way of history, the matter was first brought up at our last constitutional convention and was rejected. Some 30 years later we established a civil service commission by statute that lasted one year and then the ripper bill tore out about half of the state civil service employees and reduced the appropriation from $250,000 to something like $75,000. A year later the citizens of the state, with leadership from various people, at least 2 of whom are in this convention as delegates, passed the civil service amendment, and since then we have had over 20 years of operation under the present amendment.

It has not been without controversy. On something like 14 occasions the legislature has endeavored to in some way alter the situation by legislation of one kind or another. In general, the supreme court has upheld the position and responsibility of the commission, including its right to a mandatory appropriation, and its power to fix rates of pay. At one time such pay raises were made without reference to whether appropriation bills had been acted upon or not, or rather without regard to what the state of the appropriations was at that time. This created a great deal of friction—battling between the legislature and the civil service commission.

In recent times there has been a different practice — since about 1956—and I want to give you just a word on this because it is not fully understood as to what that practice is today. The commission has a staff which makes continuing studies of the rates of pay in private enterprise and in public service both inside and outside the state of Michigan. Those studies go on at all times for the purpose of preparing material for the commission itself so they can judge as to whether the rates of pay in particular parts of the civil service in Michigan are comparable with the rates of pay for comparable work in both private enterprise and in public service outside the state of Michigan. The object of this — and this is important—is to attract and retain qualified personnel for state service and to maintain a stable work force with a minimum turnover. And for that reason it is the policy of the commission to maintain the compensation of state employees at a level which is comparable to and competitive with private enterprise, with the federal government and with the other states. The purpose, of course, is to prevent raiding and to prevent qualified employees from being drawn off into other service. The reason is that good employees are hard to get, and new employees are costly to train. The turnover before the civil service provisions were placed in the constitution, according to the study made by the civil service study commission which went into this matter rather carefully, was about 25 per cent each year.

I can't give you all of the testimony which we had before the committee on this matter, but it ran through some 40 witnesses of all kinds: government employees, members of the commission, former governors, former state administrative board members, present board members, members of employee organizations and experts on the subject of civil service from this state and from other states, but I can quote to you very briefly some figures from the report which was made in 1936 on this subject:

The turnover in the state service averaged 25 per cent a year, and this figure held for years when there was no party change, and even for years when there was no change in the governor.

Turnover was due to politics, to low pay, to lack of security or lack of opportunity for advancement, poor conditions of work, to absence of retirement plans.

Nepotism was rampant. One in 5 employees had relatives in the service.

Political activity took much of the employee's time. Contributions to the "flower fund" were a must no matter how meager the pay.

Only 56 per cent of the employees had reached the twelfth grade in school. Twenty-five per cent had not gone beyond the eighth grade.

In experience, 20 per cent had never worked anywhere before, and 53 per cent had less than 5 years' experience before entering the state service.

There was no pay plan. Each department was a law unto itself. With wide inequalities in pay for equal work, the person with the most political backing got the best pay.

We found great laxity in payroll procedures, few deductions for lost time, no supervision of sick leaves, vacations or hours of work. The employee was paid a straight salary, and the check kept coming until a dismissal order came through. Payroll padding was always a possibility.

And then just this additional. All this added up to a great financial loss to the taxpayer. Conservative estimates of the cost of breaking in new employees every year was half a million dollars. Today, with over 30,000 employees, the cost could run to perhaps $2 million.

Double salaries for the same job were paid for weeks and months at a time, as the outgoing employee was held over to train the new one. Other costs to the taxpayer resulting from the spoils system came from loose payroll practices, time lost in political activities, excessive salaries to political favorites and excessive numbers of jobs.

I only quote that little bit to indicate that we are dealing with a matter which today we don't fully realize was as serious as it was then.

Now, the practice today, then, is that after these studies are made by the commission, if adjustments are found to be necessary, the commission communicates whatever adjustments it thinks are required, either blanket raises or individual adjustments in individual departments, to the budget division, and it does this in November or December, as early as it can. The figures transmitted are then included in the budget, because they are there in plenty of time to be included in it, and they are submitted to the legislature not later than the date on which the budget is submitted by the governor. This enables the legislature to plan forward, because the proposed adjustments do not come into effect until the following July first. This gives the legislature some 4 to 6 months to do its planning. The result has been that friction has been largely eliminated, and that relations between the commission and the legislature are, by general agreement, vastly improved.

Now, this again is important, the legislature can do one of two things with this information. The legislature can approve the requested increase or it may hold the total available for personnel, either across the board or in particular departments, to the preceding level, or it may reduce that total, so that the result is that the individual agency has to absorb, if that is done, the increase in pay raises. It can do this either by not filling jobs which fall vacant, or it can do it by laying off employees. The alternative to that, of course, is to place the general control of pay rates in the hands of the legislature. But, as we will point out in connection with the minority report, we feel that the present method of control is a better one than turning the problem of pay rates over to the legislature.

The conclusions which the committee reached were these: after as thorough and searching a study as we could make—and in doing that, we listened to every possible complaint and criticism that we could find, and examined it as carefully as we could—we concluded, first, that no one on the committee, certainly, and we don't really believe anyone in this convention wanted to return to the spoils system as we had it in 1936. Second, we were impressed with the kind of system that we have, because we concluded from the testimony that the Michigan civil service system is outstanding in the United States and that it is one of the 2 or 3 best systems in the country. Third, we concluded that this is true because it has constitutional protection, not in general terms but in some detail. Fourth, that this system had vastly improved the quality of state service, and that it had reduced to a fraction the enormous amount of time formerly spent by department heads dealing with job hunters and their proponents. Fifth, that it has enabled the state to both get and keep good personnel, because state salaries are on a level with those in private enterprise and in other government activity; that a good civil service system is not cheap—we don't think this is an inexpensive operation—but that Michigan's system has not been extravagant, and in fact has saved large amounts of money in preventing heavy turnover, reduced efficiency and the high cost of training new personnel. Finally, the committee concluded that there were certain changes which should be made, which are set forth in the committee proposal, which we believe improve the operation of the system but which do not in any way threaten the excellence of the program.

The committee, as the secretary has said, has 2 committee amendments on the secretary's desk which were made in consultation with the committee after the matter had been reported out to the floor because of matters called to our attention at that time. And with that, Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield either to Dr. Pollock, if he wishes to make a statement at this time, or to Mr. Durst, who will explain the various items of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The secretary will read the committee amendments.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Durst, on behalf of the committee on executive branch, offers the first amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "commissions" by striking out "and" and inserting a comma; and line 7, after "officer" by striking out "thereof" and inserting "of boards and commissions heading principal departments"; so that the language will then read:

> The state civil service shall consist of all positions in the state service except those filled by popular election, heads of departments, members of boards and commissions, the chief executive officer of boards and commissions heading principal departments, employees of courts of record",

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Adrian, Mr. Durst, speaking on the committee amendment.

MR. DURST: Thank you, Mr. DeVries. I would like, if I may, to make a preliminary statement and then take up the civil service proposal in the sections in which it is printed in the journal. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the proposed revision which you have before you on civil service is made to you and recommended to you by the committee on executive branch after a very thorough inquiry. As Mr. Martin has indicated, we have looked into the history and the philosophy and the day to day operation of the civil service system in Michigan. I would like to make it clear at the outset that this inquiry was a very searching one and a very critical inquiry of civil service. I say this even though on the committee on executive branch we have 2 very eminent gentlemen who came to Lansing with extensive experience in civil service and with a preconceived idea that we should keep the system pretty much as it was. I refer here to Dr. Pollock, who is regarded by many as the father of civil service in Michigan, and also to Mr. William Marshall, who has had extensive experience in the personnel practices in many areas and also with state employees. I think it is fair to say that a majority of the committee—if not the balance of the committee—when they came down here, had reservations about what should be done in the area of civil service and thought there should be some changes.

I know, speaking personally—although I had no great knowledge of civil service—I was generally under the impression that there should be some changes to correct what I thought were abuses, and I know during the election I was asked by civil service employees in my area to make a commitment that I would back the civil service amendment as it presently exists, and this I refused to do. Yet, after listening to the extensive testimony and making some rather thorough personal investigations, which many members of the committee made, I think many of my opinions and conceptions of civil service have changed. In this regard I would like just briefly to thank the civil service commission, Personnel Director Franklin DeWald and his staff for their great cooperation. I know we have been demanding over the months. Hardly a week went by through the fall when some member of our committee did not request the civil service commission to supply us with this piece of information or that piece of information, and I can well imagine it became rather vexing to them and their patience grew thin. But they have always cooperated very cheerfully with whatever we requested.

Now, as Mr. Martin pointed out, the committee has reached certain basic decisions, and 2 of these — which were unanimous, I am sure — were that we should have a civil service merit system in Michigan; and, second, that the Michigan constitution should contain a detailed civil service provision. I think we might pause a minute and give the reasons why we have reached that conclusion. Mr. Martin has given you some of them. Characteristic of the testimony on the question of whether or not we should have a civil service merit system in Michigan was that which we received from Mr. Clarence Lock, present commissioner of the department of revenue in Michigan. Mr. Lock in the late '30s was director of the state land office. And in part the statement he gave to our committee went as follows:

> It became my duty as the executive head of the department to interview literally hundreds of applicants for these positions, most of whom brought with them recommendations and endorsements from the governor's office, from various state officials, from legislators or from county chairmen of the respective counties. One can readily recognize the pressures which were exerted, particularly when the department in turn had to seek appropriations from the legislature whose members were interested in finding jobs for their constituents.
> During this period I became acquainted with the operation of the state board of tax administration, which was the predecessor of the department of revenue. This department came into being in 1933 with the adoption of the sales tax. During the '30s it was administered by political appointees.
> During this period of time there were recurring scandals; audits of certain taxpayers mysteriously disappeared; and some taxpayers' files even disappeared entirely. It was common gossip that audits could be settled by proper contact with certain individuals.

We had lots of testimony to this effect.

Delegate Brake, who sits real close to me here, appeared before our committee, and while I must be careful in quoting him since he is present, I think the gist of his testimony in this regard was that during the time he was in state service in the '30s, that he was besieged by office seekers, which took up a good deal of his time that he would have preferred to give to other more important state business.

Along this same line I might just briefly quote from the same report which Mr. Martin referred to, the 1936 civil service study commission, which was composed of several individuals appointed by the late Governor Frank Fitzgerald. Two delegates to this convention, Dr. Pollock and Mrs. Judd, were members. That report is long, but in a brief summary, in describing the conditions that existed before the advent of civil service in Michigan, I might just take a moment and go over it. The report says:

> Political considerations were preeminent. Administrators spend an extraordinary and valuable part of their time dealing with patronage problems and then are rewarded for their pains with incompetent employees who owe allegiance and feel responsibility not to the administrators but to the political influence that obtained their jobs for them. Former Governor Comstock testified at one of our hearings that he had about 3 hours of irritating contact with job hunters every day.
> Competent employees, of whom there are many, are prevented from giving full service to their work by their harrowing worry of constant insecurity and political interference. It is impossible to estimate how much time is lost to the state because employees get their jobs politically, are expected and required to repay these favors by working for their political sponsors even during working hours, but the loss is considerable. Morale is of the lowest order. Officials who have no sympathy for the system are nevertheless caught in its meshes. No official, no matter however high minded, can change the rules of the political game. In the final analysis it is a system for which citizens are principally to blame, and which they alone can rectify.

This is characteristic of the kind of facts and information that was presented to us.

I don't believe there was any witness, even those who were critical of the civil service operation, who wanted to suggest that we do away with the merit system in principle which we have in Michigan.

Now, the second question we might answer is why a detailed provision such as we have here, which in many ways is legislative in character? Probably the answer to this lies in the history of civil service in the state, and in part the history of civil service in the other states of this union. I have no desire to bore this committee with facts which are probably well known to many of you; however, I must confess that, since these events happened some 20 to 25 years ago, they were not well known to me, and I suspect that there are a few delegates that are in the same boat. So if I may, just briefly, I would like to quote from the testimony which Mrs. Judd gave before our committee which very concisely sets forth the history of this affair. These are just excerpts from her testimony. She says:

Here in Michigan, Dr. Pollock continued his years of quiet prodding, "When are you going to do something about civil service?"

Then one day from a most unexpected source came official support for the merit system. Governor Fitzgerald, exasperated, as he said, with job seekers' cigar ashes in his coffee, stated in a speech that Michigan must have the merit system in its civil service.

Next day the Michigan league of women voters invited him to join a nationwide radio hookup to promote the merit system, an invitation he obligingly accepted.

Soon Governor Fitzgerald called Dr. Pollock, and from there the Michigan civil service study commission was developed with Pollock as chairman. From their work developed the model civil service bill which passed in 1937 during Governor Murphy's administration.

Thereby hangs a thrilling tale of citizen action I won't take your time to relate, except to mention the 10,000 individually signed postcards arriving in one week on the desk of a reluctant senator from Grand Rapids.

The civil service commission of Michigan's leading citizens was appointed. One of the country's most experienced civil service directors was employed. Seventeen thousand qualifying exams were given to the state's current employees.

But in 1939 the legislature had a change of heart as they saw the spoils system fading away, and they passed the ripper bill removing nearly half the state jobs from the merit system and cutting the appropriation from $250,000 to $75,000.

The commissioners whose terms had not expired resigned, and the merit system association had to start its job anew.

Dr. Pollock and Dr. Upson drafted a constitutional amendment.

The league of women voters did the work on the initiatory petitions. The people adopted the amendment in November, 1940. Strong, almost universal newspaper support throughout the state accounted in great measure for its success.

I might just add to that what Mr. Martin mentioned a little earlier. There have been since then, I believe he said, 14 attempts by the state legislature to circumvent one way or another the provisions of the present civil service amendment.

Now, if this were all, if it were unique just to Michigan, this type of history, we might say it was time to disregard it and maybe time had passed the problem by, but as we look around at other states in this nation, we find the problem is not unique to Michigan. Many states have had a similar experience. Just to mention a few, in Montana in the early '50s, a civil service system was inaugurated, and to date the legislature of Montana has refused to appropriate any funds to operate the system. Illinois, which had a functioning system of civil service, ended up at one time with almost half of its employees declassified and room made for political appointees. Oklahoma, which, after a great campaign or a strenuous campaign by its governor, set up a civil service system, but finds itself still with no money appropriated by the legislature to run it; in fact, a repealer bill presently is before the Oklahoma legislature.

I think it is safe to characterize all the testimony which we heard as indicating that everybody, even those critical of civil service, believe that it is necesary to have a detailed provision in the constitution, and again, referring to Mr. Brake, it was his opinion that it would be unwise, even at this date, to dispense with a detailed provision on civil service.

Now there, in brief, you have the reasons why our committee unanimously decided that it was necessary to draft and continue a detailed constitutional provision guaranteeing a merit system in Michigan. I would like to say that it was the general conclusion of people who appeared before our committee — and as far as I can determine and the committee can determine from what personal investigations we have made — that at the present time Michigan ranks with the states of New York and California as having one of the finest civil service systems in the nation. It is our hope that the proposal that we have before you will continue that system.

I would like now, Mr. Chairman, to move to the specific provisions, and if it is in order, I would like to have them taken up as they appear in the committee's report in the journal in phrasing. Is that permissible?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Do you want to offer the amendments at this time?

MR. DURST: One has already been offered, Mr. Chairman, and that is to the first section.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are you speaking on the amendment?

MR. DURST: No, in the report we have broken up the proposal so we don't consider the whole thing, at least initially, as one unit, so we can do it piece by piece and discuss the various issues. Rule 38 reads that we will consider the proposal by clauses, and I submit that as it is broken down in the journal, in the committee report, that would be a more proper way of considering the matter; page 312 of the journal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The secretary will read the amendment, Mr. Durst.

SECRETARY CHASE: Page 312 of the journal, column 2. The entire proposal is listed there, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Well, in the committee comment on the proposal, Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: At the bottom of page 313?

MR. DURST: It is impossible to break this section up into sections as they say the bill of rights was, but if we could take the phrasing of the first clause where separated by comment and consider them one at a time, it would be very helpful.

MR. DURST: What I had in mind, Mr. Chase, was not necessarily reading the committee report, but may we take that part of the phrase that precedes that comment at this time and then move on to the next one?

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you. It begins with the first paragraph in the proposal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, parliamentary inquiry. Is it the intent of the Chair to take the committee proposal paragraph by paragraph, as has been done in the past, or each proposed change which the committee recommends? I would submit that rather than take each proposed change which the committee recommends and vote on each change, it would be more orderly to take each paragraph and then have any other amendments which affect the separate paragraphs considered at the time of the consideration of the paragraph under discussion.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hatch, it is the Chair's understanding that the committee has 2 amendments to offer to the body of the proposal, and I thought we were considering those. Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: I would prefer to take, as it appears in the committee comment or in the committee report, the first clause. Whatever amendments there are to that, let's consider that as a unit and then pass on to the next clause.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if you would let Mr. Durst review the committee amendments in the first paragraph, and then the committee could just simply indicate there their purpose, and then we can consider the committee amendments and any other amendments to that paragraph and proceed down in that way.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair understands that in Committee Proposal 22 we will consider it paragraph by paragraph, and at this time you want to consider the first paragraph of the proposal?

MR. MARTIN: Consider the first paragraph from line 5 to line 16, if Mr. Durst would review the explanation for those changes, and then we will consider the committee amendment, and then after that any other amendments which are offered to that paragraph.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Martin may have answered the question I was going to raise. Delegate Durst referred to looking at the printed journal, but so far in our procedure whenever we have had an amendment come in and we have discussed anything, we have referred to the committee proposal itself as is given to us on the green sheets. I think we are going to get awfully confused if we start considering any amendments in terms of looking at the journal, Mr. Durst. We can read our comments in the journal, but when we are talking about the amendments, refer back to this.

MR. DURST: That is fine, Mr. Allen. All I would like to do is break it up in consideration as it is in the committee report of reasons, because if we get all changes at one time, we won't know what we are going to be talking about. It is broken down in major areas in the report.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst, I think Mr. Allen's point is well taken. We should stick with the established procedure and use the committee proposal on green paper as the basis for our discussion.

MR. DURST: You want to do it paragraph by paragraph; is that it?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: We are discussing lines 5 through 16 of the first paragraph in the committee proposal.

MR. DURST: All right. The secretary will read the paragraph then.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first paragraph:

[Paragraph 1 of Committee Proposal 22 was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 637.]

MR. DURST: We have had the committee amendment offered already, haven't we, Mr. Chairman?

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee amendment is as follows:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst, speaking on the committee amendment.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, the first change which has been made here is to add to the group of people who are exempt from being covered by civil service the chief executive officer of boards and commissions heading principal departments.

We should first of all realize that the committee is making a presumption here. We face the same problem the committee on finance and taxation had, that it is impossible to submit everything to the floor at one time. But we do have under consideration in our committee a proposal which would require executive reorganization, mandatorily require the reduction of the present 120 agencies of the state to a figure somewhere in the vicinity of 20, we will say. If this committee or the convention does not adopt that proposal and require executive reorganization, then it will be necessary to reconsider these proposals in light of what we do later, but this civil service amendment is drafted with the idea in mind that that executive reorganization will ultimately be put into the new constitution.

So what we have in mind here is where we have a board or commission which heads a principal department — if there are 20 departments or 30 departments, some of these may be made up of boards or commissions — that the chief executive officer would be a political appointee. He would not be able to be classified under civil service, and would be exempt as are the heads of departments. Now, we have limited it by the amendment to the boards or commissions heading principal departments. It was called to our attention that it is possible under this reorganization that you might have all types of little minor commissions under principal departments. It was not the intention of the committee to open up this whole field to exempting the officer from civil service, but it is our desire — and we recommend to you — that the chief executive officer of these boards and commissions be exempt.

Now, the second change on line 8 provides that the —

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst, would you like the committee to vote on your first amendment before we proceed to the second?

MR. DURST: All right.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I would like to ask a question before you vote on it. And I want to preface it by saying I am for civil service. I helped Governor Murphy put it in and get it going in '37, and I have no quarrel with the benefits of civil service for the employees of the state. My question is, taking for example the University of Michigan, last year I think we paid $35 million in support of the University of Michigan. Why shouldn't the janitor at the University of Michigan — I am speaking of the nonteaching employees; we don't want to influence the teaching there — have the same job security and the same benefits of civil service as a janitor in the state capitol?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Ostrow, are you addressing that question to the Chair, Mr. Durst, or Dr. Pollock?

MR. OSTROW: Anybody that wants to answer it. I have been trying to get the answer since 1937. (laughter)

MR. DURST: I don't know. Maybe Dr. Pollock can give a better answer, Mr. Ostrow, but I would say that as it presently stands, there is no school of higher education operated by the state of Michigan which has its employees under civil service. All of them do have, to my knowledge, separate merit systems of their own. Certainly the University of Michigan does and I am sure Michigan State does. None of these people from any of these institutions have made any request whatsoever to our committee to be included, and as far as we can determine, they are perfectly happy under the systems they have now.

MR. OSTROW: That may or may not be. I want to know why they are exempted.

MR. DURST: Dr. Hannah, do you want to make a comment?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: I would only say that when you are talking about nonteaching employees, a university has a great many employees that are technically trained. The only folks that we regard as teaching employees are those that come in the ranks of professors, associate professors, assistant professors or instructors. There are a great many technical employees that are research assistants, technicians of all kinds in the sciences and elsewhere, and it would certainly hamper us in our operations if we were required to have these people operate through the state civil service system.

The response that you have made with reference to the University of Michigan, Michigan State and Wayne — and I assume it is true at the other institutions — is we do have a classified service, and I think that our people feel that those in the classified service are at least as well off as they are under state civil service. They have many opportunities that those under the state civil service system do not get. There has been no demand at all on the part of our employees for it. I am sure they are better off as they are taken care of now. They have all the protection and job security they would have under the state civil service commission.

MR. OSTROW: May I ask you, Dr. Hannah, how permanent is that security that they have? Do they have a right to it as they do under this constitution?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Well, I think they have all of the rights. I know of no personnel policies that are more secure or deeply entrenched than those in universities, often to the embarrassment of the institutions themselves.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I can only add the historical reason when the amendment was originally drafted. We took, of course, the best advice and experience that existed in the country, and we were persuaded at that time that all institutions of higher learning should be exempted entirely from the operation of civil sevice. This has continued to be the policy throughout the country. And, as Mr. Durst has indicated, the experience under it has been entirely satisfactory. There has been no request from these institutions to include any of their employees under civil service.

MR. OSTROW: What would be the objection to including them?

MR. POLLOCK: I think it would be the question of running employees outside of Lansing from Lansing.

MR. OSTROW: Don't you have that with the state institutions all over the state of Michigan?

MR. POLLOCK: Yes, but again I have said educational institutions have always been considered to be in a different category, and the preservation of their independence is always considered to be a very great necessity.

MR. OSTROW: You mean a janitor has to be independent or a clerk has to be independent?

MR. POLLOCK: No, no, obviously not, but those employees are already taken care of and managed properly by their own systems in each one of these institutions.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Gentlemen, may I suggest that you submit your remarks through the Chair. The question is on the amendment of the committee on executive branch and offered by Mr. Durst. Is there any further discussion on the amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

MR. DURST: He read the whole paragraph. Do you wish to proceed then, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Do you wish to discuss the paragraph further before we pass on that?

MR. DURST: I take it what you want to do is go to the next committee amendment. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: It was your suggestion, Mr. Durst, or it was the Chair's ruling, that we take this paragraph by paragraph and approve each paragraph.

MR. DURST: Right. Well, we have no further amendments. Do you wish to have the rest of this paragraph explained at this time?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: I will ask if there are any further amendments to be made to the first paragraph of Committee Proposal 22.

MR. DURST: You don't want the changes explained?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: We just adopted the amendment you offered to the first paragraph, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: What about the rest of the substantive changes in the paragraph? Do you wish to adopt them without discussion?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: You want to explain the committee's position on the rest of the paragraph; is that correct?

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, that is what I would like to have done, if Mr. Durst would go ahead and explain the position, the reasons for these later changes in the rest of the paragraph, then if there are other amendments to the paragraph, we will take them and act on them.

MR. DURST: Is that agreeable, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Yes, sir.

MR. DURST: We have already discussed Mr. Ostrow's question, the second change made there. We have eliminated state institutions recognized by the state constitution, so it will cover any state higher educational institution regardless of whether it is recognized in the constitution or not.

Now, we have made a change, changing "military and naval forces" to "armed forces." This is merely to accord with the language previously adopted by this committee in regard to this matter.

We have exempted 8 positions in the office of the governor. Now, no one seriously questioned, of those we came in contact with, the idea that the governor should have staff in his office which were of his own choice. In the past the constitution required, really, that these people be civil service personnel except for the 2 exempt positions. What they have done, apparently, since the adoption of civil service is make provisional appointments as the governor might suggest, and then they just never got around to giving the qualifying examination and giving the employee permanent civil service status. While we are not here to be critical of what has been done—it apparently was done with the concurrence of all parties—we do feel it is desirable to make the constitution accord with practice, and therefore we are putting a provision in specifically exempting positions in the governor's office.

Now, we picked the figure of 8 because this seems to accord with the practice of the last few years in the governor's office. This seems to be the number of personnel which he needs of this policy type. Now, he can have, of course, civil service personnel, if he wants typists and other personnel of that sort, above and beyond the exemption.

We did consider a provision which would read that all positions in the governor's office should be exempt, and this was rejected on the ground that it opens the field up, because it is possible to put all kinds of functions in the governor's office. This has happened — not to evade civil service — in New York under their reorganization. When they have a new agency, they put it in the governor's office, and the executive office of the governor became a very large establishment. And this could happen here, either inadvertently or specifically to escape the provisions of civil service. This is why the language is so specific. Now, the exemptions that you have there, as I say, must be considered in light of impending provisions requiring executive reorganization.

The first question we had is, should there be 2 exempt positions which cannot be classified? As I am sure most of you are aware, at the present time civil service has classified several employees who were in previously exempt positions, just as they have classified some chief executive officers of agencies. There have been requests from departments to classify more and more of these people, so that you have some departments operating today that have no employees exempt from civil service. Now, certainly, if you keep these positions exempt, you have the advantage of always having positions which are sensitive to policy changes, whether in the same administration or a change of administration. The weight against this is the argument that some agencies just do not need unclassified personnel. This was the argument made to us by Mr. Lock in regard to his department of revenue. Just briefly, he claimed that the department of revenue is purely an administrative agency. He went on to say that they had no policy making functions in his department. He said some proposals have been made to enlarge the number of unclassified positions in various state departments.

> Insofar as the department of revenue is concerned, I wish to voice my objections to these proposals. If you would take 5, 7 or 10 employees of the department of revenue occupying the key positions and authorize their appointments to be made on partisan considerations, it would completely wreck the morale of the department as it now exists.

He further said:

> It should likewise be pointed out that there is no place for political determinations in the revenue department administering state taxes. There should never be a situation where a change in the administration of state government would result in the substitution of a hard policy or a soft policy in tax determinations or vice versa.

Now, this is one consideration. The other was that there are some departments whose deputies and top administrators are really technical personnel such as in the department of mental health where often the top deputy will be a very qualified psychiatrist. These people are difficult to obtain on a political basis in a nontenure job. So there is some argument on the other side that it should not always be mandatory that you have these 2 exempt positions at the top.

So what we have tried to do here is to give it flexibility, trying to preserve the idea of being able to change with policy changes but still be able to give job security to the top administrators if necessary, so that the way this system works is that all the personnel in the department, other than the department head, may be classified under civil service but the top administrator may, if he so desires, bring in 2 exempt positions whenever he should find it necessary. Now, we have required mandatorily that one of these positions be policy making. This, of course, is an attempt to keep this exempt position for important positions. We have left the other one open because we feel it is desirable that the administrator have the right, if he so desires, to have a confidential secretary. We realize this could be subject to some abuse, but it seemed under all the circumstances to be desirable.

Now, the last provision there of the exemption section is an attempt to give some flexibility. There was a great deal of testimony that to require, rigidly, 2 exemptions for each department does not meet the needs of the various departments of the state; that there are many departments which have a need for more exempt personnel, and some less.

So what we have done is allow for the appointment of 3 additional policy making positions on exempt basis and left the determination of when this should be established to the civil service commission. We could have given this power to the governor; we could give it to the legislature; we could give it to the department heads. Frankly, the present governor said he wasn't interested in having it, and by the same token the present civil service commission said they were not interested in having this power. But in the total decision of the committee, it seemed preferable that this power be given to this commission which is normally charged with the responsibilities in this area.

Now, how we arrived at the figure of 3. There has been some criticism here of people just arriving at a consensus view such as on the exemption section that the committee on legislative powers brought forth. There is no book you can turn to and say, "What shall this figure be?" We did have testimony from Commissioner Mackie that 5 or 6 exempt positions were all that he felt were necessary in his department. He has perhaps the department which is not necessarily the largest but the one that is mentioned most often as needing more exempt personnel. So this provision would give him 5, and it was felt to be sufficient under all circumstances.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have a question of the committee about the first paragraph regarding the words "chief executive officer." First of all, I have looked at it and I have studied it and I have looked at the present language and I am a little bit confused as to what the words chief executive officer mean precisely. The committee report on page 313 of the journal talks about chief administrative officers. It goes through in that regard. It would seem that administrative is a little bit more clear, and I would like to have that clarified.

And then the second question I have in this regard is simply that if the intent and perhaps the meaning of this word executive officer is that of administrative officer, I would like to ask isn't that exactly the type of position that we want to keep classified? The professional administrator who from years of experience and work knows the workings of one of these departments so that he can be the professional key man; and the appointee, the head of the department, can be the policy or political key man in the running of these departments. That is the second question, and I yield for the answer.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Wanger, I would say that this chief executive officer first of all applies only where you have a board or commission, and it is the feeling of the committee that where you have this situation, the chief executive officer really is the head of the department. While he doesn't have control of the department, I suppose, he still is making a great many policy decisions, and we felt he should be exempt and subject to being appointed by that board as it saw fit without being classified in civil service.

As to your suggestion that it read chief administrative officer rather than chief executive officer, the words, I think, to the committee mean the same, and if this whole committee feels the word administrative is better than executive we would have no objection.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I was wondering if in some cases the chief administrative officer or executive, as one would call him, actually is the head of the department, actually does make policy decisions. If this is the case, is this any failure on his part, or is it not perhaps the fact that the man who was politically appointed as head of the department is inadequate?

MR. DURST: If I may, Mr. Chairman, it is not a man appointed head of the department; it is a commission. Now, some commissions are very strong. Some commissions are not so strong. But I submit that when you have a commission, that ultimately the chief administrative or executive officer, whatever you want to call him, will have a great deal of responsibility, and he should be exempt. This, at least, is the committee's recommendation.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, following along on this same problem, I would like to raise this aspect of it. Mr. Durst's reference to Mr. Lock reminded me of a problem. I think that Mr. Lock is under civil service as commissioner of revenue. Mr. Maxey, as the chief executive or administrative officer of the social welfare department, is under civil service. Now, I think they are both there by legislative act. My question, which I think is an aspect of this same question Mr. Wanger raises, is, would it be within the power of the legislature to place under civil service the head of a department such as the department of revenue, or the chief executive officer of a principal department, such as I assume the department of social welfare would continue to be?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think that under this provision it would not be in the hands of the legislature to make such determination. Mr. Lock and Mr. Maxey are there under different provisions. As I understand it, I think Mr. Lock is there under a legislative act, although the statute or the constitution says that the head of a department shall be exempt. I don't know what the legal status of the legislative act in that case would be, but I believe Mr. Maxey is there by direct classification by the civil service commission on request of the social welfare commission.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, to respond to the answer, do you think that Mr. Maxey is there by decision of the social welfare commission?

MR. MARTIN: No, by request of the social welfare commission to the civil service commission.

MR. HUTCHINSON: My recollection of it was that he was there pursuant to legislative act just like Mr. Lock is, but assuming that that is the true situation, ought it not be within the power of the legislature at its own discretion, to place the heads of some departments under civil service? Certainly in both cases illustrated there is a wealth of good reasons why both of those officers should have the protection of civil service. It gives them a certain independence in fields which otherwise might be subjected to a great deal of, shall we just bluntly call it, pressure.

MR. MARTIN: It seems to me that they should either all be there or perhaps none of them should be there. The committee made a decision one way rather than the other. But if the legislature is empowered to place various jobs under civil service, I think you would find all kinds of pressures and perhaps jockeying to bring about the appointment of other chief executive officers of other boards and commissions to a civil service status.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Durst, do you wish to speak to this point?

MR. DURST: Yes, I do, Mr. Chairman. I would like to say, Mr. Hutchinson, I disagree just a little bit with Mr. Martin, if I may. Mr. Lock is not under civil service. He is appointed by the civil service commission pursuant to a legislative act. Now, maybe it amounts to the same thing, but he is not covered by this constitutional provision. It has been an act of the legislature which says the civil service commission shall appoint him and they shall set his pay. I don't know whether they set his pay or not, but at least that is how he gets under civil service. He is not appointed by the governor. Mr. Maxey, of course, has been classified by the commission at the agency's request. Mr. Maxey's job, under this provision, if that is a principal department of the state government, would not be subject to being classified under civil service, but I still assume that it would be possible for the legislature to pass an act, as they have in Mr. Lock's case, to set up their own little civil service, if you will, in regard to a department head.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in response to that, may I say I would sincerely hope that it would be within the power of the legislature to do that in its wisdom, and this is an interesting twist. The presentation and the history and everything indicates that everybody would assume the legislature was very antagonistic to placing anybody under civil service, so that if the legislature finally was induced to do it, why, there certainly would be very clear and cogent reasons.

As a matter of fact, I wouldn't agree with the premise that the legislature is antagonistic to civil service, certainly not in these days. I won't go into that further because it isn't precisely on the point before us. But I wanted to put this in the record — and I hope somehow or other to clear it up — that this would not be construed as a limitation upon the legislature to increase the scope of civil service if it saw fit.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, I am not sure that we would object to that interpretation as long as it wasn't an interpretation put on the record giving the legislature authority to do away with any of these jobs. If it is a matter of adding to civil service personnel, I see no strong objection to it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I am a little bit confused by Mr. Martin's reply to Mr. Hutchinson's question. If, say, the department of revenue, for example, or some other large department, was made one of the principal departments, would the legislature have any room to act in that field with regard to its chief executive or chief administrative officer if the proposal is adopted as you now propose it? I don't see where the legislature could act in that particular department.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, that was Mr. Hutchinson's interpretation of it. I said I was willing to let that stand as his interpretation. If there is a question on that point, my own interpretation is that it does not permit legislative action to either enlarge or contract the civil service positions.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: If I am clear on what Mr. Hutchinson was referring to, I think I would take issue with it and support the committee, because I think it would be really opening the door if every time you had a change of administration, the legislature could then blanket under civil service these top positions and top department heads. I think this would be defeating the whole purpose of allowing some flexibility for policy making decisions at the top.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I have 3 questions. I am not sure whether Mr. Martin or Mr. Durst wants to answer them. Wouldn't the language which the committee proposes to place in here "and the chief executive officer thereof" in effect take Mr. Maxey out from under civil service and make him a noncivil service employee?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Iverson, I think that this is correct. The committee did not make its decision on the question of whether one or another employee would be in or out. We tried to make a decision based upon the total picture, and we were influenced by the fact that in a number of cases boards and commissions had moved to bring their executive officers under civil service. The commission has classified them in certain cases. The result has then been that there were no exempt positions in the department, and that a new board or commission which might not want this particular executive officer had no power or authority to select anyone else. So we did not make our decision with regard to any particular person holding a particular job because we felt we have a broader problem than that.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, my second question is, am I right in assuming that placing the word "state" before "educational institutions" and eliminating the language "recognized by the state constitution" would have the effect of removing from protection of the civil service all employees of all state colleges and universities, many of which now are covered by civil service?

MR. MARTIN: I will have to defer to Dr. Pollock on that one as to whether the other institutions of higher learning are in fact covered by state civil service.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin yields to Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I think that Mr. Nisbet could give the exact answer on that from his own experience.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Pollock yields to Mr. Nisbet.

MR. NISBET: I will defer to Dr. Hannah. I think he knows the answer better than I do. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Nisbet yields to Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: This looks like we are handing a hot potato from one to another, but as a matter of fact, I do not know, except for the brief constitutional provision. Mr. Anspach, former president of one that isn't constitutional, could tell us exactly.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Hannah yields to Dr. Anspach. (laughter)

MR. ANSPACH: This is getting into the game of animals. The youngster went to school and the teacher said — (laughter) — the teacher said, "What games do you play at home?" He said, "Dad and mother play a game of animals." The teacher said, "What is that?" "Well," he said, "he passes the buck to mother and he gets her goat." (laughter)

So this is passing the buck back and forth. The answer to it is: just before I came into this state in 1939, I believe it was, the institutions other than the 3 major universities were exempt from civil service. Now, how that was done and so forth I do not have the background to explain, but at the present time the educational institutions of the state are not under civil service. They were prior to '39. What happened in '39 I will have to defer, I think, to my colleague from Michigan State. I can't give the background.

But when I came to this state, the institutions of higher education in the state were exempt from civil service. Each institution, as far as I know, has its own code adopted by its board. For instance, President Nisbet was president of the board of education for a period of 18 years. Sixteen of those years we worked together. During that time the 4 colleges — universities now — under the control of the state board of education set up a complete system of classifications, salary schedule, method of appointment, method of dismissal, right of appeal. This was done in those days because we had some difficulty in the matter of defining positions; we were always referring back to the civil service. As a result, Mr. Reid, whom many of you know, who was quite active in the AFL at that time, was one person I conferred with as well as others. He suggested that the colleges should draw up a code to more or less parallel civil service, which was adopted by the board. Mr. Nisbet was president of the board. And the colleges operate under that code now.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Have the pedagogues satisfactorily answered your question, Mr. Iverson?

MR. IVERSON: I think so. I assume then that the committee is clarifying a situation which has gone on for a number of years.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: That is correct.

MR. IVERSON: Now, my third and last question, Mr. Chairman, is on the last amendment, which apparently adds 3 additional exempt positions to each department which I assume exempts them from civil service, the department head and 5 additional ones. Is this proposed in light of the fact that this convention is perhaps going to adopt a proposal which cuts the number of departments to, say, 20 or thereabouts, and if it does not cut it to 20, do you still propose to exempt 5 or 6 employees of 120 or 130 departments?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Iverson has stated the proposition correctly. It is based on the idea of a consolidation which has been approved in our committee and which will be submitted to the constitutional convention. We couldn't decide all the questions at once. If it develops that that proposal is not adopted, then the committee will subsequently offer an amendment to delete the 3 additional positions and leave it as it is now.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as a member of the committee on executive branch and as a member of the subcommittee which worked on this particular problem, the subcommittee concerning civil service, I would like to respond to the remarks by Senator Hutchinson by pointing out that it is my understanding as a member of this subcommittee that the first sentence on page 314 expresses the position of the committee, and that is, "This language will permanently prevent such classification and reserve these positions for political appointment without tenure." Now, with regard to Mr. Lock specifically, it is not my understanding that he has civil service status. He was selected by civil service, I believe, at the request of the legislature, but he does not have civil service status. I want to make it very clear that I don't want the legislature or anyone else to interfere with these 2 exempt positions along with the head of the department or the executive director of the board or commission. That is my position, and if Mr. Martin is in disagreement with that, I would like the record to so show.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I might add that by the phrasing now prepared by the committee, a board or commission could not request an executive officer be made nonexempt.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, Mr. King made the comments I was going to make, so I will try to be extremely brief. I believe that in the committee report you will find that the sentence, before the one Mr. King read on page 313, says:

> Because of an ambiguity in the constitution, the civil service commission classified the chief administrative officers of 9 boards or commissions at the request of these boards or commissions.

And then the language that follows is that that Mr. King read to the committee. My construction of this is that the committee strengthened what I think was the original intent of the civil service amendment by the language that was added.

I think then we get into a very basic concept of government. We did the other day readopt the principle of separation of powers. That principle provides that the legislature adopt the laws and that the governor be the chief executive officer for their administration. And I submit that to hold the governor responsible for the sound administration of government, he should have the power to make these key appointments, and that the other operation of government is properly done through a career civil service. This language, which Mr. King read, seems to me to point out very clearly that the intent is that the position that is the chief executive or administrative head, or the chief administrative officer—or the chief executive officer—as spelled out in line 7, provides that the governor would have the responsibility for making that appointment, and that that power of the governor could not be taken away by the legislative branch. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I would like to ask a question, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, although we hear so much about the "ripper bill" of 1939 and consider the legislature in that regard, I think we all, upon reflection, fully realize that the temptation for spoils is not abolished, and furthermore that that temptation applies with full force to the executive branch, as it does to the legislative branch as a general rule. And I ask, suppose we get a situation where the admittedly political appointee, the chief administrative officer of the section, is not well qualified to carry out the task of actually running that particular department. That seems to be the premise on which it is based. What will that do to the morale of the people in the department who are trying to work their way up to the top, and what will it do to the efficiency of the administration of state government? This is a possibility. We don't know what is going to happen in the future, but we do know that this makes them political appointees, and if there are 20 departments which are headed by boards or commissions, whether salaried or nonsalaried, this will mean 20 political appointees which can be changed with every election, and these will be the men who will be actually controlling the real work and administration of these departments.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are you addressing your question to Mr. Martin, Delegate Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Mr. Martin or Mr. Durst.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Wanger, these are important policy making men. In spite of the fact that they have a board or commission over them, we all realize that they do make policy, that they are very close to the top of the governmental operation, and that their policy is presumably expected to reflect the views of the administrative branch. At the present time you have this possibility for 120 of these boards and commissions, but that is precisely the idea: that at the very top where you have policy making positions, you do not apply the civil service requirement.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Does this answer the gentleman's inquiry?

MR. WANGER: No. You mentioned policy making positions. Well, the report speaks entirely of administrative officers, administrative aspects of this. It is printed on page 313 of the journal. And my presumption was that it is possible in government to make some distinction, at least a rough one, between policy and administration, and that the people who would now be made political appointees would actually be the chief administrators of this particular department and would require in many cases great expertise in the field.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I have noticed that for the past several days when we get into committee of the whole, we go on to extended debate for several hours and other matters that are of considerable importance. It has been my observation by watching the delegates that we get tired and possibly we don't give quite as good attention as we might just because we are tired. I raise the question with the Chair as to whether or not it is possible to get a 5 or a 10 minute recess. They tell me that is not within the rules, but it is appropriate to move that we rise for a period of 10 minutes, and that is what I am proposing now, sir, that we rise for a recess of 10 minutes, then to return to the business before us, and I would hope that this may become a custom. I think we will get much better work done and have much better attention.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Hannah moves that the committee of the whole rise for a 10 minute recess. The Chair will rule that that motion is in order. All those in favor of a 10 minute recess will say aye. Those opposed, no.

We are recessed for 10 minutes, and we will reconvene at 4:00 o'clock.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. You have to go back to the president of the convention. Only the convention can recess.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Without objection the committee will rise. It is so ordered.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Let me have your attention for just a moment, please. This matter was proposed by Dr. Hannah a few days ago. We have a committee now working on a procedure to do the very thing that he is proposing. That committee will report, and we think it can be done in an orderly and a systematic way without having to return to the convention itself, so if you would bear with us, we will have a report on that by Monday night.

Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I move that the report of the committee of the whole be temporarily dispensed with, and that the convention stand in recess for 10 minutes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and we are recessed until 4.00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 3:50 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 4:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

I hope that we will have Dr. Hannah's suggestions smoothed out for you so it will be orderly next week, and I am sure it will.

Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the convention now resolve itself into committee of the whole to consider items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. DeVries. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. DeVries assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The committee will be in order. We are considering the first paragraph of Committee Proposal 22. The Chair will recognize Delegate Balcer from Detroit.

MR. BALCER: Mr. Chairman, this is a question for Mr. Martin. Under the present constitution, is there any provision made for war veterans or widows of war veterans?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, there is no special provision for veterans or war veterans in the constitution now, in this section, or in the amendments, Mr. Balcer. The commission, I believe, has certain rules with regard to preferences on examinations but this is a matter of the commission rules and is not in the constitution.

MR. BALCER: It is not in the statute either?

MR. MARTIN: I don't know whether that is statutory or not, but I believe it is the commission rule or regulation.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Pollock, did you wish to address yourself to that question?

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. It is a commission regulation.

MR. BALCER: Thank you, Dr. Pollock.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to raise another question in regard to this. As I put 2 provisions together, one where we have 8 exemptions in the governor's office and another provision where it says that there may be 3 additional exemptions at the will of civil service, I take it then that in practical language that will mean that there will be 11 exempt positions in the governor's office. Am I interpreting it right? And I would say that is perfectly agreeable with me, but I think that really what we have here is a total of 11 instead of a total of 8.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it is not intended so. It is intended to provide only 8 positions in the governor's office. Of course, the governor himself is exempt, but these are not intended to be added together. If it is not clear, we may have to make that clear.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, all right. Mr. Chairman, it just seems obvious to me that they would consider the office of the governor as a department, and it says that 3 additional positions of a policy making nature may be exempted within each department as determined to be necessary by the civil service commission. The governor will appoint the civil service commission. I doubt very much that there would be any question about it. If the governor wanted those 3 additional, he would get them. As I say, I think it is all right so far as I am concerned. I am just raising the point on the record to get the chairman's interpretation of it. He says that he thinks it means only 8. All right.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I have a question for any member of the committee. I am not certain it can be answered at this time in view of the fact that they are contemplating another section reducing the overall number of boards, commissions and agencies, but my question has to do with line 12, "when requested by the department head," and I am wondering whether that request is made by the chief executive officer or the board and commission heading the department, or by the head of the department provided for under line 6.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the intention of the committee is that this should be the head of the department whether it is a single head or whether it is the board or commission which heads the department.

MR. HIGGS: That would not apply, then, to the chief executive officer, is that correct?

MR. MARTIN: No, it would not.

MR. HIGGS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to call to your attention what might be construed to be ambiguous in the report and suggest that it be amended. At the bottom of page 313 it says:

> Because of an ambiguity in the constitution, the civil service commission classified the chief administrative officers of 9 boards or commissions at the request of these boards or commissions.

Then it goes on to say what I quoted before, that this language would permanently prevent such classification.

It has been called to my attention that this might be misleading, and I would suggest that before the first sentence on the top of page 314, we add the words: "Should these 9 boards and commissions become principal departments. . . . This language will permanently prevent such classification and reserve these positions for political appointment without tenure." In other words, this would be true only in the event that these 9 boards or commissions became 9 of the 20, if that is what we decide upon as principal departments.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. King, the secretary informs me that a motion to correct the journal is not in order in committee of the whole.

Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, with regard to Mr. Hutchinson's comment of the possibility of 11 exempted positions in the governor's office, I would like to go further than Chairman Martin's statement and point out that in the verbiage of the proposal, we specifically state "the office of governor"; there is the word "and" which separates "the office of governor" and the other departments where we say "within each department." If we wanted to specifically point out each department in this — and this is for the intent and for the records — we would name other departments. However, because there are 8 exempt positions and more than other departments, we have specifically pointed out the governor's office.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, also in response to Delegate Hutchinson's question as to the possibility of there being 11 exempt positions in the office of the governor, in connection with the proposal which the committee on the executive branch has considered concerning reducing the number of boards, agencies and commissions to 20, there is excepted from the 20 limitation the offices of the governor and the lieutenant governor, so they would not be considered a department. I think this is further indication that the governor's office would be limited to 8.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any further amendments to paragraph 1, lines 5 through 16 in Committee Proposal 22?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: If not, we will move on to paragraph 2. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Second paragraph, line 17 through 22, is as follows:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to this paragraph? Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, the secretary has an amendment to be read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Yeager offers the following amendment to this paragraph:

1. Amend page 1, line 19, after "governor" by inserting a comma and "upon recommendation of the respective political parties,"; so the language will read:

> There is hereby created a nonsalaried civil service commission to consist of 4 persons, not more than 2 of whom shall be members of the same political party, appointed by the governor, upon recommendation of the respective political parties, for 8 year, overlapping terms.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, the committee report indicates, I think fairly clearly, that this is a bipartisan commission. Now, I believe a bipartisan commission is certainly the right approach to this, and it has been quite effective for quite a long time, but in the state of Michigan we do not have a closed primary and we do not have a good way of identifying political parties, and I don't feel that it is right that a Republican governor, for example, should be able to choose accurately a Democrat for this position or vice versa. I think if we are going to maintain the bipartisan idea, that we should permit the political parties to at least have some recommendation relating to this particular department or commission.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, I would say that the committee on the executive branch did consider, in regard to this proposal, requiring that there be 2 Republicans and 2 Democrats, which I take it is impliedly meant by the language. We rejected this type of a specific provision because it is obvious that what has been intended in the civil service commission is a high quality type of administration as far removed from politics as possible, although it does not necessarily completely approach the problem from a nonpolitical point of view, but to make this a political appointment, as Mr. Yeager's amendment suggests, I think would lower the quality and the type of commission that we have had in the past which has worked so well, and I think the committee on executive branch would oppose the amendment as Mr. Yeager has suggested.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: In opposition to the amendment, we have had Republican governors and Democratic governors under this provision making appointments. We have had no trouble. The system has worked very well since 1939. I move that we support the committee report.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, with respect to Mr. Yeager, I think his intention was, of course, merely to assure that it would be real Democrats and real Republicans who would be chosen so it would be very clear that it was the person of the particular political party, but I am afraid the effect of that amendment would go much farther and actually make the state central committees really a clearing house for the state civil service commission, and I suggest that this in the future could very well be the tendency, and therefore I also respectfully oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think that the committee would feel, if asked in regard to this amendment, that this was moving in the direction of putting the selection of these commissioners who have this very tough and difficult responsibility — really essentially taking the appointment away from the governor entirely, and I don't think that, partisan though I am, the committee would be agreeable to this kind of change.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the Yeager amendment. Is there any further discussion on this amendment? Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I merely would like to add that the method proposed by Mr. Yeager is the system used in the selection of the members of the board of state canvassers, and I just ask you to make the comparison between the civil service commission and the board of state canvassers. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I think the amendment posed, Mr. Chairman, by Mr. Yeager points up a real problem in this section. He states that the governor shall appoint the commission, and not more than 2 shall be members of the same political party. Since there is no way in the state of Michigan of exactly identifying people in regard to political parties, just what basis does the governor use to make that determination?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion on the Yeager amendment? Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Why do we talk in abstract things? For Mr. Hodges' benefit and anybody else who doesn't know it — if there is anybody else — don't you know that at one time we had a commission consisting of 2 Democrats, 1 Republican and 1 who denied that he was a member of the Republican party or any other party? And what I would like to ask of the chairman of the commitee is, why do you not make these subject to confirmation or advice and consent of the senate?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Does the delegate care to answer? Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, as far as I know, there was no discussion in the committee of the question of advice and consent on the appointment of civil service commissioners. I can't tell you what the view of the committee would be because there was no discussion of the use of advice and consent. There was, however, discussion, as Mr. Durst has said, of the matter of specifically stating there should be 2 Democrats and 2 Republicans. Mr. Brake appeared before our committee and did discuss this problem of making sure that they were good Republicans and good Democrats, but we did not discuss the question of advice and consent.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to just report as a matter of history, for whatever it is worth, that when Governor Williams first appointed Mr. Higgins a member of the civil service commission, he sent his nomination in to the senate. It became my duty to respectfully return the nomination to the governor with the advice that the senate didn't have that power, much as we would have liked to exercise it.

I would like to say that I had it in mind to bring up this question of advice and consent, but I am apprehensive that it would be very controversial and that perhaps it could be more reasonably argued on another section of the constitution than on this. (laughter) If the convention finally decides that the senate is going to have its proper historical function of advice and consent, and if we can figure out some way so that people will be reasonably sure that the senate will live up to its responsibility, then under those circumstances perhaps the committee on style and drafting (laughter) might be able to reconcile any inconsistency. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the adoption of the Yeager amendment to line 19, paragraph 2 of the committee proposal. As many as are in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs offers the following amendment to this paragraph:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, the objective of this is a very simple one and I believe almost self explanatory. In trying to look ahead for the next 40 or 50 years I think we should do everything possible to see that the people, through the governor, have the widest possible selection of people to serve on a civil service commission. I can visualize situations in the future where a person might be very desirous of serving, very well qualified, a governor wished to appoint him, but that he could not make the financial sacrifice necessary to perform these functions. The objective of this amendment is simply to say that the person could receive a per diem as established by law so that there would be a broader possible selection of people to serve on the commission. I think this is a desirable amendment and I think it is one that looks toward the future. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would just rise in opposition to the suggested amendment and point out that the committee did consider this, that they asked each of the present commissioners whether they thought it would be beneficial. At the present time these commissioners are granted expenses, and it was felt by the commissioners and by the committee that this would be sufficient and perhaps would be in the best interests of a noninfluenceable, perhaps I should say, commission.

I know Mr. Downs has great faith in the legislature and knows fully well that they would not conceive of the device of paying a commissioner quite a lot of money and then at a later date lowering it in order to put some pressure on him, but this too was suggested. And all in all, I think that the present system, where these people serve because they want to serve the community and not with any idea of personal gain, is perhaps the best system. I would only point out that the committee did give this point very careful consideration.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is Mr. Downs' amendments. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. King's point about the commissioners that are now there, it might be that they are in a good position to do this, but I think Mr. Downs' point is well taken. We should try to broaden, if at all possible, the type of people that can serve on these types of commissions.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hodges, I might point out that it is not true that all members of the commission are necessarily at this time in a position to say they don't want compensation. Miss Robinson, who was a school teacher, I believe, for many years, was very, very emphatic, and the most emphatic of any member of the commission, that she did not feel there should be compensation for the commissioners; that this would change the entire character and image of the commission. She felt it would be detrimental to the work of the commission to provide compensation for them. She thought it was a public service and should be continued that way.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct my statement to Mr. Hodges. Evidently he wasn't listening to Mr. King, because Mr. King did say they are reimbursed for expenses.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I would like to say to Delegate King that if he wished to add an amendment to my amendment that the per diem could not be reduced during the term of office, I would not object. However, I do not believe that safeguard is necessary. I think that, again looking 50 years down the road, I cannot visualize that blatant an attempt. Even if it were done, the person would be no worse off than today.

The objective, I say again, is to broaden the number of citizens from whom a selection could be made for this important position. We hear much about added participation in government. I am for this. I believe that the added participation in government means that people should have a chance to participate in this vital aspect of government without having an economic roadblock due to the financial loss standing in the way. The assumption would be that the per diem would not be one where the person would make money, but rather would try to keep him in about the same financial position as though he did not have the position. That too would be left up to legislative action in the future.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is consideration of the Downs amendment to line 17 of paragraph 2 of Committee Proposal 22.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: As many as are in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment the yeas are 56; the nays, 69.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to paragraph 2 of Committee Proposal 22?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file with the secretary, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Without objection the committee will proceed to the third paragraph of the report, page 2 of the proposal, lines 1 through 18.

Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, are we passing these sections as we go along, or are you going to wait for the whole —

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: That would be my understanding, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: You say you are passing them?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Not passing them; we are moving on through the report without objection. The secretary will read the third paragraph of the proposal on page 2.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next paragraph on page 2, lines 1 through 18:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst, for the committee's explanation of this paragraph.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, we have a minority report here. What is the practice; to present that as an amendment first?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The committee amendments will come first, and then the minority report as an amendment to the body of the proposal.

MR. DURST: All right. We have one amendment to this section then, if the secretary would read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Durst, on behalf of the committee on executive branch, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "the" by striking out "executive" and inserting "appointing authorities"; so the language will read, "The appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency, . . ."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Durst on the amendment.

MR. DURST: All the amendment does, Mr. Chairman, is make clear what we mean when we say "The executive." Some question was raised. It was our intention to include the whole executive department. By changing the words to "appointing authorities," I think we clarify the point without any question.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the committee amendment, paragraph, 3 line 13. As many as are in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

The amendment is adopted.

Mr. Durst, do you wish to make a further explanation of this paragraph? Are there any further amendments to paragraph 3 of the committee proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to their minority report, Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer offer the following amendment which is the text of the minority report:

1. Amend page 2, line 7, after "service.", by inserting "Increases in rates of compensation in the state civil service shall be proposed by the commission and will become effective unless rejected, modified, or reduced by 2/3 vote of the members elect of both houses of the legislature within 60 days after submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year. The legislature may not reduce rates of compensation below those in effect at the time of the submission of a proposed increase.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the minority report amendment. Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would direct your attention to the journal on page 325, I believe it is, and you will find there printed the text of the minority report which we at this time offer as an amendment. This is the first, and I hope, very frankly, the last minority report of this convention. (laughter) And I would like to state at the outset that I hope this will not be construed as an expression of lack of faith in our committee, but rather our action should be considered merely a method of presenting our views in what we considered the most effective manner to the entire convention. In any event, I feel that I am in excellent company with Judge Shaffer and Mr. Shackleton.

First, I would like to explain briefly just what this amendment would do. As you will see, it only affects increases in rates of compensation for classified personnel. Presently, the civil service commission has the absolute power to fix rates of compensation in any amount and at any time it desires, free from legislative control or accountability.

This amendment would require several things. First of all, it would require that any proposed increases made by the civil service commission be submitted with the governor's budget. Now, this has been the practice for the past 2 or 3 years. However, we are dealing primarily here in what I would consider statutory language. There is nothing in the present constitution to require the commission to continue the practice that they followed in the past few years, or to prevent them from reverting to the practice of declaring a pay raise at any time. This would make it crystal clear that any proposed increases in rates of compensation must be submitted with the governor's budget.

Then these rates or increased rates would take effect only at the beginning of the next fiscal year. In other words, if a proposed increase were submitted with the governor's budget in January, it would not take effect until July 1 of that year. Also the rates would take effect, upon the failure of the legislature, within 60 days after submission of this recommendation, to either reject, modify or reduce the amount recommended by the commission.

The amendment gives the legislature this power to reject, modify or reduce increases in rates of compensation where there is a 2/3 vote of the members elected, if you will, in each house. In other words, in order to defeat a recommendation of the civil service commission as to pay raises, 2/3 of the senate would have to reject it, 2/3 of the house would have to reject, modify or reduce it.

Additionally, the amendment would prohibit the legislature from reducing rates of compensation in effect at the time of the submission of the commission's recommendations to the legislature. In other words, the legislature would not be given the authority, even with a 2/3 vote, of going below those rates of compensation which are in effect at the time of a proposed increase.

Now, it is sincerely believed that this proposed amendment is not a drastic one; it is not a radical one, but it is offered for the following reasons:

It is believed that no governmental unit should be free from the time tested and proven checks and balances inherent in our constitutional form of government. Since the civil service commissioners are appointed for 8 year terms, they truly are not accountable to the governor, particularly a governor of short duration. Although the legislature presently has the power to fix the total appropriation within a given agency, it has no method of controlling abuses in a salary classification which could occur in the future. In recognition of the fact that commissioners are but mere human beings and, as such, subject to error, it is felt that they should be accountable to the people for their actions, and this, I believe, is accomplished through giving the legislature a veto power. Now, for those who favor retention of this power by the civil service commission—in other words, the right to fix compensation—it should be pointed out that civil service retains the initiating power to raise rates under the proposed language. Also, as a practical proposition, the requirement of a 2/3 vote of both houses to reject, modify or reduce the commission's recommendation means that the veto power could not be exercised readily, and would undoubtedly be exercised only in the event of a real abuse by the commission.

This amendment is not offered as a means of undercutting the merit system, nor should it be construed as an attempt to return to the spoils or patronage system. I certainly agree wholeheartedly with what Mr. Durst and the chairman of our committee, Mr. Martin, have said concerning the spoils system and the patronage system which existed prior to the 1940 amendment. On the contrary, it is believed that the merit system must be maintained and that it has proven itself a valuable asset to the state. The amendment is offered in the spirit of providing accountability to the legislature and, I might add, importantly to the people by a fourth branch of our government which heretofore has not in many respects been susceptible to the normal checks and balances. It is our hope that this language would lead to greater understanding between civil service and the legislature, and ultimately mutual respect for one another, which apparently has been lacking in the past.

This, briefly, states what the amendment would do, and I would at this time like to yield the floor, Mr. Chairman, to Delegate Shackleton.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as has already been stated, the 1907-08 constitutional convention had a proposal introducing a merit system similar to the provisions of the New York constitution. The committee to which it was assigned refused to report it out and an attempt to refer it to the committee of the whole was rejected. It was felt to be a legislative matter, that it would be an "experiment", and that the convention should not "tie the hands of the legislature for 50 years."

The Michigan legislature created a civil service in 1938 through public act 346, 1937, effective January 1, 1938. In 1939, the powers of the commission were largely taken away by statutory reduction in appropriations and statutory provisions for a widespread removal of the provisions from the classified service. This tampering resulted in a proposed amendment initiated by petition in 1940 which became section 22, article VI. This article is generally conceded to be a statutory provision in our constitution which set up a civil service commission with a large degree of independence from the legislative and executive branches of our state government. The commission's powers, after much judicial litigation, impinged upon areas of activity normally associated with the executive and legislative branches. This apparently is one reason for the extensive litigation. Numerous court decisions have construed the powers of the commission. The courts hold that the commission has absolute power to create or abolish classified positions and full authority to fix rates of compensation for those classified positions. The only control the legislature has is to control total amounts of funds to be spent for personal services. Appropriations for personal services for each department or agency cannot be detailed by the legislature to the extent that they would infringe upon the compensation fixing powers of the commission.

Only 13 states have constitutional provisions for a civil service system and for the most part are not specific and detailed.

The result of section 22 was the creation of a fourth branch of government that is not generally recognized as such, for it has powers beyond the reach of the legislative or executive branches, 2 of the 3 recognized branches or divisions of our state government, which this committee has already adopted.

All of this has been created because the people felt sure the legislature did not, might not, or would not create a satisfactory merit or civil service system and the procedure for such. Thus has been created a commission with authority which may more and more result in the tail wagging the dog, an empire within our government which is untouchable.

This is not to say Michigan's experience with civil service is all bad, but in its present entrenched position, it could result in serious consequences to the financial structure of our state and to so called empire building irrespective of over all state problems. It is essentially the only part of our government which has no checks whereas other branches and departments do have checks and balances. It has been said many times in this assembly that the constitution itself is a restrictive document. It repeatedly provides for checks in the bill of rights, legislative powers, in tax and finance, in local government, in the executive branch, and in essentially every article except section 22 of article VI.

The legislature must provide for raising funds to defray expenditures necessary to operate our state and to determine expenditures that are to be made, with one exception—salaries for classified employees—which now covers over 33,000 employees on the direct state payroll for sums in excess of $175 million.

Most people concede business conditions affect state income. Many believe state expenditures affect our economy even to deficit spending. Undeniably, taxes affect individuals and corporations. There seems to be much evidence of retirees being induced to change residence from Michigan to other states where taxes are less severe when incomes are reduced and economic reasons do not require residency in Michigan. Expenditures for new plant and equipment in Michigan since 1950 have been reduced from 8 per cent of the national total to about 6 per cent. A population increase from 1950 to 1960 of 22.8 per cent has resulted in only about 12 per cent added value through manufacture. By 1958, Michigan expenditures for new plant and equipment were 20 per cent below 1951 to produce jobs for an increased population. These 3 important indices of our economic conditions, which show sharp reduction in new plant and equipment, value added through manufacturing, and employment since 1950, showed marked reductions, all affecting personal income and the ability of both individuals and corporations to pay more and more taxes. Michigan pays more taxes than 6 comparable competing states for (1) a $1,000 added value through manufacturing; (2) per 1,000 on payrolls; (3) per $1,000 personal income from manufacturing; (4) by manufacturers per employee; and (5) by manufacturers per 1,000 production worker man hours. Of 8 competing states, taxes on businesses in Michigan are the highest by a substantial margin. If the civil service commission wishes to ignore the business climate, the economic indices, the income available from taxes which may become harder to come by, it may do so, even though already state and local taxes in Michigan exceed those of 7 competing states as well as exceeding the U. S. average on personal income. There is no effective check against this.

Thus, we find ourselves with a commission composed of 4 appointees whose decisions as to rates of compensation and classification of positions are not subject to review, except judicial review on an appeal of employees only, and cannot be reached by executive or legislative authority. The legislature must raise the money for wages as well as other expenditures. The suggested amendment, permitting the legislature by 2/3 vote of each house, would only control increases in wages, not wages as a whole, and only in a small way would give a slight check over an all powerful commission that can and may refuse to recognize the ability of the legislature to make receipts meet expenditures and in a very small way preserves the check and balance theory adopted in all other branches of our government.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I must respectfully oppose this amendment because I think the issue of whether or not we are to guarantee a strong continuing state merit civil service system is now before us. I am sure that the people in this delegation fully realize from their political experience the tremendous temptation which the opportunity for job patronage affords even the best legislator, even the best politician. Why? For the very simple reason that job patronage is a splendid reward for political assistance; and that in our society, unfortunately, public apathy often means a few able campaigners can spell the difference between political victory and defeat. That temptation can still be just as strong as it was before the civil service amendment was adopted.

We have, however, today, in our society, for better or for worse, a government which is much larger than the government which we knew 30 or 40 years ago, which has extended itself in a much more sophisticated and a more technical manner into the details of our every day life, and in all probability the size and complexity of that government will remain. That size and that problem means that today we can no longer afford to return to a spoils system. There is no question of the spoils system being reprehensible and pernicious, but today it is dangerous as never before, because political hack appointees, however good campaigners they may be, cannot adequately administer the government which we have.

Now, what would this amendment do? This amendment, as you know, would require, or make it possible for a 2/3 vote of the legislature to stop increases in the state civil service compensation. This does not mean that they can reduce them, as Mr. Hatch pointed out. It does mean, however, that they can refuse to permit them, and if inflation would continue, and if the door would be closed to future increases, we conceive very clearly a manner in which pressure could be applied to the commission or to other areas of our government to open the door to political patronage which the commission was created to close.

Mr. Hatch points out, however, that it is a 2/3 vote which is required, and that it would be very unlikely that this would happen because of the large vote requirement. I would like to point out, ladies and gentlemen, that back in 1939, under the white light of publicity, the ripper bill, house bill 253, was passed in the senate of this state by a 2/3 vote. And I suggest that when the people of this state, after the campaign to establish a civil service, were thwarted and again came back and established a civil service amendment, they wished to repudiate the principle that to the winner belongs the spoils of victory. I say let's keep that door closed today.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: May the Chair point out that I have the names of 6 people who were on their feet, and I will call on them in order. Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, delegates, as a member of the committee on executive branch, I opposed this amendment in our committee. After careful consideration and deliberation, I now would like to support this amendment in committee of the whole. I will not go further to explain why, because Mr. Hatch and Mr. Shackleton have done a very good job, in my opinion. I would like to point this out to Mr. Wanger with his theme of political patronage. My idea of political patronage is not particularly stopping increases in salaries, but it is giving jobs in exempt positions, and I think we have already taken care of that.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as a member of the committee on executive branch, and also as a member of the subcommittee which was charged with the responsibility of trying to come up with a compromise proposal on civil service—and I do say "compromise" because, as Delegate Durst said, there were large differences of opinion when we commenced this task—I was one of those who felt very strongly that there should be no change whatsoever in the present civil service provision. There were others, of course, on the committee who had an opposing viewpoint, in all due respect to Delegate Hatch, Judge Shaffer and Mr. Shackleton. They too worked hard on the committee with the rest of us, and I do believe that they are sincere and forthright. I think that they think their amendment would be good. I respect their positions. But I rise to oppose the amendment and to support the recommendation of the committee.

On the contrary, there was considerable testimony regarding the number of studies they make, comparisons, analyses on rates, and compensation in private industry in the state for comparable work in order to be able to compete with private industry to get capable and qualified employees, and I think that it is essential that they have a very thorough study of all of these different rates from time to time. And on many occasions I believe that we had testimony to the effect that the legislature had asked the civil service commission to make studies and analyses and recommend wage rates on unclassified positions. That was within the control of the legislature. You have your checks and balances, and the legislature does have, I believe, sufficient control in that it controls the appropriations, and even if the civil service commission sets a rate and the legislature does not appropriate, then the civil service commission has only one alternative. They have to reduce, cut services.

I think that the purpose of the civil service and the overriding factor involved when civil service was brought into being was to discard once and for all the spoils system. I agree that you might not be in as much danger of going back to the spoils system as we knew it under a 2/3 as you would a majority, but I think Delegate Wanger explained that very ably, and I am not going to be repetitious and repeat him; but the sole purpose was to remove the spoils system by removing the state employees as far from politics as you possibly could, and the best provision that we could have that they are not forced to in any way become involved, was that they would not be put in a position—the state employees—where they would feel insecure; because if they should be put into this position, then I think that you will not only be unable to secure the best, capable and qualified employees; I think that the morale of the state employees would be greatly dampened.

I have talked to many state employees and also people in executive positions who administer under civil service, and all that I have talked to tell me that this would be a serious mistake and a step backward. So in closing, I want to support the report of the committee, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this is a matter to which the committee gave a great deal of attention because it could be the heart of a real argument. Frankly, if the legislature had no real control over the situation, I think I and many members of the committee might have been tempted by this type of amendment. If the state were really at the mercy of the civil service commission, we certainly would have been tempted to accept it. But the fact is that there is control, and it is solid control and it is better control than this amendment would introduce in the picture.

The best illustration of that is what happened in 1960 when the civil service commission decided that it was time, on the basis of their studies, for a 3 per cent across the board increase. The legislature considered it and decided that it did not have the money to make that increase at the time, and so it exercised its unquestioned responsibility and authority to determine that there should be no increase, and simply told the boards and commissions and departments that they would have to absorb the civil service increase. Now, what this meant was that some of them had to reduce personnel where that was feasible, some of them had to not fill certain jobs which fell vacant. In a particular instance, for example, where the revenue department found that this absorption would actually injure the functioning of the agency, and came before the appropriating committees, it was granted an additional $60 or $70 thousand to enable it to take the increase and to carry on its functions without absorbing it.

Now, this is a control where the control ought to be, and it is well established by the supreme court, which in 1942, in the case of Civil Service Commission vs. The Auditor General, clearly stated that

> It is within the power of the legislature to fix the amount it will appropriate for personal services in any state department or agency, but the power to fix rates of compensation for all classes of civil service positions is vested in the civil service commission.

And what you do by this amendment, if it is effective—that is, if the legislature does use its 2/3 vote—is to put the legislature into the business of determining wage rates, and this is not the kind of thing that the legislature is geared to doing. The legislature is properly geared to determining how much money should be spent, and that it has full authority to do under the present civil service structure. But to get the legislature into the business of rate fixing puts it into a job which it does not have the background for, nor is it geared to handle that.

So it appears to us that the amendment either does too little —in other words, it would be completely ineffective—or else it does too much in that it would put the legislature into the business of rate fixing and would subject the civil service system to the thing that some people have expressed fear of. For that reason the committee does not favor the amendment, and we hope that you will support the committee position. If there are no other persons, Mr. Chairman, on your list, I would yield to Mr. Durst.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin yields to Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: I might inquire, Mr. Chairman, whether or not the Chair would think it appropriate to rise at this time or whether you would think it appropriate to continue.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: I would suggest, Mr. Durst, that would be a matter for the committee chairman to decide. Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think it would be better, if the delegates are willing to stay and are not too tired, to go along until we get at least this particular question decided.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Durst?

MR. DURST: I will yield to Mrs. Judd.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Durst yields to Delegate Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I have to put in my 2 cents worth on this. I want to say that I am in full sympathy with the legislative control of expenditures and, as Mr. Martin has stated, they do control expenditures. Also that I am confident that the proposers of this amendment have no intention—as they state—to destroy the merit system, and I would not question the motives of any delegate here in that direction, but I want to point out the potential consequences of this amendment.

The personnel system in government is a different sort of animal from most of the functions of government. It has some very peculiar and unique features. While today its chief objective, to be sure, is to secure better service to the public, nevertheless the fact still holds true that those who would destroy the merit system deliberately attack it not because they object to it on technical grounds but because it is an obstacle to the attainment of political power. To the self seeking politician, a spoils system is not an end in itself but a tool for securing and holding that power and all the amenities that go with it.

Those of us who had the privilege of presiding over the birth of the Michigan merit system probed the then existing spoils system to its depths. No one who remembers that picture could wish to drive the smallest wedge into the bulwark that protects us from it today, and I am confident that many legislators who think they desire some power over the rate system are secretly grateful that they are protected from the pressures of job seekers from among their constituents. I would not accuse the delegates who prepared this amendment of having the slightest intention of driving such a wedge, but I must point out that the power of the legislature which they propose to "reject, modify, or reduce the compensation plan" could do just that.

Let me remind you that a compensation plan is a plan. It is a pattern. Equal pay for equal work, no matter in what department, is the horizontal pattern. Ladders, each of whose rungs represent different degrees of skills, experience, and responsibility, are the vertical pattern.

I am therefore objecting to the amendment on 2 grounds: one political and one technical.

On political grounds, the pay plan is the keystone in the merit system arch. To prove my point, let me tell you a story. My city of Grand Rapids has had civil service in its charter since 1916. For 20 years of what I call the preGoebel era, the civil service provision in the charter was a smokescreen for the spoils system. The league of women voters finally forced the city commission to have a classification and pay plan made. The city commission adopted the classification plan but would not accept the pay plan. From then on, as I went my rounds among my friends in the city hall, they would whisper to me, "You may have the classification plan, but as long as the commission sets salaries, the spoils system is still in effect."

My technical objection is, what do the words "reject, modify, reduce" mean? Even with the best of motives, how can the legislature do this without destroying the pattern of the compensation plan and its purposes? If they make across the board reductions they may lower the rates below the competitive rates in industry. The result will be a loss of employees to private enterprise, and the loss will come from among the best and most energetic of the employees.

Under the present plan, as has already been described, if the appropriations are insufficient, the layoffs are made, according to civil service rules, by seniority and merit, and the names of these employees would go back on reemployment lists, and many of them would finally return to the service. If they are to modify, how do they do it? Do they select one department, or do they do it job by job? In this case the fairness in the pay plan is lost. You no longer have equal pay for equal work. The career service is cut in two. Competent young people whom the service now attracts on the bottom rung of the ladder because they see an opportunity for promotion and ultimate careers will look elsewhere for their careers.

In other words, I can see no technical way in which the legislature could reject, modify or reduce the pay plan without damaging the quality of the state civil service. But I do see a crack in the bulwark against a return to the manning of our public service with ward heelers and through them the rebuilding of unprincipled power politics.

It is no argument that 13 states have constitutional provisions that are simple and not detailed. It is also true that other states envy our government and wish that they had what we have. We have met in this convention to put Michigan in the forefront of political and economic progress, and in the field of personnel in the state service, Michigan is already in the forefront. Why go backwards?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I will be very brief. I think the amendment proposed by the minority report contemplates 2 separate and distinct propositions. First, the legislative power to reject, modify or reduce a proposed pay increase and, second, provisions relating to the presentation of a proposed pay increase to the legislature. The second of these propositions, the method of presentation of the proposed pay increase to the legislature, is, it seems to me, a particularly salutary one.

My experience in the legislature was in the period when the civil service commission typically just dropped its pay increases into the legislative lap without any regard to the posture which the legislative session was then experiencing, and consequently the budget could be half completed, and it would just have to be torn apart at the whim of the civil service commission. I think it imposes no hardship, for the practice presently is as the minority report proposes.

Consequently, Mr. Chairman, I call for a division of the question, and ask you to put the matter contemplated by the second 2 sentences, the second and third sentences of the proposed amendment, separately from the matter contemplated by the first and last sentences.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Where would this division be, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: At the end of the first sentence, I would ask that the second 2 sentences beginning "No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature."; and the third sentence, "Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year."; be put separately from the first and fourth sentences. Now, the first and the fourth sentences contemplate a second and distinct proposition. I don't care in which order they are put, but I do call for a division of the question.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Van Dusen, the secretary informs me that when we do put the question, it will be so divided.

Mr. Rajkovich.

MR. RAJKOVICH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I had a long speech ready on this, but the preceding 5 speakers said just about everything I was going to say. First, in answer to Mr. Van Dusen, this is already being done. Increases are already being submitted with the governor's budget. So I see no need there. In the second place, the pay increases don't go into effect until the first of July anyway. That is the present practice. Further, most everybody here is in favor of a good civil service. The state of Michigan has one of the best civil service systems in the United States, perhaps the best—at least it is rated one of the 3 best and we know how we got there. We got there by having just what we have at present.

Now, to me the issue on this amendment is just simply this: who is better qualified to determine wages and salary rates? Is it the civil service commission or is it the state legislature? And, as already pointed out, the state legislature is not equipped and not ready to establish fair wage rates and fair salaries.

I also understand that the civil service commission does have a research staff whose job it is to determine what is adequate pay, and that the civil service commission in Michigan does make a regular study of over 400 different types of businesses, industries, both private and public, to decide what is fair pay, what is a fair wage. Now, this matter of adequate pay may mean different things to different people. To the civil service commission it means just one thing, that the state employees should be paid a comparable wage, whether this wage be in private or in public business.

Therefore, I would like to support the committee proposal and oppose the amendment. Also, I might add here, too, that last December the civil service commission did turn down a request for pay increases after making a study and comparing what our civil service people were getting as far as other employees in public service and private industry were getting. Thank you.

MR. DOWNS: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: What is your point of order, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Since the question has been divided, should not the discussion be divided? And I ask what is before the body at this point?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the body is the minority report amendment offered by Delegates Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer, which amends paragraph 3 of the committee proposal. I think the Chair said that when we got to vote on the amendment, we would split or divide the question as Mr. Van Dusen requested.

MR. DOWNS: Well, I wish to speak on the second and third sentences when that is in order.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Can I put your name on the list? We have 10 people who are ahead of you, Mr. Downs. (laughter)

MR. DOWNS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My speech too has been made, but I think I had better summarize it just so we can make more emphatic the points that have been made. The first thing that is of importance to me is the morale of the employees, and I think that it is of great consequence as to their morale for us to leave the pay adjusting function with the commission. The other is the fact that the state has invested large sums of money into the training of some of these people, and we don't want to lose them because we, by a lot of time and technicalities, take too long to keep their pay in line with the going pay for the types of jobs that they are doing. And the final point that I want to call to your attention: I can never forget the federal situation with the postal workers. Every so often I have to be bothered with a lot of these people wanting me to send telegrams and letters to my congressmen because whether they get a raise or not rests with congress. Therefore, I want to urge the delegates to vote for the committee's proposal rather than the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Members of the committee, the secretary suggests that we divide the question now and then recognize the people who have asked for recognition. The secretary will read the question as divided, requested by Mr. Van Dusen.

SECRETARY CHASE: The request of Mr. Van Dusen is that we first consider the insertion of the second and third sentences of the proposed amendment, which read as follows:

> No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair respectfully requests that we confine our debate to that portion of the amendment, and that the first vote on this amendment will take place on these 2 sentences.

The Chair recognizes Delegate Brake. Mr. Brake yields to Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, if we are voting on those 2 sentences only: "No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature," and "Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year," the committee has no objection.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of this part of the amendment? Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that in light of the practice which seems to be going on at the present time that to make this a constitutional requirement would be superfluous. You will note further that the language says that it must be submitted as part of the governor's budget. Now, I merely suggest that we may be breeding litigation if we enact these words, for the simple reason there may be a question as to who controls the makeup of the governor's budget, and that we may possibly and inadvertently lead to a weakening of the civil service commission's authority by adopting these sentences. Certainly if we would adopt the first sentence, I would agree, then, that we should probably adopt the rest of them, but I do not believe that the sponsors of this amendment, for whom, I would like to add, I have the highest personal regard, intended a division of this matter at the time that they prepared it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Wanger, the secretary informs me that it doesn't make any difference. Any delegate has the right under the rules to demand a division of the question.

The Chair will now recognize Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that if the committee is disposed to go along with these 2 middle sentences, I certainly rise in support of them—in fact, I would have anyway—and I will take issue with Mr. Wanger, for this reason: it may be that the present policy of the civil service commission is to do just what these 2 sentences contemplate, but it hasn't always been so, nor have we any assurance that it always will be so.

Now, as an abstract basic principle, I am one of those who does not like to see all this detail written into the constitution. But we start out with the proposition that in this area we find it necessary to write a very detailed provision into the constitution to protect the civil service against threats of weakening and whatnot. Now then, it is therefore incumbent for us to write these things in there in the best detailed way that we can because—let's face it—we are actually handling statutory material right in the constitution. But since that is what seems to be the case here, let's proceed that way.

Now, I would like to say, categorically, that the legislature—at least during my tenure—never aspired to fix rates of increases, but that the trouble always did arise, in the early '50s and until the present policy of the civil service commission came into effect, because the civil service commission seemed to appreciate no problem on the legislature's part. They raised pay scales right in the middle of a fiscal year. They completely upset budgets right in the middle of a legislative session without regard—as has been mentioned on this floor heretofore—for the point to which the budget had gotten in the legislative process. And then, of course, they always took the attitude, "Well, legislature, we are simply telling you the cost of your labor. Now, you can buy as much or as little of this personal service as you want to buy." And that is a very laudable, clear expression, except that it is impractical from this standpoint: we need a certain minimum number of attendants in state mental hospitals; we need a certain minimum number of guards in state prisons; we need a certain minimum number of employees in the several departments of the state government, regardless of what the cost is. And so the civil service commission, while it was saying it was simply citing the cost of labor, wasn't very realistic in its assertion that we could buy as little or as much as we saw fit, because we couldn't do that. We had to buy a certain amount of it in order that the service might be performed. You can't let the prisons go unguarded or the mental patients go uncared for.

Now, the trouble always arose because of the timing of the civil service commission's activity with regard to the legislative session and, as I say, since we are writing all of this thing of proper legislative import into this constitution within this area, let us be realistic and assure that in the performance of its function, the civil service commission will be required to respect budgetary and legislative procedures. Otherwise, the legislature is unable to do anything except act in confusion.

Now, that is why I support these 2 sentences. I have much more I could say about the general subject of civil service, and I assure you that I agree with it. I want to see a strong civil service system in Michigan, but I don't think that we should assume—and I will say this as a parting shot—that the civil service system that we have has completely eliminated the spoils system. I say that we still have a spoils system in Michigan through the—I don't know how they work it, but a system of provisional appointments, and I know from my experience in the legislature and out of it that in order to get a provisional appointment, it is necessary now for an employee to at least get the approval and the blessing of the Democratic county chairman. Now, there is the spoils system right there, and they make most of their appointments provisionally that way.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Blandford, did you wish to address your remarks to this portion of the amendment?

MR. BLANDFORD: Mr. Chairman, I feel that we are getting a little emotional on this problem of pay raises and the approval of them, or of this amendment as has been recommended. I cannot see, myself, how merely a check on pay raises leads to the spoils system. I served for 6 years on the city commission in the city of Grand Rapids that has this pay plan and classification plan, and it worked well.

But one thing that Mrs. Judd did not tell you was this: the city commission of the city of Grand Rapids, the elective body, is the one that determines if there are any pay raises, and it is done, I think, in practically every other city in Michigan. I will say that we have a good pay plan in the city of Grand Rapids, and the easiest decision any commissioner ever makes, if the money is available, is to raise salaries for the employees. It is a very easy decision for anybody to make. It is a very political decision to make. So I am very much in favor of the amendment, and I cannot see how it will lead to the spoils system. I think people are talking spoils system here. It has no bearing whatsoever upon the legislature merely having a check, and I believe they should have a check upon pay raises running wild. I am very much in favor of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I thought we could dispose of this matter, but time gets later and later and I believe there are still people that want to speak, so I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin moves that the committee of the whole do now rise. All those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Kent, Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had several items under consideration, and the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. It has made certain amendments thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I had planned to wait to raise this until I was to speak in order in committee of the whole, and I do not wish to take unfair advantage of the fact that you are in the Chair. I think a serious statement was made regarding the operation of civil service, and I feel that while that was not particularly germane to the question before us, that when a charge of that nature is made, then either in committee of the whole or at some appropriate place, the civil service commission side should be presented too. I do not wish at this point to get into a floor debate on the question. I think more properly that type of discussion should be within the confines of the committee which is studying the subject. But I did not wish to let the statement go unchallenged, and I had planned to bring it up when I was in order and speaking in committee of the whole. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on judicial branch will not meet today after the session but will meet tomorrow, Friday, at 8:30 a.m. Mr. Danhof, chairman.

Here is an announcement of particular interest to the committee on legislative organization. President Hannah had to leave for a meeting of his board of trustees at 6:00 o'clock. He requests this announcement be made: The committee on legislative organization will hold its weekend sessions in rooms 103-A and 103-B at Kellogg center. The first session will begin at 2:00 p.m. Friday, tomorrow, or in the event that the general session of the convention does not adjourn by noon, approximately 2 hours after the adjournment of the general session. There will be a morning and afternoon session on Saturday, January 20, and a session beginning at 12:00 o'clock noon on Monday, January 22. The sessions are open meetings, open to the public and press, with a convention page in attendance.

The committee on administration will meet tomorrow after the session. Walter DeVries, chairman.

Committee on legislative powers will meet in room H tomorrow at 9:00 o'clock a.m. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

Mr. Millard moves that the changes made in subcommittee assignments for the committee on emerging problems be considered read and printed in the journal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the designations will be considered read and will be printed in the journal. The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

Following are the subcommittee assignments for the committee on emerging problems:

Subcommittee 3, administrative procedures
Chairman: Earl C. Pugsley
Melvin Nord
Weldon O. Yeager

Subcommittee 4, intergovernmental relations
Chairman: Raymond L. King
Paul G. Goebel
Mrs. Daisy Elliott

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. John Hannah requests to be excused from tomorrow's session, the Michigan State University board of trustees meets tonight and tomorrow through noon. Mr. McAllister is required to be in court in Bad Axe on 2 matters which were set before Friday sessions were ordered, which matters cannot be adjourned, he asks to be excused from Friday's session. Mr. Gust asks to be excused from Friday's session. Mr. Page requests that he be excused from the sessions of Friday, to keep 2 speaking engagements; Monday, to keep a speaking engagement; and Tuesday, to attend an annual meeting of an organization by which he is employed. Dr. Pollock requests to be excused from tomorrow's session so that he may keep a speaking engagement.

That is all of the announcements and requests, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection the several requests are granted.

What is the pleasure of the convention? Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. President, I wish to make a motion that there shouldn't be too much argument about, I move that we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Garvin moves that the convention do now adjourn. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails, and the convention stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10:00 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 5:40 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Friday, January 19, 1962.]

SIXTY-FIRST DAY

Friday, January 19, 1962, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning is to be given by the Reverend H. B. Loomis, Pastor of the First Congregational Church of Charlotte. He is a former pastor of mine at Fremont, so I am doubly glad to welcome him to this convention this morning. Will you please rise while he gives the invocation.

REVEREND LOOMIS: Let us pray. Almighty God, who in Thy providence has made us citizens of a land great in privilege and great in opportunity, we give Thee thanks that we are called in our generation to serve.

We thank Thee for the ideals of faith and freedom which brought our fathers to these shores, and for those who through the years have striven to maintain these ideals untarnished and that faith bright and strong, for all who in state and church and school and home and business have sought to serve and preserve their spirit as an instrument of Thy will.

Thou hast given us this good land for our heritage. We humbly beseech Thee that we may always prove ourselves a people mindful of Thy favor and glad to do Thy will.

Bless out state with honorable industry, sound learning; save us from discord and confusion, from pride and from arrogance. Defend our liberties and fashion into one united people those who come here out of many kindreds and tongues.

Endue with the spirit of wisdom these to whom in Thy name we entrust the authority of government, that there may be justice and equity through obedience to Thy law. In time of prosperity, fill our hearts with thankfulness and leave us not to our own thoughts and to our own ways in any hour, be it of triumph or of trial. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following request for leave: Mr. Norris requests to be excused from today's session because he is giving the final exams in law school.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request is granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Goebel, Gust, J. A. Hannah, McAllister, Norris, Page, Romney and Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Committee Proposal 26, A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin; with the recommendation that it pass.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 26 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 739.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Committee Proposal 27, A proposal to provide for liquor control, excise taxes and local option by counties. Amends article XVI, section 11;
with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 27 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 709.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of certain items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. DeVries. All in favor say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. DeVries assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The committee will come to order.

Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, when the committee of the whole rose yesterday afternoon, the question before the committee was a minority report amendment offered by Delegates Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer to paragraph 3 of Committee Proposal 22. Mr. Van Dusen requested a division of the amendment and the request was granted.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 22, see above, page 637.

The committee will now consider the second and third sentences of the minority amendment which is on page 325 of the journal, to which Mr. Wanger has offered an amendment. The secretary will read Mr. Wanger's amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Presently pending are the second and third sentences of the minority amendment, which read:

> No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year.

Mr. Wanger has offered an amendment to the minority amendment:

1. Amend the third sentence of the amendment after "submitted to the legislature" by striking out "as part of" and inserting "with"; so that the language will then read:

Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature with the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this, I trust, does not work any change in the substance, although it does remove the possible danger that the language "as part of the governor's budget" might at some future time be interpreted to require approval by the governor or some other appointee of his in charge of the budget of civil service recommendations. At the same time, it leaves sufficient flexibility so that the proposal of the civil service commission on the increases may still be printed in the governor's budget, because I have been assured by those who know far better than myself that this is a matter of great expediency; that both the salaries and the other budgetary items be allowed to be printed in the same document for the consideration of the legislature.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: A point of information. Could I ask the chairman to ask the secretary to read the amendment again, please?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The secretary will again read the amendment to the minority report amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger's amendment is:

[The amendment to the amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 658.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Quincy, Mr. Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to rise to support definitely the amendment in its entirety, not just the 2 sentences, because I think as delegates here to this convention, we very definitely have a responsibility to the people to try to keep from eroding the dollar. Now I bring this point up here because I feel that as we raise taxes we are just helping to increase the spiral and causing the dollar to be of less value.

I have served on the boards of directors of several corporations here within the city of Lansing, and I live in Branch county near Coldwater; and in serving here on these boards of directors and on the executive committee of several corporations here in Lansing, time and again the personnel director has come to our board and said, "We must increase the clerical and secretarial wages of our 500 employees because civil service has increased their wages for their people." Secondly, he would add, "Also, the college has followed civil service." Now I bring this out at this time particularly because yesterday we were told of the surveys that are being made continuously at the suggestion of the legislature to find out whether or not compensation is proper.

Now I think this is just another factor in increasing and adding to the eroding of the dollar or, in other words, we are in a vicious circle here trying to see who can do what, and I certainly think it is high time that the legislature itself is given the opportunity not only to go over the budget of the commission but also approve the wage and scale program of civil service.

I, too, want to say that I endorse civil service 100 per cent as far as making sure we do not have any part of the spoils system, but I think we have to have some fiscal sanity, and I hope this convention that is assembled here, and the delegates, will consider this very seriously so as not to permit another arm of government — and I feel it is an arm of government, not only the judicial and executive and legislative, but it is another arm of government when they do not have to be responsible to the legislature. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Speaking on Mr. Wanger's amendment and hoping that we can confine our discussion to these 2 sentences for the moment, I have talked to Mr. Wanger with regard to this amendment and he changed the wording only to the extent of saying "with" instead of "as part of" the governor's budget.

Now the committee is working on — with the finance and taxation committee and legislative powers committee — the terms of an executive budget, and we specifically want to see that there is included in the budget all items that affect the budget. At the present time, any civil service increase is made a part of the budget and should be made a part of the budget. For that reason the language in this particular sentence is better, in our opinion, as it stands than it would be if changed to "with the governor's budget." So we would oppose Mr. Wanger's amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The delegate from Marshall, Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Gentlemen, I would merely point out that in the minority report is the statement, "It is not intended that the governor would have the power to control pay rates by virtue of the requirement that proposed increases be included as part of his budget. Only an orderly procedure is sought and intended." I think perhaps with this explanation, the objection or the matter raised by Mr. Wanger, is covered and the language as stated can remain.

MR. HIGGS: I have a point of order.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: On a point of order, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I understood Mr. Wanger to say that this was not a matter of substance but a matter of form. Now Mr. Hatch has raised another question which I had in my mind also, but I felt that it was a matter of form rather than substance. I wonder if an amendment is in order which does not go to the substance?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Higgs, the Chair and the secretary inform you that the amendment to the amendment is in order and the committee of the whole will decide whether it is a matter of substance or just form by its vote.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I think the difficulty has not been solved by the objections to my proposed amendment. My proposed amendment was merely to make it quite clear that although these increases of the commission would have to be submitted to the legislature and although it was appropriate that they be printed right along with the governor's budget, nevertheless, we should avoid language which could be construed even by an extreme interpretation as giving the governor or anyone in the executive branch other, of course, than the independent civil service commission, the power to say to the commission, "Well, in order to become effective, this has to go to the legislature as part of the governor's budget and, since our department controls the governor's budget, you have got to get our approval before those rates you want can become effective." Let us just prevent any such interpretation. We know that probably is not the intent of anybody present in this room so far as that particular part of the minority report amendment is concerned. Let us just make it clear.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, this sentence is of extreme importance. I agree largely with Mr. Wanger's analysis, but I am not sure what the solution is. I would like to take the time of the committee to read the sentence and ask the delegates to give it the clear and unequivocal interpretation of the sentence by itself. This sentence says: "Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of —" or, as in Mr. Wanger's amendment "with" — "the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year."

Now what is the clear meaning of this sentence? It simply says the governor shall submit it, and if it is not submitted what happens? The governor cannot be mandamused. The governor or a chief executive could not be penalized, but the pay increases would not be effective. Let us look 50 years ahead and not 5 years behind. We would have a situation where a civil service commission could say, "There should be a 5 per cent cost of living increase," and if the governor did not want that to take effect, all he would have to do would be to refuse to put it in the budget message, and then who would be penalized? — the innocent state employees that civil service had decided should have a pay increase.

Now I oppose the restriction of the legislature on civil service by permitting the 2/3 veto. I equally oppose the right of a governor to veto the pay raise granted by civil service. Those of us who believe in the concept of civil service believe it should be isolated from either legislative or executive control, as far as setting pay rates. I plead with the committee, let us either have civil service or don't have it. I am concerned that this language as written could permit a governor to veto or even bargain with a civil service commission as to what the pay rates should be, and I urge the committee to reject the amendments and support on its part the committee's report as it came out of the committee.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The delegate from Stanton, Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I thought I was trying to disagree with Mr. Downs, but I find I don't. I intended to speak on that part of the amendment, but in the meantime I want to endorse what Mr. Martin has just said. We have in our constitution at the present time no outline for the budgetary procedure. It is purely statutory. We are trying — and I mean 3 committees are trying—to agree, and we have, I think, practically agreed upon language which will make an orderly procedure in the submission to the legislature of not half a dozen budgets or different items but one budget backed up by bills. I would oppose Mr. Wanger's amendment. I think the minority's language is correct.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the words used in that sentence are "must be submitted." If the governor did not submit these, he would be clearly violating his constitutional obligation, and the word "must" is as strong as you can make it. I think Mr. Downs' fears are entirely ungrounded. I do not think that any governor could possibly refuse to submit the proposals of the civil service commission as part of his budget under this amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The delegate from Detroit, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: First of all, I would like to say that I agree with the interpretation of Mr. Downs. I would like to say that I wanted to speak before Mr. Downs made that point, because I felt that if that language was being put in there, there must be some reason. I could not see the reason, and I was against putting the language in before I could see the reason. Now that I can see the reason, I am doubly against putting this language in.

First of all, as to Mr. Martin's comment, I would like to say 2 things about that — unless I can think of a third while I am speaking. The first is that as the governor he cannot be mandamused — they say he cannot, but what if he does not? The second thing is that I am kind of amazed at Mr. Martin's position. I understood this subject came before his committee and he turned it down. Then on the floor he said otherwise —

MR. IVERSON: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: On a point of order, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Nord should restrict his comments to the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Nord will restrict his comment to the Wanger amendment to the minority amendment.

MR. NORD: My question, Mr. Chairman, is this, does the Wanger amendment cure any defect in the committee proposal? May I speak on that?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Yes, sir.

MR. NORD: In order to do that, I must find out if there is any defect in the Wanger amendment. May I speak on that? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: I would say with discretion, yes, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I assume that means without many words. (laughter) Of course, as I say, Mr. Martin, as head of his committee, has changed his mind on the floor. I do not know whether Mr. Martin's committee has voted on it, but they originally refused it.

Now my point on the amendment that it does not cure the defect is this: whenever any language is to be inserted, whether it be in the Wanger amendment or the underlying amendment, there should be some reason for it. We should not put things into the constitution unless there is a reason for it. Whoever suggests putting in language, whether it is in Mr. Wanger's or in the underlying amendment, has the burden of proof to establish that there is a reason, a need.

It seems to me that the constitution is a conservative document and, whether I am conservative or not, I agree that as such it is a conservative document. It has to be a conservative document. That is the whole purpose of having a constitution — to conserve certain things, to leave certain things alone; and I believe we should always take into account when any committee proposal comes out, if it has not changed anything, prima facie it is correct; if it has changed something, it needs to prove that it is correct. I have not seen any proof that either the underlying amendment is correct or that Mr. Wanger's amendment will cure it. I believe we should take a very conservative motto on everything in the constitution, that it needs the burden of proof in order to change it. In other words, "When in doubt, leave it out."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Marshall, Delegate Hatch.

MR. HATCH: I would like to respond to Delegate Nord's comment that now the reason is apparent to him, he is opposed to it. Frankly, I do not particularly like the implication that there is some hidden meaning behind this language written in the minority report. We explicitly state that it is not the intent that the governor would have a veto power over this or that he could control pay raises. The purpose for this is as stated, to require an orderly procedure to prevent the civil service commission from lapsing back into the practice that existed several years ago of declaring a pay raise at any time, and certainly the intent is not to give the governor a veto. I do not know how you can state it any clearer than it is in the minority report.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the filer of the amendment, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I would like to say, first that I agree with Dr. Nord's argument that those who make the change should certainly bear the burden of proof. I would certainly like to say that when I wrote this improvement — what I thought to be an improvement to the minority report amendment, in this part of it, I hope I did not imply that I was firmly convinced that as an amendment it should be adopted as is, but I think if it is going to be adopted it should be adopted in a form which avoids the construction which I suggest it avoid.

Delegate Hatch has just stated that the intent of the minority of the committee is not this, and that should solve the problem. Well, I think Delegate Ostrow several days ago very succinctly stated the legal problem which is involved here. The court, when it is going to construe something, looks to what the word says. It looks to precisely what it says and then it interprets that, and if it should find some ambiguity, then in its discretion it may turn to the debates, to the committee reports and take what it believes to be the intent, if that can be found readily and clearly in the debates and the reports, and then it may use that as the deciding factor. I think it is our obligation to put the greatest possible thought into what is said by the words which we adopt in the constitution itself, and that only in that way can we be fully served.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The delegate from Bay City, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I think I probably would support the Wanger amendment except that I do not think it solves the problem. I find the problem in the last clause of that sentence. I had noted this question yesterday and did not raise it, because I still feel this is a matter of form rather than substance. I think that in the minority report, and I am reading from page 326 of the journal, the intent is clearly expressed in the first column in the second paragraph from the bottom, "It is not intended that the governor would have the power to control pay rates by virtue of the requirement. . . ."

Now I would like to hear more from Mr. Wanger and Mr. Hatch and possibly Mr. Martin and the committee on style and drafting so that we can solve this problem, but I do not think the problem is solved by the changing of the words "as part of" to "with," because I think the problem is in the last paragraph. I hesitate to speak again on this, but I think we are running into difficulty in trying to control the style and form. I would favor voting down the Wanger amendment and relying upon the committee to have this language conform with the clearly expressed intent.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: If the legislature finds itself in the frustrating position of not being able to do anything about civil service, it has only itself to blame. We would not be arguing about civil service here and there would be no constitutional provision regarding civil service if it was not for what the legislature did to civil service in 1939. Without bothering about the details of this particular amendment or about what the legislature did to civil service in 1939, the less the legislature has to do with civil service the better off we will be.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The lady from Highland Park, Delegate Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Since the drafting seems to be the problem with Delegate Wanger, I wonder if he would accept this amendment. This goes to the language "Any proposed increase must be submitted to the legislature prior to the commencement of the session in order to be effective on the first day following the fiscal year." My intent is just to give the legislature notice, not control but just notice. This takes the governor out, so you do not have any trouble.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair says, Miss Donnelly, that that would have to be submitted as a separate amendment. It cannot be submitted as a part of the Wanger amendment to the minority report amendment. It can be submitted later after we vote on this amendment.

Dr. Pollock, did you wish to speak on the amendment to the amendment?

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I will only say a very few words. I have followed the course of this debate with great care, as I have followed all other debates of this committee, and I observe one thing today as I have observed it before. The committee usually gets itself nicely tangled up not on the proposal submitted by the committee, which has been carefully deliberated, but usually on some amendment, however well intentioned, when it comes to the floor. Then there are other amendments and pretty soon we are in a stalemate.

This report came to this committee from the committee on executive branch. It was carefully deliberated there. It was agreed to there except by a few members of the committee who now exercise their privilege, of course, of moving an amendment on the floor. I have heard nothing in this debate which convinces me that they have made out any case for their proposed amendments to the committee report. On the other hand, I have heard a good many arguments the other way. We have heard fears raised regarding the possible intrusion of the legislature into this essentially technical matter. We have heard fears raised with reference to getting the executive into the picture as part of the budgetary process. These are fears, however well founded, that it is a little difficult at this time to decide. The arguments in favor, however, of this amendment are not at all impressive and they do, in my view — and I view this, obviously, differently than Mr. Hatch and the other delegates who have supported the so called Hatch amendment — I view this as a matter of some danger, some possible danger, to the preservation of a strong civil service system. It seems to me it is a wedge driven into the civil service structure. It may not split that structure, but it has the possibility of doing so. I think, therefore, that this amendment as proposed should be rejected and the members of this committee should support the report of the committee as presented by Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I had merely intended to comment upon Miss Donnelly's suggestion but, since that was ruled out of order, at this time I have nothing further to say.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee of the whole is the adoption of the Wanger amendment to the minority report amendment. The secretary will read the amendment to the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger has offered the amendment to the minority amendment:

[The amendment to the amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 658.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Any further discussion of the Wanger amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

The question now is on the adoption of the 2 sentences from the middle of the minority report amendment, and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: This is the insertion on page 2, line 7, after "state civil service.", of the language of the 2 middle sentences of the minority report amendment, which sentences read:

> No increase in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion on this portion of the proposed minority report amendment? Delegate Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: Mr. Chairman, I think that the learned Dr. Pollock has a right to his opinion, but I think, also, that the convention here very definitely should try to get some fiscal sanity in our government. I don't think that we should be setting up a separate section of government, as I believe the civil service is. I am for civil service, but I think that the legislature is the one that should be appropriating and have the power to tax, and it should have something to do with it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the 2 sentences of the minority report amendment. Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would like to mention that I am not an attorney but a businessman. I am responsible for a department, and it would certainly be wonderful if I could run my department without having to be accountable to anybody or without having to get any sanction for pay raises.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Any further discussion of the amendment? Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Replying to Mr. Sterrett, I did not dignify this argument which I have heard on the floor based upon the effect of pay raises on the economy of this state, because I doubt if any economist would consider that worthy of very much discussion. It isn't a case of irresponsible control over the finances of the state. It has been demonstrated here that the legislature has control of the purse. They demonstrated this effectively when they reduced appropriations this last year, and this is the basic problem: when policy making bodies begin to monkey around with details, they get into trouble.

The fact is that this job of fixing rates of compensation has been well done. I defy anybody to find a set of scales any better for public employees, and they compare also with a great many of the better sets of scales for private industry. We have something here which is working. It has worked well for 20 years. For 20 years we have developed a civil service that now ranks with the best in the country. Some of us find that to be indispensable to the successful operation of the government of this state. This is one institution in this state that we can be very proud of. It seems to me there are plenty of old barnacles around that you can play around with, but let's don't play around with this. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Yeager requests a division vote. Is it supported?

The request for division is supported. The question now is on the 2 middle sentences of the minority report amendment offered to Committee Proposal 22. As many as are in favor will rise.

The secretary will read that part of the amendment again.

SECRETARY CHASE: Immediately pending is the insertion of the second and third sentences which read:

[The 2 sentences of the amendment were again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 661.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: As many as are in favor of that part of the amendment will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: As many as are opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-seven.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: There are 60 yeas, 57 nays.

The second and third sentences of the amendment are adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Now pending are the first and fourth sentences of the minority report amendment, which read as follows:

"Increases in rates of compensation in the state civil service shall be proposed by the commission and will become effective unless rejected, modified, or reduced by 2/3 vote of the members elect of both houses of the legislature within 60 days after submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. [Second and third sentences considered separately and adopted.] The legislature may not reduce rates of compensation below those in effect at the time of the submission of a proposed increase.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question now is on the adoption of this part of the minority report amendment. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: When we concluded our discussion yesterday, some question was raised with regard to political influence in the civil service system. I did not discuss that at the time, but I must say that there probably is no system in the world that can be devised without some political influence affecting it. However, the committee did consider this matter. They had before it among other things the testimony of the director of the civil service commission, which bears on this point, and I thought that the delegates might wish to have that before them as a body. It is short and I would like to read it to you. This is not my statement, of course; it is the statement of the director of the civil service commission, but I am reading it for whatever weight you wish to give it. Mr. DeWald said:

> Believe me when I say that spoilsmanship is a continuing threat. It is currently practiced in modified form at the county level in Michigan counties and in many of our cities. Inevitable pressure for patronage is constantly on people in the state's public life in both the executive and legislative branches of government and in both political parties. It comes in obvious and direct forms and in exceedingly devious forms. It comes from legislators who want constituents hired or promoted. It comes from agency heads who, for various reasons, want to get around the rules. It comes from politicians who constantly fight to lower minimum standards we set on education and experience for applicants for state jobs. It comes from 100 different sources that would both surprise and amaze you.
> The language of our present constitution affords Michigan the strongest protection of any of the states against these pressures. Even at that there is still room for an extremely limited amount of patronage and this should be clear at the outset.

One popular misconception about civil service is that it eliminates all politics. It does not and it cannot. It does, however, keep it to a minimum. The late Dr. Lent Upson, who was director of the Detroit bureau of governmental research, best said it 20 years ago when the present amendment was being argued before the voters. In answer to the question, "Will the merit proposal completely remove state employment from politics?" he replied:

> No statute can ever guarantee against all political interference in public administration in any field, but these provisions go as far as is humanly possible to protect civil service against politics.
> There are 3 areas where political considerations on the part of agency heads inclined to use them might develop. They are in the selection from the top 3 names on an employment list, the so called "rule of 3", in provisional appointments made when no adequate list is available; and, conceivably, in the promotional examination process. But we have an appeal process set up to guard against abuse, and it is equally true this system severely limits such considerations, yet still leaves the elected official or agency head some voice and latitude in the selection of personnel and, in the case of provisional hires, if political considerations are used by an agency head, the system also makes sure merit is involved because the candidate must meet minimum requirements to even get a temporary appointment and must, finally, face competitive examination.

Another popular fallacy about civil service is that the sole reason for the system is to eliminate politics from state employment. It is an important reason but it is far from the only or even, perhaps, the most important reason. Certainly equally important but generally unnoticed, at least in the public mind, is that this amendment is the backbone of one of the most modern personnel systems in America designed to provide us with a framework for a career service which can attract and retain capable public employees.

None of us, I am sure, believes the constitutional document this convention submits to the voters will in itself by some magic solve Michigan's governmental problems. Performance of government is only as good as the caliber of the people it attracts and retains as employees. A lifetime in public personnel work establishes one truism for me. This is that even the most clumsy framework of government will work quite well if you have the personnel tools to attract and retain the best employees; even the best framework will produce poor government if you cannot get career people to make it work.

I would only add to that this — and in this I am talking from experience — I served for 4 years with a civil service staff. Everyone on my staff except my deputy and my secretary were civil service employees. I never knew or asked about the politics of any one of them. I never asked any one of them to perform a political service for me and none of them ever did; but I can testify to the fact that they were the highest caliber, the finest group of people and the most dedicated, most willing to work long hours without regard to rules as to what hours they should work that I have ever worked with in government or out, and I have worked in several different situations. They were of the best, and I can only attribute this to the fact that they were appointed under the present civil service system.

This is the best testimony I know to the fact that the system works and that the proposal as the committee has presented it to you with the changes which it has made is a sound proposal and good for the people of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Stanton, Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the problem we are discussing is one that lends itself very readily to flights, oratorical flights into outer space and we have had them. It is not remotely connected with the spoils system or any tendency to go towards the spoils system. Civil service in Michigan has been a very good thing. It has done a lot for us. There isn't any question about it.

I lived in state government before we had civil service and after we had civil service. To go back to what we had before civil service is simply unthinkable. Nobody would do it. But there is the situation of one who stands off at a distance and theorizes about civil service. It is completely different from one who has been part of it, worked in it and with it, and has had some little opportunity to see what goes on.

We have had a — and it has been promoted — an unfortunate attitude in the state and with those who have stood outside and told us what we ought to have, in that we have made 2 departments, 2 departments of our state government sort of sacred cows that you dare not criticize. If you try to point out any defects either in the operation or in the setup of civil service, you are immediately branded as a spoilsman, that you want to go back to the spoils system, which is absolutely false. We haven't been able to turn on civil service the public criticism, the public scrutiny, that every department in state government and in any other government needs. Nothing is perfect in government. Every part should be subject to improvement, subject to criticism when it is wrong. I hope that sometime we can get away from that attitude and treat this department as we treat all others.

It has been good. Its greatest service has been in that it is classified employment. It has seen to it that people doing similar work get similar pay, that their working conditions are the same. It has brought system where before we had chaos, and that has been the greatest service it has done. Its greatest service is not in its method of selecting employees, although there it is much better, of course, than what we had before.

Perhaps its greatest deficiency as an operating matter is in the result that we carry on the payroll some deadwood that any employer would eliminate if he were free to do so. I think they call that the "closed door policy." It is a serious problem. It is not a large percentage; most of the state employees are excellent, but when you get one who is not a thief or a highwayman or a murderer or something of that kind but who is just a little lazy, a little inattentive, he is not quite efficient, he does not give the public the — let's see, the word is "image" now, isn't it — (laughter) — you are stuck with him. You are absolutely stuck with him. If you decide to get rid of him, you are on trial, not the employee. That is not too large a part of the problem because, generally, they are not that kind of people.

We have had no opportunity, no fair opportunity since this civil service system was put into our constitution to get rid of the bugs in it. There have been many abuses. Most of them are administrative abuses that could be corrected administratively. In other words, they are the fault of the people, not the fault of the law, but there are bugs in the law — have been.

I was interested in what Mr. Martin said yesterday that in the legislature some 14 or 15 times somebody introduced a proposed constitutional amendment to make a change. Universally, those proposed changes went too far. I talked several times with the sponsors trying to get them to be reasonable, to make corrections and not to weaken civil service. They were never willing to do so, but the comforting thing about it, the assurance that the legislature has no intention, no wish of destroying or weakening civil service, is that on 14 or 15 proposals that went too far, the legislature would not go along once. Every time they were turned down as they should have been. You do not have too much to fear on the part of the legislature.

Now, getting to the particular thing that is involved in this first sentence, the matter of accepting or vetoing a proposed across the board raise. Nobody is suggesting that the legislature should set salaries. Nobody is suggesting that the legislature should interfere with a particular salary or a particular class of salaries. The minority proposal is that when a bomb is thrown into the budget, in season or out of season, that the legislature, by a 2/3 vote — which is almost impossible — can say no, or it can say it is too much, or it can change it, but it cannot go below present salary schedules.

Have you followed in mind just what it is that we do have? We have one body of people, an administrative body not responsible to the people in any sense, not even responsible to the governor except in that he appoints them; one body of people with complete control over the cost of personnel service, the big item in any budget — complete control: sets salaries, sets wages, establishes all the working conditions, vacation time, sick time, everything that has to do with the cost of personnel, but no power to raise any money; another body with complete power to raise money but no effective control over the cost of personnel service. That is screwy, absolutely screwy. (laughter)

If we have a principle in government of any free people — whether English speaking or some other speaking — if we have a principle of government that is sound and that ought to be kept sound, it is that the control of the purse strings must be in the legislative branch of government. I know what Mr. Martin said yesterday and what Dr. Pollock has just said about the fact there is control. Is there control? There certainly is nothing that you can use as control.

Suppose, as has happened time after time, you get one of these bombs thrown into the budget, in season and out of season, and there is no control of the season — the boys have been pretty good lately but will they be good tomorrow? — $7 million — after it is too late to try to raise the money. What is the legislature's choice? Either knuckle in and take it, as it always has but once — it has grumbled, it has complained, but it has always knuckled in and taken it but once — it is a choice of doing that or saying, "We will fire $7 million worth of employees," assuming that the departments have correctly informed the legislature as to the amount of their budgets. That is not effective control.

Now what is proposed in this amendment is a tremendously small thing: just a check by a 2/3 vote on a general increase across the board, not on a particular individual or a particular class. That is all, and it means just this: that all the civil service commission has to do in order to get the increase that they think ought to be is to persuade 1/3 of the legislature that they are right, and that certainly is a simple task.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Marshall, Delegate Hatch, and informs Delegate Wanger that there are 6 on the list of those waiting to be recognized.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few comments on some of the arguments that were made yesterday. Injected into the argument on this particular amendment yesterday was the question of returning to the spoils system, and I submit that this is a completely inappropriate and improper argument with respect to this amendment, and I say this for several reasons. First of all this amendment does not affect most of the powers of the civil service commission. In other words, this amendment does not affect the power of the commission to classify all positions in state civil service according to their respective duties and responsibilities. It does not affect the power of the commission to approve or disapprove disbursements for all personnel services. It does not affect the power of the commission to determine by competitive performance exclusively on the basis of merit, efficiency, and fitness the qualifications of all candidates for positions in state civil service. It does not affect the power of the civil service commission to make rules and regulations governing all personnel transactions and regulate all conditions of employment in the state civil service. It does not affect the right of an aggrieved person to claim that his position was abolished or he was denied a promotion or an appointment because of partisan, racial or religious considerations. All this does is give some small check on the salary fixing powers of the commission.

Another reason why this amendment does not in any way get back to the spoils system or throw this thing back into the political arena is that the 2/3 requirement under this amendment certainly insures that in a state that is as equally divided politically as Michigan, rejections will not be made on a political basis. Rather, any rejection that is made must of necessity be bipartisan.

Third, I would like to point out that the committee on executive branch, the majority of the committee on executive branch, recognize in their report that this amendment does not throw us back to the spoils system or into the political arena. The reason stated for rejecting this amendment in the committee report is that the feeling was strong that ultimately the 2/3 requirement would be lowered as a result of political pressure to a majority, with the consequent damage to the system discussed above, in other words returning to the spoils system. This amendment does not require a majority vote. If this amendment were adopted the 2/3 provision would be present therein. The only way you could possibly make it a majority vote would be by a constitutional amendment passed by the people.

Now the argument has been made that the legislature should not get into the salary fixing business, that this is a matter for the civil service experts. I submit that this amendment does not put the legislature in a salary fixing business but rather in the salary reviewing business. It has also been said that the pay plan is the heart of a civil service system, that there must be equal pay for equal work. Well, these arguments: equal pay for equal work, that the legislature should not get in the salary fixing business, all start with one basic premise, namely, that in each and every instance the civil service commission is going to be right and that any change that is made will be wrong. What if the plan of the civil service commission does not provide equal pay for equal work? How are the people of this state to insure that this is done unless there is a review by the representatives of the people?

Lastly, I would like to delve into a philosophical matter as to just what is the function of a governmental agency. To my mind the function of any governmental agency is to serve the people, and how can we be certain that an agency will continue to serve the people — as I sincerely feel that the civil service commission has done in the past — when that agency is not subject to some control by the people? I sincerely believe that if this veto power is given to the legislature that the residents of the state of Michigan can be assured that the civil service commission will continue to exercise their prerogative of initiating pay raises carefully and properly.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Battle Creek, Delegate Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, it has been suggested to us today that we are in treacherous waters when we offer amendments to committee proposals, and I suspect there is a great deal of merit in that. We all know from personal experience how hard working, how conscientious the committees are, but I would remind the members of this committee that the very proposal before us, Committee Proposal 22, has had added to it 2 committee amendments that were offered here on the floor, not minority report amendments but amendments of the committee itself, which is an indication to me that despite hard work and careful consideration a second look sometimes reveals defects which were not apparent the first time around. I think that is what we are asking for here: simply a second look, and a very well guarded second look, at the work of the civil service commission.

I do not think any of us — I am certain I, myself, would not suggest they are not conscientious, hard working, and as objective as they can be, but they are not infallible, and an opportunity for the representatives of the people to look carefully, with the safeguards which this amendment provides for the work of the commission, is to me a second look and a very proper one and one we should support.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Birmingham, Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, yesterday I moved to divide the minority report amendment so that we could look at it separately. Obviously, one of my reasons for doing this was because I felt very strongly that the wording we had now adopted was desirable. I still feel that way. I am mindful and somewhat persuaded by the arguments of Delegates Brake and Hatch this morning but, nevertheless, I am also persuaded that the committee has given this matter very careful consideration and that its views are entitled to considerable weight. For that reason, on this section of the minority report amendment I will support the committee.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Owosso, Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to say that I have the greatest of sympathy for the objectives of my good friends and colleagues, Mr. Hatch, Judge Shaffer and Mr. Shackleton. I certainly am not one who believes that if the Hatch amendment prevailed that it would mean a return to the spoils system. Likewise, I share the viewpoint expressed by other delegates here that the civil service system in Michigan is certainly not sacrosanct and should be, rather, willing to bear close scrutiny and examination; but I feel compelled, Mr. Chairman, to speak briefly on what happens when a legislative body becomes directly involved and concerned with the question of pay scales or pay raises or wage rates in a civil service system.

As a member of a legislative body for 8 years in Washington that directly was involved in civil service and postal pay scales, I may say that — again, from personal experience — the amount of pressure brought on the members of congress by employee unions, both the postal union and the civil service, the regular federal employee union, was little short of scandalous. I would not wish that amount of pressure to be exerted on my worst enemy, and I can tell you that it happened only as a result of the fact that the congress is directly involved, as I say, in settling those matters.

I sympathize very greatly with the objectives of the gentlemen who prepared the minority report but I do feel constrained to support the committee in this matter, because I do not wish to see similar pressure exerted on our legislature such as has been going on for a great many years in the congress and which has forced the executive — both President Eisenhower and President Kennedy — to exercise their executive privilege of veto when pay scales, rammed through a congress by one of the most active and potentially powerful lobbies that is on the national level, prevailed and would have threatened to throw the entire executive budget completely out of balance.

Therefore, since this is not a partisan matter and since the legislative body with which I have most experience has shown how amenable it can be to pressures and influences from employee unions, I would like to spare the legislature here in Lansing that type of pressure if at all possible.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Saginaw, Delegate Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it seems obvious that most of the verbiage of the so called yesterday's and today's debates is concerning things which are not in the proposed amendment. Mr. Brake has very carefully pointed out there is nothing in there concerning the spoils system. There is nothing in there concerning rates of pay by classes. There is nothing in there interfering with the administration of the civil service commission.

Yesterday, mention was made of the ripper bill under the present constitution or the proposed article. The ripper bill could not be passed. If that were still not true, in the enlightment of today it would be impossible, because of public sentiment, to ever pass such a bill again.

The 3 principal things in this amendment, the one which we have voted on, is to make sure that the civil service commission must put in along with the governor's budget its request, which certainly can be unreasonable — and it has been pointed out by several, in the past it was unreasonable — when such increases were injected after it was too late to try to do anything about it as far as raising the funds was concerned to meet it. Tied right in with that is the other part of the minority proposal which gives the legislature a look so that they may be in a better position to try to balance receipts and expenditures which, as taxes become harder and harder to come by, seems to be an essential part of a legislative function. Thirdly, primarily, if this check is not inserted, we should go back and recognize 4 divisions of government instead of the gubernatorial, legislative, and the judicial, because very apparently, in its present form, this is a fourth branch of government.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ypsilanti, Delegate Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am beginning to wonder, after 2 days of this, if, maybe, we are not in the position of either not meaning what we say or not saying what we mean. Now, I have not heard anybody state that he is against this system. I have not heard anybody state that it has not worked well. I have not heard anyone even supporting these amendments say anything but that it has brought order out of chaos and has raised morale, and yet we are being asked by this amendment, in my opinion, to insert into the Michigan constitution the very thing that has ruined the civil service systems in several states in this country. Now, if we have got a system which everybody admits works well, has worked well, why do we have to continue tinkering with it?

I am opposed to the amendment and, unless we want to get ourselves in the position that has been brought about in other states, I think we should vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have heard it said not only today but also yesterday and between our 2 sessions that this amendment has nothing to do with the spoils system; it has no tendency — at least, those were the words that were just used this morning — no tendency whatsoever to lean towards the spoils system. Now, I think yesterday we heard the argument that it has nothing to do with the spoils system, first of all because we have some patronage now. I think Mr. Martin has answered that argument much more eloquently than I could even attempt to do.

Now, the second argument which is used is, of course, that this has only to do with pay increases. A delegate who spoke a few minutes ago suggested that because of this limitation there was no danger whatsoever of any tendency to go back to the system where jobs were handed out on the basis of political party or political campaigning rather than on merit and just consideration. However, that delegate also went on to point out that there were several abuses or what he considered in his judgment and experience to be abuses in the present system, or imperfections, and I suppose the logical conclusion would be, since he was speaking in favor of this amendment, that these abuses could be perhaps corrected with a little pressure from the legislature if 2/3 of the members of the houses of that body would be willing to exercise it. Pressure, of course, can be used for many purposes. It can be particularly used to point out to a body such as the civil service commission that several well qualified applicants for public jobs from that particular legislator's district had not been given jobs and that this, perhaps, is an abuse of the civil service or the merit system.

Well, I think we realize that the success of the civil service system depends to some extent upon keeping the salary scale up in some relation to the cost of living and that, while it is true that the taxpayer is hurt when an error is made in giving too much money in salary and compensation, we should also be fully aware that the taxpayer is hurt and seriously hurt when too little is given for the kind of service that our government demands today.

Two-thirds is considered by some of the delegates favoring this amendment to be a protection. I think yesterday I said that the ripper bill itself passed one of the houses of our legislature by a 2/3 vote. I was a bit in error on that. It actually passed the house by in excess of a 3/4 vote.

Well, I don't like to be negative in speaking against something without trying to agree on one basic point, the one basic motive which I know has motivated the sponsors of this amendment and, I hope, all of those who have supported this amendment to the committee's report. Economy in government and efficiency in government are vital, and are probably things about which you could say in the long run there is nothing more important taken alone. At present we know that the legislature has a great deal of control over this or a great deal of power, at least, in their ability to control the appropriations which they make to departments and to agencies over which the civil service system has no control whatsoever and, secondly, in those branches or departments which are supported with earmarked revenues, whether earmarked by statute or by the constitution, by controlling the rate under which those revenues which are so earmarked are collected and levied. So there is one aspect where the legislature has the power which sometimes, I admit, requires courage to exercise.

There is a second way, however, and a way in which I hope in later days this convention will find to be a persuasive and a strong one, in which this efficiency and economy in government can be promoted, and that abuses wherever they may exist — whether any be found in the civil service commission or any other branch or department or agency of government — can be ferreted out; and that is the proposals which have been introduced and are being considered by 2 committees of this convention to create the office of a legislative auditor, who would be a professional appointed by the legislature with full and sweeping investigatory powers over all state departments and agencies whether they be constitutionally established or established by statute, and that with such professional assistance that the legislature will be able to get the facts and with the facts will be able to correct the abuses which they complain of at the present time.

For these reasons, then, I urge you not to support the amendment before us and in this particular to go along with the committee's report.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief. The question has been raised on the floor about the matter of state employees being discharged. I wish to make it very clear, I am not in favor of people being arbitrarily discharged; however, I think the record does show that approximately 6,800 people have been discharged in 20 years. Now, a sound civil service procedure provides that the individual employee, too, must be protected, and the hearing setup is designed to make a balance between the right of management to do a supervisory job and the right of employees not to be arbitrarily handled. I think it should be pointed out that the civil service commission does have established procedure to see that management can perform its function and at the same time to see that the individual is protected — and that individuals have been discharged from the state employment for other than fraud. I think it should be pointed out that a good personnel system has an absolute minimum of discharges but, rather, a wholesome personnel development.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Quincy, Delegate Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: Mr. Chairman and delegates, again I would like to refer to Mr. Bentley — I guess he is not in here presently — but he made the statement that civil service was not necessarily partisan or is not partisan. I would just like to relate a little experience that I had last summer. I hope no one else had this experience; but I requested the privilege of meeting before the civil service group through the union where there are 800 employees in my own county, which is one of the largest organizations, employing organizations, within the county, and I was denied this privilege, yet my opponent very definitely was given this opportunity and from the meeting the next day I was told that they determined that I was against civil service. This, to me, has some connotations of partisanship.

Now I still would have to add that I do not think there is a businessman in this room or a person who has ever met a payroll or who has ever had a position of responsibility in any corporation, large or small, that has just taken the checkbook and endorsed a blank check and handed it to any department. I did not happen to catch the gentleman's name who said he would not do it in his business. I would not do it in my business, and I do not think there is a responsible person in this room who would do it in his business. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Flint, Delegate McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think there is one factor which has not been properly emphasized here and that is this: what the average voter or what people think to be true can have as damning a result as opinions based on full and proper understanding. In this instance I submit that the people may feel or be led by others to feel that a serious breach has been made in the matter of civil service. Admittedly, our civil service in Michigan is working well. In this instance, I say let well enough alone.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, there have been statements made here on the floor that I am certain have aroused in your minds a great deal of apprehension as to whether or not the law affecting our civil service has within it the proper safeguards. Just to disabuse your minds of that, I hope that you will just bear with me for a moment while I call your attention to the Michigan Legislative Handbook. I am reading now from the article providing for civil service. Now it has been said here, both directly and by inference, that there is no regulation, that civil service is just running hither, thither and yon without proper safeguards — I am going to read this to you:

> After August 1, 1941, no payment for personal services shall be made or authorized until the provisions of this amendment have been complied with in every particular. Violation of any of the provisions hereof may be restrained or observance compelled by injunctive or mandamus proceedings brought by any citizen of the state.

I think that — in other words — if there are any abuses of such violent nature as by inference have been mentioned on this floor, no one has stated that it has been ever necessary to approach constituted authority for the correction of them.

And I want to say to you here as a matter of my personal experience — and I have been in politics — that I was against civil service, frankly. I was opposed to it. I was a spoilsman. I didn't want it. In fact I quarreled with a member of the legislature who was a client of mine who voted for it; but since it has come, my mind has completely changed — just as Saul who was on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians. And I don't want to see civil service disturbed. We have a host of fine men and women running that department. I have appeared before the commission on complaints. Sometimes they have agreed that there were reasons and they have modified them, and then on other occasions they have thrown me out on my ear. I think we ought to let them alone; they are doing a good job; and if they are not, the method to reach it is right here in this little book.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the first and fourth sentences of the minority report amendment offered by Delegates Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer.

The Chair will recognize the delegate from Grand Haven, Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would just like to give a few of my views. I have 4 points and I will make them as briefly as possible. I fundamentally agree with Mr. Brake. For the 9 years that I have been a public administrator, I have had the problem of negotiating wages with employees through a union or through an association. I think we kind of lose sight of one thing, and that is that the employees are generally more interested in stability than they are in wages.

Now if the legislature has the power, as the committee has shown now, to cut a budget and thereby to require that civil service lets go its employees, I think if you asked all the employees they would rather not have the wage raise and keep the employees. I think this is an important point to consider and, in that light, I think that the legislative control of the area of modification would be more important than just being able to cut the appropriation.

As to Mr. Bentley's statement about the civil service pressure on congress, I might remind you that I think in our case, here, it is a little bit different. The representatives of the legislature are from all over the state and the employees are generally concentrated in just a few areas, so it would be very difficult for them to bring pressure on our legislature as constituents.

And fourth, one thing that kind of amazes me — and this reminds me of a statement that the president of Harvard University made back in 1929, "The whole tone of our society today is that everything is going to continue to go up." I will never forget that he stated in 1929 that we were destined for the highest economy that we ever had. Now I don't think that we have learned yet how to avoid panics, and I think that some day a depression or a panic will come and I think there should be some measure that the legislature could exercise and control to reduce wages so that it would fit the needs of the state.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Gladwin, Delegate Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Gentlemen, I have been sitting over here in the corner for some time, and I have made up my mind how I am going to vote on this issue, and when I sit down I hope that we will vote. (laughter and applause) In conclusion I would like to say, also — (laughter) — that serious consideration is being given to limiting debate in this committee of the whole. I don't particularly like this idea and so I would suggest that those of you who disagree with me would not talk so much and then we could get this thing done. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Muskegon, Delegate Seyferth, for the purpose of offering an amendment to the minority report amendment, and the secretary will read Mr. Seyferth's amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Seyferth offers the following amendment to the pending amendment:

1. Amend the first sentence of the amendment after "increases in" by striking out "rates of compensation in" and inserting "the total salary budget of"; so that the sentence will read, "Increases in the total salary budget of the state civil service shall be proposed by the commission and will become effective unless rejected, . . ." and so forth.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the adoption of the Seyferth amendment to the minority report amendment. Delegate Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think this amendment is self explanatory. However, for review, I feel very definitely — based on what I have heard on this floor this morning — that the concern is that the legislature may get into determining specific rates for specific classifications. This I do not feel is the intent of the minority report amendment. I feel that what is required and what is desired in this area is to provide a harmonious relationship between the civil service, in this instance, and the legislature to respectfully review increases in budgets, and in this interest I present the amendment just read.

This, then, will provide for a positive check upon the civil service by the legislature and it will also provide a positive check upon the civil service commission themselves in the area of budget responsibility. I realize that the legislature does at this moment have the comparable power to reduce the budget by merely ignoring or just slicing. This amendment, I feel, lends dignity to the relationship between the 2 bodies.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the adoption of the Seyferth amendment to the minority report amendment. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am not quite sure what the import of the amendment is, but as I read to you yesterday from the headnote to the supreme court case decided in 1942 between the civil service commission and the auditor general, specifically, the court held there that it is within the power of the legislature to fix the amount it will appropriate for personnel services in any state department or agency. So it sounds to me as though this amendment seems to go right back to what the court approved except that it will require a 2/3 vote. I do not think the amendment is going to improve the situation at all, and I am sure the committee would feel that that amendment ought not to pass.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Fennville, Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I am glad to be recognized as from Fennville but, really, I represent the eighth senatorial district which is much larger than my little city of Fennville. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express some concern about Mr. Seyferth's amendment, because I don't think that his amendment accomplishes the purpose that he seeks. As I hear his amendment, I believe what he has in mind is that he thinks that the legislative function should be on a total salary basis rather than rates of compensation.

But please understand, increases in rates of compensation in a state civil service shall be proposed by the commission and that is its proper function. It is to deal in the rates of compensation, it does not deal in total salary budget, and I think that your concept of total budget for salaries is something that you have got to work in somewhere down there where they start to talk about the legislature and not up in the beginning of it where we are properly concerned about the function of the civil service commission which, in this case, is designed to increase the rates of compensation in the classified service.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is on the adoption of the Seyferth amendment to the minority report amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Seyferth's amendment is:

[The amendment to the amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 666.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion on the amendment? Delegate Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Just a point of clarity regarding Senator Hutchinson's comment. My intent is that the civil service commission itself shall determine the individual rates for the individual classification but will propose it to the legislature upon which it will act in a 2/3 manner. The legislature will consider the total budget and not the individual rates and classification.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion on the Seyferth amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; those opposed, say no.

The amendment to the amendment is not adopted.

The question before the committee is now the first and fourth sentences of the minority report amendment offered by Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer in paragraph 3 of Committee Proposal 22. Is there any further discussion on this amendment? Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I request a division.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Yeager requests a division. Is there support for the division vote?

There is support. For what purpose did the gentleman rise, Delegate Kelsey?

MR. KELSEY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to request that we use the machine on the division because the last vote was pretty close.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Kelsey requests the use of the voting machine. The Chair will rule that we will use the voting machine.

As many as are in favor of the adoption of the remaining portion of the minority report amendment offered by Messrs. Hatch, Shackleton and Shaffer will vote aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be taken.

On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 43 and the nays are 88.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: That portion of the amendment is not adopted.

Are there any — Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move reconsideration of the vote on the amendment on the submission of the proposed increases as part of the governor's budget.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: You wish to reconsider the entire amendment offered by the delegates?

MRS. CUSHMAN: No.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Cushman moves that the committee of the whole reconsider the vote by which it adopted that part of the minority report amendment which reads, "No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year . . ." and so on. Is that correct?

MRS. CUSHMAN: That's right.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there support for the motion for reconsideration?

The question is on the motion of Delegate Cushman that we reconsider the vote by which that part of the amendment was adopted. Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: A point of order. Would it be proper if we did this immediately and then put my amendment in, because it is on that issue?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: That amendment will not be before us until we reconsider.

Delegate Martin, for what purpose did the gentleman rise?

MR. MARTIN: Simply to say that I think we had the matter fully presented and we had an opportunity for careful consideration and I think that the motion for reconsideration should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: A point of information, Mr. Chairman. What is the status of the reconsideration now? Has it passed or not passed?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: We have not voted on it, Mr. Mahinske.

Dr. Nord, for what purpose did the gentleman rise?

MR. NORD: Are we permitted to debate this question or not — whether there should be reconsideration? I believe the debate has started, and I only inquire whether it is debatable or not. If it is, I wish to speak; if it is not, I wish to sit down. (laughter) I do not wish to do both. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Members of the committee, the secretary will read a citation from Mason's manual.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section 471 of Mason's manual: "A motion to reconsider is debatable except when the motion which it is proposed to reconsider is undebatable. . . ."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair rules that the amendment was debatable; therefore, the motion to reconsider is debatable.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I will only debate for about 1 minute or less. The point has been raised that this question has been considered fully, and I agree; therefore, normally, there should not be reconsideration. I believe there is a justification in this case, however. That is that only 117 people voted and there are about, I believe, 130 or 135 people here, and it was a very close vote. For that reason I think it is justified that we do reconsider.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Delegate Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I just want to add something to what Mr. Martin said in saying that this matter was carefully considered previously by indicating that there were 3 careful reconsiderers down in the men's room at the time of the first vote and I am, therefore, in favor of reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Delegate Hood.

MR. HOOD: I request a roll call vote by the board, please.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hood requests a division with the use of the board. Is there support for the request? There is support. Delegate Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: I would just like to say that I certainly hope that as long as Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee, has stated previously that he thought these 2 sentences would be proper within their report, I certainly hope that the delegate body here will support and keep those in the report and definitely not allow a bombshell to drop upon the legislature at about the time they adjourn. That is what I think we are toying with. I don't know who is scared of civil service; I am not. I am for it but not scared of it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the motion to reconsider. As many as are in favor will vote aye; as many as are opposed, will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the totals will be taken.

On the question of reconsideration, the yeas are 54, the nays are 75.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The motion to reconsider does not prevail.

Are there any further amendments to paragraph 3 of Committee Proposal 22?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, on behalf of the committee on executive branch, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 15, after "commission.", by inserting "Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we could follow this procedure: I would like to have the amendment explained to the body. I do not think we will have time to debate it at length, but I do want to be sure that you understand the purport of the new language and, if we can have it explained, I will yield to one of the members of the committee for that purpose. Then, thereafter, I will move that the committee rise and this will give us an opportunity to familiarize ourselves with the language and consider the matter over the weekend, and we will have an opportunity then to move forward with the consideration of the entire committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: To whom do you yield, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Durst, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin yields to Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin and members of the committee, besides explaining to you the import of the amendment which Mr. Martin has offered, I would like to explain the remaining elements in this paragraph which the committee has changed. In lines 7, 8, 9 and 10 of the proposal, you see the language:

> The civil service commission shall recommend to the governor and to the legislature rates of compensation for all appointed unclassified positions within the executive department.

This is merely a recommendation and there is nothing binding on the legislature. It is our understanding that the legislature has, for the last couple of years, requested this service from the civil service commission; this merely makes it mandatory that they furnish this service to the legislature.

Now, more important, and a very significant part of the committee report is the language which is contained in lines 13, 14, 15, 17 and 18 of page 2. It provides that the appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency without the approval of the commission. Now, as the committee report emphasizes, this language is put into this proposed section to change the present situation in Michigan which was occasioned by the decision given by the Michigan supreme court in the case of Kunzig vs. Liquor Control Commission. Now this case involved the attempt by the liquor control commission to abolish the position of business director which was held by Mr. Kunzig. The eventual decision of the court held that the civil service commission has absolute authority to determine when a position may be abolished or when a position may be created, but in order for any executive agency of the government of the state of Michigan to make any change in their administrative setup, they must first obtain the permission of the civil service commission.

Now there is quite a bit of dissent on this particular proposal. The argument in behalf of the committee proposal has been presented, I think, more ably than I can do by Mr. Justice Dethmers in the dissent in the Kunzig case. I would not propose to read the whole thing. Mr. Dethmers went at length for 16 pages to present a very cogent argument, a detailed argument. The opinion and citation of the case is set forth in the committee report if anyone wishes to familiarize himself with the whole thing. But I would like to point out a few brief remarks which Justice Dethmers made in support of the proposition which we set forth here in this proposed change. Now I have given you the rough facts of the case and I realize that when one reads it, it is difficult to follow, but this is a very important point and this is probably the most significant change that we have made in this section, and if you can follow it, it would be appreciated. Mr. Dethmers says in part:

> At the outset, stock should be taken of precisely what is involved in the answer to the above question —

That is, the civil service commission having this authority — and what its implications may be. The liquor control commission says that a holding that it may not abolish a position in its agency except with the approval of the civil service commission would mean that the civil service amendment has constituted the civil service commission the final arbiter and administrative authority on the question of whether appointing authorities may from time to time reorganize their departments, increase or curtail their services to the public, or add to or dispense with certain functions, if, in so doing, positions in the classified civil service are, as a result, created or abolished. . . .

> Granted that the civil service commission does not claim the authority to establish or abolish positions, the fact remains that this case is before us solely because this commission does insist that it has authority to approve or disapprove such creations or abolishments by appointing authorities and that they are invalid without its approval. Inherent in such veto power is the power to control administrative policies.

He gives a few examples, one of which is:

> Suppose the attorney general decides as a matter of policy to restrict the giving of legal opinions to a narrower circle than that to which they are now available, obviating the need for the services of 2 of his assistants, or that the liquor control commission decides, as a matter of economy or increased efficiency or for whatever reason of its own, to decrease the number of liquor stores in a city from 4 to 3, thus rendering the services of one liquor store manager unnecessary. If the commission has the right to approve or disapprove the abolishment of the positions involved, does it not actually exert control over administrative policy and procedure? Anent this subject, we find in the civil service commission's brief the following:
> > The civil service commission defies anyone to point to an instance in the nearly 9 years of its existence where it has refused to approve the abolition and consequent layoff of an unneeded civil service employee where the layoff rules of the commission were complied with, and in this connection this commission states now, and always has taken the position, that it is entirely in favor of economy in state government as long as it is commensurate with the rendition of efficient service.

And Mr. Justice Dethmers underlines the last phrase.

> In the quoted statement the civil service commission reveals, wittingly or otherwise, its view that it has the power to disapprove abolishments of positions attempted by appointing authorities for reasons of economy and particularly so if, in the civil service commission's opinion, abolishment would not be "commensurate with the rendition of efficient service." What clearer claim could be made to power to determine the kind and amount of service to be rendered to the public in any field of administrative activity? And for the civil service commission to claim otherwise would be utterly inconsistant with the claim it makes herein to the power to approve or disapprove the creation or abolishment of positions by appointing authorities. I am unable to agree with the statement that the power of the commission to veto abolishments of positions would not affect the power of the liquor control commission to "reorganize its department, assign specific functions to its employees, formulate policies", et cetera, or to "open or close liquor stores or otherwise regulate the purchase, transportation or sale of intoxicating liquor." . . . On the other hand, if the liquor control commission and other appointing authorities may not so reorganize, assign functions and duties to their employees or formulate policies with the results indicated above, without the commission's consent, then indeed, has the civil service commission been enthroned as supreme arbiter on questions of administrative policies, practices and procedures. . . .

In adopting the amendment, the people intended to bring about a betterment in administration of state employment... by putting an end to the turnover of personnel upon each change of administration and substituting therefor continuity and security in positions, so long as they continued to exist, for employees whose qualifications and performance merited it. This was calculated to increase efficiency and to further economy. The ultimate object was not, however, increased benefits to employees, but, rather, by means of such benefits, the improvement of the state service. There is nothing to indicate that it was the thought of the people that government jobs should exist for the benefit of employees, as distinguished from the concept that positions exist and are filled for the purpose of serving and benefiting the public, or that the people desired that employees should be continued in positions after appointing authorities have determined that the need therefor has ended. . . . Neither does it appear that there was a public demand of clamor at the time for subjecting administrative policies, in the manner hereinbefore considered, to the approval or disapproval of the civil service commission.

The civil service commission raises the hue and cry that a holding that appointing authorities may create and abolish positions without the commission's approval would serve to emasculate civil service and bring the inevitable return of the spoils system. . . . In the same vein, the civil service commission says that, if the appointing authority may abolish one position without the commission's approval, then "5, 10 or 1,000 positions likewise may be abolished and replacements made with those who stand in favor with the then administration." The answer to that dire prediction is to be found in the civil service commission's brief, as follows:

> It may have been possible that the reason for the withdrawal of the resolution of August 4 —

They are referring here to the fact that the liquor control commission had first asked the commission to approve the abolishment of the position for Mr. Kunzig but, when it became apparent that they might not approve, they just withdrew the request and abolished the position on their own > — which contained the set up for the new position was brought about because of appellant's — the liquor control commission's > — realization that if the old position were abolished and the new position were established that the prior incumbent, under the rules of civil service, would have been entitled to appointment to the new position.

Suppose that an appointing authority should create 1, 5, 10 or 1,000 positions without the civil service commission's approval. Under the amendment the commission would classify the positions, fix rates of pay and furnish the candidates therefor. How is civil service thus emasculated and the spoils system restored? Or suppose that an appointing authority abolishes 1, 5, 10 or 1,000 positions without the commission's approval and thereafter creates the same or other positions with like duties and functions and seeks to cause them to be filled, as the commission prophesies, with those who stand in well with the then administration. The moment such positions are recreated or the similar positions created the commission will classify, fix rates of pay and control the matter of who shall fill the positions. The last quoted portion from the commission's brief indicates that under its rules the former incumbents of abolished positions are the ones who would forthwith be installed in the newly created positions. Wherein lies the emasculation of civil service and the return to the spoils system? . . .

Finally, it is urged (1) that a holding that appointing authorities may create and abolish positions without the commission's approval would result in a practice of fraud and subterfuge under which the civil service amendment would be circumvented and appointing authorities would use the power to abolish positions as a ruse for getting rid of employees not in favor with the then administration and (2) that, therefore, an abolishment must be submitted to the commission for approval, if for no other reason, at least for a determination of whether it was made in good faith or was a mere ruse, fraud or subterfuge. There can be no doubt that powers permissible when exercised for legitimate purposes are to be denied when exercised for the purpose of achieving an illegal result. . . .

He goes on to point out several cases which have occurred in Michigan and other places where the court has looked into the matter of good faith.

> The function of determining the existence of fraud or subterfuge in connection with the abolishment of a position is, however, not administrative but judicial. The commission is a part of the executive department of the state government. . . . Fraud is a conclusion of law from facts. . . . Drawing conclusions of law is a judicial and not an executive function. It is not within the province of the civil service commission. . . . For cases in which this court has taken cognizance of the presence or absence of bad faith, fraud or subterfuge as the means of defeating the veteran's preference or civil service rights of an employee and in which we have indicated the same to be a factor in the determination of the extent of such rights in connection with the abolishment of a position. . . .

He cites 6 cases in which the court has acted. He concludes:

> Employees affected by abolishments of positions have recourse to the courts for the purpose of trying the good faith thereof. There are indications in the record that it was plaintiff's position before the commission that the abolishment of the position of business manager was not bona fide or in good faith. The way is open to plaintiff to present that claim and to test the validity of the abolishment by appropriate proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction.

And those are the reasons set forth by Justice Dethmers for his dissent in the Kunzig case, and it was the decision of your committee — there was some dissent from this proposition — that the civil service commission should not have the authority and the power to control the actions of the executive department that are taken in good faith for reasons of administrative efficiency. It should not be their decision as a super board to determine whether or not the executive department of this state is properly organizing and carrying on its functions. And we have proposed this addition to the civil service section, to remove that judisdiction from the civil service commission.

Now the amendment which the secretary read has been added to insure that there is an orderly procedure of appeal, first to the commission, if the employee wishes, and then to the courts to determine whether or not good faith has been used in abolishing the position. But, as Justice Dethmers points out, we do maintain in Michigan a layoff list, so that if any employee is forced to be laid off because his position is no longer necessary in state government, he is first in line for appointment to any opening and, if the appointing authorities should attempt the subterfuge of abolishing a position to get rid of an employee, if they try to reestablish the position, that same employee is the one who is going to be presented to them by the civil service commission to fill the position.

Now we have continued and we have made no change in the language which prohibits any removal or demotion for partisan, racial or religious considerations and we have added the language that there shall also be no appointments or promotions for partisan, racial or religious considerations; which, while I think the question raised by Mr. Hutchinson and a few others yesterday is thoroughly covered by the present section, very emphatically states it in the positive. There shall be no appointments or promotions for partisan, racial or religious considerations. The section is very clear on the point. If there are infractions because of what people do, then it is our duty to step forward and be counted and prevent them, but the provision itself is very clear on the point.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that that covers the explanation the committee would like to make of the changes they have made, and I yield the floor back to Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the amendment offered by Delegate Martin, on behalf of the committee on executive branch.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Grand Rapids, Delegate Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: I had an amendment to this section on the desk before Mr. Martin's amendment was placed there. Perhaps the committee amendment takes precedence over mine; I don't know; but before we rise, I would like to suggest to the delegates here that my amendment would remove the sentence beginning on line 13. The now appointing authority, as originally given, would give "The executive may create or abolish positions", and so forth, down to the word "commission" where the period obtains. That is the amendment that was suggested by a member of the civil service commission. This amendment is one to head off my amendment, and I thought in quickly reading it this morning it answered the question but it doesn't. I submit that if we do rise, that we will answer this question again next Monday evening.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Upon conference, it is the understanding of the Chair that committee amendments take precedence.

MR. TUBBS: Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, with that explanation, I now move that the committee rise and give us a chance to think the matter over during the weekend.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin moves that the committee of the whole do now rise. As many as are in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had several matters under consideration and the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. It has adopted some amendments thereto; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Could I ask that the secretary prepare copies of the amendments that have been submitted and they be mimeographed for distribution Monday.

SECRETARY CHASE: I will be glad to.

PRESIDENT NISBET: That will be done and they will be on your desks Monday.

Announcements — Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, might I ask unanimous consent to return briefly to the order of motions and resolutions for the sole purpose of introducing a resolution to be referred to a committee?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection — there is objection. Do you make the motion, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: In that event, Mr. President, I move to suspend the rules for the purpose of returning to the order of motions and resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen that we return to the order of motions and resolutions. Those in favor say aye; those opposed, no.

The motion prevails, Mr. Van Dusen. We are returned to the order of motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Van Dusen, Hutchinson and Bentley offer

Resolution 66, A resolution to provide for the limitation for debate in committee of the whole.

Following is Resolution 66 as offered:

Whereas, Full debate on all issues before the convention requires that debate on any individual matter be subject to reasonable limitations; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the committee of the whole may, by the vote of a majority of the members present, at any time after general debate on a proposal has proceeded for one hour and after debate has begun upon proposed amendments to any section or paragraph on this proposal, close all debate at a time certain upon such section or paragraph or, at its election, upon the pending amendments only (which motion shall be decided without debate); but this shall not preclude further amendment, to be decided without debate.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

Without objection, we will also return to the order of reports of standing committees, in order to get them on the calendar. Hearing no objection, Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Committee Proposal 28, A proposal to provide for compensation of the legislature. Amends article V, section 9; with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 28 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 760.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Committee Proposal 29, A proposal to provide for the form of laws. Retains article V, section 20; with the recommendation that it pass.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 29 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 761.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces Exclusion Report 2009, A report recommending that article V, section 10 of the present constitution be excluded.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2009 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 761.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces

Exclusion Report 2010, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 11.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2010 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 761.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces

Exclusion Report 2011, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 32.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2011 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 762.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie, for the committee on legislative powers, introduces

Exclusion Report 2012, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 35.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2012 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 762.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the reports of standing committees, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following committee meeting announcements:

A short meeting of the subcommittee of the executive branch, on executive budget and fiscal management, immediately following adjournment today. Mr. Karn, chairman.

Subcommittee on elementary and secondary education will meet in room J, Monday, at 4:00 p.m.

Committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E, Monday, at 6:00 p.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

Committee on legislative powers will meet in room H, on Monday, at 4:00 o'clock p.m. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The remainder of the committee meeting announcements are in the composite calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I would like to have the committee on executive branch meet very briefly right after this session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: It is requested, Mr. President, that the committee on administration have a brief meeting right after the session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any requests for leave, Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dehnke requests leave of absence from the committee sessions scheduled for today and tomorrow because of illness in the family; and Mr. Danhof wishes to be excused from the session of Monday in order to fulfill a speaking engagement of long standing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be so excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the requests, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: May I just make a comment or two in the interest of efficient operation. I think when the delegates came to this convention, none of us had any idea that it would entail the work and the time and effort that it has.

Consequently, I have the feeling, I have sensed that at least toward the end of the week we get tired, we are less efficient. I don't think we think as clearly. Sometimes emotions and tempers get the better of us, and I don't think we are giving the close deliberation and scrutiny to the matters under our hands that we should.

Consequently, I have asked Mr. Van Dusen and his committee on Monday night if he will make a few suggestions along this line that I wish you would consider. First, that — as Dr. Pollock mentioned this morning — we try to develop some greater simplicity in the presentation of amendments to be considered, so they may not be quite so confusing. Second — and Mr. Hood and Dr. Hannah both make this suggestion — that we develop some easier procedure for taking a rest period when the committee of the whole operates rather than have to go through the procedure we did yesterday. And, third, that you would consider that after we have completed the deliberation on the 2 proposals now before the committee that it might be well to postpone further work in committee of the whole so that the substantive committees can complete their work.

Now all the committee chairmen did inform me that they would have their work completed by the end of January but, since that time, through our deliberations in the committee of the whole, we have taken away from the committees at least one session a day; so, consequently, they have not been able to do their work; and, second, many of them call special meetings and it has created a great deal of confusion.

So, if we can do that, they can go back to their regular committee schedules, get their work done on time, and I think it would be a little more orderly procedure.

Mr. Van Dusen has told me that he would try to have something along that line, so, would you please give it some thought for our meeting on Monday night.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 8:00 o'clock Monday night.

[Whereupon, at 12:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 8:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, January 22, 1962.]

SIXTY-SECOND DAY

Monday, January 22, 1962, 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will come to order.

The invocation this evening will be delivered by the Reverend Dorr Garrett, Pastor of the First Methodish Church of Quincy. Reverend Garrett is the Pastor of Delegate Blaque Knirk.

REVEREND GARRETT: Let us pray. Our gracious, heavenly Father, we pause in the midst of our fretful and almost frantic procedures, so it seems, to recognize Thy unfailing grace and mercy manifested to us in so many ways. We rejoice in Thy providential care which is so evident in the manifold blessings that are ours to enjoy, both material and spiritual. We want to thank Thee for these, and many which we are so apt to take for granted, such as the common everyday blessings of food, clothing and shelter.

We also pause to thank Thee for the blessings and privileges that are ours as citizens of these United States, and, particularly, for the privilege of living in this good state of Michigan. Truly, we are recipients of Thy bounties above all peoples of the earth. We recognize these blessings, as not only the benefits of the recognition of Thy way of life; of Thy life for us, but to ask Thee to help us never forget that they have come from our forefathers and their recognition of Thee and Thy way of life for them. Help us to never forget this. Grant that these faithful citizens who represent us and are gathered here now in this great task before them, may have Thy wisdom and guidance as they are determining the destiny and future welfare of the people of this fair state of ours. This we ask humbly, yet confidently, in the name of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, our Savior and Redeemer and coming King. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All those present will vote aye. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and take the roll.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: I move that Mr. Thomson be excused indefinitely due to illness.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Prior to this evening's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Ostrow, because an unexpected business appointment came in; and Mr. Nisbet had a speaking engagement this evening.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Nisbet, Ostrow, Page and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. G. E. Brown.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, Mr. Brown is excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 65, A resolution of the constitutional convention requesting action by the legislature pertaining to the orderly completion of convention business in the carrying out of the convention's obligations after adjournment; with amendments, recommending that the resolution and the amendments be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

[Following are the amendments recommended by the committee:

1. Amend resolving clause 1, item 1, after "chairman" by striking out the comma and "the vice presidents of the convention, and 6" and inserting "and 14".

2. Amend resolving clause 1, item 2, after "from the" by striking out "appropriation heretofore" and inserting "appropriations".

3. Amend resolving clause 1, item 3, after "determined by the commission" by striking out "so as to insure a fair and reasonable return for the property disposed of" and inserting "to insure reasonable disposition of the property".

4. Amend resolving clause 2, after "representatives" by inserting "and all other members of the legislature".]

Walter DeVries, chairman.

For Resolution 65 as offered, see above, page 636.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the recommendation of the committee on administration that the resolution and amendments be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The ayes have it. The recommendation is concurred in and the resolution and amendments are so referred.

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all of the committee reports, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Special orders of the day. The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering a proposal on special orders of the day.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion of the delegate from Wayne. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Baginski, will preside.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The committee will be in order.

The Chair would like to explain that we are in special orders on general orders for the purpose of considering Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights. Five amendments have been adopted. The question now is, are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15, see above, page 576.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I merely want to say where we are as a setting for our discussion in committee of the whole. Of the 23 sections submitted by our committee, amendments were adopted to section 4, section 10 and section 19. The amendments adopted to section 4 and section 10 were not in accordance with the report of the committee. Section 19 was amended without any objection from the committee. Now that we have the matter still before us, I have no amendments to propose but I should like to yield the floor to my colleague on the committee, Mr. Ink White, for an appropriate motion.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair will recognize Mr. Ink White.

MR. WHITE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I have been sitting here quietly through several sessions of this committee while a matter quite important to me and my profession has been discussed, altered, amended and generally rendered quite ineffective in some respects. I refer to our action on section 4 of the declaration of rights which we voted upon in last Monday's meeting in the committee of the whole. I point out that we emasculated a traditional freedom, that of the press, by a timid rising vote of 60 to 56 — not even a majority of the delegates present at that session.

As a newspaper man, I have no desire to limit in any way the freedom of my brethren in radio, television and allied fields. However, in this instance, it appears to me that in failing to recognize individual media specifically, we receded to the position where we would penalize the print and the other means of communication by eliminating the phrase "liberty of speech or of the press" from the constitution. I point out to you that these words are traditional, historic and meaningful to Michigan people and to citizens generally throughout the nation. I point out further that a considerable body of legal precedent hangs upon the judicial interpretation of these words.

Just because we don't find it appropriate to give specific recognition to individual media, I see no reason to eliminate the generic terms, "press and speech", which your earlier action had accomplished. This, I submit, leaves us with an anemic declaration of rights in this regard and represents a compromise which finds no favor among constitutional authorities and the people who are closely associated with news media.

If I am in order, sir, I shall move that we reconsider our action on the Hanna amendment to section 4, and should such a motion prevail, it is my understanding of the rules that we would return to the original language of the committee on rights' proposal.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Is that so, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: The motion on the part of Mr. White is to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to section 4 was adopted. This amendment is as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 6, after "abridge" by striking out "the liberty of speech or of the press" and inserting "these liberties".

Mr. White's motion is to reconsider the vote on this so that this amendment may again be voted upon.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is the reconsideration of the vote on the Hanna amendment. As many as are in favor of reconsideration will signify by saying aye. Those opposed?

The motion prevails.

The question now is on the adoption of the Hanna amendment. As many as are in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Can we have that amendment read? I don't think many people know what they are voting on at this point.

SECRETARY CHASE: The vote is now and for the second time upon the Hanna amendment, which is page 2, line 6, after "abridge" by striking out "the liberty of speech or of the press" and inserting "these liberties".

May the secretary interpolate that if this amendment is voted down, the language will be restored to the form in which it was submitted from the committee.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question is now on the Hanna amendment. As many as are in favor will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Habermehl and King offer the following amendment —

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, that amendment is to be offered when we rise rather than at this time.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bledsoe and Miss Donnelly offer the following amendment:

1. Amend pages 2 and 3 by striking out all of section 10 and inserting a new section 10 to read as follows:

"Sec. 10. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.".

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The question now is on the adoption of the Donnelly-Bledsoe amendment.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry, sir. It occurs to me that this matter was before this committee. I can't at the moment get the citation in our journal, but I am certain that this was the language of the federal constitution which was before us for our consideration in the committee of the whole in a previous sitting and that this is tantamount to a motion to reconsider. Am I correct in that?

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is correct. The Chair might answer, Mr. Prettie, that if you care to make a point of order on this, you can, because this amendment was once voted down.

MR. PRETTIE: I rise to such a point.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair sustains the point of order. It was previously voted down. Therefore, it is not in order.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I merely point out that the committee did not ask for this postponement and therefore, there are no committee amendments and I wonder why the postponement was brought about, if there are no amendments.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Dr. Pollock, the Chair doesn't understand the question.

MR. POLLOCK: I recall on 2 previous occasions Mr. Iverson asked for a postponement presumably for some reason, presumably to introduce amendments or changes in the provision as it had been passed in the committee of the whole. We are apparently still in that same condition. Nobody has offered any amendment. The Prettie amendment was adopted by the committee of the whole. I have heard no other amendments. Therefore, as far as the committee is concerned, we can pass on to some other item of business.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might advise Dr. Pollock that we are in committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 15 and the next order is: are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as Mr. Pollock has raised the question, I did ask to have this put over for the purpose of any amendments which anybody wished to propose. If there are no amendments in the committee, then I think the chairman is exactly correct.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: And the Chair says, are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: The committee has no amendments to propose but I do give notice that when the committee rises, on behalf of the committee, I shall ask that the convention do not concur in the amendment made to section 10.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: That is the privilege of the delegate.

Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: At this time, since we can dispose of this matter once and for all, I'd like that the committee rise so that we can get rid of these roll call votes which they want to get rid of and then we can come back and get on to the business at hand.

Therefore, at this time I move that the committee rise in order that we can finish this subject matter.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: The Chair might advise, Mr. Kuhn, we just have one more question. That is, the Chair asks, are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 15, as amended, is passed.

Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN BAGINSKI: Those in favor that the committee rise, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal on special orders and the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights; and reports this proposal back to the convention with 4 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended be passed.

The committee of the whole further recommends that, pursuant to the recommendation of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, section 22 of article II of the present constitution be deleted from the new constitution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the further recommendation of the committee of the whole relative to the deletion of section 22 of article II will be concurred in. I hear no objection, it is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 23, after "diminished" by inserting "or enlarged".

2. Amend page 2, line 28, after " affirmation" by striking out the period and on page 3, line 6, by striking out "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law.", and inserting a colon and "Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, in any criminal proceeding or preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state.".

3. Amend page 3, line 10, after "rebellion" by striking out the comma and "insurrection".

4. Amend page 4, line 4, after "all" by striking out "persons" and inserting "individuals, firms and corporations and voluntary associations".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon agreeing to the amendments made by the committee of the whole. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, will you explain to the convention the effect of not concurring with any specified amendment, which motion I might make?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: If the convention shall not concur with an amendment made by the committee of the whole, then the form of the proposal will revert to the form in which it was reported by the standing committee.

MR. POLLOCK: Thank you. I now move that the convention do not concur in the amendment made to section 10.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring. Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I suggest that we vote on all the amendments with the exception of the amendment to which the chairman of the committee objects. Then we can vote on that separately.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bentley requests that the question be divided and that a separate vote be taken upon the amendment to section 10. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I have no objection, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question then is upon concurring in the several amendments made to the proposal other than the amendment made to section 10, amendments 1, 3 and 4. All those in favor of concurring will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendments, 1, 3 and 4, are concurred in.

The question now is upon concurring in amendment 2 made by the committee of the whole to section 10.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the report and recommendation for adoption of the action taken in the committee of the whole on section 10 of Committee Proposal 15.

I wish to submit that the only question before this assembly at this moment is whether we shall adopt this report as amended and reconsideration of which has already been defeated in the committee of the whole. I submit that what we do here and now will establish a precedent for this assembly and if what we do is wrong, it will, to quote the delegate from Fennville now in our Chair, "come back to plague us."

I further submit that the blood and sweat and tears extended over hours of debate in the committee of the whole should not be repeated on this floor if we hope to achieve the completion of our task by March 31 of this year. In that debate I think the civil rights issue was shown to have had no relevance to the matter we have under consideration.

I'd like to point out that if we had received with the declaration of rights the now pending Committee Proposal 26, providing for equal protection of the law to all persons without discrimination, the relevant issue of civil rights would never have become entangled in our debate on the subject of search and seizure.

Third, I would say that if we are to heed the admonition of 2 former presidents of these United States, we must approve the first step we have taken toward building a stronger state government resisting federal encroachment by the federal executive, legislative or judicial branches upon the reserve power of this sovereign state.

Fourth, I submit that we must continue the protection that we have had for 25 years for our law abiding millions against the lawless few.

Fifth, that the proviso of section 10 is an essential tool in the hands of our law enforcement officers granted them more than 25 years ago and strengthened to meet changing conditions by a vote of more than 5 to 1 only 9 short years ago.

Fellow delegates, I should, perhaps, conclude my remarks at this point. I beg, however, your further indulgence. I have timed this and it will not take over 15 minutes. I do this for the reason that I had this floor only briefly during the deliberations in committee of the whole and for the further reason that in the debate and in the press, the work accomplished by the committee of the whole has been referred to as "the Prettie amendment."

For these reasons I owe to 143 fellow delegates here an obligation to extend my remarks somewhat so that you may know my motives and my purpose in presenting this amendment that has been adopted by the committee of the whole.

To do this, may I ask you to recall that on January 8 I spoke to you at some length under the order of personal privilege and discussed some, to me, basic legal concepts. In that statement, found on page 289 of the journal, I made specific reference to the declaration of rights then soon to come before us and to the provisions specifically of section 10 of that great document.

At that time I pointed out that the law is not precise and is not static. And to this I would add:

The law cannot be accurately weighed. Our courts are not penny arcades where you put a penny in the slot and out comes a card with your weight and fate — guilty — not guilty; judgment for the plaintiff, $50,000 — judgment for the defendant; and so forth.

While lawyers speak of the weight of evidence and the scales of justice, they are not in fact talking about scales at all. The statues and the paintings that you see in our court houses and our court rooms depict justice blindfolded with a balance, not a scale in her hand. It is this delicate balance of the rights of the individual and the rights of society; the delicate balance between lawfulness and lawlessness that we have had under consideration off and on for these past 10 days. Whose civil rights shall we protect? Are not the law abiding entitled to due process? We have been trying to balance these ideas and arguments. These are philosophical concepts, hard to take hold of; sometimes impossible to reconcile.

Last week at dinner, I listened to 2 fine lawyers, partners in one of this state's leading law firms, honestly and sincerely disagreeing on what this committee has done, and whether what it has done should be undone as is now proposed. While I was listening to this legal discussion, another lawyer friend, a member of the legislature, called me from my table and said in effect: "Prettie, quit beating your brains out for what is right. The only important thing is, 'have you got the votes?'" I think these 2 almost simultaneous conversations point up the difference between principle and politics. When I became a candidate I believed that principle would be the overriding determinant in this convention. And I still believe so. We have demonstrated that in matters of deep conviction, honest delegates honestly vote. We have demonstrated this not only with reference to section 10, but also section 4 of this bill of rights. Liberty of speech and freedom of press, too, are concepts, but when we try to spell them out, they cause us trouble which we corrected here tonight. This is perhaps because these rights, I submit, are not balanced with corresponding duties.

We hear much about the freedom of the press, but as was pointed out on the floor, nothing about its duty to publish all the news. A free press screams against any censorship, and yet some papers impose a most rigorous control of what shall be printed.

We all came to this convention with our first duty performed for us by the newspapers. They had placed in nomination 4 names as candidates for the high office of president of this assembly and they considered the nominations closed. It was heartening to me to see the delegates reopen the nominations and start thinking and acting and leading instead of being lead.

We have seen our free press try and convict citizens, including labor leaders, in the court of public opinion, where there is no presumption of innocence; but when the same charges were brought in a court of law, the accused was found not guilty. We have seen our free press forecast the victory or defeat of candidates for high office — only to have these predictions reversed by the voters at the polls.

My interest in the subject of search and seizure was further whetted in the December 26, 1961 issue of the Detroit Free Press, an editorial entitled, Amending Search Laws Would Endanger Society. I wrote Lee Hills commending him on this vigorous editorial. But on the day after the committee of the whole of this convention had acted, several metropolitan papers, including the same Free Press, predicted editorially in their news reports of our action that pressures would cause these elected representatives of the people of this state to reverse their action and run for cover. I raise the question as to whether this is free press or a pressure press. A week ago I furnished each delegate with a copy of an editorial which posed the question, "Who is tampering with America's soul?" I now ask the question, "Who is tampering with Michigan's soul?"

After election to this convention I tried to lay down some guide lines for my thought and action here. Briefly stated they are: I will view our present constitution with a desire to keep that which is good; discard that which is bad; clarify that which is ambiguous; and modernize that which is outmoded. I applied these tests to the proviso of section 10 of the bill of rights, and found it good, but verbose. It needed to be clarified without sacrificing the principle stated. I found it modern — it had been enacted only 25 years ago to meet a need, strengthened and affirmed only 9 years ago by an overwhelming affirmative vote in every one of Michigan's 83 counties, and statewide by a vote of over 5 to 1. It was after reaching these conclusions that I presented the amendment which the committee of the whole has now adopted.

Please believe me when I say that I have given every consideration to the argument so ably advanced by my long time and very respected friend, Judge Carl Mosier. If I understand his argument correctly, he believes that the Mapp doctrine will be extended to our Michigan constitutional proviso, while 3 other former judges take the opposite view. Judge Mosier further argues that the present constitution as sustained and construed by our Michigan supreme court places a mandate upon the trial courts of this state to admit in evidence contraband seized outside of the curtilage of any dwelling. Judge Mosier's objection is that no such rule should interfere with the judicial discretion.

As every delegate knows, there are many statutes that impose similar mandates upon our courts. Notable among these are the rule prohibiting testimony as to matters equally within the knowledge of the deceased; and the statute of frauds prohibiting evidence not complying therewith.

It may be said, however, that these are exclusions. They are statutory mandates saying, thou shalt not, and hence are not the same as the proviso of section 10 which says, thou shalt admit in evidence certain items under certain circumstances. May I remind this assembly that the Ten Commandments, themselves, are partially affirmative and partially negative. They enjoin, "Thou shalt not kill," but they also command, "Honor thy father and mother."

While I, with the utmost respect, esteem Judge Mosier's superior knowledge and understand his position as a former member of the bench, I must point out that law is not a perfect thing and throughout our history the people in their constitutions and statutes have laid down certain rules which the courts are bound to observe. Again, it is a balancing of rights.

That honest men and former judges and present judges may differ in their views in this matter is to me fully understandable. If all men agreed, we would have no need for lawsuits or lawyers, or courts. Even the supreme court of this land divided 5-3-1 in the Mapp case in reversing what had been settled law for the previous 170 years.

May I further point out that the personnel of courts change, and with it, the case law changes. We have often seen this in recent years in Michigan. It may happen in the United States supreme court before any test case from Michigan can reach that court. May I reiterate that I, for one, cannot presume to prejudge what the United States supreme court may do when a proper case under our Michigan constitution reaches it.

And whatever that court does, the resultant effect, my fellow delegates, on the protection of the law abiding citizens of this state will be charged to that high court and not to this convention. Its action will not result in our frustration and the defeat of the work we do here. We in this convention must give due regard to the mandate of the people so clearly given in 1952, and to the testimony of our law enforcement officers that this is a tool they need to perform their duties as the enforcers of our laws, and the protectors of the rights of law abiding citizens.

We hear much these days of rights — but what of duty? Our governments provide security to supplant industry. We provide aid to replace ambition. I repeat, "Who is tampering with America's soul?"

Now to the point. The valid point has been made that Michigan alone has this constitutional proviso. And why do we need it? The answer is that in about half the states the same rule exists by reason of court made rules of evidence. When our Michigan courts adopted the exclusionary rule, the wrong was righted by our law abiding citizens writing it into the constitution. I submit that the fact that it is unique does not prove that it is bad.

Is there anyone here who would deprive our police officers of their right to carry arms? I ask you? In some societies this is true. This summer in London I observed, as I had read, that the British police officers performed their duties without bearing side arms. Three weeks later I was in the city of the "Prince of Peace" where Arab police, armed with rifles, faced Israeli police similarly armed, across barbed wire entanglements. A month later, I was in Japan where one of the world's greatest police states collapsed, and its now law abiding democratic people are adequately policed there by unarmed officers.

But may I point out that this country of 98 million had over 60 million employables, and less than one per cent — one per cent — fellow delegates, were unemployed. Holdups, bank robberies, burglaries, the killing of auto service and filling station attendants and similar crimes were practically unknown. What is the point? Simply this, that the tools required by those charged with the duty of protecting the law abiding citizens must be appropriate to the time and the society in which they serve. The citizens of Michigan 25 years ago determined, and 9 years ago affirmed, that the tool given by the proviso in section 10 of the bill of rights was, and still is, needed in our present state of social development in the state of Michigan.

I plead with you that you not take this tool from their hands by striking down what has been done in our committee of the whole and reverting to a principle that I submit isn't sound.

Following the dinner last week of which I spoke, I spent over 2 hours with 4 other lawyer delegates of this convention who do not agree with what the committee of the whole has done and wanted me to join in a compromise. We tried to define what is an unreasonable search. Again, this is a concept which, like liberty and justice and morality, almost defies definition in any document, to say nothing of this constitution.

We also canvassed the possibility suggested a week ago of writing a proviso limited to contraband seized from vehicles. These matters we discussed for 2 long hours, and in my heart I could not agree that they were in accord with what my constituents or yours wanted. If our present proviso is federally unconstitutional — a weakened version of it will be all the more likely to be struck down. On matters of principle I cannot compromise.

I am soon to come to an end. May I respectfully suggest that the difference of thinking that bogged us down for several hours is basically one of logic. I early learned in high school that when one reasons from a sound premise, he arrives at a sound conclusion and conversely, if one reasons from an unsound hypothesis, he will arrive at one or many contradictory but uniformly unsound conclusions.

The sound premise, my fellow delegates, is this: we do not know what the United States supreme court will do when a proper case from Michigan under our constitutional proviso reaches that court. This is documented by the rights committee's report, pages 278 and 279 of our journal. From this I draw what I conceive to be a sound conclusion that our present proviso and the one we have adopted is a valid one under federal law unless and until the United States supreme court holds otherwise in a proper case from Michigan.

Equally sincere and honest delegates argue, from the hypothesis of "the apparent sweeping impact" of the dicta in Mapp, that they are able to prejudge what that court may someday decide regarding the Michigan search and seizure proviso and that it will be struck down. We could also start from the same false hypothesis and reason that under different and less violent facts and under a state constitutional provision instead of a statute, Mapp could be distinguished — or the court might change its mind and return to the long established law of Wolf vs. Colorado. Either conclusion, I submit, is equally unsound because it is based on a false premise.

It was this argument in which we engaged for so many hours. But, prolonged as it has been, the time devoted to this debate, I submit, is not out of proportion to the importance of the subject. Nor has the time been wasted. We have delved into some very basic philosophies and we have helped to clarify our thinking. It will help us to act with greater knowledge and dispatch when we come to Committee Proposal 26 prohibiting discrimination and guaranteeing equal protection under the law.

A vital question has been asked. Is this law really needed? That is a valid point and I have documented it by furnishing to each delegate, with a covering letter from me, selected instances from many, many cases that I might have given you and which, I submit, the facts bear out without any possible question that this tool is needed for the protection of the law abiding citizens. The actual cases that I furnished you, of course, differ in the facts. Let us combine the many factors involved into an hypothetical case to make the problem clear.

Come into my private office, if you will, while I consult with Mr. Jones, a dope peddler and a very smart one. He wants to have me defend him on a CCW charge and a charge of unlawful possession of narcotics. He is free on $10,000 bond awaiting preliminary examination.

As I question him, I develop the following factual background. He is the owner of a 2 motored Cessna for which he has a license and is himself a pilot. He lives in a respectable neighborhood in Chicago and operates a small retail establishment as a front for his real occupation which is that of flying pure, uncut heroin from Chicago to Detroit. There it is cut and sold — as it is described in a recent newspaper series. Mr. Jones is careful on these flights to carry his pilot's license. Last week while making his regular monthly "business trip" to Detroit, he ran into icing conditions, lost altitude and was forced to land in a plowed field on a farm in my county. The landing was rough; his pilot's seat broke loose and he was violently thrown against the cowling, sustaining head injuries that rendered him unconscious.

Occupants of the farm house heard the low flying aircraft and saw it crash. They called the police, notified them of the accident, then went to give aid. The police arrived at the farm and found Mr. Jones seriously injured and still unconscious. They radioed for an ambulance, gave first aid, and assisted in loading him, still unconscious, into the ambulance for transportation to the hospital. Up to this point there was no known law violation or even a suspicion thereof. The police then began a routine examination of the aircraft and found secreted therein a .38 caliber revolver and a substantial quantity of what proved on laboratory analysis to be 98 per cent pure heroin.

Complaint was filed of CCW and illegal possession of narcotics. Warrant issued and Mr. Jones was placed under police guard in the hospital. Upon release he was taken before the nearest convenient magistrate and demanded examination. His question to me is, has he a defense against the charge by reason of the unreasonable search of his aircraft and the seizure of the heroin and weapon?

I advise him of his rights particularly under section 10 of the Michigan constitution bill of rights and its proviso and of the holdings of the Michigan supreme court and the recent United States supreme court decision in Mapp.

He then asks me what he should do, and I tell him Dr. Anspach's story about 2 chances. And I apply it to Michigan procedure.

He has already made his first choice: he has demanded examination.

On examination he has 2 chances: a motion to suppress from evidence the weapon and the narcotics may be granted, and he is free; or it may be denied and he still has 2 chances.

The examination having proceeded, he still has 2 chances. The magistrate may decide under Mapp to release him or bind him over to the circuit court for trial, and he still has 2 chances. Or examination may proceed and he may or may not be bound over for trial.

In the circuit court, a renewed motion to suppress may be granted or denied. At the conclusion of the people's case, a motion for a directed verdict may be granted or denied. At the conclusion of the defendant's case a similar motion may be granted or denied. When the case goes to jury, Jones may be found guilty or not guilty.

If found guilty, he may appeal to the supreme court of Michigan and his conviction may be reversed or affirmed.

The federal constitutional question having been raised and fully briefed, appeal now lies to the federal court hierarchy, and all along the line Mr. Jones still has 2 chances. When it finally reaches the Supreme Court of the United States, the proviso of section 10 may be struck down as federally unconstitutional, or it may be sustained under article X of the federal bill of rights, as constitutionally enacted by the people of the state under the reserved powers clause. But this is the end of Mr. Jones' chances.

The attorney general of the state of Michigan files an amicus brief in this case. The American civil liberties union, with no great enthusiasm, feels constrained to file a brief amicus curiae to sustain what it has won in the Mapp case.

It is now 5 years later and Mr. Jones, being free on bond all this time, has continued dope peddling and is extremely wealthy.

My fellow delegates, at this moment place yourself in the position of the United States supreme court. Now there squarely before you is the question of the federal constitutionality of the Michigan rule of evidence under the proviso of section 10. How do you find? In my heart I know you will find for the people of the state of Michigan.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Lawrence, did you seek the floor?

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I would like to talk to you a few minutes about a situation in this case that I think has been entirely avoided in the last argument. It was forcibly called to my attention when one of our delegates, whom I admire and like and am very fond of, wrote me a note the other day and said, "I'm very disappointed in you that you will not help protect our children."

Now, I know that that was a sincere remark and I thought maybe it was time to do a little self examination. Now, whether you know it or not, I come from Washtenaw county. Washtenaw county has its ordinary number of young people, many of them in industry, working. We have 3 GM plants and 2 Ford plants. We have the usual number of high school students that you would find in a county of 200,000. But more than that, we have, for 9 or 10 or 11 months out of the year, 30,000 approximately, young people in their late teens and early 20s who are attending Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti and the University of Michigan. And I can tell you — and I don't think anybody will be able to refute it — that Washtenaw county is one of the counties that has less vice and fewer crimes of violence — no gangsterism or anything of that nature — and is probably as clean a county as there is in the state, and yet the temptation for numbers and other types of vice and crime are very potent there and would be very lucrative. And why is it clean? Because we have good police officers and we have good courts.

Now, it was interesting that all 3 of the delegates from Washtenaw county voted against the Prettie amendment; for the Bledsoe-Donnelly amendment; and, in other words, in support of the committee proposal, and I can say this truthfully and it will be, I am certain, approved by my 2 colleagues, that those votes were taken without any consultation between us previously, none of us knowing how the others would vote.

Let me first say this and merely to make the point regarding the children — protecting the children: one of the delegates from Washtenaw county is a former regent of the University of Michigan, a former regent of Wayne State University, is a grandfather with 23 grandchildren. Another delegate is a professor, has been head of the political science department in the university, a teacher for years of students and young people and is a grandfather twice over. The third delegate is not a grandfather but he does have a son who is a senior in the university law school and has been and is interested in protecting children. Now, the 2 of them were attorneys and 1 was a school teacher, and yet, independently, all 3 of them voted against the Prettie amendment and for the Bledsoe-Donnelly amendment. So I think that we can, maybe, sort of discount the fact that we are not interested in protecting children — or let's take the converse — that we are interested in seeing crime and disorder flourish.

Now I'll tell you what disturbs me about this Prettie amendment. I don't think that anybody can argue that any of us here — and I haven't seen a delegate here who would care to see a criminal go free if lawfully, legally and constitutionally convicted. But there are some of us who take the bill of rights seriously enough that we do not feel that convictions should be obtained unlawfully, illegally and unconstitutionally and, as I see it, that is what the Prettie amendment proposes.

I asked research to look up something for me and I received this short memorandum: Within the last 7 weeks, 3 circuit court justices in Michigan have ruled that the decision of the United States supreme court in Mapp vs. Ohio is controlling as against the weapons and narcotics proviso in article II, section 10 of the Michigan constitution. The cases are as follows:

1. In People vs. George Washington, docket X-235, decided in opinion by Judge Carl F. Zick, of the second judicial circuit, sitting at St. Joseph, Michigan on November 28, 1961. Judge Zick held, with reference to a narcotics seizure outside the curtilage in an unreasonable search, that in the light of Mapp vs. Ohio, the admissibility of the evidence in question would be in violation of the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. No jury was empaneled and the opinion of Judge Zick is on appeal to the state supreme court.

2. In People vs. Lawrence Bell, docket number 13-25, Judge Lee Fox of the ninth judicial circuit, sitting at Kalamazoo, ruled to the same effect in an opinion dated January 11, 1962, just a few days ago. The case involved a car search conducted in part with the assent of the defendant. Citing the Mapp case, Judge Fox held that a gun found on the defendant could not be admitted into evidence and that the Mapp case was controlling despite the proviso, which was now set aside by the ruling of the United States supreme court. "Some guilty must go free as the price of liberty," says the opinion — and incidentally, that is a quote from Mapp vs. Ohio.

3. A few days earlier, Judge Lucien Sweet, also of the ninth judicial circuit, sitting at Kalamazoo, ruled to the same effect in a similar case, exact case title and docket number unknown.

Now, you understand that these 3 cases found by research that I asked to have located have been decided under the present constitutional provision which contains substantially these provisions of the Prettie amendment. In other words, the prosecutors are going into court now with illegally obtained evidence and the courts are knocking them down with the Mapp decision — and I think rightly so. For after all, on page 1090 of the law edition of the Mapp case — this is a direct quote from that case, and this is the holding of the case — when they say it doesn't apply because it's a rule of evidence or anything else — just listen to this language. "We hold that all evidence" — and I'd like to repeat that word "evidence" because it's been said this was just a rule of evidence, this constitutional provision, and I'd like to start again and remember the word "evidence". "We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitution is by that same authority inadmissible in a state court."

I don't see how anything could be any plainer than that.

Let me read you just a portion of the committee proposal, if your consciences are bothering you that you may be fostering crime — and that's the last part — it's on page 275 of our journal, the righthand column and it's the part in capital letters: "Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall not be used except as authorized by law."

In other words, the committee is not asking you to rule invalid or to hold invalid by your wording in the constitution the use of such evidence. What the committee is trying to say to you is this: don't put a provision in the constitution that appears to be unconstitutional under the direct wording of the United States supreme court, and I think it has a right to say that, regardless of whether it was a unanimous vote by which this constitutional amendment was adopted, or by a 5 to 1 majority. If it is unconstitutional under the United States supreme court decision and under the federal constitution, don't put that new provision in our state constitution. And particularly when — if this is such a terrible thing that is being done, and this is going to hamper our officers — the present constitution has that provision or substantially that provision in it now and that constitution is going to be in effect until the constitution we are working on is adopted, if ever. And if it is adopted, there will be plenty of time between the present and the time it is adopted for the legislature to pass an act that will protect the people of this state, if by eliminating that language from the constitution we are hampering the enforcement of law in any way that is not proper.

I have one other thing for you to think about. Let's assume that in all good faith this convention adopts the Prettie amendment. Let's assume that a case under that goes to the United States supreme court and it is held unconstitutional or our state supreme court holds that it violates the federal constitution. Then that provision becomes invalid and there is nothing — there isn't even a provision except as provided by law. If, however, the Mapp case is held by the courts to be circumscribed in a smaller area than it now appears, and if it would be possible to make searches, say, of automobiles, although, of course, that isn't what it's limited to; they can stop you on the street as long as you're outside your home, your curtilage. And if it is not in the constitution, but it is in the new constitution, except as provided by law, there is constitutional authority for the legislature of this state over in the capitol to pass a valid law that will give the police officers everything they are entitled to and the people of Michigan everything they are entitled to.

If you pass the Prettie amendment and if it is held unconstitutional, either in the supreme court here or in Washington, you have nothing, and it would then require something that would allow a statute to be passed that would temper the wording they object to that the United States has in its constitution, in effect.

I think it is rather remarkable — don't you — that a model police system such as the FBI has been able to exist, flourish and capably represent us without any such provision as we are being asked to pass? I think that the answer to this is — and very frankly, and in due deference to the retired members of the court, I am not including them — if our courts would get a little nerve and say that, for instance, this is the ordinary case that our prosecuting attorney tells us: at 2:00 o'clock a tip on narcotics comes to the office; they say a plane is coming in from Chicago or New York; there's a man with a blue coat and a gray hat, about 6 feet tall, he's going to be carrying a load of heroin or marijuana or something — it may be half an hour; they don't have time; they don't even know his name; but they go out to the airport; they stop a man answering that description; and marijuana is found on him.

Now, other than the rule that an anonymous tip does not constitute reasonable grounds for the issuance of a warrant, the courts have said it can't be used. If they'd get a little nerve and this thing would say that such a tip is reasonable grounds, you wouldn't need any such provision in the constitution because I think it's rather obvious to at least a practicing member of the bar and I think to the ordinary layman — maybe not to a court — that if an anonymous tip is received that a man is carrying marijuana, a search is made on that tip and the marijuana is found, that apparently the officers had reasonable grounds. At least, it seems so to me. And I think that if you pass a constitutional provision here, the courts will ultimately come around by their decisions and the things that you are trying to do in the constitution — I predict, and others, I think here, predict — will ultimately be held unconstitutional.

Now, we all like law and order. We all want law and order. We all recognize this problem. But it can be handled and handled constitutionally by court decision. It can be handled by statute if such a provision is constitutional.

If it is so important — you know, Michigan, after all, is a wonderful state but it isn't the only state that has crime; I think that probably all 50 states have crime — if there is such an impelling need for the provision that is in the Prettie amendment, why haven't we got a movement on to amend the federal constitution and settle this once and for all? It should receive the unanimous support of the 50 states if it is such a good provision. But in the absence of that being done, I beg of you, please do not do what seems to be an absurdity; pass an unconstitutional provision in our new constitution. Thank you very much.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, if I may, I would like to address myself briefly to 2 points. First, the issue as I see it, and second, a few observations regarding law enforcement. I shall try to be brief. I rise in support of the motion that we do not concur in the amendment offered, which I understand is the parliamentary posture of the matter before us.

With regard to the issue, I say this — the issue in Michigan is simply this: whether police officers are to be given the constitutional power to search any one of 8 million persons and any one of 3 million cars without probable cause. Once the availability of the search and the admissibility of the evidence depend upon what is found, the way is certainly open to make ineffective the constitutional prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures. Reduced to its simplest terms, those who want to eliminate the present proviso and substitute the Bledsoe-Donnelly amendment and the rights committee recommendation want to protect a person walking down the street and riding in his automobile against unreasonable searches and seizures to the same degree that a house is protected. I submit that it is more important to protect the security of all the innocent, even if a few guilty escape.

In value the Prettie amendment places law enforcement, to reach a few guilty, far above what Justice Brandeis called the most comprehensive right of civilized man — the right to be left alone. And it is precisely this right, the right to privacy which we seek to protect by the motion that, I believe, Chairman Pollock has made. Now, with regard to the question of the right to privacy and protecting the core of individual security, I submit that this is intrinsic and necessary for effective law enforcement; that constitutional law enforcement is the most effective law enforcement. It isn't a question of placing on the one hand the rights of society and on the other hand the right of the individual and juxtaposing them as being inimical to each other.

We have in this state some 8 million people. We have about 10,000 police officers. The 10,000 police officers can't superintend the conduct of 8 million people without the cooperation of the 8 million people. But how is that cooperation secured? It is secured by a scrupulous regard for the constitutional rights of each individual. The respect, trust and confidence that law officers need in order to reduce the hazardous nature of their jobs depends upon the cooperation they receive from people, and you get that cooperation by earning it, by protecting the constitutional rights of all the individuals in this state. And I think that that's the sum and substance of the committee proposal and of the Bledsoe-Donnelly amendment.

I submit to you that in Detroit the great value of the recent change in our police department of the appointment of Supreme Court Justice Edwards is that he will secure for the police department of that community a greater degree of cooperation than ever has been received before for the police job of law enforcement by a greater guarantee that there will be more protection and a scrupulous regard for the constitutional rights of individuals.

It is not a question of saying on the one hand we protect society and on the other hand we only protect the individuals and these 2 things are opposed. By protecting the rights of each individual we protect the security of the whole society. I think that we must remember that the bill of rights was not written by timid people, by people who exalted order at the expense of liberty.

I submit to you that, in support of this motion, we must remember we are all the keepers of our brother's liberty, and we are all the keepers of our brother's security, and I urge the support of the motion before us.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Sterrett.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I have a preferential motion.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair will recognize Mr. Bentley for the consideration of a preferential motion.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I have a preferential motion at the desk, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley moves that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto terminate at 10:00 o'clock p.m.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is on the motion that the debate upon the question of concurring in and all amendments to the committee of the whole report terminate at 10:00 o'clock p.m. And the motion is not debatable. All those in favor — Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Question, Mr. President. Will you please advise us how many people have asked to speak on this?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: This motion will not terminate debate until 10:00 o'clock p.m.

MR. IVERSON: That isn't the question I asked. Will you please advise —

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair has knowledge of 4 more delegates who desire to speak upon the question of concurring.

MR. IVERSON: Will you state the names of them, please?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognized Mr. Sterrett and has recognized Miss McGowan, Mr. Woolfenden and Judge Leibrand.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President, I certainly have attempted to get your attention at least on 3 occasions but out of courtesy both to the Chair and my colleagues, I have tried not to be obstreperous.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bledsoe would also seek to be recognized. But the question is upon Mr. Bentley's motion to limit debate by terminating it at 10:00 o'clock p.m. and it is not a debatable motion.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President, I'd like to ask a question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the motion of Mr. Bentley?

MR. BLEDSOE: Just a question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is your question?

MR. BLEDSOE: Will Mr. Bentley state his reason for that?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: No. The question is not debatable. The question — For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: I wanted to ask if the Chair would tell us how many amendments are filed with the secretary and if the motion would in any way divide the time on which discussion can be held on the amendments.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: If the Chair understands the motion, all debate would be terminated at 10:00 o'clock p.m. and that would be upon the main question as well as upon any amendments. Any amendments on the desk would thereafter be read and disposed of without debate. There are 2 amendments on the secretary's desk.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. President —

MR. BLEDSOE: Can I ask another question?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Did I understand your answer to Delegate Downs that we just debate the amendments and not the main question? Ordinarily the amendments come first, do they not?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The motion of Mr. Bentley is simply to limit debate. It is entirely up to this convention as to whether or not debate shall be limited but it would completely do away with any reason for the limitation. If this question itself is debatable and if, for instance, the convention should now decide to limit debate at 10:00 o'clock, every minute here is simply eating up that time.

I am going to put the question.

MR. GARVIN: Just a moment, Mr. President. Limit debate on what? The amendments or the main question?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: I will have the secretary read Mr. Bentley's motion again.

MR. GARVIN: Yes, please.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley moves that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto terminate at 10:00 o'clock p.m.

MR. GARVIN: Then that doesn't include the main question?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: It does, indeed. The question is not debatable and I cannot recognize the gentleman for pursuing the matter. I will put the question. All those in favor of terminating debate at 10:00 o'clock will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

DELEGATES: Division.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: A division has been called for. Is the demand for a division supported? All those in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sufficient number up.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: A sufficient number is up. All those in favor of Mr. Bentley's motion to terminate debate at 10:00 o'clock p.m. will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-two.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-seven.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The motion does not prevail.

The chair recognizes the gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. President and delegates, I have listened to debate hour after hour without expressing my opinion in this matter. I have heard about the U.S. supreme court cases and other state supreme court cases and I have heard reasons for the amendments to the proviso that should take precedence in this convention. This has caused me to consider this situation very carefully.

I would like to ask each delegate in this hall to do the same as I have. I would like to ask that they fully realize that pressure has been put on many delegates from both sides of the issue. The Republican delegates had a caucus and I know the Democrat delegates also had a caucus. It was very fortunate on the last vote that people voted as they saw fit because it was a bipartisan issue, as indicated by the vote. I hope it will not change at this time.

We have heard from very respected individuals giving their true opinions. At this point it is time to present the situation as it is in the state of Michigan for which we are writing a constitution. A particular case I have in mind is a teenage high school student. This student, with a group of others, was apprehended as a suspect for obtaining narcotics. They were acting very peculiarly, but evidence was lacking in the group. However, an officer of the law was alert and noticed a white mark in the nostril of this student. Have you ever heard of heroin and milk sugar? This is a very coy way of taking narcotics, generally without evidence of doing so. It generally dissolves after it is sniffed through the nostrils. There aren't any needle marks. This officer scraped the white mark from the high school student's nostril and under the authorized and legal method submitted this to laboratory tests. Yes, it was dope.

How many of us have children that are high school students, or will be some day, that could be subject to this filthy low type of social destruction of the citizens we must rely on tomorrow? Some say that the Prettie amendment is unconstitutional with respect to the United States constitution. I will not debate this one way or another because we have only had one major case tested and this is being appealed. However, without a question of a doubt — and I am sure there must be some doubt in all our minds — we should think of our own people in the state of Michigan — to protect them from this type of scum that can infiltrate our society and do more damage than a constitutional convention could ever correct.

If I were a law enforcement officer — and here is a point I feel that has been twisted around the wrong way — we feel we are protecting the law enforcement officer for invasion of an automobile to look for narcotics or weapons. If I were a law enforcement officer, I would be glad if I didn't have to search a vehicle for weapons or narcotics. I'd just drive my patrol car and give the normal traffic tickets as they came about. And I am sure there are many law enforcement officers that feel this way. It would be much safer for the officer. But, as a citizen, a parent, and a constitutional convention delegate, representing the people that believe in me as their representative, I cannot sanction the advancement of degeneration of our people through the peddling of narcotics or the endangering of our society from hoodlums with dangerous weapons.

I am not asking that you vote one way or another but I am asking you to consider what I have said and vote as your conscience guides you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the Prettie amendment. As I stated before, I am convinced by my experience as an assistant prosecutor and as a defense lawyer, that the Prettie amendment is vitally necessary for effective law enforcement and for the protection of our children and society as a whole.

I state without a doubt that the Prettie amendment is not racial; nor is it intended to be racial. To be specific, it is not aimed at negroes. To say that this amendment is aimed at negroes, or that this amendment has any racial overtones or undertones, is to say that only negroes carry guns and push narcotics. This has not been said. This cannot be said. Therefore, I feel that in this regard we should dismiss the racial question from our thinking. Information has come to my attention to the effect that it is thought that in defending the inclusion of the words of the Prettie amendment in section 10, that I am somehow deserting my own people and the Democratic party.

I wish to state publicly that I am well aware of the fact that I am a negro; and that I will always be a negro; that I firmly believe that my people must follow good leadership whatever the race, religion or national origin of the leader might be. To do otherwise would be sheer foolishness, which would become more and more apparent as time goes by. At this point in our negro history, we are still fighting for our rights as United States citizens. However, the time is quickly approaching when negroes must fight more and more for the rights of all good people and put more accent on the obligations which we have as citizens. To paraphrase our great president, we should not always be asking what our state can do for us; but we should more and more ask what we can do for our state.

If in the minds of some asking that the words contained in the Prettie amendment be kept in section 10 of article II proves to them that I am deserting the cause of the negro or the Democratic party, I can only state that this is an assertion which is freely made; and I as freely deny it. I believe that it has not been established legally; and, in the immediate future there is no case pending which clearly establishes that putting the words of the Prettie amendment in the section mentioned would be inserting a phrase which would be legally meaningless. People on our public streets and public highways have some rights too. It has been brought to my attention that the good citizen who does not carry either guns or narcotics in his car or on his person would not be disturbed about this search; whereas the one who has some reason to carry such things without just cause has great reason to be upset. We believe in America that a man's home is his castle. Those who would tear down the walls of that castle would more than likely be people who deal in or take narcotics or illegally transport firearms.

I realize that it is better to allow 10 criminals to go free than to unjustly condemn an innocent person; but I also realize that though evil and erroneous men have rights, evil and error have no rights; and society should do its best to restrain evil when it hurts society, and correct errors when these can upset society. I am appreciative, too, of the fact that in our pluralistic society it is difficult to determine officially what is evil and what is error. Finally, I understand that though narcotics and guns in themselves are not evil, the misuse of them is evil. No one dares deny this. The person who transports them, without good cause, on his person or in his car should be prepared to suffer the consequences.

I have heard some discussion as to treatment accorded negroes or minorities by law enforcement officers. To my mind, that would come under the heading of discourtesy and/or brutality. In the event that there are over zealous law enforcement officers, it is my belief that such over zealousness is a local law enforcement administration problem and should be and will be handled at that level.

Dr. John Hannah said in his volume entitled, Justice — book 5 — at page 82:

> Court action of a criminal or civil nature is not the only method of dealing with unlawful police violence. The most direct controls are found within the organization of the state and local police agencies. Police chiefs, being the commanders of these highly disciplined organizations, are in a position to exercise control on their men and to discourage police brutality and connivance in private violence. Perhaps the single most potent weapon against unlawful police activity is a police commander who will not tolerate it.

Those individuals who carry guns and/or push narcotics are not selective as to the victims of their ruthlessness. The victims may be any hue, any age, any sex, and in any station of life. The rights of our children and society must be protected. We do not say that the rights of the individual must be overlooked. We must weigh the equities and in weighing the equities we will find that the greater equities are on the side of our children and society as a whole.

I fully realize that minorities have problems, as well as those who are not in an economically advantageous position. I have spent the greater portion of my adult years as a lawyer doing volunteer work with many minority groups, which include negroes, Mexicans, Puerto Ricans; together with those who are at an economic disadvantage. I feel that the problems of the unfortunate cannot and should not be solved by abolishing the proper safeguards for all of our children and for society. I have seen narcotic pushers. I have talked with narcotic pushers. I have talked with persons addicted to narcotics. I have talked to those who would do anything to get narcotics — even murder. They are hard and ruthless. It has been well said that getting evidence to convict those who traffic in narcotics is a challenge beyond description. I have talked with gunmen and murderers. They play for keeps. It is a sad, pitiful and pitiable picture.

We must do our part to help law enforcement, thereby protecting our children and society. I am intense about law enforcement and I am sincere in asking you to retain the Prettie amendment. Thank you. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise to support the Prettie amendment. I have heard it said here — as all you delegates have — that the United States supreme court, by its decision in the Mapp case, has made this language, which is substantially in our present constitution, unconstitutional under our federal constitution. I deny that. The division of lawyers on that subject in this convention goes right through the lawyer delegates here. Men I respect have a contrary opinion to mine. I hope I enjoy professionally the respect of those who disagree with me. But, be that as it may, I think it is our responsibility, as delegates to this state convention, to draft our constitution in accordance with our conscience and our best judgment as to what will best protect the citizens of Michigan, and in that connection I invite your attention to statements made within the last 2 months by 2 of the wisest men of our age, and I refer specifically to President Eisenhower and President Hoover. President Eisenhower, in his statement to this convention, stated, and I quote:

> So, as you set about the rewriting of your constitution, it seems to me that you must take account of other governmental changes in our nation. Such an examination is timely and I have felt — and surely you have felt — that there are tendencies developing that affect adversely our cherished ideas of government and tend to revise the structure built by those who preceded us. Of those principles I refer specifically to one drawn from the colonists' bitter struggle against tyranny and from man's progress from serfdom to liberty and to self government. That principle is this: those who would be and who would stay free must stand eternal watch against undue centralization of power in government. Faithful to that principle, our founders saw to it that governmental authority would be diffused — counter balanced — checked, hedged about, and restrained so as to minimize the possibility of its abuse. In that principle and in those precautions, we have believed, was established the true anchor of our freedom.

And former President Hoover gave us as thought provoking a statement as I believe we will have during this convention, when he concluded his letter of January 15, 1962 with these words:

Law enforcement.

Our law enforcement machinery has been steadily undermined by legislative action or judicial decisions until it is no longer a deterrent to crime. Crime is increasing steadily — and faster than the population. Only a minor percentage of the persons arrested reach actual conviction and punishment. I suggest that in the creation of law enforcement agencies in your constitution, you give consideration to the tortuous delays of legal procedures, the practices of suspended sentences, pardons, and paroles. Our system of law enforcement came from the English common law. The British still make it work. We need to get tough.

Fellow delegates, I urge you to support the Prettie amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from the twenty-fourth district, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I also rise to support the Prettie amendment. I do so by commenting briefly upon the remarks of my friend to the left of me here, the delegate from Washtenaw. He has stated that he and his associates, his fellow delegates from Washtenaw county, cannot in all good conscience vote for the Prettie amendment.

Now, I feel — I felt when I came into this convention and I still feel, and I always will feel — that I am not a Moses coming down from the mountain with some inscriptions upon a tablet of stone. I am a delegate representing in part the people of my twenty-fourth senatorial district and representing in part the people of all of the state of Michigan. And I would like to call to the attention of my good friend, the delegate from Washtenaw, the fact that in 1952, when the voters of Washtenaw last had an opportunity to express their opinion of whether or not they needed the protection that is embodied in the principles of the Prettie amendment, they voted 37,639 votes for and 6,930 votes against. I have no reason to believe that they have changed their opinion since 1952.

This body is not, I say to you sincerely, a court. This body is here as representatives of the people, endeavoring to give them what they want. If anything that we give them is challenged in the courts, let the courts settle it. We are not set up as a court. We are delegates — representatives and agents of the people.

I continue my support of the Prettie amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President, —

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bledsoe, you understand the question at the moment is on the Prettie amendment, not your own, because we haven't gotten to yours yet.

MR. BLEDSOE: I realize that. That's why I'm here. (laughter) Mr. President and members of this delegation, despite all of the reasons that you have heard here tonight, I am against the Prettie amendment for one reason — just one — because it is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. I can't stand anywhere else. I don't know where he is standing. Those who have known me for the past 37 years as an officer of the courts of this state know that I have defended the Constitution of the United States. It is the greatest bulwark within the gift of a free people. I know something about how it came about. As I stand here and look into your faces, apparently some of us have forgotten what happened and how our ancestors brought this document about, why our ancestors sought this land, why they made such a great sacrifice to build this nation, why we are sending our sons and daughters all over the world to impress people that we have found a society, a way of life that all men, if they follow us, can abide by. And that is the rule of law laid in the Constitution of the United States.

I want you to know that I have no brief for law violations. How could I stand up here and attempt to answer all of these statements of criminal pursuits and criminal conduct? I want to say in one sweep I agree with everything you've said but I have noticed that you have avoided taking a position on the Constitution of the United States. That's the only question that's involved here.

If we need some other legislation, as my good colleague from Washtenaw county has said here, have we lost faith in our legislature? If we want to augment our criminal laws to use evidence in our courts, the legislature is in session right across the road. You can step over there tomorrow and introduce a bill.

I can think of some things worse and I'm going to tell you one. I think one of the most terrifying things that I can think of is when I board an airplane and I am wondering whether some sensitive person is going to collect the insurance while I'm going through the air at 650 miles an hour. Has that ever occurred to you? They say they can't catch an automobile because people have criminal intent. How are you going to catch airplanes? I was going to Texas the other day to see my father and the man said he was going 600 miles an hour. There's only one way to do it, search everybody before they get on the plane. Do you see what I mean? You can't do that under our constitution. We're here to write a constitution; not to write media and proof of evidentiary value that we use in our courts. They're 2 separate and distinct things. I say to you members of this convention there is only one thing involved here, and that's the Constitution of the United States.

I want to read to you from the Michigan Manual just one line or two. I am reading to you now from article VI:

The constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof and all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land.

Now I wonder, can we agree on that? Can we agree on that? We're committed to it.

The judicial officers both of the United States and the several states shall be bound by oaths or affirmation to support the constitution. The judges of every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitutional laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

Have you heard of that before? I notice — the Prettie people, I don't think they've heard — the Prettie amendment doesn't contain that. I wonder if it's ever been read to them.

Now, these are the things that you're going against. And I say to you and I want those of you to hear what I'm saying. Do you know that this matter was debated in the committee of the whole for 7½ hours? My amendment was beaten, but by such a narrow vote, the opposition sought to hold this over because their conscience was bothering them and they didn't want to close this matter out with such a narrow vote. I can understand their worry. I've been flooded with police information. Narrations of crime, of the most sordid crime, have come to my desk, all of which we are all against.

Let me tell you — I just simply want to recall this to your memory — we compromised with the Constitution of the United States a good many years ago and I have only to remind you what happened. We compromised and that compromise may be referred to as the Missouri compromise, and following that compromise on the Constitution of the United States, the blood of free men who were fighting to consummate the gains that they had made in rebuilding this nation and the blood of their sons flowed up and down the streets of this country for 4½ years. I wonder if you know about that. When you begin to compromise your basic laws, you are forgetting your heritage. We are the heirs of free men.

I still say I agree with all of the harrowing stories. This thing has no race connotations. I think it's positively ridiculous to try to drag people of different races into this thing. The facts speak for themselves. It has nothing to do with it. We are all seeking the same objective. Sure, I've got 6 grandchildren. But I don't want any more for my grandchildren than I want for any neighbor or any other citizens' grandchildren in the world. I don't think any less of them. I've reared and educated 3 children. And do you know how I did it? I did it with the help of the American people, with people right here. This is a community. And I thank God for the help of the free institutions that helped me rear and educate and to earn a living for my family. And I think that it is a fine heritage for every American that has been given us. We are the heirs of it and it all happened under the constitution.

I am going to close here by suggesting that every objective under the Prettie amendment that it is entitled to measured by the Constitution of the United States can be obtained across the street — and Mr. Prettie is a fine lawyer; he knows it — all he's got to do is to go over there and he can have a bill introduced on that floor before the week is out. But it will be measured by the law; and we are governed by laws and not by men and police. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I believe more than adequate things have been said. I certainly concur in every way with my colleague on the amendment, Mr. Bledsoe, and with J. Don Lawrence. I'd like to recall to everybody's mind that this problem can be handled. We are only talking about illegal searches and seizures — not legal ones. This is not going to help the criminals. I'd like to remind everybody that there are more law abiding people in this land and in this state and in every county than there are unlawful people.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Kent, Mr. Blandford.

MR. BLANDFORD: Mr. President, I will have to confess that at the start of this discussion some few days ago, I wasn't too concerned. I felt it was a legal argument. However, as the discussion progressed, I began to get the feeling that it was more than that. I began to hear charges and counter charges against police departments and law enforcement. I began to feel that police departments were on trial here. That is when I became very interested and very concerned. I cannot speak as a policeman but I can speak for policemen. For 6 years I was closely associated with city government in the city of Grand Rapids and I have come to some definite conclusions on policemen, police departments and police work. Fellow delegates, your police departments are almost in an untenable position at the present time. You have on one hand the city councilmen who are continually telling them to go soft on law enforcement and they wink at such things as after hours drinking places, bingo and a few other things that are being operated illegally throughout the state. On the other hand, you have the less than courageous judges who oftentimes will let these men off with a light slap on the wrist. I have personally shared the frustration of the police department that has worked months to break a numbers racket in the city of Grand Rapids, only to see guilty persons — admittedly guilty — go off with a light slap on the wrist.

The thing I'd like to hear answered today which I haven't heard answered is: how many burglaries have been solved? How many narcotics peddlers have been arrested? And how many mothers have been put behind bars because of the search and seizure provision as it is in our present constitution?

In order to substantiate some of my own thinking, I asked the chief of police of the city of Grand Rapids to give me some cases, if he had some, where he felt these would apply. He wrote me this letter:

> The attached represent several instances wherein the present constitutional provision affecting police officers operating without a warrant have proven beneficial to the Grand Rapids police department.

I'll read these 3 cases. They will only take a brief minute:

> On January 8, 1958 at 10:15 p.m. officers were alerted by police broadcast of an armed robbery at 939 Fourth street, Grand Rapids. Investigating officers observed 2 young men about to enter a car about 4 blocks from the reported robbery. Their actions were of such a nature that police investigation followed. A search of the car disclosed a 25 calibre automatic hidden under the front seat of the car which was used in the armed robbery. Both men were arrested for armed robbery and were found guilty of the crime in the Superior Court of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The second case — now, I realize lawyers in this crowd will say some are on point and some are not on point. But I can assure you this: that the eyes and the hearts of the police department of Grand Rapids indicate they are definitely on point.

> On May 24, 1958, 2 men were observed by officers sitting in their car at the rear of 512 Division avenue south, Grand Rapids. Police investigation revealed that both men were smoking marijuana cigarettes. Marijuana tobacco was found in the car, and in their possession. Both men were arrested for possession and use of marijuana, pled guilty to the charge in Superior Court of Grand Rapids.

And the third case:

> On February 10, 1959, a police broadcast was put out relevant to a certain make and model of car. Vice officers supplied additional information in regard to this car being involved in narcotic activities. Police investigation revealed that 2 men were the occupants of the car, and were under the influence of a narcotic. Marijuana tobacco was found in the car and in the possession of both men. Both men pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana in the Superior Court of Grand Rapids.

Now, as to section 10, I'd like to recommend this for your consideration: I think that one thing this convention can do is to stay on the side of helping and not hindering our police departments. I think we should give serious thought to strengthening the police departments' position in courts and not weakening it. I think that this convention can well serve notice to the country and the supreme court that we in Michigan stand firm for bolstering and not bucking our police departments. Remember, you cannot successfully combat crime by continually weakening law enforcement.

I favor the Prettie amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from the thirtieth senatorial district, Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. President, I speak very quietly and firmly for the amendment before us tonight. I come from an area which voted in the 1952 election, in some areas of my particular district, over 8 to 1 in support of the new amendment. Therefore, I feel I am on very firm ground as I stand up here and say that my area will stand very much for and behind the Prettie amendment that is before us here this evening.

I might speak just one moment about a particular part of this so called search and seizure law that we are well informed of up in our area, and that's the game violation that is part of this law. We have many cases — we have a case right now going to the supreme court from my county. And let me tell you what one of the lawyers involved in this particular case said to me just 2 weeks ago. He said, "Kent, we'd be very foolish to emasculate the present law into a law of the lessening of the language as the original committee report had, even though," he said, "I'm a participant in many of these game violation cases." He said, "The police officers need this law."

My brother, who was the prosecuting attorney in our county, and others have also come to me and told me the very same story. It's a very clear indication that our people want the Prettie amendment and we are going to support that. Therefore, I say to you that the legal people who do day to day work on these type of cases — and regardless if you do upset the vote on the Prettie amendment here, you lawyers in this room know as well as I do that in the next week and the week after, the month after, will come both to that same court and to the same legal authorities, cases involving the same type of question.

Search and seizure will ever be with us. And let's keep the protective part to our police officers that the Prettie amendment gives us tonight. Therefore, I rise in support of the Prettie amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Saginaw, Mr. Turner.

MR. TURNER: Mr. President, I rise to speak to the Prettie amendment. This is a free country but it is not completely free. I have the right and freedom to speak as long as it isn't profane. I have the freedom to write as long as it isn't obscene. I have the freedom to travel whenever and wherever I wish as long as I obey the law. We have laws to protect the safety and the well being of our citizens.

But in this city of Lansing in 1961 there were 18,834 violations of traffic. Six people lost their lives during this same time. What would it be like if there were no regulations? In 1961, 6 juveniles were found to be carrying concealed weapons in this city. Isn't it better to apprehend them before they become hardened criminals?

Destroy the right to search and we will be faced with a wave of crime. We can and we must maintain safety for society.

I urge you to vote for the Prettie amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from the twenty-fifth senatorial district, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I realize that we have talked and talked on this amendment, perhaps too much. But there have been a couple of things that I think have not been completely covered and I wish to cover them.

Let me give you a case that's not imaginary and we'll see something about the background under which police officers work, and I refer to one of the 3 cases in which the well established law of this state was upset by our own supreme court, making it so much more difficult for law enforcement officers to protect us, the Zeigler case. The chief of police in Bangor called the state police and said, "There's a man here picking up gambling tickets. He has such and such kind of a car, license number and the whole business. He is going to Kalamazoo when he leaves here." So the state police watched for him. They spotted the car and they followed him. He ran a stop sign, so they arrested him. He consented to the search of the car and his overcoat but that's as far as he would go. They went on and searched the rest of the way and found the gambling tickets they were looking for. Does that constitute probable cause so that the police were right in their making the search that they made? Not at all. Why? Because nobody testified who told the chief of police that the fellow was picking up the gambling tickets. It's not a new rule, Mr. Lawrence. It's well established in the law of Michigan. Anonymous information won't do. What is the police chief to do? What is the prosecutor to do? If the police chief had said, "John Doe told me. He's a business man here. I've known him for years. I can rely on what he says." That would have done the trick in that case; but that would be the last information the police would ever get from John Doe. When you disclose information that you get that way, you dry up the source, and from then on you get no information. The supreme court recognizes that but still says it won't do. The search was illegal and it wasn't sent back for a new trial. The guy went Scott free. Case dismissed.

Then there's another thing that's been said here. He can consent to the search. Sure, you can search a car if the driver or whoever is in charge of it consents. But that isn't all there is to it. Before he gives his consent you've got to tell him, "Now, you don't have to consent. You've got the constitutional right not to. And if you do consent, anything that is found will be used against you." If you don't tell him that, and all that you say is "Can I search your car?" and he says, "Yes," you might just as well have him say "No," because the search will be illegal unless you've warned him of his rights. And if you warn him of his rights, if he's got an ounce of brains, he isn't going to consent if there's anything there to find. So this consent business doesn't do any good. And again, let me point out that this rule of evidence is not based on the unreliability of the information you get. In a confession, sure, because confessions are often not true; but the evidence you find when you search a car and find guns and ammunition and bombs doesn't lie.

I use those just to point out to you the great care — and I agree with it — the great care that we use in English speaking countries in protecting one who is charged with crime from every possible angle. We lean over backwards to do it. As I pointed out to you when I spoke on this before, good government depends on a proper balance between protecting the rights of the individual and protecting the rights of society in general. Maybe we're not in good balance now, but for goodness sakes, let's not, as constitutional convention delegates, go on making the balance farther off than it is at the present time.

Sure, we can pass a statute — the legislature could — but this case will come before the Supreme Court of the United States sooner or later for a decision that is a decision, and not dictum, and when it does, we'll be in a much stronger position if we have a part of our constitution for them to throw out than we will if they have a mere statute to throw out. This is not a case of the people against the policemen. This is a case of the people against dangerous criminals. And anybody who runs around with bombs and guns and narcotics in his car is a dangerous criminal. There's only one language that he understands and that's the language in which we'd better talk to him if we ever want to stop this increase in crime. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. President and delegates, first, in reply to Delegate Brake, I want to mention that it is true and I say it is not a matter of the people versus criminals. What this delegation is trying to do right now is to make it a matter of the people of the state of Michigan — making it a matter of the delegates of the state of Michigan against the United States supreme court, meaning by that, that of all the millions of people of these United States, we are going to take it in our hands to change the law, the basic law that has been for hundreds and hundreds of years. This I don't agree with. I don't think that it ought to be.

So you will understand that I am not here talking about any particular group, and I want you to know my feeling that this is not a matter of race, as one of the delegates brought up through the prepared statement. It doesn't concern it. This concerns basic law before there was any question of race. It concerns us as far back as the declaration of independence. This is not a racial question whatever — I don't care what kind of prepared statement is read — it is not that, and I don't believe that there are any delegates other than the one who believes it to be so. One of the things that you might have noticed here is that the persons who have pointed out particular items — even Delegate Blandford went back to 1958 — are isolated incidents, even going back to the year of 1958 to find some statement by the police department of why they had a case and why this law was good.

I submit to you, ladies and gentlemen of the delegation, that the law is improper; it is not right; and it is not based upon the Mapp case. The Mapp case can be either one way or the other. I am telling you right now it is just a matter of the Constitution of the United States that everybody has been satisfied with and been living under and has been growing under and been prospering under and been receiving all the benefits from all of their lives for every delegate here. Now, it's no good as far as this is concerned.

One of the delegates mentioned President Eisenhower's statement and I took it out here because I did remember — not by words, but his general idea, which I agreed in — that the states are going too far away from the federal government and therefore the federal government must step in and stop them. So, in a statement here he stated:

> So, as you set about the rewriting of your constitution, it seems to me you must take account of other governmental changes in our nation. Such an examination is timely and I have felt — and surely you have felt — that there are tendencies developing that affect adversely our cherished ideas of government and tend to revise the structure built by those who preceded us. Of those principles I refer specifically to one drawn from the colonists' bitter struggle against tyranny and from man's progress from serfdom to liberty and to self government.

That was during the time that the question of race was not involved. I don't believe the question of religion was much involved during that time that President Eisenhower was speaking of.

> That principle is this: those who would be and would stay free must stand eternal watch against undue centralization of power in government.

Now, following that, during some subsequent paragraph, he stated that centralization of government resulted from just what this constitutional convention is trying to do: usurp the powers and the laws of the United States of America.

If the various delegates had given us any idea, or some concrete evidence of things that are happening now, instead of going back to 1958, a case here, a case there, it might be well considered; but the very fact that there is just one case here and there after writing to the police chiefs is enough to know that these out of the millions of people, these isolated incidents, do not merit enough to change the Constitution of the United States.

Now, we talk about the amendment in 1952. I wanted to say this: did any of you — any one of you — know the 14 items that were included in that amendment? No, because the freedom of the press told you it was to stop dope, period; protect the children, period. They didn't tell you what it was all about. That was the right of the freedom of the press which we have already granted here by the first amendment. And I think Dr. Nord made a significant statement. After the press came out in December of 1951, arguing this — that it should be done, it should be retained — he gave, in a statement concerning his attitude, 4 basic reasons why it should not be retained in the constitution. But the press didn't find a reason to publish that. Now, whether you live in what county it might be, or the upper peninsula or the west or the east, I submit to you that the press caused the 1952 constitutional amendment to be passed — not that it's wrong. Maybe I might say so later on because the press is being minimized each day, as you know: Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles and Chicago, but it's just a matter that you should take into consideration regarding these persons or the persons and the delegates who continue to talk about what happened in 1952 when no one knew but one side of it.

So I am urging you to vote against the Prettie amendment. These things might not be rampant in some counties. Perhaps the Hillsdale delegate has been reading the papers too. He might write one, I don't know. But whatever the case might be, it is not true that we need to usurp the Constitution of the United States in order to further cause this state to be derogated because of this amendment. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Habermehl desires to offer an amendment?

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, yes. The amendment is on the secretary's desk.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Habermehl and King offer the following as a substitute for the Prettie amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting —

MR. YEAGER: Inquiry, Mr. President, I thought the question was on the concurrence of the recommendation.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The main question is upon the concurrence of the recommendation. It is in order to offer amendments or substitutes to the recommendation of the committee of the whole. If the convention saw fit to adopt the substitute, or to otherwise amend the recommendation of the committee of the whole, it is in order at this time. After that substitute or the amendment is adopted — if it is — the question would still be upon concurring in the recommendation made by the committee of the whole, either as substituted or as amended, you see.

In the opinion of the Chair, it is in order to offer a substitute at this time and to dispose of the substitute and to treat any other amendments that might be offered. If all substitutes and all amendments are voted down, we return to the original recommendation of the committee of the whole.

The secretary will read the proposed substitute.

SECRETARY CHASE: By Messrs. Habermehl and King:

1. Amend page 2, line 28, after "affirmation.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "Evidence secured as a result of searches made in violation of this section shall not be admitted in any criminal proceeding: Provided however, That nothing in this section shall prevent the introduction into evidence, in any criminal proceeding, of any article, seized by any peace officer, unlawfully in the possession of any person in any type of vehicle found in any public place.".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the substitute, Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: I apologize to the delegates for not having had time to distribute this in writing to each of the delegates. I had also, as Mr. Lawrence had, asked our research department to check out the possible constitutionality of this substitute amendment and I was unable to get an answer until too late to have this duplicated so it would be on each of your desks.

It does appear to me here that we have a very solid controversy. On one side we have those of us that are much concerned over the infringement of a constitutional right. I think it is worthwhile noting that we passed 22 sections in this proposal. Of those, we did not limit or infringe upon the guarantees made except in one case. In all of the rest of the constitutional guarantees, we either adopted them as they were, or actually expanded the rights of the individual, gave them more guarantees against the power of government than they had prior to our adoption of these other 21 sections. Now, on the other hand, we have this worry of most of the delegates that the police may be handicapped in the valid exercise of the police power of the state in apprehending criminals. And I grant the sincerity of each of those delegates that so believe. Of the two, I would prefer, myself, to hamper the police rather than take away a guarantee of a single individual citizen.

We propose this language, however, as a substitute that we hope will be acceptable to both points of view. I would ask you to note the language, "nothing in this section shall prevent the introduction into evidence, in any criminal proceeding . . ." and I believe that is as far as we have to go, for all court proceedings taken in connection with a criminal case are criminal proceedings ". . . of any article. . . ." This is not limited to narcotics and guns. It would cover the gambling equipment mentioned by Mr. Brake. It would cover stolen goods in case of a burglary. It would cover any article seized by any peace officer unlawfully in the possession of any person in any type of vehicle, which would cover both airplanes, helicopters — whatever you might wish or could think of — found in any public place. It would not, of course, permit the invasion of any private property or person, actually. It would prevent the personal search that has in so many cases debased the dignity of individuals.

Now, its constitutionality, I think, is beyond question. If any of you have ever traveled to the state of California, you will know that when you reach the California border, you are stopped; your car is searched; the trunk is opened; and I think that the car is even sprayed underneath. That's a valid exercise of the police power of the state of California. It is not a violation of a constitutional right and this substitute that we offer is not a violation of a constitutional right. It is a condition upon the privilege of operating a motor vehicle on a public highway or having it occupy a public space.

I think it will strengthen the hand of the law enforcement officers. The case mentioned by Mr. Brake, you must remember, arose when the present proviso in the constitution was there. It was a case of the supreme court limiting the right to search after a valid arrest. You will note that this provision does not require any arrest. It only requires that the evidence be found in a motor vehicle, seized by a peace officer, and that the motor vehicle be in a public place. It will actually undercut the decision of the supreme court; it will take the ground out from under the decision of the supreme court in the case of the People vs. Zeigler and in other cases, because it will not require an arrest in order to search a motor vehicle. Obviously, the peace officer cannot act in an unreasonable manner. On mere suspicion, he can't go in and lift up the cushions and toss them out on the highway, without subjecting himself to action. This would, I believe, remove the thing that would be with us if the amendment proposed by Delegate Prettie were to wind up in our constitution.

If the language proposed by Delegate Prettie were found to be unconstitutional — and remember, 3 circuit judges, in very recent dates, have so found it — we would be left with nothing in the constitution. If this is adopted, any police officer, any prosecutor, can argue that this is a valid exercise of the police power, that all that is attempted by this language is to condition the privilege of operating a motor vehicle, which there is no question but what the state may do.

I'll again give you the important parts of this substitute amendment. It would permit the introduction in evidence in any criminal proceeding of any article seized by any peace officer, unlawfully in possession of any person in any type of vehicle found in any public place. It certainly should satisfy any peace officer in the state of Michigan.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is on the substitute amendment offered by Messrs. Habermehl and King. Mr. Nord?

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to speak briefly against the Habermehl-King substitute amendment for this reason: as I see it, the question before us is a constitutional question and not a question of ordinary law, that is to say legislative law or judicial law. The only question that we have to determine is simply this: should we in our constitution say or permit or imply that unreasonably seized evidence should be admitted? It appears to me that the answer to that question is no. If it is unreasonably seized evidence, it is obviously unconstitutional and should not be admitted. The question that the sponsors have injected is a different question. It is by no means a constitutional question. The question that they have brought before us is a different one, namely: what is reasonable? What is a reasonable search and seizure? They will attempt to define what a reasonable search and seizure is.

Now, I pointed out when the original debate occurred, that this is a sound approach and I still believe that it is a sound approach to try to define what is reasonable, but that is not a sound approach in the constitution. For one thing, what is reasonable will depend on what the legislature provides and what the court determines and it is partially on the basis of the facts of each case. You cannot put in the constitution something that makes something reasonable. It either is reasonable or it isn't reasonable. The constitution cannot say such and such is reasonable. The constitution can say if it's unreasonable, it should not be admitted or that there shall be no unreasonable searches and seizures. In other words, the point I make is this: If Messrs. Habermehl and King are correct — and they may very well be — that such a provision would be constitutional, then there is no harm in providing that by legislation. If on the other hand it's unconstitutional, there is no point in putting it in the constitution.

In other words, there is no gain by putting this in the constitution. It would be an abortive effort in any event, I believe, to say that such and such shall be a reasonable search. That will always be a question for the courts to determine. What we should do is stick to the fundamental principles and not get into a side issue. The fundamental issue is: shall unreasonable searches and seizures and the evidence thereof be introduced in evidence? I believe we should say the answer to that question is no.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would like to remind Delegate Habermehl that under the rules he may speak only twice and anyone else may speak only once on this amendment. If the delegate would desire to speak a second time at this point, the Chair will recognize him for the purpose.

MR. HABERMEHL: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I am aware of the rule. I simply would like to answer Dr. Nord in saying that theoretically I agree with him. The language used is statutory. And perhaps if it were not for this dispute we find ourselves in, it well might appear in the statute. However, in view of the dispute that we have, I think it might well satisfy both sides to this dispute. And for that reason, I see no real objection to putting it in the constitution. We will be faced many times with the necessity of putting statutory language in the constitution. I agree that the final determination of what is reasonable and unreasonable is a judicial question and one that we cannot decide here. But we can here very carefully point out upon what we base the right of the officer to search and seize the property. If we base it upon the condition of the privilege of driving an automobile rather than upon an infringement of a constitutional guarantee, then I think the courts must take cognizance, must recognize, that it is simply a condition upon the privilege of driving an automobile.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie, on the Habermehl-King substitute.

MR. PRETTIE: I wish to apologize for again taking the floor. I thought I had made my position clear when in my opening statement I said that I had conversed for 2 long hours with one of the delegates proposing this amendment — although I did not mention him by name — and others, a proviso of limiting seizure of contraband from vehicles only. My reasons for opposition are briefly 2, and I shall sit down. You know and I know that crimes are committed, filling station attendants killed, banks held up, places burglarized, supermarkets knocked over by people who run away. They may some day get to a car or they may hitch a bus, they may ride a bicycle. And by those far more knowledgeable in the field than I, I am advised that this would not reach the subject so much discussed in this debate on the traffic in narcotics, where automobiles are seldom used. I find myself in agreement with Dr. Nord, for different reasons perhaps. I am happy to have the opportunity to be on his side at this early stage of our debates. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from the fourteenth district, Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, when we were discussing this section last week, I made a statement with considerable conviction. Subsequently it has been suggested that I may have inadvertently introduced into the discussion the race issue. It was not my intention. I intended at that time to point out that as a result of my work as chairman of the federal commission on civil rights, I have become convinced that there is a different standard for the administration of justice extended to some people because of their color and to others because of their economic status. And I was particularly concerned by what I consider to be the wrong kind of administration of justice by the seizure of large numbers of citizens outside of their homes and yards, walking on the street, standing on the street corners, sometimes in their automobiles. I indicated that I had as much interest in protection of police officers, giving them what they need to carry forward their responsibility as any member of this convention, and emphasized that at the university I have the honor to be connected with, we have had a program for more than 30 years in police administration and have trained a great many of the leading officials in the FBI, in the state police, in police departments all over this country and all over the world.

I was concerned, however, by the division and by the many lawyers, and others in this convention for whom I have great respect, that felt so strongly that the provision known as the Prettie amendment should be included in this constitution. I discussed it with police officials in whom I have great confidence and all of them emphasized that what they are concerned with is the kind of situation described by Mr. Blandford and Mr. Brake, where crimes have been committed and someone has gone off with an automobile and someone has some reason to suspect that persons in automobiles are guilty of crime. So I participated in the delay of this issue, from last week for 2 or 3 days and finally until tonight, in the hope that my colleagues who are lawyers might come up with some provision that would give police officers what they think they need in making it possible for them to use evidence taken from automobiles perhaps illegally searched.

I thought this was about to be accomplished and Mr. Prettie indicated twice this evening that he was unable to accept these compromises that were worked out by members of this convention who are lawyers in whom I have confidence. When this position was rejected, it left me no alternative but to favor the motion that was before us before the Habermehl-King substitute amendment, and that is not to concur in the Prettie amendment.

I rise now to speak in support of the Habermehl-King substitute amendment in the hope that it will satisfy those who feel so strongly that police officers must be given some opportunity to use evidence taken from moving vehicles. If this does not prevail, of course, I shall have no alternative but to go along with the chairman of the committee, Mr. Pollock, in supporting the motion not to concur in the Prettie amendment.

Gentlemen and ladies, I hope that the majority of this convention will support and approve the Habermehl-King substitute amendment. I believe it gives the police officers everything that they seek — not everything all of them seek — but everything they can reasonably seek. And before I sit down I want to say again what I said the other day in that I feel with deep conviction — the good lady from Detroit quoted me from the report of the federal commission on civil rights that emphasized — that the real cure is administrators of police forces that direct their officers to use the kind of tactics that you or I, or most of us would like to see them use. But they do not always do so. And I am as certain as I am standing here before you this evening, that in this state and in others, members of minority groups and white people who are economically disadvantaged are many times taken advantage of by police officers. And this bothers me very much, as I hope it bothers you too. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Washtenaw, Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, I have no desire to terminate the debate unreasonably but I have reached the point, I think reached a long time ago by that great Chief Justice John Marshall — with apologies to my good friend, Dr. Anspach, I should like to relate that story — when, as an old man, after he had become extremely great and celebrated, they gave him a dinner. The young speaker was extolling the virtues of the great chief justice and in the course of his remarks he began to say, "You, Mr. Chief Justice, you, who have reached the acme of judicial distinction . . ." and he repeated that 2 or 3 times. And finally, Marshall put up his hand and he said, "Young man, do you know what the acme of judicial distinction is?" The young man was quite taken aback and he said, "No." Well, he said, "To sit on the bench and listen to the arguments of lawyers for 4 hours and not hear a damn word they say." (laughter)

I think we have almost reached that point here. I think we have deliberated on this matter. I listened with great patience for weeks in the committee. I listened a long time in the committee of the whole. I've listened a long time now. The issue is a little beclouded by the Habermehl-King substitute amendment but I still think that the basic issue is the Prettie amendment and I hope we can have a straight vote on this.

As the chairman of the substantive committee responsible for this matter, I feel it was my duty to move that the convention not concur in the amendment put in by the committee of the whole, namely, the Prettie amendment. I did that because it was a close vote in committee of the whole. It was an exceedingly important matter. The majority of the committee felt that a proposal similar to the Prettie amendment was unconstitutional, and we said so in our report, and therefore I would be derelict in my duty representing the majority of the substantive committee if I had not made that motion.

Having said so much, Mr. President, if it is in order I should like to move the previous question on the Habermehl-King substitute amendment which, I believe, when disposed of reverts to the other amendment too. Am I correct?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: If you are limiting your motion to the Habermehl-King substitute amendment, the motion will reach only that substitute amendment.

MR. POLLOCK: No. I apply it to all matters before the convention at this time on the issue of section 10.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: All right.

For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: A point of order, Mr. President — I am sorry; I thought we were still on general orders and that the motion for the previous question was not in order, but I realize now we are out of general orders.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the demand for the previous question supported? All those in favor will rise.

The demand is supported. The question now is: shall the main question be put? As many as are in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The motion prevails. The previous question is ordered. The question now is upon the Habermehl-King substitute. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The substitute amendment is not adopted.

The secretary will read a further amendment upon the desk which will not now be subject to debate.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bledsoe and Miss Donnelly offer the following amendment as a substitute for amendment 2 of the committee of the whole:

1. Amend pages 2 and 3, by striking out all of section 10 and inserting a new section 10 to read as follows:

"Sec. 10. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.".

MR. HODGES: Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Hodges?

MR. HODGES: To request a recorded roll call vote.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment?

MR. HODGES: Yes, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the demand for the yeas and nays supported? As many as are in favor will rise. Sufficient number up. The yeas and nays on this amendment have been demanded. As many as are in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the Bledsoe-Donnelly substitute, the yeas are 54; the nays 81.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment in the form of a susbtitute is not adopted. The question now is upon concurring in the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole. And the Chair wants to make this very clear: the question is upon concurring. In other words, those delegates who are in favor of the Prettie amendment would vote yes; those opposed would vote no; because the question is upon concurring in the recommendation made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Mr. Boothby?

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I'd like to request a roll call vote on this question, please.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Boothby demands the yeas and nays. Is the demand supported? All those in favor will rise. A sufficient number up.

Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, would you please repeat your instructions? Some of us are a little bit confused. My motion was not to concur.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Pollock, your motion was not in order. The question is upon concurring. The Chair never recognized your motion because your motion is not in order.

Those delegates who are in favor of the Prettie amendment will vote yes; those who are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the question of concurring in the remaining recommendation of the committee of the whole, namely, the Prettie amendment, the yeas are 76; the nays are 61.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The recommendation of the committee of the whole is concurred in and Committee Proposal 15, A proposal to amend article II pertaining to the declaration of rights, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 15 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Article I

Declaration of rights

Political power

Sec. 1. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal benefit, security and protection.

Right of assembly and petition

Sec. 2. The people have the right peaceably to assemble, to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives and to petition the government for redress of grievances.

Freedom of worship; disabilities

Sec. 3. Every person shall be at liberty to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. No person shall be compelled to attend, or, against his consent, to contribute to the erection or support of any place of religious worship; or to pay tithes, taxes or other rates for the support of any minister of the gospel or teacher of religion. No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological or religious seminary; nor shall property belonging to the state be appropriated for any such purpose. The civil and political rights, privileges and capacities of no person shall be diminished or enlarged on account of his religious belief.

Liberty of speech and press

Sec. 4. Every person may freely speak, write, express, and publish his views on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of such right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press.

Right to bear arms

Sec. 5. Every person has a right to bear arms for the defense of himself and the state.

Civil power supreme

Sec. 6. The military shall in all cases and at all times be in strict subordination to the civil power.

Quartering of soldiers

Sec. 7. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner or occupant, nor in time of war, except in a manner prescribed by law.

Slavery prohibited

Sec. 8. Neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this state.

Attainder; ex post facto laws; impairment of contracts

Sec. 9. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed.

Searches and seizures

Sec. 10. The person, houses, papers and possessions of every person shall be secure from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation: Provided however, That the provisions of this section shall not be construed to bar from evidence in any court of criminal jurisdiction, in any criminal proceeding or preliminary examination any narcotic drug or drugs, any firearm, bomb, explosive, or any other dangerous weapon, seized by any peace officer outside the curtilage of any dwelling house in this state.

Habeas corpus

Sec. 11. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless in case of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

Appearance in person or by counsel

Sec. 12. Any suitor in any court of this state shall have the right to prosecute or defend his suit, either in his own proper person or by an attorney.

Jury trial

Sec. 13. The right of trial by jury shall remain, but shall be deemed to be waived in all civil cases unless demanded by one of the parties in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

Former jeopardy; bailable offenses

Sec. 14. No person shall be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy. All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for murder and treason when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

Bail; fines; punishment; detention of witnesses

Sec. 15. Excessive bail shall not be required; excessive fines shall not be imposed; cruel or unusual punishment shall not be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

Self incrimination; due process of law

Sec. 16. No person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law. The right of all individuals, firms and corporations and voluntary associations to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive proceedings, investigations, and hearings shall not be infringed.

Competency of witnesses

Sec. 17. No person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief.

Libels; truth as defense

Sec. 18. In all prosecutions for libels the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and, if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the accused shall be acquitted.

Rights of accused

Sec. 19. In every criminal prosecution, the accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, which may consist of less than 12 jurors in all courts not of record; to be informed of the nature of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; to have an appeal as a matter of right; and in courts of record, when the trial court shall so order, to have such reasonable assistance as may be necessary to perfect and prosecute an appeal.

Imprisonment for debt or military fine

Sec. 20. No person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded on a tort or a contract, express or implied, except in cases of fraud or breach of trust, or of moneys collected by public officers or in any professional employment.

Treason; definition, evidence

Sec. 21. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless upon the testimony of 2 witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

Subversion; definition, penalty; rights not valid as defense

Sec. ... The enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON (continuing): General orders of the day. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Would you please inform me about the status of all of the recommendations of the committee of the whole on article II. Are they all referred to the committee on style?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The recommendations of the committee of the whole as to article II, that is to say everything that is in Committee Proposal 15, have now been referred to the committee on style and drafting.

MR. POLLOCK: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President I move that the order of general orders be passed for the day.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate moves that the order of general orders be now passed for the day. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and it is so ordered.

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following announcements of committee meetings in addition to the announcements that are on the composite calendar—

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: May we have order, please.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on education will meet Wednesday after the session in room J, also Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in room J.

The committee on emerging problems will meet in room I Wednesday at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Frank Millard, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H tomorrow, Tuesday, immediately after the session. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet Wednesday at 1:15 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The following announcement, the rapid reading course has slowed down. (laughter) The last class will be next Monday evening instead of this Wednesday.

Apples tonight were furnished by Delegate J. Burton Richards. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Further announcements? Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President and members of the local government committee, tomorrow at 10:30 when we meet in room A, I wish you would all bring with you — because we have no extra copies — the report returned to you by the research division of work that we have done to date.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, despite the lateness of the hour, the committee on rules and resolutions will meet immediately following the session in room I.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. White.

MR. WHITE: Likewise, Mr. President, the committee on public information will meet very briefly in room 2.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Gust requests to be excused from tomorrow's session and Mr. J. Burton Richards wishes to be excused from tomorrow's session.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, Mr. Richards of Berrien and Mr. Gust will be excused from tomorrow's session. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

The delegate from Gratiot, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, point of information. I may be in error but it is my understanding we have not completed our deliberations in the committee of the whole on the civil service proposal. So, with this in mind, I believe it was announced by President Nisbet last week that this week would be devoted to committee hearings and our sessions would be rather short. Now the question in mind is: are we going to go into general orders tomorrow—I am only asking this question with relationship to our committee meetings—or are we going to pass further consideration of the civil service proposal which has already been partially considered in the committee of the whole or are we going to lose tomorrow afternoon as far as committee work is concerned?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. President, I think that it was the understanding that, unless there was some great objection from the committee chairmen, we would pass committee of the whole after tonight—unless there is objection from the chairman of the committee handling that proposal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the delegate from Gratiot satisfied with the answer? The Chair would say, of course, it's entirely up to the convention; that it is in order each and every day as the order of general orders occurs, for a motion to be made that the order be passed for the day. The Chair would state further that it is the Chair's understanding that such will be done.

The secretary has one further request for leave.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Garvin requests to be excused from the session of tomorrow.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection the excuse will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

Are there any further announcements? What is the pleasure of the convention?

The delegate from the twenty-second district, Mr. Figy.

MR. FIGY: Mr. President, I move we do now adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of adjourning will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The convention stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 10:50 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock, p.m. Tuesday, January 23, 1962.]

SIXTY-THIRD DAY

Tuesday, January 23, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by the Reverend Louie H. Calaway, Assembly of God Church, Troy. Will you please rise.

REVEREND CALAWAY: Let us bow our heads for prayer. O Lord, our God, it is with thankful hearts that we bow our heads before Thee to give thanks for the many blessings that Thou hast bestowed upon us. Because of Thy bountiful provisions, we have enjoyed peace, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Thou hast provided the needs of our bodies and the salvation of our souls through Jesus Christ, our Lord. We thank Thee for this great land of ours and the state in which we live. We thank Thee for these men and women that have chosen to serve us.

As Thou didst bless our forebears and didst provide wise leadership, once again draw nigh unto us in this hour. We pray that Thou wilt help us to know our limitations. Thou hast instructed, by inspiration, that if any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God who giveth liberally and upbraideth not. We have come together today from various backgrounds, spheres of influence, and convictions. Therefore, it is most likely that there will be disagreement concerning some things, but we pray that our discord will be temporal; let our unity be eternal. Let us not be selfish nor narrow in our decisions. Let us bear in mind that our decisions will not only affect us but all future generations. Thou, and Thou alone, knowest what the future holds. Therefore, we ask that Thou wilt direct us in all of our deliberations.

O God, we live in a world that is full of tension. We are under pressure in our busy lives. So, we are thankful for these few moments that have been set aside to beseech Thee, even as Thou hast said through the prophet, "Be still and know that I am God." And once again, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

Now bless the executive officers of this convention and direct the committees and the delegates so that all they do may bring honor and glory to Thy name and shall be for the good of our state. Grant these things, we pray, and we shall be most careful to give Thee the praise both now and in days to come. In the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you very much.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following request for leave: Mr. King called to say he will be delayed and hopes to be here before the session is over.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection Mr. King will be excused. Hearing none, he is excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Garvin, King, Page and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Messrs. McAllister and Norris.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, those absent from today's session will be excused. Hearing no objection, they are excused.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley, for the committee on education, introduces Committee Proposal 30, A proposal pertaining to free public and elementary schools. Replaces article XI, section 9; with the recommendation that it pass.

Alvin M. Bentley, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 30 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 762.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, for the committee on judicial branch, introduces Exclusion Report 2013, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 3.

Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2013 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 763.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, for the committee on judicial branch, introduces Exclusion Report 2014, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 18.

Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2014 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 763.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, for the committee on judicial branch, introduces Exclusion Report 2015, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 22.

Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2015 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 764.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It will be referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on rules and resolutions, by Mr. Van Dusen, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 65, A resolution of the constitutional convention requesting action by the legislature pertaining to the orderly completion of convention business in the carrying out of the convention's obligations after adjournment; with 4 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the resolution, as thus amended, be adopted.

Richard C. Van Dusen, chairman.

For last previous action on Resolution 65, see above, page 672.

The following are the amendments recommended by the committee:

1. Amend resolving clause 1, item 1, after "chairman" by striking out the comma and "the vice presidents of the convention, and 6" and inserting "and 14"; so the language will then read:

> 1. To create a constitutional convention post adjournment commission, consisting of the president of the convention as the chairman and 14 additional convention delegates, to be appointed by the president of the convention. . . .

2. Amend resolving clause 1, item 2, after "from the" by striking out "appropriation heretofore" and inserting "appropriations"; so that it will read:

> 2. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to expend any balance remaining at the time of the adjournment of the convention from the appropriations granted the convention to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated.

3. Amend resolving clause 1, item 3, after "determined by the commission" by striking out "so as to insure a fair and reasonable return for the property disposed of" and inserting "to insure reasonable disposition of the property"; so that it will read:

> 3. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to dispose of property acquired by the convention in such manner as may be determined by the commission to insure reasonable disposition of the property and to permit the commission to use the funds thus received to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated.

4. Amend resolving clause 2, after "representatives" by inserting "and all other members of the legislature"; so that the last resolving clause would then read:

> Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives and all other members of the legislature.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendments. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, a few brief words about the resolution itself and then perhaps a few comments on the amendments. As you know, it is contemplated that this convention will adjourn finally on or about March 31 of this year. Thereafter the convention will have, however, certain continuing responsibilities enumerated in paragraphs "a" through "e" of the "whereas" clause of the resolution. None of us will have, however, continuing delegate status. We will be private citizens. Therefore, there exists some questions as to the authority of the convention prior to its adjournment to make adequate provision for the carrying out by its own delegate personnel of these responsibilities. For this reason — after considerable consultation with our own research staff — the committee on administration, in consultation with the rules committee and the committee on public information, has concluded that the legislature should be requested to make a specific grant of authority to the convention to enable it to carry out these responsibilities and, in addition, to enable the convention to expend any unexpended balance of our current appropriation in carrying out these responsibilities.

The method suggested by the resolution, the appointment of a constitutional convention post adjournment commission consisting of delegates and the granting to them of authority to carry out these responsibilities, including the disposition of property and to spend such portion of the appropriation as it may be necessary for that purpose is all quite self explanatory.

Last week the president of the convention and the committee designated by him met with leaders of both houses of the legislature and discussed this method of granting to the convention the necessary authority to carry out its work after adjournment and the members of the legislature were most cooperative and urged that the convention adopt a resolution, making specific recommendations as to the kind of authority we thought we would require, and that this resolution should then be presented to the legislature and the legislature would then introduce appropriate legislation implementing the resolution.

A few comments on the amendments. The first one deals with the size and composition of the committee. Fifteen seemed to be a sensible size in order to preserve our ordinary 2 to 1 ratio and to give adequate representation from throughout the membership of the delegation. The amendment with respect to the appropriation reflects the fact that there are 2 appropriations: one, a line item appropriation for salaries and the other a line item appropriation for operations; and we want to be sure that the resolution adequately covers both of those appropriations. The amendment dealing with the disposition of property, I think is self explanatory as is the amendment dealing with circulation of the resolution to all of the members of the legislature.

This resolution was introduced first by Dr. DeVries as chairman of the committee on administration. It has the unanimous recommendation of his committee. His committee proposed the 4 amendments which are now before us.

The committee on rules and resolutions considered the resolution and the amendments last night and the resolution and the amendments have its unanimous recommendation.

I would move the adoption of the amendments, Mr. President, and would suggest that if the delegates have any questions, both Dr. DeVries and myself are available to respond.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendments. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I'm sorry. My question is about the body of the resolution. I will withhold it until the amendments have been acted upon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendments. Any discussion? If not, all in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendments are adopted.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, there is one point on second reading that has concerned me and I would like to ask of the chairman of the committee or Mr. DeVries — perhaps they can answer it — on page 2 we refer to "any balance" and then on page 1, item "b", we talk about providing for dissemination of information. Could we have a situation where if, of the $2 million appropriated by the legislature for this convention, only $1,600,000 were used up to our sine die adjournment, leaving $400,000, and then if $100,000 were used for making the address to the people, for printing the proceedings and journals, that that might leave a sum in the neighborhood of $300,000 for the dissemination of information about and explanation of the proposed constitution?

The reason I raise this is that I think that we need to be very careful to see that we carry out our constitutional obligations to apprise the people of what our proposed new document is, that our journals and proceedings are printed, are readily available to libraries and others that are interested in seeing them, that there are proceedings and films available, but still not leave the possibility that there would be a large sum that could be construed as just our using it to put forth one side of what we do rather than do it in an educational viewpoint.

I realize it is always difficult to draw a line between an informational educational job and an advertising job, but I know in discussion this question has come up and I would like a clarification for the benefit of the delegates.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would prefer that Dr. DeVries respond with respect to the anticipated available funds and the possible manner of their expenditure. I think it is highly unlikely that there would be a sum of the size Mr. Downs mentions available within our current appropriation, even assuming, as we do, our adjournment on March 31 and the availability, therefore, of a substantial amount not necessarily for salaries. However, I would also point out that in the first place, the expenditure of this sum is to be entrusted to a committee of this convention which would presumably use it wisely, and second, that item 4 of the resolution specifies that moneys not expended or obligated would revert to the general fund. So there is no contemplation that simply because it is available it must be spent. I would defer to Dr. DeVries for the purpose of discussing detailed figures, however.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, fellow delegates and Mr. Downs, this resolution is based upon the premise that the convention adjourns March 31. The committee on administration intends to sponsor, perhaps 3 weeks before adjournment date, some resolutions with specifics on how the money remaining in our appropriation would be spent. The convention would then decide on how this money would be expended.

We need this authority because we have 2 line items in our appropriation. One is for delegates' salaries of $1,080,000. The other is for expenses of $920,000. The department of administration interprets our appropriation this way, we cannot transfer money from the delegates' account to expenses; we can transfer money from the expense account to the delegates'. What we are asking here is that we be given flexibility in this appropriation so that if we adjourn March 31, we can use the money left in the delegate line item for other purposes. But we will spell out, 3 or 4 weeks before the convention adjourns, just how this money would be spent.

I can give you my interpretation on what dissemination of information means. It means just that, dissemination of information about the address to the people. Before this convention can adjourn, it must approve an address to the people, that is, the delegates here must approve that. Then it would seem to me that the only public information function we have at that point is to distribute what is included in that address from the reports that accompany committee proposals that are adopted on this floor. The research department and the committee on administration interprets "address to the people" generically. It doesn't mean to us just a printed document like the one in 1908. It could mean radio tapes or the distribution of the sound motion picture documentary that we are producing, as well as other things. But it would be limited to what this convention approved in the address to the people which would be taken from the reports that accompany the committee proposals adopted by the convention. Does that answer your question, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Yes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution, as amended.

The secretary has an amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

Amend the resolving clause, item 1, after "To create a" by inserting "bipartisan"; so the language will read, "1. To create a bipartisan constitutional convention post adjournment commission. . . ."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Ford. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Speaking for the committee on rules and resolutions, I am sure we have no objection to that amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Speaking on behalf of the committee on administration, we have no objection to that amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on Mr. Ford's amendment. Any further remarks? If not, all in favor, please say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

The question is now on the resolution as amended. Those in favor, please say aye. Opposed, no.

The resolution, as amended, is adopted.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, because this resolution is to be transmitted to the legislature, on behalf of the convention, I would move at this time that the sponsorship of the resolution be changed to read, "President Nisbet, on behalf of the constitutional convention, offers the following resolution:"

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. All in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Following is Resolution 65 as amended and adopted by the convention:

President Nisbet, on behalf of the entire membership of the convention, offered the following resolution:

Resolution 65.

A resolution of the constitutional convention requesting action by the legislature pertaining to the orderly completion of convention business in the carrying out of the convention's obligations after adjournment.

Whereas, The constitutional convention has constitutional and statutory obligations after it adjourns to do the following things:

a. Carry out the convention's constitutional obligations to provide "for the printing and distribution of its documents, journals, and proceedings";

b. Provide for the dissemination of information about, and an explanation of, the proposed constitution to the people of the state (address to the people);

c. Make all necessary arrangements and perform all necessary duties in order to restore the civic center in accordance with the terms of the lease by which it is occupied;

d. Take such other steps as may be necessary and desirable to bring the "business of the convention" to orderly completion and preserve its records, documents and papers; and

e. Employ staff to perform the tasks and obligations herein described and compensate such staff and convention delegates designated by convention resolution to perform the tasks herein set out; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the convention request the legislature to enact legislation:

1. To create a bipartisan constitutional convention post adjournment commission, consisting of the president of the convention as the chairman and 14 additional convention delegates, to be appointed by the president of the convention; that the commission be authorized by law to carry out tasks and obligations stated above after the convention adjourns; that the life of the commission expire on the date of the election on the proposed constitution;

2. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to expend any balance remaining at the time of the adjournment of the convention from the appropriations granted the convention to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated;

3. To permit the constitutional convention post adjournment commission to dispose of property acquired by the convention in such manner as may be determined by the commission to insure reasonable disposition of the property and to permit the commission to use the funds thus received to carry out the tasks and obligations heretofore stated; and

4. To provide that moneys not expended or obligated at the time of the termination of the life of the constitutional convention post adjournment commission revert to the general fund of the state; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives and all other members of the legislature.

SECRETARY CHASE: That concludes the reports of standing committees.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Davis, Erickson, J. A. Hannah and Wanger move that the president, on behalf of the convention, be requested to extend the condolences of the convention to the family of Representative Ralph H. Young of the second Ingham county district, who passed away this morning.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion. Those in favor, please rise.

We will have 15 seconds of silence.

[Whereupon, the delegates stood in silent tribute for 15 seconds.]

The motion is approved and condolences will be forwarded.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, in order that the several committees can complete their work in a most orderly fashion, I would move at this time that we pass the order of general orders of the day for the balance of the week. In support of the motion, I would simply elaborate to this extent: that it is contemplated that on Monday evening next we would return to the order of general orders and, of course, the first order of business would be the civil service proposal which we had under debate at the conclusion of general orders last Friday. It is my understanding that the committee on executive branch has no objection to proceeding in this fashion.

I would urge further that, assuming the convention adopts this motion, it would be of considerable importance that the committees adhere carefully to the regular schedule of committee work so that no committee would have difficulty in obtaining a quorum. There has been in recent weeks considerable deviation from the prescribed committee schedule, which has been perhaps necessary. However, as we approach this important decisional phase, I think it is important that as little conflict in meeting times as possible be incurred. Therefore, I would certainly urge all committee chairmen to schedule the meetings of their committees in accordance with the regularly prescribed schedule.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I'd like to ask Mr. Van Dusen if he wouldn't amend his motion to permit general orders to be conducted each day for one hour so that we may provide the committee on style and drafting with a continuous supply of proposals in order that they may have enough before them so that eventually we won't get into an awful jam here during the last 2 or 3 weeks of the convention. I don't mean to set an hour or just 60 minutes, but there are some proposals here that are noncontroversial — (laughter) — and maintain this constant flow. Now, the eyes of the state are on us and again they'll say we met for 10 minutes or 15 minutes and we're back in again. Let's continue the cycle and keep the wheels turning.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President and Mr. Baginski, the suggestion which you now advance, in my personal judgment, would be an inefficient use of our time — and I don't make that statement critically. But we have seen time and time again general orders begin on supposedly noncontroversial matter, debate would get nicely going, and then it became necessary for the committee to rise. Now, I think that this stop and go driving in the committee of the whole consumes an awful lot more energy than would be justified by the production of the committee and I think the time could be far better devoted to committee work during this week. If there are noncontroversial proposals to which you allude, I am confident that we will be able to clear enough of them on general orders next Monday night to keep style and drafting's hopper full all next week.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. President, Mr. Van Dusen, I just want to call to your attention that it's 2:30. If we were on general orders until 3:30, then from 3:30 to 5:00 would be an ideal time for committee meetings. Two hours is enough for committee meetings.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, Mr. Baginski, I think I've really said all I can say on this point. I continue respectfully to disagree with my distinguished colleague, Mr. Baginski, and would urge your favorable vote on the motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. President, I too fail to see what we are going to accomplish by suspending general orders because all it's going to do is drive the committees at an unreasonable pace and there are feelings and tensions, they're tired, and we don't do as good a job — and in the meantime we're just creating a backlog and we already have plenty of work to do. So the committees could complete their task, and not necessarily by a deadline, but without inconveniencing the closing time for the convention. I can't see the necessity of this.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would simply like to suggest to the mover and to anyone else who has in mind to make motions — and I don't wish to make one — the possibility that perhaps we could do something of the type Mr. Baginski suggested if there were a certain amount of, let's say, advance guidance by the president. For example, it might be that the president could pick out exclusion reports and some other things that are not long in themselves — that are short, and no language is to be added at all, only language to be taken out — and possibly some other things, where all we want to do is keep the same language in the constitution. Possibly by selecting a few such things we could make use of the next hour each day. It wouldn't have any harmful effect on the committees and maybe everybody can be satisfied. I don't suggest that as a motion but simply if anyone cares to use that technique, we would be able to do it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Any further discussion? Those in favor, please say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

MR. MADAR: Division.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is the demand seconded? Those in favor of the motion by Mr. Van Dusen will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the tally will be taken.

On the motion of Mr. Van Dusen, the yeas are 73; and the nays are 58.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion prevails.

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The legislative powers committee will meet at 10:30 tomorrow morning in committee room H. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on legislative organization will meet in room D this afternoon immediately following the session. John Hannah, chairman.

The subcommittee on higher education will meet Wednesday morning at 9:00 o'clock in room J. Anyone wishing to appear before the committee is invited to do so. Roscoe Bonisteel, chairman.

The remaining announcements are found on the composite calendar.

For the information of all the delegates, the W-2 forms were mailed yesterday to the home address of each delegate by the department of administration.

We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Haskill asks to be excused from tomorrow's session to attend a funeral; Mr. Donald Doty wishes to be excused from tomorrow's session; and Mr. Shanahan asks to be excused from Thursday's session because of 2 speaking engagements.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all the items on the secretary's desk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The president appoints the following special committee to meet with the legislature as has been outlined today: Walter DeVries, Martin Baginski, Tom Downs, Edward Hutchinson, Richard Van Dusen and Ink White. Without objection, they are approved.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, for fear that some of the members of the legislative powers committee can't read, we're meeting immediately following adjournment here and coffee is served.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Follo.

MR. FOLLO: Mr. President, I move that the convention adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. All those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow.

[Whereupon, at 2:35 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m. Wednesday, January 24, 1962.]

SIXTY-FOURTH DAY

Wednesday, January 24, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this afternoon will be given by Judge Benjamin Stanczyk of the common pleas court of Detroit. Judge Stanczyk. Will you please rise.

JUDGE STANCZYK: Let us pray. We praise Thee, O Lord our God, for the mercies and blessings bestowed upon this generous and fruitful country, the United States of America; for the wisdom, forbearance and prudence imparted to our president, our governor and our officials in their work; for peace, prosperity and good will among men.

We give Thee thanks for preserving our nation, a nation in which freedoms and opportunities are available to all its members, regardless of color, creed or station in life.

Today, when fear and doubt walk hand in hand with material progress, we need more than ever to have trust in Thy divine providence, and faith in Thy guiding hand.

And we pray Thee, our God, that the members of this august body, Thy servants selected to serve the Michigan constitutional convention, be given light to see and power to do their tasks according to Thy will. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Judge Stanczyk.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following request for leave: Mr. Knirk, from today's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Knirk is excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Donald Doty, Haskill, Knirk, Nord and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Messrs. Hodges and Krolikowski.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

The president would like to recognize one of our delegates, Roscoe Bonisteel. Mr. Bonisteel is also president of the Michigan historical society. Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, you have on your desk a copy of a recently published book, Alex J. Groesbeck—Portrait of a Public Man, a biography of former Governor Alex J. Groesbeck, written by Mr. Frank B. Woodford, chief editorial writer for the Detroit Free Press. This biography is being presented to you by the historical society of Michigan, through the courtesy of the Michigan Life Insurance Company. Governor Groesbeck was the first president of the company and he remained in that office until his death. This is presented in his memory as a great public servant.

I am happy to make the presentation for 2 reasons: one, the author, Mr. Woodford, has contributed greatly to the perpetuation of historical events in Michigan history through his publications; The Last Jeffersonian, A Biography of Louis Cass, Father Gabriel Richard, Frontier Ambassador, Mr. Jefferson's Disciples, A Biography of Augustus D. Woodward, Father Abrams' Children, a story of Michigan men in the civil war, and now the biography of Governor Groesbeck. These books cover the period from the territorial days of Michigan until almost now. All these books are well written and make excellent reading. My second reason for being pleased in making this presentation is that the book is a biography of a dedicated man, Alex J. Groesbeck. The governor was dedicated to his profession and his government. As we talk about administrative boards, we can think of him because he set them up. When we discuss civil service, we can recall his speeches in 1934 when he advocated it for Michigan. And in 1941, he was appointed by Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner to the civil service commission and he became the chairman in 1943. He sponsored our highway system and built the first real highways in Michigan. You can read all about it in this biography, and much more.

We have heard here in committees some very distinguished former governors of Michigan. Alex J. Groesbeck is not here to speak to us but we can, through this biography we have before us today, learn something of his ideas about government, of his greatness and of his love for Michigan. I believe that the spirit of Governor Groesbeck is in the hearts of the men and women in this convention hall, and those here who knew him in his lifetime will agree that his public service was objective, progressive, constructive, selfless and completely loyal to the tasks before him. And I am sure if he could testify in person he would say to you and to me, "God speed you in your task for the good of the state of Michigan." (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Bonisteel.

W. Richards requests leave from the session of Friday to attend a board of education meeting in Negaunee; Messrs. Pellow, Perlich, Perras and Sablich request leave from Friday's session; Mr. Dade requests excuse from the session of Friday to attend a meeting of the administrative board of the Wayne county training school, of which he is chairman; and Mr. Douglas requests leave of absence from the session of tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, those who have requested leave of absence will be excused from tomorrow's session or as they have requested.

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all the items on the secretary's desk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: May I mention to our guests in the gallery that our meeting is short today because of the necessity of our convention to work in committees. You are welcome to attend any of our committee meetings. If you will talk to our guides or any one of our pages, they will tell you where the committee meetings are held and what committees will be meeting. We hope you will avail yourselves of the opportunity to attend.

Mr. Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. President, I move that we do now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 2:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Thursday, January 25, 1962.]

SIXTY-FIFTH DAY

Thursday, January 25, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by Father William J. Koenigsknecht of the St. Therese church of Lansing.

FATHER KOENIGSKNECHT: In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Amen.

Direct, we beseech Thee, O Lord, our actions by Thy inspiration, and further them with Thy continual help; that every prayer and work of ours may always begin from Thee, and through Thee be brought to an end.

Assist us with Thy heavenly grace, that we may be able to fulfill our most sacred duty and stewardship. Teach us both what to give and what to withhold; when to reprove and when to forbear; make us considerate and watchful; and deliver us equally from the weakness of indulgence, and the excess of severity; grant that, both by word and example, we may be careful to lead in the ways of wisdom and true piety.

In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Messrs. J. B. Richards and Habermehl, from today's session; and Mr. McCauley, from today's session as well as Friday and possibly Monday, due to a death in his immediate family.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Balcer, Douglas, Habermehl, McCauley, J. B. Richards, Shackleton, Shanahan and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. Hodges.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Hodges is excused.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no special orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The miscellaneous provisions and schedule committee will meet immediately after the session next Tuesday, January 30, and will continue in session until all the committee reports are completed. Claud Erickson, chairman.

The subcommittee on eminent domain will meet in room G Monday after the general session. Paul Mahinske, subcommittee chairman.

There will be a meeting of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections tomorrow, Friday morning, at 9:00 a.m. James K. Pollock, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:00 a.m. and tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock p.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on legislative organization will meet in room D tomorrow, Friday, at 8:30 a.m. John Hannah, chairman.

The committee on education will meet in room J at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow, Friday, also in the afternoon after the session, if necessary. Alvin Bentley, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet tomorrow, Friday, immediately after the session in room B. Robert Danhof, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 1, will meet in room H today immediately after the session. Richard Kuhn, chairman of the subcommittee.

The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H Friday, tomorrow, at 8:30 a.m. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock or one hour after the session, in room A.

The committee on local government will meet Monday in room A at 1:00 o'clock p.m.

The secretary has been requested by the committee on administration to make the following announcement: a review of the long distance calls made by delegates indicates that some delegates apparently are not aware that the state has direct trunklines to Detroit. These trunklines can be used by delegates at no cost to the convention. To use the trunklines, all that is necessary is to place the call through the convention switchboard operator and notify her that it is a Detroit call.

That is all of the committee meeting announcements, Mr. President.

We have the following requests for leaves of absence: Mr. Snyder wishes to be excused from the session of next Monday; Mr. Suzore wishes to be excused from next Monday's session; Mr. Walker wishes to be excused from the session of tomorrow; and Mr. Nisbet wishes to be excused from the session of tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests for leave will be granted. Hearing none, they are granted.

Again today I would like to mention to our guests in the balcony that due to the necessity of committee work because committee reports are due next week, our sessions this week and part of next week are necessarily short. You are very welcome, however, to attend any of the committee meetings that are being held immediately after the session. And if you will consult the bulletin board or the pages, they will show you where these meetings are being held and you are very welcome to be there.

Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until tomorrow at 10:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 2:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 10:00 o'clock a.m., Friday, January 26, 1962.]

SIXTY-SIXTH DAY

Friday, January 26, 1962, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The convention will please come to order.

The invocation will be given by the Reverend James P. Martin of the First Presbyterian Church, Jackson, who is the Pastor of Delegate Karn.

REVEREND MARTIN: Almighty and eternal God, our Father, we thank Thee for Thy power, for Thy majesty, for Thy wisdom. We beseech Thee now that Thou wilt come in a very special way upon this convention. Grant to them wisdom and guidance. May they have not only a vision for this day but a vision for the days to come that we may rely heavily upon Thee and seek our wisdom in Thee.

We are grateful, our Father, for the freedoms which we enjoy and pray that we may so live now and so act that these freedoms may be ours forever and may be passed on to our children and our children's children. So grant Thy spirit ever in this place and guide them in their deliberations and their work as we pray through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Thank you, Reverend Martin.

We will now have the roll call. All those present, vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Miss Hart wishes to be excused from this morning's session to attend a meeting of the mental health commission; and Mr. Leppien wishes to be excused due to a prior engagement in Saginaw.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, the requests are granted.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, Delegate Hodges was supposed to be excused. He is ill. He is sick in bed and he has been for about 2 or 3 days now. I just wanted the record to show that he is ill and at home in bed, so that he is excused because of illness, not just ordinary being absent.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, the secretary will have the record show that the delegate is ill.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mr. Dade, Miss Hart, Messrs. Hodges, Leppien, McCauley, Nisbet, L. W. Richards, Shackleton, Thomson and Walker.

Absent without leave: None.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no standing committee reports on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. White, DeVries and Bonisteel offer:

Resolution 67, A resolution to commemorate the one hundred twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of Michigan into the union.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, because of the nature of this resolution and because it should probably be acted upon today, I move to suspend the rules for the purpose of its immediate consideration.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: There has been a motion to suspend the rules for the purpose of consideration of this resolution. Are there any objections? Hearing none, the rules will be suspended for the purpose of considering this resolution.

The secretary will read the resolution.

SECRETARY CHASE: Resolution 67, a resolution to commemorate the one hundred twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of Michigan into the union.

Whereas, This day, January 26, 1962, marks the one hundred twenty-fifth anniversary of Michigan's statehood; and

Whereas, On January 26, 1837, the act of congress declaring the state of Michigan "to be one of the United States of America, and admitted into the union on an equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatever," was given final approval, paving the way for its growth and prosperity; now therefore be it

Resolved, That this constitutional convention pay tribute to the wisdom and foresight of our predecessors who a century and a quarter ago devised the blueprint which guided the state of Michigan through its pioneer struggles to become a national leader among the states of the nation.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Is there any discussion? All those in favor, signify by saying aye. Those opposed, by no.

The resolution is adopted.

Any other motions and resolutions?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only resolution on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers will meet in room H today immediately after the session and Monday, January 29, at 4:00 o'clock p.m. in room H. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on education will meet in room J 15 minutes after adjournment of today's session. It will also meet in room J at 3:00 o'clock p.m. Monday afternoon. Alvin M. Bentley, chairman.

The committee on style and drafting will meet in committee room K, January 29, at 4:00 o'clock p.m., to consider pending committee proposals before the committee which include 16, 23 and 15, the bill of rights. William B. Cudlip, chairman.

The remaining committee meeting announcements appear on the composite calendar.

I have the following requests for excuse from the session: Mr. Nisbet requests to be excused from the sessions of Monday and Tuesday of next week due to a company directors' meeting and a speaking engagement on the convention in Benton Harbor; and Mr. Woolfenden asks to be excused from the sessions of January 29, 30 and 31 because of professional commitments in Detroit and Washington, D. C., which were made prior to the convening of the convention.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Without objection, the requests will be granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the announcements and requests, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Thank you. I would like to announce to the visitors of the convention that we are certainly very pleased to have you with us. We are particularly pleased with the young people because the constitution we are preparing will serve your lives longer than it will ours. We are not having what is called the committee of the whole or discussions on proposals this week because our committees have been working overtime to get the reports ready for the full convention. However, there will be committee meetings after the session. These are open to the public and you are very welcome to attend. You can check with the guides or on the bulletin board for the time and place of the meetings and we shall certainly be pleased to have you attend those meetings that are held today or next week or any other time, for that matter.

Mr. Greene.

MR. GREENE: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: All those in favor, signify by saying aye. Those opposed, by nay.

The ayes have it and the convention is adjourned until Monday at 8:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 10:10 o'clock a.m., the convention adjourned until 8:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, January 29, 1962.]

SIXTY-SEVENTH DAY

Monday, January 29, 1962, 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The convention will come to order.

The invocation this evening will be offered by Delegate Charles Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Our Father, who art the origin of all that is good and fair and true, unto Thee we lift up our souls. Let Thy spirit enter our hearts. We pray we may not separate ourselves from Thee through selfish thoughts and deeds. Aid us in so directing our lives that we do not deprecate or injure others. Help us to understand that we are all children of Thine; may we govern ourselves accordingly. May we judge not or overlook the beam in our own eye before looking for the mote in our brother's eye. May Thy thoughts be our thoughts. May Thy spirit fill us so that others through us may see Thee.

Bless those who direct the affairs of our nation; may they include Thee in their deliberations so that wisdom may be theirs. Bless our state. Accept our gratitude for the blessings Thou hast showered upon us.

We pray that the work of this convention may meet Thy approval and be a blessing to the citizens of this state. Forgive our mistakes, grant us wisdom and bless our deliberations. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Will all those present vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Mr. Lawrence, from tonight's session; Mr. Walker has the flu and would like to be excused from the sessions of this evening and tomorrow.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Lawrence, Nisbet, Suzore, Thomson and Walker.

Absent without leave: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, reports back to the convention Exclusion Report 2001, A report recommending the exclusion of article VI, section 14; and Exclusion Report 2002, A report recommending the exclusion of article VI, section 15; with the recommendation that they be referred to the committee on executive branch.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

For Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002, see above, page 380.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee on executive branch.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Committee Proposal 44, A proposal pertaining to the schedule. Amends sections 1 and 8 of the schedule and adds 2 sections; with the recommendation that it pass.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 44 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 846.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all of the standing committee reports, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Van Dusen offers Resolution 68, A resolution establishing the time of daily sessions.

Following is Resolution 68 as offered:

Resolved, That beginning February 1 the convention shall meet at 2:00 o'clock p.m. on Monday, and at 9:00 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, such schedule to continue until changed by the convention.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, just one comment, first, about this resolution. As you know, on Wednesday of this week we will complete the reporting by committees and thereafter it will not be necessary for the committees to meet on their regular schedules. We will have, however, beginning on Thursday of this week, a very full calendar on general orders which we must complete by February 21. Accordingly, the resolution which has just been offered recommends a change in the time of our daily general convention sessions.

It is proposed that our sessions on Thursday and Friday of this week and Thursday and Friday thereafter until further notice be held at 9:00 o'clock in the morning, the plan being to meet beginning at 9:00 and through the morning, recessing for lunch and reconvening in the afternoon and meeting all afternoon. The full schedule which is proposed by this resolution on a weekly basis contemplates meeting at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon on Mondays so that we can have an afternoon session and an evening session on Mondays, and at 9:00 o'clock in the morning on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays so that we can devote the full day to debate in committee of the whole on each of those weekdays.

I do not ask for any action on the resolution at this time because it has been referred to the committee on rules and resolutions. It will be before you shortly, I hope, and I thought perhaps in planning your own schedules this advance notice might be helpful.

Second, Mr. President, I move at this time that the order of general orders be passed on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, so that the committees can complete their work.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Those in favor say aye; opposed.

The motion prevails.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Now, Mr. President, I have one further matter which may be appropriate at this particular point. As you may recall, President Nisbet some time ago requested that I give some thought to the expediting of our work in committee of the whole and, as we approach on Thursday of this week a time when we will be in almost continuous session of the committee of the whole, perhaps these observations may be helpful to us in completing our work. Most of them have been discussed with the committee on rules and resolutions and have the concurrence of that committee.

First, I think it would be desirable for all of us to make better use of our calendars than we have been up to now. As you know, each of us has on our desk a calendar indicating the order of business in committee of the whole, and it will let us know for many days to come the matters which will be under discussion, the points in the journal at which proposals and reports can be found, and so forth.

Now, much of our problem in expeditiously and efficiently conducting the work of the committee of the whole has resulted, in my judgment, from a lack of homework on the part of all of us, generally. If we will each make it a point to study the committee proposals well in advance, study the committee reports well in advance, we will be better prepared to undertake consideration of those proposals in committee of the whole.

Where that study indicates to any delegate the desirability of the presentation of an amendment to that committee proposal, let me suggest this: it would be desirable if after preparing an amendment you took it to the chairman of the substantive committee reporting the proposal, discussed it with him or with the member of the committee to whom he may refer you, so that you will have the benefit of the thinking of the committee with respect to that proposal, and you may find that the amendment which you have proposed was carefully considered in the committee and was rejected for a reason which may seem good and sufficient to you. If your position still appeals to you and you wish to persist in the amendment, then make sure that the amendment is carefully drafted, that the committee chairman knows it is coming, that he has an opportunity to integrate the amendment into the language of the committee proposal, so that we do not get into long arguments about style and language — and consider your amendment with the research and drafting staff, so that we don't get this flurry of amendments drafted in haste and repented at leisure.

Now, another thing which will be very helpful to all of us will be that if you have amendments, you submit them to the secretary, preferably a day in advance of the consideration of that proposal in committee of the whole. If the secretary can then prepare for all of us a list of the proposed amendments with their language, you may find that your amendment is duplicated by amendments proposed by 2 or 3 other delegates and the various proponents of amendments can then consolidate their forces, agree on the particular language which meets with your general approval, and the time which we devote to the consideration of separate amendments will thereby be shortened and the thoughtful attention of all of the delegates can be given to the language which they will have before them in printed form, and they won't be relying on the reading of it by the secretary and hastily scribbled notes on their committee proposals. So much for the area of homework and advance preparation and how it can be helpful to all of us.

Another suggestion to which I think we ought to give careful consideration is confining amendments proposed in committee of the whole to matters of substance. I think that we have frequently found ourselves engaged in a competition among the many of us who are lawyers to see who can develop the most articulate expression, the most artistic expression of a particular thought; and we, therefore, debate style at length, giving substance shorter shrift than it deserves. If, when you have an amendment which is a matter of style and a matter of style only, you can refer it directly to the committee on style and drafting, you will do much to expedite the conduct of the substantive business of the committee of the whole, and I think that your amendment dealing with style will be given careful consideration by the committee on style and drafting.

If we are confronted with a proliferation of amendments dealing only with style, it may become necessary for the rules committee to advance some rule which would put out of order in committee of the whole amendments which deal only with style and they, if offered, would simply be referred along with the committee proposal to the committee on style and drafting.

I think this is an unnecessarily harsh approach. I think the voluntary work of each of us in trying to confine amendments offered in committee of the whole to matters of substance, not of form, would be helpful.

One further suggestion is this: very frequently we have found ourselves debating at length on an amendment — at least nominally on an amendment of the entire subject matter of the proposal. If in seeking recognition you will confine yourselves strictly to the point currently under discussion that, I am sure, will do much for the good will of the chairman of the committee of the whole and will help the entire body in getting its work done.

Just one final point which may prove necessary: if all of these suggestions go unheeded, the committee on rules and resolutions has in its possession a resolution to limit debate, with which it will deal this evening but, quite frankly, that is the least desirable way in which to expedite the business of the committee of the whole. What we want is a full, complete and orderly discussion of matters of substance, and with your cooperation I am sure we will have it. Thank you very much.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Thank you, Mr. Van Dusen.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin offers

Resolution 69, A resolution proposing certain business to be included in the windup of convention affairs by the special windup committee.

Whereas, The constitutional convention has anticipated the necessity for careful and comprehensive windup of the affairs of the convention and of the delegates as they relate to the convention, and has therefore established a committee to jointly assume these responsibilities along with a similar committee from the legislature; now therefore be it

Resolved, That in addition to the plans for disposition of the physical property of the convention, that plans be made by the windup committee and funds set aside to assist handicapped delegates to make the transition from delegate to useful member of society; (laughter) and be it further

Resolved, That there be established a rest home and rehabilitation center for retired con con delegates to provide the following services:

1. Refuge for those who lack the courage to face their constituents with the final document.

2. Medical and nursing care to correct nervous and digestive disorders.

3. Counseling in family relations to assist in restoring personal domestic tranquility.

4. Special training in the art of fast talking to enable ex-delegates to defend themselves when called upon to improve upon the vague resemblance between their campaign promises and the provisions of the final document.

5. Retraining in some new vocation to replace the position or profession which was allowed to deteriorate while serving as a constitutional convention delegate; and be it further

Resolved, That in cases where rehabilitation efforts fail, the casualties should be furnished a pair of dark glasses, a cane, a sign, a tin cup, and a supply of pencils, then assigned a busy corner. The sign should read: "I was a con con delegate." (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair will refer the resolution to the committee on emerging problems. (laughter)

Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: General orders of the day. Delegate DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of certain items on the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Those in favor say aye; opposed.

The motion prevails and Delegate DeVries will preside.

[Whereupon, Mr. DeVries assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The committee will come to order. When the committee last met we were considering Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. The committee had earlier decided to proceed through the committee proposal paragraph by paragraph.

[For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 22, see above, page 658.]

The committee is now considering an amendment offered by Delegate Martin, on behalf of the committee on executive branch. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin's amendment, for the committee, is as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 15, after "commission.", by inserting "Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the delegate from East Grand Rapids, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the sole purpose of this amendment is to make it clear that the usual procedures for appeal of any question with regard to the abolishment or creation of a job, or removals or demotions, appointments or promotions, all are available to any employee who considers himself aggrieved. We wanted to make that perfectly clear simply for clarification purposes.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Any further discussion of the amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "efficiency" by striking out "without" and inserting "with"; so that the language will then read:

The appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency with the approval of the commission.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the reason for this amendment — the main reason that I offered the amendment — is so that the commission will have authority in this area in order to forestall abolishment of positions by subterfuge to effect removal of a state employee for partisan, racial, religious, personal, or other considerations. Review of such matters as this by the civil service commission will restrain all possible abuse without infringement upon traditional executive authority to create or abolish positions for efficiency or other reasons. I offer this very brief statement in support of this amendment, and I hope that the delegates will give consideration to my amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee considered this matter at considerable length. It is opposed to the amendment.

The purpose of the language as now proposed in the committee proposal is to make it clear that the head of a department does have the authority to create or abolish jobs for reasons of economy or administrative efficiency. This is the position taken by Judge Dethmers in the Kunzig case, which was reviewed for you by Mr. Durst at some length. It is the feeling of the committee that the head of an administrative agency must have authority to determine how many employees he shall have or how few, how those functions shall be grouped, and what jobs are needed and what jobs are not needed. This, of course, has nothing to do with the abolishment of jobs for racial, religious, or reasons of that type, but it does give authority to create or abolish jobs if the reason is solely one of greater efficiency or greater economy, and that is the minimum that any administrative agency can expect to have and still function properly.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't wish to belabor this issue too long. All that my amendment does is allow for a review by the civil service commission. It is my understanding that there has been no problem in the past nor is there a problem now in the abolishment or creation of positions for efficiency purposes. I submit, however, that the language that has been proposed by the committee will then make it possible for an appointing authority to abolish or create positions at will without a review by anyone, other than the additional amendment which the chairman of our committee explained to me, which will give him a right to appeal through the courts.

Again, I think that the amendment that I offer is reasonable and I think that it is in order and I think it is deserving of consideration by this committee. I do not want to see us get in a situation where positions can be abolished for personal reasons in order to get rid of an individual that might be undesirable for personal reasons and not because of efficiency. I submit that the amendment that I offer, which merely changes one word, would not prohibit the abolishment of a position for efficiency purposes; it only provides for a review by the civil service commission. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to support the amendment offered by Mr. Marshall. I do not believe that any of us has any serious reservation or question as to the intent of the committee. The language is quite clear and the explanation of the chairman is quite clear.

However, I would like to point out to the delegates that such language which appears to be crystal clear to us at times of no emotion, of no upheaval, oftentimes becomes misunderstood and does create a problem. I believe we have all been in situations in which we had language of a general nature of this sort that, because of circumstances, can be interpreted in other manners than which it is presented. I feel that the intent of the civil service program would be seriously undermined if we did permit a move of this sort to erode the protection it does give the employees. I seriously urge the delegates to consider this: that there may be times when the emotions may rise to the point that people may have the opportunity to exercise a privilege which certainly we as delegates do not wish to grant.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Martin a question. Assuming an employee were supposedly relieved on the basis of efficiency, I assume if he felt that it was for partisan reasons, he would have the right of appeal. Upon whom would the burden of proof be?

MR. MARTIN: Well, the burden of studying the matter, of course, if he appealed, would be upon the commission. The burden is not on the commission; the matter of the decision is with the commission and ultimately, of course, if necessary, with the courts. This is true no matter whether you take the committee's language or the language that Mr. Marshall proposes.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Well, actually, then, the commission would have a right to intervene in the event it felt that another determination should be made.

MR. MARTIN: That is right.

MR. YEAGER: Thank you.

MR. MARTIN: If the employee considers himself aggrieved, he immediately takes his matter through the usual grievance procedures and that's all that's involved.

I sat down with Mr. Seaman, one of the members of the commission, who is an attorney, and reviewed this matter with him. He suggested an amendment which Mr. Tubbs, I believe, has on the secretary's desk, which makes it doubly clear that this involves only reasons of administrative efficiency or economy, and that amendment is agreeable to the committee, I am sure, but we wanted to be sure that we were not doing something which would cause the commission difficulty in this matter, and for that reason we consulted with Mr. Seaman and we're satisfied that he's satisfied.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, having had considerable experience with grievances over a long period of years, it has been my practice to try to eliminate those things that bring about grievances, in order that we don't have quite so many grievances. Now, what the chairman of our committee says is true: the employee has a right of appeal. There is a procedure that he goes through. It places all the burden, however, upon the employee.

All that my amendment does is give a review of the matter by the commission. It in no way prohibits the abolition of positions for efficiency reasons, nor is it intended to. It is only intended to provide a review by the commission. Let them determine whether or not it is for efficiency reasons or for other reasons, thereby avoiding the grievances or the person being aggrieved — as the chairman stated — having to follow a long set of procedures. That is the intent of the amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Detroit, Vice President Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, it may be that Mr. Martin is satisfied and it may be that a member of the civil service commission is satisfied, but I am not sure that the employees who would operate under this provision would be satisfied.

I would like to ask the chairman of the committee, where he has the language:

> Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures, how long it would take the unemployed civil servant to get those rights exercised.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Whatever the usual procedure is and whatever the usual length of time.

What Mr. Marshall is contending for, however, and what Mr. Downs is contending for is that the commission should have the power to determine whether all the administrative agencies in the state have the right to decrease or increase their employees or make changes which are for economy and efficiency purposes, and this we think the commission should not have. The proposal, the committee language, is to establish that fact clearly.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, through the Chair, could I ask what the term "usual procedures" means. Does it mean a week, a month, 6 months or a year?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Does the gentleman care to answer?

MR. MARTIN: I don't know the precise length of time. The commission has established its rules and regulations for bringing these matters to its attention and for getting them decided.

MR. DOWNS: This means not only the commission but also the courts. I wonder if the chairman of the committee would acquiesce to any time limit under which the employee would have to wait to get his rights determined.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin?

MR. MARTIN: I don't think the committee considered the question of a time limit, Mr. Downs. The position of the committee was that on reasons of economy or efficiency this was not a determination for the civil service commission because this was an administrative determination which should be made by the head of the administrative agency and not by the civil service commission whose job is to determine the qualifications of employees and, of course, to prevent any discrimination on the basis of racial, religious or partisan reasons and not to get into the business of determining whether an agency needs more employees or less employees.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I think, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, what we are dealing with here is a very important matter in the operation of government and the rights of individuals, and that is the change of the word from "without" to "with." It determines the whole concept of the burden of proof. Under the language that the committee has, it says that the agency can eliminate the job without the approval of the commission. Then, after the employee is summarily out of the position, he then has the debatable right of going to the commission for redress and, as the chairman of the committee — and I believe I am not putting words in his mouth — stated that he did not know what that concept of "usual" time meant, it means that the individual — the individual who is out of his position — has to, without a paycheck, try to fight to get back into the system; whereas, the recommendation of Delegate Marshall says that the agency must go to the commission, get the justification and then, getting that, the position can be eliminated.

It is a question, really, of the individual being forced to fight city hall or having civil service be in a position to approve the agency's recommendation but make the review before the position is eliminated. And I say that in our modern society when we are so concerned about an over extension of the powers of control of the state, we have here a recommendation that would pit the individual who was out of his position against the whole state system of employment. That is not even a David and Goliath battle.

I think the recommendation of Delegate Marshall is that the agency has the right, for purposes of efficiency, to eliminate, change and transfer positions, but the only requisite is that there be a prior approval by the commission. Then such action could be taken. I think from the important concept of the burden of proof, this simply means that if we adopt the Marshall amendment the agency would need to justify this to the commission rather than have the individual without a paycheck try to fight to get his position back. I urge the adoption of the Marshall amendment.

The only case apparently, that has been mentioned in dispute was the Kunzig one of many years back. I would not like to see us penalize the prerogatives of employees for the next 50 years because of debating the interpretation of the Kunzig case of many years ago. I believe that the present operation has been sound. I see no reason for this change and I hope the committee will support the Marshall amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The lady from Detroit, Delegate Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin has said that Mr. Seaman, a member of the civil service commission, is in accord with this provision. I had a call this morning from Miss Sarah Robinson, who has been a member of this commission for some 10 years and is now chairman of the commission for the second or third time. She spent about 45 minutes this morning talking with me about this provision, and she is extremely fearful of its consequences. I think the committee should know that the commission is not united in its estimate of the effects of this particular proposal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I would only add that if there is a real question of discrimination and the employee is concerned to prevent it, he can get a temporary injunction within a matter of a couple of hours; so this is not a matter that takes days and months. A dismissal can be stopped by way of court action in no time at all, if it's necessary. Ordinarily it would not be necessary; but he can handle it that way, if it's necessary.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Marshall amendment. The delegate from Detroit, Delegate Norris.

MR. NORRIS: I should like to address a question, through the Chair, to the committee chairman. The amendment which we passed indicated that:

> Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures.

Now when there is, then, the fact of an abolition, this particular amendment we passed creates a right of appeal to the commission, but if the commission itself does not have any authority to approve this matter of abolition for reasons of administrative efficiency, then, actually, the appeal is without any basis or any point. Do I understand that correctly?

MR. MARTIN: The language is broad because it was thought that the employee might consider that the abolition had been made for racial, partisan or religious reasons and, therefore, would want to take advantage of his rights in that regard.

MR. NORRIS: Then the question of the appeal would only have to be — in order to be based on something appealable — on the reasons of partisanship or race or religion, or things of that kind, and not on the basis of the abolition.

MR. MARTIN: Well, if the commission felt that it did not have the authority to decide the appeal, it would, of course, then pass the matter on to the courts.

MR. NORRIS: But then the matter of the appealability, based upon reasons other than the ones particularized, would be without any point. There would not be any purport to it.

MR. MARTIN: He is free to go wherever is most necessary. I say we made the language broad because of the possibility that there might be questions of racial or religious discrimination, in which case he would deal directly with the commission. We felt if there were questions with regard to administrative efficiency, he might decide to go direct to the courts.

MR. NORRIS: Of course, there is a question of fact as to whether or not the efficiency is mixed up with the other matters. There could be that question?

MR. MARTIN: There could be that question, yes.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Sterrett.

MR STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, the committee has considered this very carefully and, as a member of the committee, I agree with our chairman. Mr. Martin, our chairman, has said that the commission does have something to say about the matter of efficiency. Mr. Marshall has agreed with our committee chairman. Mr. Downs doubts our committee chairman in the "ordinary process." I would like to ask Mr. Downs if he knows what the ordinary process is. This commission is divided as far as Miss Hart is concerned. The commission is divided in their ideas and this, therefore, should be another good reason for voting in favor of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Did you address a question to Vice President Downs, Mr. Sterrett?

MR. STERRETT: I made statements and the only question was to Vice President Downs, yes.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: As I understand, the question was whether I knew what the ordinary process was. Frankly I didn't; I was trying to find that out from the chairman of the committee, because I do not know in terms of time what the ordinary process is. But the chairman of the committee said the employee who is now out of work, with no pay check, gets an attorney — I assume on a contingency fee — who gets an injunction. I am not quite sure whether he can get an injunction or whether he must exhaust his remedies first. I must confess my ignorance further; I don't know if he must first go to the hearing board of the civil service commission or the full civil service commission; I do not know if he gets the injunction from a circuit court judge, the state supreme court or from a justice of the peace. I do not know those things and I am not the one that is advocating the change.

I think the burden is on those who are advocating change, and I speak as one who is usually advocating change and is told that in order to support the change there are 3 things I must show: one, what is wrong with the status quo? two, what is my improvement or cure for the disease? and three, is the cure worse than the disease? I propound that applying those standards the only evil that has been demonstrated is the Kunzig case of 5 years ago and that can be debated.

The recommended change? I can say it throws out the baby with the bath by pitting the employee without a pay check against the state that no matter how large the deficit is does have management — the people that are getting their pay checks — and then we tell the individual without the pay check that he must go and get an attorney, go to court, go to the civil service commission and eventually get his remedies righted in the ordinary process, the ordinary grievance process, which I say may take weeks, months or, with court action, conceivably a year or longer. Those are the questions I have asked; I still do not have the answers.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I think Vice President Downs covered the question I wanted to raise with the chairman of our committee, and that was the statement that an employee so aggrieved could get an injunction in a matter of a couple of hours. I guess I have had about as much experience as anyone in this committee with injunctions and I haven't seen many that you got in a couple of hours; I have seen judges gotten out of bed at 2:00 o'clock in the morning to issue them but it usually took a little longer than 2 hours, and in recent years you don't get them that fast any longer.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address 2 questions to the committee chairman. The first question has to do with the result of such an appeal based on the grievance procedure. Let us assume, Mr. Martin, that there is no partisan, racial or religious consideration but that the appointing authority abolishes a position for reasons of administrative efficiency or for reasons that he believes are for administrative efficiency. Now, he does that and — am I correct, Mr. Martin, assuming that there is an appeal to the commission and the courts to raise the question of whether the reason really is in the interest of administrative efficiency — is that part of the appeal or not?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I think the question would be raised first with the commission. Then if the commission felt that it did not have jurisdiction of the matter, the matter would then go to the court.

MR. NORD: Well, the question I have in mind in this particular is this: does the commission or does the court have the power to reverse the decision of the appointing authorities in view of the fact that the language here says point blank, "The appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency without the approval of the commission." Now, as far as the commission is concerned, it would seem to me they have no jurisdiction at all on that matter, and I don't know how the court might have any. I don't know whether the court does or not, but am I correct in assuming the commission has no jurisdiction on such a question?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The commission, under this language, would not have the authority to make the final determination on whether the job had been abolished for reasons of administrative efficiency or not, but it would certainly have the right to consider the question as to whether this was the reason involved. If there were other factors involved, it could pass on those, of course.

MR. NORD: Then I believe I understand — if I am not mistaken — that the commission could not reverse a ruling of an appointing authority on that single question of administrative efficiency.

Now the other question I ask, Mr. Martin, if I may, is this: why is it necessary that the appointing authorities have this power to create or abolish positions without the approval of civil service? What is the harm in letting the commission have the power to approve? What is the reason for the difference?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The reason for it is that, in the view of the committee, the power in the commission to determine whether jobs can be created or abolished when questions of economy or efficiency are concerned puts the commission in control of the entire administrative machinery of state government. It gives the commission the authority and the power to say, "You cannot have less jobs; we don't consider these are reasons of efficiency. We consider that there is some other reason." So you thereby put the commission into control of the whole of state government by this device, which it now claims the authority to exercise on the strength of the Kunzig case. The committee does not feel that this is a proper responsibility or function for the commission.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Delegate Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I was merely going to say that I think there is no use getting mixed up any more on this problem. The committee, as Chairman Martin has just indicated, was concerned primarily with straightening out lines of administrative responsibility. The civil service commission exists for the purpose of preventing discrimination or unfair removals. There is nothing in this amendment which denies them that same privilege and right which they have always had; it merely makes very clear — and I might say to Dr. Nord: over a period of 20 years it has often been very unclear — whether a department head who might not be quite as courageous as some department heads ought to be would occasionally shift to the civil service commission the excuse for not firing somebody whom he found to be inefficient.

This committee amendment is calculated to establish the responsibility for administrative inefficiency, to fix it rather definitely without, in my opinion, in any way interfering with the normal and proper protection of the employee. In other words, it is based upon improving the efficiency of the service; it is not based, however much it may be misconstrued, in any way to injure the employees of the state.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Marshall amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Marshall's amendment:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Marshall amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 8, by striking out "recommend to the governor and to the legislature" and inserting "determine"; so the language will then read, "The civil service commission shall determine rates of compensation for all appointed unclassified positions within the executive department."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Vice President Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, before speaking in favor of what this amendment is, I would like to take a few minutes to say what it is not. It is not the most important amendment before the committee; I do not even feel particularly strongly on it, as I have on other amendments to the civil service provisions. However, what this does do is make a stronger governmental administration.

At the present time we have in state government many cases where the head of the department has his pay established by statute. Then he may be in an unclassified position, yet the people who are classified under him, his deputy or other capacity, may through civil service receive a higher remuneration than the head of the agency does. One of the results of this is the tendency for the head of the agency to be placed under civil service and not in a classified position, not for any theory of government but simply to see if he could end up with his pay in line with that of his deputy.

Now I feel this problem has been aggravated by the amendments we have already adopted. On the first page we did — and I supported this — increase the number of exempt positions. That, I believe, provides that the head, the executive head of the major agencies be in an exempt or unclassified position. I feel that granting civil service the right to set the remuneration for these positions would simply mean that they were in line with the general sound pay scale. I believe it was said last week that the legislature by its nature as a deliberative body is not in as good a position to set actual rates of pay as is the civil service commission and the matter of the career determination of what wage rates or professional salaries should be.

I think this would be a minor improvement. I think it would result in a little bit sounder governmental operation, and I think it would put the matter of wage rates and remuneration determinations into one body in state government. I think for those reasons it is sound but, as I said at the first, I do not consider this the major amendment before the committee or even under civil service. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Downs amendment? Chairman Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee did consider this question at some length, and we realize that there are some jobs in the upper levels in which the base pay of the top man in the department may be less than the pay of some member of his department. On the other hand, the committee felt that there should be a line drawn between the responsibilities of the civil service commission, which responsibilities are to handle the civil service employees, and those employees who are specifically made exempt from the civil service provisions and thereby made the responsibility of the legislature; and for that reason the committee determined that the provision would merely go so far as to require the commission to submit recommendations as to what these salaries should be in the light of what certain civil service salaries might be but should not get itself into the position of determining what the salaries should be, since these are noncivil service jobs.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Downs amendment. The secretary will read the amendment once more.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs' amendment is as follows:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Downs amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Tubbs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 18, after "made" by striking out "for such considerations" and inserting "except for reasons of administrative efficiency"; so that the language will read, "Nor shall the creation or abolition of positions be made except for reasons of administrative efficiency."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Rapids, "Senator" Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, this is just to add emphasis. I think it is possible that the committee may accept the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The chairman of the committee, Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the committee does accept this amendment and thinks that it is a desirable one. It clarifies the question of administrative efficiency.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion on the Tubbs amendment? Delegate Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to ask Mr. Martin a question. I was not too alarmed a few minutes ago when we lost the Marshall amendment here until Dr. Pollock explained this to us and then I became concerned, because I understood his definition of "administrative efficiency" to include a case where the executives determined that a particular individual was "inefficient" as distinguished from a situation where they might determine that they had certain clerical positions, for example, that because of the cessation of a certain operation in a department, were no longer necessary to the continued function of the department. I construed — until Dr. Pollock explained it — administrative efficiency to be an impersonal thing that did not go to the personality or capability of an individual employee but to a question of whether the position as such was necessary.

MR. MARTIN: As far as the individual employee and his personal efficiency or failure to do his job are concerned, this does not change the picture in any way, shape or manner. If he is inefficient and he has been given the proper inefficiency ratings as he went along, the head of his department, of course, is in a position to fire him, but the question comes before the commission in the usual way for determination of whether there was a proper basis for that.

The Tubbs amendment relates to exactly what you are talking about and that is the broad question of whether a department can be reorganized by the head of the department without asking the civil service commission whether he can reorganize his department or not.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Ford.

MR. FORD: Well, then does administrative efficiency, as it would now appear in the Tubbs amendment, mean something different than administrative efficiency in the first committee amendment above it?

MR. MARTIN: No, it means exactly the same thing.

MR. FORD: Then am I correct in assuming from what you say that you don't agree with Dr. Pollock in what administrative efficiency means?

MR. MARTIN: No, I think you misunderstood what Dr. Pollock said. Dr. Pollock said that this does not change the picture as far as the individual is concerned, so far as individual inefficiency is concerned. Also, it does make clear that where it is a question of reorganizing a department, of increasing it or decreasing it in size, of shifting functions, and so on, that the administrative head of the department shall have the right to do this without asking the civil service commission if he can do it.

MR. FORD: This has been a long day and I am having difficulty following you, but I thought that Dr. Pollock stated rather clearly that this would cover the situation where a department head determined that John Doe was inefficient in performing a certain job, and that this was what we were talking about when we discussed the Marshall amendment a few moments ago.

MR. MARTIN: Well, maybe Dr. Pollock might like to express himself on that, but my understanding is as I have stated it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Pollock will clarify the matter.

MR. POLLOCK: I entirely agree with the chairman of the committee on the broad question. I spoke particularly about the employee because it seemed as if a number of delegates were concerned about the rights, the protection, of the employee. I did not emphasize the other side, but the other side was also present, as the chairman has indicated. We hope to overcome the difficulty which undoubtedly has existed in matters involving administrative efficiency, not merely of the employee but in any move within a department for administrative efficiency purposes. We wanted to remove the uncertainty which certainly has existed these past few years with reference to this matter. I was, of course, concerned about refuting the fears which were expressed around the chamber that the employee was going to suffer, but I also concur with the explanation of the chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Tubbs amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Tubbs' amendment is as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 18, after "made" by striking out "for such considerations" and inserting "except for reasons of administrative efficiency"; so that the language will read, "Nor shall the creation or abolition of positions be made except for reasons of administrative efficiency."

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Tubbs amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hatch offers an amendment to follow the amendment that was adopted by the committee of the whole to page 2, line 7, which reads after "state civil service" insert 2 sentences as follows:

> No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year.

The amendment now proposed by Mr. Hatch is to add following that language, "The requirements of the 2 preceding sentences may be waived by majority vote of the members of both houses of the legislature.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Marshall, Delegate Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Durst this evening called to my attention a letter dated January 22, 1962, from the personnel director of the civil service commission pointing out the rigidity of the language which was adopted by amendment on January 19. The personnel director has recommended that this language be given some flexibility in the event of emergency situations. I therefore offer this language which would authorize the legislature to waive the requirements of the 2 preceding sentences by a majority vote of the members of both houses. I feel that this in no way affects the merits or demerits of the amendment as adopted and does provide a desirable flexibility.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Birmingham, Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the commitee, I think I spoke in favor of the sentences which this would slightly modify when this matter was before the committee earlier, and I would also support this Hatch amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Vice President Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I must confess that at this stage I really am confused and I want to see if I understand the English language correctly.

I was under the impression that civil service was by itself — and independent of both the executive and legislative branches — empowered to establish wage rates; but apparently I was wrong, because now in the amendment that we adopted earlier — and I am speaking of the second one — we provided that if the governor did not submit the pay increase recommended by civil service, the pay increase would not be effective on the first day of such fiscal year. In other words, if the civil service commission granted a 3 per cent cost of living increase, the governor could unilaterally veto that by just not submitting that pay increase in his budget message to the legislature. Well, that is bad enough to grant the executive veto.

Now, apparently, if the governor does grant or deny that increase through omitting to put it in the message, we say that the legislature can restore it by having those requirements waived by a majority vote of the 2 houses — I don't know if that means members elect; I assume it does — so we are in the situation where there could be a 3 step process in wage rate. First, the civil service commission could grant the increase. Second, the governor could refuse to put it in the message; and third, the legislature by a majority vote of each house could put it back in.

I say that that would not only make confusion, it would make pandemonium. And instead of having the civil service or the governor or the legislature determine pay rates, we would have a situation where the civil service commission, the governor and the legislature would all be in the process of setting pay rates, except for one thing: that the pay rate granted originally by the civil service commission would be a ceiling and we would have a one way street whereby the governor could cut the pay and the legislature then could up it, but no higher than civil service had originally granted. Now I cannot believe this is the intent.

I urge the delegates, when we rise, to oppose the original one. I say that this is just a patch on a patch and will not do the job satisfactorily.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The chairman of the committee, Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the only purpose of this amendment was to take care of some situations that have arisen very rarely but which the commission wanted to be able to anticipate if they did arise, particularly situations such as arose in the Korean war and one or two other times where they had to hire large numbers of people rapidly and had to increase wage rates in order to prevent the rapidly rising wage rates in private industry from stripping the employment rolls of the state. Under these circumstances the legislature might see fit not to require that this increase be submitted approximately 6 months in advance, as this provision now requires. That is the sole purpose of it. It has nothing to do with the governor's refusing to submit the proposed increase to the legislature — which he does not have the authority to do under this provision in any event. It is solely to make it possible for the legislature, if wages outside rise so rapidly under war conditions or something of that sort that the state needs to make a rapid increase or make an increase in its own wage rates sooner than under this procedure, that it would be able to do so with the consent of the legislature. That is all there is to it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, this particular provision of this section has had a very peculiar history. First, it was part of a larger section which, as I understood, the committee turned down. The next thing that happened, it was divorced from the minority report, as I recall — this piece of it — and the committee said it would accept it, said it on the floor, without asking for — as far as I know — the opinion of the members of the committee.

At that point I remember taking the floor and saying that there was no showing why this language should be put into the constitution and that "when in doubt, leave it out." Now I take the same position again.

When language is snatched from mid air for the middle of a paragraph and nobody knows why it is being put in — originally it was thought it ought not to be in, then in a rush it was decided it ought to be in — we always run into the same problem. This is not the first time. When we take language without thinking, especially when we add language to the constitution, we just do the same thing over and over again: we goof. We are not smart enough to be able to keep on adding language on the spur of the moment. We seem to be suffering from changitis. We want to change where there is no need to change.

Now this language that we have, the committee said was perfectly all right. The proponents said it was all right. Many of us expressed doubt; we said, "leave it out when you're in doubt." Now the proponents of this language say there is something wrong with it — whatever it may be, I don't know — there is something wrong with it and it ought to be changed. My opinion is this: if we add this language we may run into the same problem all over again. Maybe this language will produce another problem. What need is there for any of this language? There was no need for the original language in the first place; there is no need for the second language in the second place.

Mr. Chairman, am I in order to move as a substitute motion to strike the language that has just been offered, together with the language to which it is related?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Nord, the secretary points out to me that the committee refused to reconsider the amendment that was adopted a week and a half ago. Therefore, the secretary feels it would be out of order.

MR. NORD: May I ask whether this would be in order when the entire proposal has been acted upon?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Upon the acceptance of the report of the committee of the whole?

MR. NORD: In committee of the whole, before we accept the entire report, will we be able to reconsider this section?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The secretary tells me if we adopt the amendment, then we could reconsider the entire section.

MR. NORD: Then am I correct, assuming that we —

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: If we adopt the Hatch amendment.

MR. NORD: — we could reconsider it, not now, not immediately after the amendment is adopted, but only —

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: We could reconsider it immediately after the Hatch amendment is adopted, if it is adopted.

MR. NORD: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the Hatch amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Mr. Hatch is:

1. Amend page 2, line 7, at the end of the amendment adopted in committee of the whole, after "such fiscal year.", by inserting "The requirements of the 2 preceding sentences may be waived by majority vote of the members of both houses of the legislature.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Hatch amendment? If not, all those in favor will say aye; opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: All those opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Fifty-one.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Seventy aye votes, 51 no votes. The amendment is adopted.

Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, if I understood you correctly, I am now in order to move to strike this amendment plus the amendment to which it would relate; and I so move.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Nord, the proper motion would be a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were adopted.

MR. NORD: I make that motion then, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Nord moves that the committee of the whole reconsider the vote by which the amendments were adopted, and the secretary will read the amendments.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment that Dr. Nord proposes to reconsider is as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 7, after "state civil service.", by inserting "No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year. The requirements of the 2 preceding sentences may be waived by majority vote of the members of both houses of the legislature.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the Nord motion to reconsider. Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The motion to reconsider involves the entire amendment, as you heard from the secretary's reading. It would not only strike out the amendment last adopted but it would strike out the earlier 2 sentences which the committee adopted and which in effect simply state the present practice of the civil service commission. That is all they do; they state the present practice of the civil service commission and they give it some constitutional status so that these matters will be considered, put into the budget, and presented to the legislature at the earliest reasonable time and will not come into effect until the following July. So I would oppose Dr. Nord's motion.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the Nord motion to reconsider. Is there any further discussion? If not, all those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion to reconsider does not prevail.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no further amendments on file to this paragraph, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any further amendments to paragraph 3? If not, the secretary will read paragraph 4 of Committee Proposal 22.

SECRETARY CHASE: Page 2, paragraph 4:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to paragraph 4, lines 19 through 21? If not, the secretary will read paragraph 5.

SECRETARY CHASE: Beginning on line 22:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to paragraph 5. If not, the secretary will read paragraph 6.

SECRETARY CHASE: Page 3, line 4:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to paragraph 6; If not, the secretary will read paragraph 7.

SECRETARY CHASE: Page 3, line 10:

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 22? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 22, as amended, is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Exclusion Report 2007, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 27.

Following is Exclusion Report 2007 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on finance and taxation recommends that article X, section 27 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2007:

The committee on finance and taxation, as to article X, section 27 of the constitution, says there are rights and obligations under article X, section 27 of the 1908 constitution which are still alive but they are being protected by amendments proposed in section 28 of the same article. Any transactions that could be handled under section 27 will be handled under section 28, (section d of our proposal) as it becomes effective on July 1, 1962. There will, therefore, be no reason for the inclusion of section 27 in the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the exclusion report. Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I move that the reading of the section be waived, if that is necessary.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: It is not necessary, Delegate Brake. The question is on the exclusion report. Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would simply advise the committee that the subject matter of section 27 of the present constitution is completely covered in a proposal which passed the committee of the whole last week dealing with school bond financing.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on Exclusion Report 2007. As many as are in favor say aye; opposed, no.

The exclusion report is adopted and passed without amendment.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 24, A proposal pertaining to inclusion of section 39 of article V in the constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 24 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

All laws enacted at any session of the legislature shall be published in book form within 60 days after the final adjournment of the session, and shall be distributed in such manner as shall be provided by law. The speedy publication of such judicial decisions as may be deemed expedient shall also be provided for by law. All laws and judicial decisions shall be free for publication by any person.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 24:

The governor's advisory committee which studied and recommended relative to constitutional provisions pertaining to the legislative branch of state government, recommended retention of this section without change.

The comments of the report of the citizens research council of Michigan relative to the provisions embodied in this section are also favorable.

We feel that all 3 portions of this section, dealing with the publication of laws, the distribution of laws, and the publication of judicial decisions, are desirable, and should be retained in the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on Committee Proposal 24. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? The chairman of the committee, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I will yield to my subcommittee chairman, Mr. Powell.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hoxie yields to Delegate Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the comment that accompanied this report is found on page 337 of the journal. It is very brief. It reads as follows:

[The supporting reasons for Committee Proposal 24 were read by Mr. Powell. For text, see above, page 707.]

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Fennville and the eighth senatorial district, Vice President Hutchinson.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Powell.

MR. POWELL: I feel a little bit like Delegate Downs awhile ago when he said there are other things on which he feels more strongly than this. I did serve on the governor's preparatory commission last summer. We spent quite a little time on this and it was the consensus of the ladies and gentlemen that served on that commission that this was something that should be retained and the citizens research council spends quite a little space — which I don't have right in my hands here — coming to the conclusion that this is a desirable feature and should be retained, and I am perfectly glad to leave it to the good judgment of the members of this committee of the whole whether you go along with the recommendations of our committee on legislative powers or not.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not it will pass.

Committee Proposal 24 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Exclusion Report 2008, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 31.

Following is Exclusion Report 2008 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on legislative powers recommends that article V, section 31 of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2008:

The constitutions of only 2 other states contain provisions of this type. We regard this as unnecessary detail. Possible abuse in this area is not only restrained by the 2/3 vote requirement for special acts in section 30, but it would also probably be a violation of the due process clauses of the Michigan constitution, article II, section 16, and of the federal constitution.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the exclusion report. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, once again this falls within the premise of our subcommittee 2, headed by Mr. Powell, who will make the necessary explanation.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think on some of these it might be well to see what it is we are considering. I believe this has to do with section 31 and that relates to the sale of real estate. The present language in the constitution says, "The legislature shall not authorize by private or special law the sale or conveyance of any real estate belonging to any person."

The report of our committee, found at the top of page 338 of the journal states:

[The supporting reasons for Exclusion Report 2008 were read by Mr. Powell. For text, see above.]

I might add here that our committee on legislative powers is coming in with an affirmative recommendation relative to section 30, so we think that that amply takes care of this situation.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the exclusion report. As many as are in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The exclusion report is adopted and passed without amendment.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 25, A proposal to amend article XVI, section 2 of the present constitution pertaining to oath of office.

Following is Committee Proposal 25 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. Members of the legislature and all officers, executive and judicial, [except such officers as may by law be exempted,] shall, before they enter on the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of this state, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of .... according to the best of my ability." No other oath, declaration or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 25:

The present constitution purports to empower the legislature to exempt officers from the requirement of an oath. In view of the provisions of article VI of the Constitution of the United States that "the members of the several state legislatures and the executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support" that constitution, the committee is of the opinion that the legislature is without power to exempt any officer in either of the 3 branches of government, and language purporting to grant a power to exempt is meaningless.

It is the opinion of the committee that an oath of office as set forth herein, and providing that no other test may be required, would not require an appeal to the Diety. See 225 Michigan 246. The last sentence of the proposal would be broad enough to include a prohibition against a religious test as a qualification to office.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Lansing, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I would like to yield to Mr. Hutchinson, whose subcommittee prepared this report.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Erickson yields to Vice President Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, as the matter came out of committee, it proposes to retain the same form of the oath of office that is in the present constitution, and there is only one change between the proposed constitutional provision and the present one. In the present constitutional provision, there are words which would presume that the legislature might by law excuse certain officers from taking an oath of office. Now, the Constitution of the United States says that every officer of every state, both judicial, legislative and executive, shall be bound to support the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, it seems to us that it would not be competent for the legislature to excuse anybody from taking the necessary oath of office and that that language in the present constitution is inoperative and mere surplusage. Therefore, in the new proposal we simply strike that exception out, so that every officer will have to take and subscribe to the oath of office as the Constitution of the United States has implied that it would be necessary for him to do.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 25 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 26, A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin.

For Committee Proposal 26 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 739.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ann Arbor, the chairman of the committee, Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I move that we pass this for today.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Dr. Pollock moves that this be passed for the day. All those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

Committee Proposal 26 is passed for the day.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 27, A proposal to provide for liquor control, excise taxes and local option by counties. Amends article XVI, section 11.

Following is Committee Proposal 27 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The legislature may by law establish a liquor control commission, [who,] WHICH, subject to statutory limitations, shall exercise complete control of the alcoholic beverage traffic within this state, including the retail sales thereof; and the legislature may also provide for an excise tax on such sales: Providing however, That neither the legislature nor such commission may authorize the manufacture or sale of alcoholic beverages in any county in which the electors thereof, by a majority vote, shall prohibit the same.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 27:

The constitution as adopted in 1908 had no provisions pertaining to liquor. After the repeal of the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution, the present language as stated above was proposed by initiatory petition as an amendment to the constitution and was ratified at the November election in 1932.

This language of the constitutional provision is sufficiently broad to permit the legislature to set up a state monopoly system, an open state system, or to establish a system with a mixture of the features of the two. It is well known that the legislature, under this provision, has set up a state monopoly system which has been operating since 1933.

Several hearings were held and many witnesses were heard, including the members of the liquor control commission and its directors, and your committee is of the opinion that the statutes under which the liquor control commission is operated are sufficient for an efficient operation. There were proposals which would put in the constitution provisions to allow local option by counties to determine hours of closing and also the sale of liquor on Sundays and holidays. Your committee feels that this is not subject matter that should be in the constitution but should be regulated by statute and that the legislature has sufficient power under the present constitutional provision to make such rules and regulations.

It will be noted that the only restriction to legislative power is in the proviso of the above mentioned section that there can be local option for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages by county. Although it is conceded that the legislature has inherent power to provide for liquor control, without specific constitutional provision it is felt that this proviso sets up a necessary safeguard which should be included in any new constitution. It is, therefore, recommended that the proposal be adopted as part of the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 27? The chairman of the committee, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is one of the proposals on which your committee on legislative powers spent considerable time hearing testimony of various people and the direct responsibility for this particular section was assigned to our subcommittee 4, of which Mr. Millard is chairman, and he will make the necessary explanation.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Hoxie yields to Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think it is important that we look at the section in question, which is section 11 of article XVI, and I want to read it:

> The legislature may by law establish a liquor control commission, who, subject to statutory limitations, shall exercise complete control of the alcoholic beverage traffic within this state, including the retail sales thereof; and the legislature may also provide for an excise tax on such sales: Providing, however, That neither the legislature nor such commission may authorize the manufacture or sale of alcoholic beverages in any county in which the electors thereof, by a majority vote, shall prohibit the same.

The legislative powers committee of this constitutional convention has had under consideration a constitutional amendment of 1933, which was the basis for the establishment of an act of the legislature that created the Michigan liquor control commission and gave to the Michigan liquor control commission the power to function within statutory limitations as expressed by the liquor control act. The committee has conducted a thorough and exhaustive study of the aforementioned amendment, the legislation adopted relative thereto, and the operation of the Michigan liquor control commission within the confines and limitations prescribed by the amendments and statute, and reports thereon as follows:

It is the considered opinion of the committee that the best interests of the people of the state of Michigan will be served if the present language of the amendment, with a minor change in terminology, be retained and the Michigan liquor control commission continues to operate as a monopoly or a controlled state function. As the term "monopoly" or "control" implies, sole authority to purchase and sell alcoholic beverages is vested in the state commission with the revenues derived therefrom deposited in the state general fund. These revenues are used to help defray the general operating expenses of the state. The revenues realized from the merchandising operation of the Michigan liquor control commission since its inception in 1933 are in the neighborhood of $1 billion net. The average net annual return for the past several years, exclusive of excise tax, has been $50 million realized from the sale of alcoholic beverages in the state of Michigan. The commission operates 3 warehouses and administration centers as well as 93 state stores in its merchandising complex. These warehouses and stores service not only the general public but some 11,000 licensees who purchase their alcoholic beverages directly from these state outlets at a uniform price established by the Michigan liquor control commission.

An important factor considered by the committee in reaching its decision was that complete state control over merchandising and distribution serves to eliminate undesirable elements that would be quick to seek control over privately owned distributorships because of the high rate of profit to be gained in the sale of alcoholic beverages. The committee also discovered in its deliberations that the controlled state operation traditionally lends itself much more effectively to proper licensing techniques and control than the so called "open" states. Our study of the Michigan control system disclosed that all applicants for licensing must undergo intensive examination and investigation to determine that they are of good character and are financially able to operate a licensed establishment. It was further shown that far greater supervision and control are exercised over controlled state licensees than over open state licensees, thus insuring much more effective compliance with the law and regulations relative thereto.

In the field of enforcement it has also been established that the controlled states function far more effectively than the open states in the investigation and prosecution of violators of the state liquor laws. One has only to travel to a neighboring open state to see conditions in licensed establishments that would not be tolerated in a controlled state. In our own state we have 90 highly trained investigators whose sole function is to secure complete compliance with the Michigan liquor control act. This group conducts all licensing investigations and, in conjunction and cooperation with state and local police agencies, polices all license activities. Offending licensees are cited before the commission by these investigators and penalized for infractions of the state liquor act.

In the course of our investigation, members of the committee interviewed state officials, members of the industry, temperance groups, and all those who evinced an interest in this amendment, and the following conclusions evolved: in interviewing state officials it was discovered that effective controls are established and maintained over licensees and rigid accounting techniques and controls reduce the possibility of wrongful acts by commission employees to the minimum. It was the position of the temperance groups that, as long as the people of the state had by constitutional amendment made legal the sale of alcoholic beverages, then the temperance groups by far favored the continuance of a controlled state operation inasmuch as it was the feeling of their memberships that the rights of those that favored temperance would be seriously jeopardized if the state were to abandon its controlled status and institute an open operation in the merchandising and distribution of alcoholic beverages. Interviews with members and past members of the legislature who had been members of interim committees studying the Michigan liquor control commission revealed that in their opinion the controlled operation was by far better suited to the needs and wishes of the citizens of this state, and they strongly urged the retention of the amendment and the liquor control act that had been construed within its framework.

It was the feeling of a group of industry leaders that as far as the state itself was concerned the controlled operation was to its great advantage. They pointed out that a major source of revenue would be lost to the state if it were to abandon the controlled operation. Further, they stated that a controlled state was in a position by warranty to purchase alcoholic beverages directly from the distillery at the lowest possible price and that the uniform price feature of the state liquor control act negated the possibility of price wars and the introduction of undesirable elements in the merchandising process. The language of the constitutional provision is specifically broad to permit the legislature to set up a state monopoly system, an open state system, or to establish a system with a mixture of the features of the two. It is our considered opinion that the controlled operation now in effect carries out the intent of the legislature and is best suited to the needs of the state.

During the course of our proceedings, several delegate proposals were presented to the committee in the form of additions to the present amendment. While many of these had merit, it was the feeling of the committee that they were proper subject matter for the legislative process and the proper forum for these proposals is the legislature itself.

As a result of the foregoing, it is our firm conviction that it is to the interest of the general public to continue the operation of the Michigan liquor control commission in its present form, subject to any limitations the legislature may wish to impose from time to time. Therefore, it is our recommendation that the section in its present form be retained with this following minor exception: probably we are encroaching upon style and drafting, but we recommend, in the interest of proper terminology, that the word "who" in line 7 of the proposal be deleted and the word "which" be substituted therefor. The committee on legislative powers respectfully submits the foregoing and earnestly recommends its adoption.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Vice President Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I yield to Delegate Danhof.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Hutchinson yields to Delegate Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Millard, if I understand your statement correctly, the provision as you now have it would allow, would it not, the legislature to abandon the liquor control commission and the controlled type of operation which we now have. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, that is correct. That has been true ever since this amendment has been in effect, since 1933.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The gentleman from Muskegon, Delegate Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I wish to state at the outset that I favor the controlled type of operation that we now have, but I get back to solely what was said by Dr. Pollock way at the opening of this convention: what, if anything, does the first sentence up to the "providing however" either add or detract from the power of the legislature? Now in the last sentence I can see that neither the legislature nor the commission may authorize the manufacture or sale in any county which, by the electors thereof, has voted to prohibit the same. This I can see is a limitation of their power.

I merely rise to state that whether or not we actually need it; whether there is anything in the first part which prohibits the legislature from doing what it could do or restricts it from abandoning the controlled type commission — which I favor and which apparently the committee favors — if the legislature could abandon it, I inquire as to the reason for continuing the language.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Danhof, go back to the history and I think 1 of the 4 reasons for the calling of the 1908 convention was the liquor question. It was discussed in that convention and nothing was done about it. There was no mention made of liquor in the 1908 constitution. Not until 1916 was there an amendment adopted to the constitution involving liquor.

In answer specifically to your question, you are absolutely correct. The first sentence down to the colon before the word "providing" does not add anything to the power of the legislature to control the liquor traffic in the state of Michigan. It, however, expresses the intent of the people that there should be a liquor control commission. It is only advisory and is not compulsory upon the legislature. However, the proviso does add something because it restricts the legislature in giving out licenses for sale and manufacture. It states that:

> . . . neither the legislature nor such commission may authorize the manufacture or sale of alcoholic beverages in any county in which the electors thereof, by a majority vote, shall prohibit the same.

That is a restriction upon the power of the legislature; but as far as the power is concerned, it has all the power and that is the only thing that this section does is to restrict it as far as county control is concerned.

MR. DANHOF: Thank you, Mr. Millard.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Are there any amendments to Committee Proposal 27?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Powell offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, following line 13, by inserting 2 paragraphs to read as follows:

"The commission may issue licenses to sell alcoholic beverages at retail, with the approval of local governing bodies, except that in the case of an application for the renewal of an existing license, where no objection to a renewal has been filed with the commission by the local legislative body, the approval of the local legislative body shall not be required.

In carrying out the duties imposed on the commission under the law, it shall be their aim to exercise a control of the liquor industry in such a way that alcoholic beverages may be made available to those people who are desirous of obtaining same and yet the licensing and operation of the licensed establishments throughout the state would provide a minimum of offense to those persons who are inherently opposed to the liquor traffic.".

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Powell amendment. Delegate Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, Mr. Frank Millard, on behalf of the committee on legislative powers, has made a very scholarly and comprehensive report on this whole matter. I think he did unusually well in view of the fact that actually there isn't much in the proposal. (laughter) In the first place, the first paragraph, the first half, you might say, doesn't really mean anything. It just says the legislature may and, of course, they would have that power anyway. I am not suggesting that this provision should be dropped but I am insinuating that down to the colon it is pretty futile to say the legislature may do something yet again they may not.

Now, this other part; Delegate Danhof brought out that it does have some significance — the proviso on the end — because it is a definite restriction; but that, too, is pretty meaningless because, although this provision has been in our constitution for some 46 years, we do not have a single, solitary dry county. So to say what they cannot do in a dry county when we haven't got any dry counties, that, too, is almost silly; and I thought this could be greatly strengthened by these 2 paragraphs which I propose to add and which the secretary has read. Maybe I could read them again with you. The first one gives some authority in this field of local option. Now that is a sort of a hazy situation right now as to the power of the local governing body to approve applications for liquor licenses, and the upshot of my amendment is that in the first instance they would have that power and thereafter the licenses would be renewed automatically if there were no protests filed by the governing body. The exact language is this:

> The commission may issue licenses to sell alcoholic beverages at retail, with the approval of local governing bodies, except that in the case of an application for the renewal of an existing license, where no objection to a renewal has been filed with the commission by the local legislative body, the approval of the local legislative body shall not be required.

That is comparable, as I understand it, to the way tavern licenses are handled at the present time.

Now this next paragraph seeks to establish some sort of a philosophy or an interpretation as to what the position of the state is in this whole business; what we are trying to do and what we are trying not to do by our present method of control:

> In carrying out the duties imposed on the commission under the law, it shall be their aim to exercise a control of the liquor industry in such a way that alcoholic beverages may be made available to those people who are desirous of obtaining same and yet the licensing and operation of the licensed establishments throughout the state would provide a minimum of offense to those persons who are inherently opposed to the liquor traffic.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ionia. Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: This amendment of Mr. Powell's was submitted to the committee and we discussed it very thoroughly. The first sentence is, "The commission may issue licenses to sell alcoholic beverages at retail . . . ." This would include both the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises and off premise sales, the take out sales. The legislature has passed an act implementing this constitutional provision and in regard to the consumption on the premises the statute provides as follows:

> All applications for licenses to sell beer and wine or spirits for consumption on the premises except in counties of one million population or over shall be approved by the local legislative body in which such applicant's place of business is located before being granted the license by the commission.

This does not mention take out sales. However, I am informed — and the members of the commission and the director of the commission, Mr. Burke, who has been there for a great many years, testified — that it is a rule of the commission that all take out licenses have to be approved by the commission.

Now Mr. Powell will rise and say that in one or two instances that has been violated. The commission agreed that, after the 1960 census, they had the privilege under the law of giving some more licenses and that they did issue, I think, 4 licenses without the approval of the local body but that they received protests and that the rule has gone back into effect and is being followed rigidly.

I maintain that this is a legislative matter. This is for the legislature to embody in a statute. It has no place in the constitution. As far as that second paragraph is concerned, I really think that we — well, we started out to take a lot of verbiage out of the constitution, and we certainly are putting a lot of verbiage that doesn't mean very much in, in the second paragraph. As I said before, the committee considered this amendment, decided that it was a legislative matter and, therefore, the committee is opposed to the amendment and hopes that you will vote it down.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Millard has already related the bulk of the comments that I did want to make and I am in agreement with him on the matter of the local government responsibility in this thing, and I would like to point out that recently in our community we had the occasion to receive this directive from the liquor control commission: we did have a lengthy discussion on this thing and we felt that the local government did have the responsibility, and even the directive was too loose. We did not agree that the directive was too loose, but certainly if it is a matter of directive I certainly would hate to see it incorporated in our constitution, because I feel that the local government does have a responsibility here that they just cannot pass and give automatic approval for a renewal of a license, and I feel that an inclusion of this language in the constitution would almost be tacit approval that the local governing body could close their eyes to the things that could go on, and we could get into situations where the language of the constitution would work in opposition to the best interests of the community. I will say that Mr. Millard has objectively pointed out what we feel is the basic objection to this language on the local level.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question before the committee is the adoption of the Powell amendment.

The secretary will read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Powell's amendment is to add to the language of the proposal these 2 paragraphs:

CHAIRMAN DeVries: Is there any further discussion of the Powell amendment? If not, as many as are in favor will say aye; those opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any more amendments to Committee Proposal 27?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Perras and Mr. Binkowski offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, following line 13, by inserting 2 paragraphs to read as follows:

"The commission may issue licenses to sell alcoholic beverages at retail, with the approval of local governing bodies, except that in the case of an application for the renewal of an existing license, where no objection to a renewal has been filed with the commission by the local legislative body, the approval of the local legislative body shall not be required.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from the upper peninsula, Delegate Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I speak in favor of this amendment because it has been stated that it is strictly a legislative process but for 28 years the people of the state of Michigan — I won't say all of the people but some — have been desirous of having the chance to consume alcoholic spirits on Sundays. The proponents of education should really be behind this because 6 per cent of the money that is spent for alcoholic beverages in this state — (laughter) — is earmarked for education. I am not interested in making the entire state do this, but this is by local option and I speak mainly in reference to the upper peninsula and border areas.

Now the governor has just proposed some $800,000 for the purpose of ski resorts in the Ironwood district; but we bring the people into the upper peninsula and then they have to go into Wisconsin to eat, because all the eating places up in that area are closed on Sunday because of lack of spirits. Wayne county, I think, is interested in this too and now I will yield to Delegate Binkowski.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Perras yields to Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I hope, if you have been reading the Detroit Free Press in particular, you have been reading about our problems in Detroit with respect to Cobo hall. We are trying to turn Detroit into a convention city and in order to do this we must compete with other cities throughout the country, and I think one of the advantages, of course, of allowing liquor to be sold on Sunday would be to allow us to compete with other cities throughout the country. Again, as Delegate Perras has emphasized, we believe that this principle of local option is democracy reduced to the local level. We don't intend to impose this type of habit — if you will — upon anyone in any part of the country or throughout Michigan if they do not desire this, but in our county in order to meet competition, in order to turn Detroit into a convention city, we think that this is most desirable.

Mr. Perras touched very briefly upon the aspect of taxes, and I think that you would have to be keenly aware that there is a great deal of revenue derived from the sale of alcoholic beverages and the state does benefit in this sense. Now another aspect which I am going to just touch on briefly is the aspect of economy. I think that if you ever had liquor on Sunday you certainly would be able to reduce the number of local civil servants in the enforcement division of the liquor control commission. I think they spend a great deal of their time, again, in bars on Sunday trying to catch local tavern owners serving spirits on Sunday.

Now much has been made about the fact that this is a legislative matter and perhaps, technically speaking, it is a legislative matter. However, we have had a long history in this area where the legislature has not acted, and I say that one of the reasons why we are here is that the legislature has not acted. I am not saying this in a disparaging way. There are various reasons, perhaps justifiable reasons why the legislature in its wisdom has sought not to act. I do not think that because they have not acted that we, too, should close our ears and eyes to this problem.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Perras-Binkowski amendment to Committee Proposal 27. Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, in reply to Delegate Binkowski I just want to say that the committee took extensive and exhaustive testimony on this question of hours. There was a group in Detroit that was in favor of it, but we also had a large group that was opposed to it. The liquor control commission was opposed to it. The temperance people were opposed to it. It is a legislative matter in the opinion of your committee. I am not here to argue the merits for or against Sunday sales of liquor or keeping it open after 2:00 o'clock at night. It seems to me that that is purely and strictly a legislative matter and we should leave it to the legislature and not put it into the constitution. Therefore, I ask you to vote against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Perras-Binkowski amendment.

The secretary will read the pertinent part of the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: This amendment is identical to the one offered by Mr. Powell with the addition of the words "on Sunday by local option" in the second paragraph of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Is there any further discussion of the Perras-Binkowski amendment? (laughter)

MR. PERRAS: Division, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Mr. Perras requests a division. Is there support? There is support. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded.

On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Perras and Binkowski, the yeas are 20, the nays are 96.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 27?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Marshall, Faxon and Mahinske offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "same" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That the counties of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, and Genesee shall be prohibited from the sale or traffic of any alcoholic beverages". (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, since I have brought myself in agreement with Mr. Millard and Delegate Hutchinson in that we should not put too much statutory language into the constitution, that the language that has been submitted is sufficient, I think the legislature could very well handle this amendment that we offered and particularly since we finally broke the party line vote up on the board on this last one, we would like to withdraw our amendment. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Messrs. Marshall, Faxon and Mahinske withdraw the amendment. Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 27?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Binkowski offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "same" by inserting a colon and "Provided further, That those people who are desirous of obtaining alcoholic spirits on Sunday, by local option, shall be able to vote on this question in all counties located in the upper peninsula and those counties having a population in excess of one million". (laughter)

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Marshall, for your comments. We will not withdraw this amendment because I think the amendment is very evident that if you throughout the state do not want to give your people the right to vote upon this question, at least let us do it in the upper peninsula as well as in Wayne county.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Binkowski amendment. Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: I would like to say that the committee would be opposed to that amendment also.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the Binkowski amendment.

The secretary will read it.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Binkowski requests a division. Is there support for a division? There is support. All those in favor will vote aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The voting machine is locked and the tally will be taken.

On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Binkowski, the yeas are 29, the nays are 100.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 27?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 27 is passed.

The Chair recognizes the delegate from East Lansing, Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, it is well after 10:00 o'clock. I think we have passed the point of diminishing returns and I move that the committee now rise.

CHAIRMAN DeVRIES: Delegate Hannah moves that the committee do now rise. All those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails and the committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Romney resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several items on which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 24, A proposal pertaining to inclusion of section 39 of article V in the constitution; Committee Proposal 25, A proposal to amend article XVI, section 2 of the present constitution pertaining to oath of office; and Committee Proposal 27, A proposal to provide for liquor control, excise taxes and local option by counties. It reports these 3 committee proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they pass.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Committee Proposals 24, 25 and 27 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 24 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 707.

For Committee Proposal 25 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 708.

For Committee Proposal 27 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 709.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 22, A proposal pertaining to state civil service. It reports this proposal back to the convention with several amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the committee proposal as thus amended do pass.

[The following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "commissions", by striking out "and" and inserting a comma; and line 7, after "officer" by striking out "thereof" and inserting "of boards and commissions heading principal departments".

2. Amend page 2, line 13, after "the", by striking out "executive" and inserting "appointing authorities".

3. Amend page 2, line 7, after "state civil service.", by inserting "No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year. The requirements of the 2 preceding sentences may be waived by majority vote of the members of both houses of the legislature.".

4. Amend page 2, line 15, after "commission.", by inserting "Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures.".

5. Amend page 2, line 18, after "made", by striking out "for such considerations" and inserting "except for reasons of administrative efficiency".]

PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on agreeing to the amendments. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I ask that the socalled Hatch amendment — that is amendment 3 — be voted upon separately, and that the Marshall amendment also be separated and voted upon separately, and that the other amendments do be agreed to.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, according to the secretary's record, the amendment offered by Mr. Marshall was not adopted, so that is not before us at this time.

MR. DOWNS: Well, I will see to it that it is before us when we are done, and I am sorry. I ask, then, that the amendments be agreed to except the Hatch amendment, as amended, amendment 3, and that a separate vote be taken on that.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: There will be a separate vote on the Hatch amendment. The question is on agreeing with all of the other amendments except the Hatch amendment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

They are agreed to.

Now the Hatch amendment. Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I move that the Hatch amendment, as amended, be rejected. I call for a division and a recorded roll call vote.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on agreeing to the amendment. Those in favor of agreeing with the amendment, vote aye. Those opposed to agreeing with the amendment, vote no.

A DELEGATE: Mr. President, you did not ask if there was support for a division.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Pardon? Oh, I am sorry. You are correct. He is asking for a roll call vote, as I understand it. Delegate Downs, is that right?

MR. DOWNS: Yes.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: A roll call vote. Is there support for a roll call vote?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, 43.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: A sufficient number.

Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: As I understand this, the question is on agreeing to the amendments. Therefore, those who favor the amendment as it now is in the body of the committee proposal will vote yes. Those who oppose it will vote no.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That is correct.

MR. MARTIN: Therefore, I suggest that those who favor the committee position will vote yes.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Those in favor, vote aye, and those opposed, vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

On agreeing to the Hatch amendment, as amended, the yeas are 87; the nays are 47.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The amendment is agreed to.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Marshall now offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "efficiency" by striking out "without" and inserting "with"; so the language will then read, "The appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency with the approval of the commission."

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hatch.

MR. HATCH: I rise to a point of order. Has not the convention already acted on the balance of this report?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The amendment is in order. While the amendment was offered in the committee of the whole, the amendment was rejected and the convention has no knowledge of it, I am told by the secretary. (laughter) The amendment is in order. Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, this is the same amendment which was offered in committee of the whole, and I urge that you vote no on it.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, I think that the question raised by Mr. Hatch is one worth considering. Didn't the convention already pass all of the rest of the body of Committee Proposal 22?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: I am advised it is true that we have acted on all of the committee report — we have followed this same procedure in connection with other committee proposals — but we have not yet passed the complete proposal. Therefore, the question is on the amendment. Mr. Hood.

MR. HOOD: Mr. President, I would like to request a recorded roll call vote.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: All those in favor of a recorded vote, please indicate. Sufficient number. Those in favor vote aye; those opposed, vote no. The secretary will read the amendment again.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment presently under consideration, by Mr. Marshall, is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Those in favor vote aye and those opposed, no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the vote will be recorded.

On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Marshall, the yeas are 45; the nays are 90.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The amendment is not adopted.

Committee Proposal 22, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 22 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The state civil service shall consist of all positions in the state service except those filled by popular election, heads of departments, members of boards and commissions, the chief executive officer of boards and commissions heading principal departments, employees of courts of record, of the legislature, of the higher state educational institutions, all persons in the armed forces of the state, 8 exempt positions in the office of governor, and within each department, when requested by the department head, 2 other exempt positions, one of which shall be policy making. Three additional positions of a policy making nature may be exempted within each department as determined to be necessary by the civil service commission.

There is hereby created a nonsalaried civil service commission to consist of 4 persons, not more than 2 of whom shall be members of the same political party, appointed by the governor for 8 year, overlapping terms.

The commission shall classify all positions in the state civil service according to their respective duties and responsibilities, fix rates of compensation for all classes of positions, approve or disapprove disbursements for all personnel services, determine by competitive performance exclusively on the basis of merit, efficiency and fitness the qualifications of all candidates for positions in the state civil service, make rules and regulations covering all personnel transactions, and regulate all conditions of employment in the state civil service. No increases in rates of compensation shall take effect until the first day of the fiscal year following submission of such proposed increases to the legislature. Such proposed increases must be submitted to the legislature as part of the governor's budget for a fiscal year in order to be effective on the first day of such fiscal year. The requirements of the 2 preceding sentences may be waived by majority vote of the members of both houses of the legislature. The civil service commission shall recommend to the governor and to the legislature rates of compensation for all appointed unclassified positions within the executive department. No person shall be appointed to or promoted in the state civil service who has not been certified as so qualified for such appointment or promotion by the commission. The appointing authorities may create or abolish positions for reasons of administrative efficiency without the approval of the commission. Any employee considering himself aggrieved by any such abolition shall have an immediate right of appeal to the commission and the courts through established grievance procedures. No removals, demotions, appointments, or promotions in the state civil service shall be made for partisan, racial or religious considerations. Nor shall the creation or abolition of positions be made except for reasons of administrative efficiency.

The administration of the commission's powers shall be vested in a state personnel director who shall be a member of the state civil service and who shall be responsible to and selected by the commission after open competitive examination.

To enable the commission to exercise these powers, the legislature, at the first regular session subsequent to the adoption of this constitution and at each succeeding regular session, shall appropriate to the commission for the ensuing fiscal period a sum not less than 1 per cent of the aggregate annual payroll of the state civil service for the preceding fiscal period, as certified to by the commission. The commission shall return to the state treasury within 6 months all funds unexpended after the conclusion of the fiscal period.

No payment for personal services shall be made or authorized until the provisions of this amendment have been complied with in every particular. Violation of any of the provisions hereof may be restrained or observance compelled by injunctive or mandamus proceedings brought by any citizen of the state.

The commission shall furnish reports of expenditures, at least annually, to the governor and the legislature and shall be subject to annual audit as provided by law.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Report 2007, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, section 27; and Exclusion Report 2008, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 31. It reports these 2 exclusion reports back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they be adopted.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

Exclusion Reports 2007 and 2008 are adopted and referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2007 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 707.

For Exclusion Report 2008 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 708.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Yes, sir, the following notices of committee meetings: the committee on legislative organization will meet in room D tomorrow at 9:00 o'clock. John Hannah, chairman.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 3, will meet in room H at 9:00 o'clock a.m. Claude L. Wood, subcommittee chairman.

The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 1, will meet in room H tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. Richard D. Kuhn, subcommittee chairman.

The committee on legislative powers, the full committee, will meet in room H tomorrow immediately after the session. T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

The committee on education will meet tomorrow morning at 8:30. Alvin M. Bentley, chairman.

The committee on emerging problems will meet Wednesday in committee room I, at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Frank Millard, chairman.

The committee on public information will meet this evening immediately after the session. Ink White, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:30 a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The subcommittee on eminent domain will meet in room G tomorrow morning at 9:00 a.m. Paul R. Mahinske, subcommittee chairman.

The committee on rules and resolutions will meet tonight after the session in room I.

The remaining committee announcements are contained in the composite calendar.

There are the following additional announcements:

The apples today are from Mr. Rush. (applause)

Delegate Prettie wishes the delegates to be reminded of his request for an indication of their views on the method of selecting supreme court justices. Delegates who wish to indicate their desires are requested to turn in their notations to Delegate Prettie's mailbox this evening.

A further announcement: a copy of the 1961-62 Michigan Manual — it is a red book — has been provided through the courtesy of the Honorable James M. Hare, secretary of state. You will find your copy in the drawer of your desk.

That is all of the announcements, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, we will return to reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Exclusion Report 2019, A report recommending the exclusion of sections 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7 of the schedule.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2019 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 850.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege to make a suggestion, if I am in order, to the committees. In the committee on the executive branch, we labored many long hours to arrive at a bipartisan compromise on the civil service provision. As I have stated previously, many of us had different viewpoints. We did arrive at a compromise after many long hours of work. On the floor of the convention here, some sweeping amendments were accepted to this proposal by the chairman of our committee in the name of the committee. I don't know what members of the committee he discussed this with; I know that I was not in accord on it.

It seems to me that if we would give proper thought to these proposals in the committee — now I am not saying that someone should not offer an amendment or that anyone doesn't have a right to offer an amendment — but when we accept or agree to something in the committee and it comes on the floor, I think we ought to be prepared to defend it and that we ought to know what we want in the proposal before we report it out of the committee.

The only amendment I offered covered what I objected to in the committee. There were a couple of other points that I objected to which I did not offer an amendment to. I feel very strongly that if we give more consideration to what we are doing in the committee, once we make the report — if we did not object in the committee — I personally feel that if I don't object in the committee that I should not be objecting on the floor.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The committee did consider a good many amendments including one which Mr. Marshall made on the floor; however, the committee cannot anticipate all of the amendments which might come up. Some of these amendments were made on the floor and the committee chairman has to use his best judgment as to whether they are within the sense of the committee action or whether they are not.

In this instance there were some matters which might have come up and which would have been discussed with the various members of the committee on the executive branch if some of the members had not insisted on terminating the meeting of the committee at its last session; and so there might have been some further discussion of some of these amendments at that time. However, I have no apology to make for the amendments which I indicated I thought were the opinion of the majority of the committee on the executive branch.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Well I just want to set the record straight, Mr. Martin. When the committee terminated its work, I thought all of the committee terminated its work, and at that time the civil service report was already in the hands of the committee of the whole and was not under discussion. There was another topic altogether under discussion at that time.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: The committee on rules and resolutions will meet immediately following the session in room I.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I believe we have completed our work; is that correct?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: To my knowledge we have completed our work.

MR. HOXIE: I move we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Those in favor —

Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. I will be confronted pretty much with the same problem that we had arise tonight. In view of the accelerated pace that we —

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: I am sorry, Delegate Snyder. You are really out of order, because we have a motion to adjourn, and I understand it is not debatable.

MR. SNYDER: I'm sorry. I thought I had the floor before. However, I will hold my point until tomorrow.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: I thought you did, too, but I was incorrect, I am informed. The question, therefore, is on the motion to adjourn. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 10:35 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m. Tuesday, January 30, 1962.]

SIXTY-EIGHTH DAY

Tuesday, January 30, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The convention will come to order.

For the first time during our convention, the father of one of our delegates will offer the invocation. The invocation will be offered by the Reverend Robert Boothby of the Seventh Day Adventist Church of Niles, Michigan. Reverend Boothby is the father of Lee Boothby.

REVEREND BOOTHBY: O Thou great Architect of the Universe and our most wonderful heavenly Father, we pray for a large measure of Thy blessings upon these delegates chosen by this, our state of Michigan. We are aware that these are days of multitudinous perplexities that are most difficult to solve, but we are also reminded that Thou dost have perfect understanding of these times and Thou hast invited us to receive of Thee knowledge for every duty. Our hearts are often filled with gratitude as we retrospect how Thou didst guide our forefathers in conceiving and bringing forth a constitution that has made our beloved America a land of liberty for all. We have confidence to believe that Thou wilt be equally merciful in giving direction and wisdom to these assembled, chosen men and women, that they may forge a constitution that will preserve these blessings for every man and woman in every section of our state.

Free every member of this elect body, we pray, from all selfish interest, and we pray that each may approach every decision with teachable humility and yet with indomitable courage to protect the rights and freedoms of all. So bless them all and each of us, we pray. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Will all those present vote aye on the voting machine.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to the session today, Mr. King filed a request to be excused from the afternoon session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, it is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mr. King, Mr. Nisbet, Mr. Thomson, Mr. Walker and Mr. Woolfenden.

Absent without leave: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduces Exclusion Report 2020, A report recommending the exclusion of section 9 of the schedule.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2020 and the reasons submitteed in support thereof, see below, page 850.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Committee Proposal 45, A proposal to guarantee the right of disposition to the owner of real property. Amends article II by adding a new section; with the recommendation that it pass.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 45 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below under date of April 10.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Exclusion Report 2021, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, sections 2 and 3.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2021 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 851.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Exclusion Report 2022, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 5.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2022 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 851.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Exclusion Report 2023, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 6.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2023 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 851.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Pollock, for the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, introduces Exclusion Report 2024, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 7.

James K. Pollock, chairman.

For Exclusion Report 2024 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below, page 851.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the committee reports presently on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Last night, following the motion for adjournment, the Chair improperly recognized Delegate Snyder. The Chair will again recognize Delegate Snyder at this time.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you very much, Mr. President. I rise to a point of inquiry either from the Chair or possibly from the chairman of the rules and resolutions committee. I, along with many other delegates, have submitted proposals which we felt were very important to us and to our constituents and to the people of the state of Michigan. It was my understanding that during the course of the committee meetings we would have an opportunity to present our point of view and our arguments in committee. I felt that this was something that we should do because it is much easier to explain your problems to a small committee and, in addition to this, it does tend to keep the convention from being cluttered up with trivia or minutiae. (laughter) I find, however, that not only has the period of time elapsed when the delegates can speak in favor of their proposals, but, what concerns me even more deeply now is that the committees will cease to function in committee, and we as delegates who feel very strongly on problems have only the alternative of having a very weak and ineffective device at our disposal to present this as an amendment.

Now, what recourse do we have other than this, Mr. President, to present our points of view? I have one problem in particular that affects 200,000 people in my immediate district and 500,000 people in my county, and I did pledge I would bring this matter to the attention of the committee dealing with this problem. At this particular point I haven't been summoned. I have been available. I have offered. I have made several steps. Where do I go from here?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen, would you care to comment?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, Mr. Snyder, it seems to me that the committees have now been meeting for 4 months and there has been ample opportunity in every committee with which I am familiar for individual delegates seeking to be heard on their proposals to do so. If they have not availed themselves of that opportunity up to now, it seems that the recourse available to them is to offer their proposals as amendments on the floor to such committee proposals as they may be germane to—pardon me for ending the sentence with a proposition — (laughter) — preposition — (laughter)

MR. SNYDER: The only thing is, I have made myself available. I have been down there and I have been told that my proposition wasn't under discussion, that I would be advised, and here we are again. I am not in disagreement, Dick. We've got to vote, but we have got the problem; so where do we go to from here?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Do you have any further comments, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Snyder, are you talking about more than one committee or one committee?

MR. SNYDER: This is one specific committee.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Would you care to direct your question to the chairman of the committee?

MR. SNYDER: Yes, I will—to Mr. D. Hale Brake, the chairman of the committee on finance and taxation. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Snyder, we are meeting immediately following this session. Come down.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you. I will be there. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Conklin is recognized.

MRS. CONKLIN: Mr. President, a point of personal privilege. A statement was made here last night to which I would like to take exception. I am referring to the statement made by Delegate Marshall when he commented that he, as a member of the minority party here, had "finally broken into" the vote of the majority party. I would like to point out that an examination of the voting records clearly documents that the claims of Delegate Marshall lack any sort of substantiation. For example, recorded roll call votes of 80 to 50, 76 to 61, 81 to 54, and division of votes in the committee of the whole such as 69 to 67, 66 to 66, 68 to 53, and so forth, would indicate to all unbiased persons that there has been bipartisan support many times prior to last night.

I personally resent the implication of Mr. Marshall that if I vote with him I am showing good judgment but if I oppose him I am being dictated to. I would suggest that if Mr. Marshall will first check the record he will not make such wild claims in the future even for the purpose of grandstanding. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, if I offended Delegate Conklin I will apologize to her. As she will recall, the time I made the statement was when we were taking the series of votes on whether or not we were going to have local option for the sale of alcoholic beverages, et cetera. Myself, along with 2 other delegates, had introduced an amendment which would have excluded Wayne, Oakland and Macomb from selling alcoholic beverages, and I think anyone on the floor of the convention yesterday afternoon that was sitting here should know that I made the statement at the time in a jocular fashion and I was being facetious. (laughter) If the delegate took offense, I am sorry.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Conklin.

MRS. CONKLIN: I would just like to thank Mr. Marshall for his comments.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: There is no item on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no special orders for the day.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: General orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: They have been postponed until Thursday.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E today immediately following the session. D Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B today immediately after the session. Robert J. Danhof, chairman.

The other committee meeting announcements are found on the composite calendar with no further announcement of them necessary.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and members of the convention, the committee on administration will meet tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock. We have invited Franklin DeWald, the civil service director, to come in and talk about employment opportunities for staff members after the convention.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Gust is recognized —but before you make your motion, Delegate Gust—requests for leaves of absence.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Butler requests to be excused from the session of Friday; and Mr. Romney wishes to be excused from the Wednesday session, due to unavoidable business matters in New York.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, the requests for leaves of absence will be granted.

For the information of those in the gallery, tomorrow is the deadline for committee reports and, in consequence, the general orders of the day which would occasion discussion and debate have been deferred to permit the committees to complete their work.

Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: I would like to make an announcement. I just looked on the calendar and it was not there. The committee on emerging problems will meet tomorrow noon at 1:00 o'clock in room I. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Gust.

MR. GUST: Mr. President, it is my privilege at this time to make the motion to adjourn, but because this has been a very short and rapid session and because many of our guests have come some distance, before the Chair calls for a vote on it, I respectfully request that I be allowed to yield the floor to Dr. Charles Anspach for a few pertinent remarks before we leave.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President and fellow delegates, as a delegate to this convention, I compliment Mr. Gust on this very appropriate motion of his, because it expresses concern for our welfare and for our physical good. Last night Mr. Austin presented a resolution also expressing his concern for our good. Inasmuch as we are about to go into committee sessions, I think that you should be aware of the importance of taking care of yourself; otherwise, you will end up and will have to avail yourself of the services Mr. Austin proposed in his resolution.

This man went to the physician for a physical examination. The doctor had a profile chart. Each time he would find something wrong with his patient, he would perforate the chart. When he was through with the examination, he found the chart was pretty well perforated. There was an old player piano there, so he wondered what would happen if he put it on the player piano. He put it on the player piano and it played, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Martin is recognized.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, just a matter of information that may be important to other chairmen and committee members: tomorrow being the last day for the introduction of these committee proposals, do I understand that the convention, after it meets tomorrow, will recess from time to time to give the balance of the day for the introduction of proposals, or just how is that to be done? Can we have a little information on that?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin, I speak only for myself, but it is a matter to which, as chairman of the rules committee, I have given some thought. I think in order to give the committees the full benefit of tomorrow in order to get their work completed, it would be appropriate for the convention, following the completion of its business at the 2:00 p.m. session, to recess for such time as to permit the committees to complete their work tomorrow.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: In view of the fact that tomorrow is the deadline for the committee proposals, is it still possible to submit minority reports to the convention after tomorrow?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Taking the mantle of authority again, Mr. President, Mr. Sterrett, minority reports are governed by the same rules in terms of presentation as majority reports. They would be in order up until the deadline or the time for submission of regular committee proposals and reports.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, members of the convention, I would like to express the hope that the committees have all day tomorrow and on until midnight tomorrow night. The committee that I have been the chairman of as yet has not been able to agree—no 11 members of the committee have been able to agree—and I would hope that we might have all day tomorrow and that somehow or other the rules committee will work it out so that any reports that are returned to the desk by midnight tomorrow night would be accepted. Otherwise, I think it is going to be very unfair both to the committees and to minority members if they want to present minority reports.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen, I assume that the request made by Delegate Hannah is in order and will be recognized.

MR. VAN DUSEN: It is and it will be, providing the convention supports it, as I think it should.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: And as I understand it, the general order of business will be passed tomorrow as well to permit committees to concentrate on committee reports?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That is correct. Just to amplify my earlier statement, Mr. President, I would assume that following the completion of our regular order of business tomorrow the convention would recess until an appropriate hour, perhaps 8:00 p.m., to see how the committees were situated at that point. If they still had not completed their work, the convention could further recess until 10:00 p.m. and so on as necessary.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct this question to either the Chair or Mr. Van Dusen. In the event that a committee does not report out all the work that it has by midnight tomorrow night, what is the status of the committee's jurisdiction as a committee over those items? Does it lose it automatically, or what?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: This would be up to the convention, Mr. Mahinske.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to make this comment: in the event that there is a minority report from any committee, it seems to me that the people who prepare that report need to know what the majority report will be, first. They may wish to make some comment on the majority report. They may wish to dissent from it. They cannot possibly do so until they see it, until they see the text. Now, for that reason —that is one of the reasons I am going to make a certain motion, and another reason is this: any minority report—or any majority report, for that matter—that comes out of a committee on Wednesday under our rules could not possibly be acted on under any circumstances before Monday. Similarly, anything that comes to the convention by Friday, also, would not be able to be acted upon before Monday. Therefore, there is no difference, insofar as being able to act, as to whether a proposal reaches the floor Friday or Monday or Wednesday; and, in view of those 2 reasons: one, that no harm can be done by allowing 2 extra days for minority reports and two, that there is a reason why extra time is required; I would like to move, and I do move, that minority reports be accepted any time until Friday midnight.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I am able to speak only for myself, of course, but I think Dr. Nord's motion is a reasonable one and I would urge concurrence.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Do other delegates wish to address themselves to this motion? Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I just wanted to amend that to make it Monday evening because, for instance, I want to bring out a minority report and I have asked the research department to assist me, and that has been approximately a week or 10 days ago and I still haven't got that completed. Now it may take the rest of this week for all I know. I am still waiting for them to put it in my box.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You are making a motion?

MR. MADAR: I would like to amend that to read, give us until Monday evening, the Monday evening session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there other comment on this motion and the amendment? Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Shouldn't we properly suspend the rules first before we even go into debate on this?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: No, the question is on the amendment. The amendment is to permit minority reports to be filed through Monday. Delegate Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to address this question to Mr. Van Dusen or anyone else who can answer it. I am a little bit confused again. What is the authority, Mr. Van Dusen, for this specific time that you have been giving us here? I understood that we adopted a resolution which was a "tentative proposal" for time to accomplish these things. Has this now been reduced to the status of a rule of the convention or enlarged, rather, to the status of a rule?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, Mr. Ford, the status of the resolution has neither been enlarged nor contracted. It was a resolution establishing a deadline which stands as such.

MR. FORD: Would you tell me the number of the resolution, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: My recollection at present, Mr. President and Mr. Ford, is that it is Resolution 41, but I am not positive of that.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair would like to recognize delegates who want to address themselves to the motion rather than to other matters; so, if we may, let's complete action on this amendment first. Does Delegate Erickson want to address himself to the amendment?

MR. ERICKSON: I want to support Delegate Nord's motion, but I don't think it is quite liberal enough. Now I don't see any reason why we cannot let some of these minority reports come in for maybe another week or 10 days, because they are not going to be coming on general orders until that time and we are going to have plenty of time to be put on notice what they are. I know in our group there are—I think I know of 2 minority reports — and they aren't going to have time to get those in, and I don't know why we cannot be practical about the situation. Nothing will be hurt by lengthening the time because these items will not be coming up on general orders for some time yet.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Madar. Those in favor of the amendment to the motion say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

The question is now on the motion by Delegate Nord, as amended. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

The motion as amended, prevails.

Delegate Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, I would now like to move—if a motion is necessary—that instead of resorting to the gimmick of having the convention recess from hour to hour tomorrow that we suspend the rules, if that is necessary, so that committee reports received on the desk of the secretary by midnight tomorrow night are regarded as meeting the deadline already established by this convention.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Delagate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I simply rise, Mr. President, in support of Dr. Hannah's motion.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Brake, do you want to speak to this motion?

MR. BRAKE: Yes, I think so. I am concerned with another phase of this matter of getting the reports in even by midnight. It looks to me as if there is going to be a terrific jam in our drafting and research division. Suppose a committee has completed its work on the proposition, everything done that a committee can do as a committee, but, because of stenographic difficulties, drafting difficulties, we cannot get the report in. Are we barred out?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there anything in the rules on that, Mr. Van Dusen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: There is nothing, Mr. President, in the rule or the resolution, but, as General Grant said to President Lincoln, "Let's cross Fox Creek when we come to it." (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hoxie, do you wish to address yourself to the motion? The motion is the motion of Delegate Hannah that any committee report filed with the secretary by midnight tomorrow night be accepted as having met the deadline. Delegate Mahinske, do you want to address yourself to this motion?

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I agree with Mr. Brake, and I think we are at Fox Creek right now. If we cannot get it typed up and we cannot get it to the desk, it is not submitted.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion of Delegate Hannah.

MR. MAHINSKE: Frankly, I do not see what is so magic about a Wednesday just because it happens to be the thirty-first.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, I move an amendment that we determine midnight by this clock on the wall, so we can stop it at 5 minutes of, if we have to. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I just cannot refrain from making an observation to the suggestion last made about stopping the clock. You know the legislature did that for years, and finally the legislature overcame that habit. I hope that the constitutional convention doesn't fall into the same thing. Might I suggest to you that I think we are quite a lot like the legislature, but I think there are a lot of you here that thought we were going to be a lot different. I think you are getting more like the legislature every day. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair would like to make a statement to see if it will be helpful. Without objection, the Chair would like to indicate that it is the sense of this motion that if the chairman of the committee notifies the secretary that the committee has completed action on a proposal and on the substance of the report for the proposal, that notification shall constitute a filing of the report with the secretary in conformance with the deadline. Is there objection to that interpretation of the Hannah motion? Delegate Mahinske?

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, we have one other mild problem here and this is the question of concurrent jurisdiction on some of these proposals. Now they have to be submitted to the chairmen and the committees of the concurrent jurisdiction committees. How are we going to handle this?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: All right, that will be comprehended by the motion here. It would require the indication by the 2 committees, as I understand it. Is that correct, Mr. Van Dusen, it would have to have notification by the 2 committee chairmen?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, there is nothing in the official resolutions of the convention with respect to concurrent jurisdiction. It is a device which we have uniformly adopted as between committees and, therefore, the question of concurrence is not affected by the deadline tomorrow.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, the interpretation will apply to the chairman of the committee of original jurisdiction.

Delegate Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, am I safe in assuming that the motion before us will apply to minority reports as well as to the committee reports per se?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Well, this motion does not relate to minority reports, Delegate Nord. That was an earlier motion then, your motion as amended, and that set a deadline of Monday night.

MR. NORD: No, the question I had in mind was would you say that when it is tendered, or when there is notification to the secretary that there is a report —

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Dr. Nord, I think we might deal with that after we dispose of this motion, but you would certainly be in order to raise that question as soon as we dispose of this motion.

MR. NORD: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, complying with your ruling, I take great pleasure, on behalf of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, in saying that our reports on all business before us are in the hands of the secretary. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion of Delegate Hannah. Those in favor of the motion, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Delegate Nord is recognized.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to move the exact same motion with respect to minority reports; namely, that any 3 or more persons who intend to file a minority report and have decided what it shall be, shall notify the secretary within the deadline that has been provided and that that be regarded as a filing of the minority report. Am I correct in stating the motion now?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion, which is really an interpretation of the earlier motion. Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I must respectfully oppose Dr. Nord's motion. I think the time for submission of minority reports was extended for the purpose of permitting them to be completely prepared, and it seems to me that 4 days, which is the time involved, should be amply sufficient for that purpose.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Nord.

MR. NORD: Well, Mr. President, I would like to point this out: that in the event that the majority report is going to be delayed in this manner—that is to say, the text will not be available on the right date—then the minority report will really be in trouble unless the same rule applies; and, therefore, as long as the majority proposal will have this extension, it seems to me that you must have the same extension for the minority proposal.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection to an interpretation of the Nord motion that it will provide those filing minority reports 3 calendar days following the filing and the availability of the text of the majority report?

MR. MARTIN: I object, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The only problem here is that the simple notification that they are going to file a minority report leaves the question entirely open as to when the minority report gets in, and there is an advantage to everybody in having these minority reports as early as we can in relation to the majority report, so that we don't have a minority report coming in the last day before we get into discussion of the majority report. So that it is desirable that the minority get their reports in, if they have them, within a time as close as possible to these majority reports.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The suggestion was that the filers of minority reports be given 3 days following the availability of the written text of the majority report.

MR. MARTIN: This I don't object to, but I am only objecting to Dr. Nord's proposal that if they just notify the secretary that they are going to have a minority report, then they have an unlimited time to file it. That is what it amounts to.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The interpretation that was made for the purpose of seeing if there was objection was that they have 3 days following the availability of the written report. Is there an objection to that?

MR. MARTIN: No, I have no objection to that.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Then let me be specific on that. That means that if the majority report became available Monday night then the minority would have 3 calendar days beyond that in which to file their minority report.

If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I can anticipate one problem that we are going to be faced with in our various committees. Our legislative powers committee is, I think, in good shape to meet the deadline, with this proviso: the question arose some time ago that we had a schedule set up for committee meetings which the various chairmen were requested to follow. I find that that schedule is not being complied with. Now we are going into a marathon proposition. We do have some items in our committee that need consideration. Are we going to follow our schedule so that when we have the committee meetings that we can depend upon Mr. Baginski, who is on another committee, or Mr. Hubbs or Mr. Powell, and we follow the schedule; are the other committees also going to follow the schedule, so they will not take our members away from each other? I think that is a really serious problem in this marathon, and we might as well face up to it and find a solution at this time.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair would suggest that the committee chairmen adhere to the schedule to the fullest extent possible. Now some committees have completed their work to my knowledge, but certainly this would be a desirable thing to do.

Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: In support of Mr. Hoxie's statement, I would like to point out to this convention that before the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule we have 15 sections that we have not made any decision with respect to. We will be meeting in this marathon meeting right after the convention adjourns. I am also on the committee on finance and taxation, which will be meeting after this convention adjourns.

There are a couple of minority reports which we have indicated that we would like to get out of the committee on finance and taxation. I am sure there will be some minority reports with respect to the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule. I don't see how we are going to be able to comply with this, let alone how our stenographic pool will be able to type and prepare all this material within the time specified.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: I point out the problem that will rise if a completed and drafted majority proposal is filed on Friday. Our 3 days will expire on Monday and we will not have an opportunity to do the work.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you. Mr. President and fellow delegates, I invite attention to our journal, page 190, Resolution 45, which is the resolution having to do with the timetable. Subsection 3 of that resolution reads:

> All substantive committee proposals and supporting reports shall be submitted to the convention and placed on general orders in accordance with rule 57, paragraph 2, on or before January 31, 1962.

I also invite attention to rule 68 of this convention having to do with the amendment or suspension of rules which requires a vote of 2/3 of the delegates shown to be present by the journal entries.

In order that our record on this matter may be clear, I move, sir, that the rules be suspended and that sub-paragraph 3 of Resolution 45 be amended to provide the interpretations that have been discussed and ruled upon by the Chair permitting the filing of majority reports up until the deadline stated with the following provision for the filing of minority reports or dissenting therefrom.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

It is so ordered.

Delegate Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: Well, I am looking for trouble right now. I see the judiciary has called a meeting after this and the finance and taxation. This has happened on many occasions before. Our committee has had to adjourn. We were going to meet on Friday. We were going to meet on last Monday, but other committees beat us to it, so we had this notice for quite awhile and I notice that other people are preempting this time on us.

I believe that these folks that have these minority reports should be respected and I cannot see any reason why they should not be, from a practical viewpoint. These proposals are going on general orders in committee of the whole; they will not be up for at least 2 weeks, many of them. I would like to move that all minority reports be accepted up to February 13.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Delegate Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. President, I would like to make an observation: the timetable is being upset and maybe that is necessary in some respects, but, looking through the rule book here, rule 33, as I read it, requires that the minority reports by 3 or more delegates be reported and printed in the same manner as the majority reports. It goes on to say that they are treated as amendments or substitutes offered to or for the report of the committee. Now, maybe I am wrong in my construction, but it seems to me that we cannot act on any of these things—and maybe it isn't important—until we get that minority report, because, actually, as an amendment or a substitute, it would be first considered. I point it out, if I am correct, only to show that the delay on all these minority reports—and I can see the reason therefor—is going to delay consideration of the majority report for the reason that I am reading.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I would just like to be doubly sure, now, before we go any further, that if Friday is the last date for publication of the majority report of a committee then the first calendar date for the minority report is Monday, the second is Tuesday and the third is Wednesday. Is that the proper interpretation?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The interpretation is that the proponents of a minority report shall have 3 calendar days following the availability of the text of the majority report to file their report.

Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I think you very clearly stated the provision of the resolutions currently adopted by the convention. It seems to me that Mr. Cudlip's point is very well taken and, for that reason, I would strongly oppose Mr. Erickson's motion. As long as the proponents of a minority report have 3 days within which to consider the published majority report before their report must be filed, it seems to me that they are given ample time.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair will advise the delegates that in line with the action taken on previous motions, as suggested by Delegate Prettie, the rules require a 2/3 vote to suspend the rules and to pass the Erickson motion.

Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I do not understand that the resolution adopted by the convention relative to these deadlines has the solemnity and the formality of a rule, and it seems to me as though the resolution was subject to amendment by the motion made on the floor. I would not have understood that we were faced with the necessity of suspending any rules here.

I do want to say this: that I must disagree with Chairman Erickson, much as he desires to meet the problem in that way, because, might I point out, again, that if we wait until February 13 for the receipt of all minority reports, that means that nothing much can come on the floor until after that time because anybody can get up and say, "Well, we proposed a minority report and you have not had time to see our minority report." Therefore, the work of the convention will be delayed another 2 weeks.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hutchinson has persuaded the secretary and the Chair that the previous ruling was incorrect and that a majority vote is all that is required to pass the Erickson amendment.

Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: A point of information. When you responded to Delegate Lundgren's question, you kept mentioning 3 calendar days. Now are you talking about convention calendar days?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That is correct.

MR. MAHINSKE: On which there would be sessions?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: No. Calendar days.

MR. MAHINSKE: You are talking about the succeeding—

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: I am talking about calendar days.

MR. MAHINSKE: The subsequent 72 hours, whether they fall on weekends or not?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That's right.

MR. MAHINSKE: And not session days?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That's right. Not session days.

Delegate Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to move to include session days, not calendar days, to take care of the Friday to Monday situation for the minority reports.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: We have before us, Miss Donnelly, a motion by Delegate Erickson to extend the time to February 13. I don't believe your amendment would apply to his motion but, rather, would come later, unless you want to amend his motion to be 3 session days rather than February 13. Is that your motion?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Donnelly amends Delegate Erickson's motion to provide that the proponents of minority reports shall have 3 session days following the availability of the written majority report. The question is on the amendment to the motion. Those in favor of the amendment to the motion, say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Those in favor of the motion as amended, say aye; opposed, no.

The motion, as amended, prevails.

DELEGATES: Division.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: A division is asked for. The motion, as amended, is a motion to provide that proponents of minority reports shall have 3 session days following the availability of the written majority reports in which to file their minority report. If the motion, as amended, is adopted, then the proponents of minority reports will have 3 session days. If the motion is defeated — Mr. Secretary, what is the situation there?

The secretary rules that the adoption of the amendment took out reference to February 13, and, therefore, the question is on the adoption of the motion, as amended. Division has been requested. We are voting on the question of whether we will adopt the motion providing 3 session days following the availability of the written majority report for the filing of a minority report; 3 session days. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: A point of order, Mr. President. I thought Miss Donnelly's motion to amend Mr. Erickson's motion wasn't in order at the time because you said it came afterwards.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair rules the point of order comes too late. (laughter)

A division has been requested. Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, a point of information on the motion on which we are voting, which I believe is in order. You referred to the availability of the report of the committee. I would like an explanation of what you refer to as "availability". Does that mean after it has been delivered to the desk?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: After it has been filed in writing with the secretary.

MR. HOXIE: Is that it?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The secretary interprets "availability" as meaning printed in the journal. Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: If I understand this, then if the motion is voted for, if you vote yes, the minority will have 3 session days. If they vote no, the original motion will obtain, that is, 3 calendar days.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That is correct. It is a question of 3 session days or 3 calendar days. A division has been demanded. Those in favor vote aye; opposed, vote no. Has everyone voted?

SECRETARY CHASE: The machine is now locked and the totals will be recorded.

On the motion, as amended, the yeas are 98; the nays are 32.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The motion prevails.

Delegate Gust is recognized.

MR. GUST: Mr. President, some time ago I made a motion here that takes precedence over all others. I said to myself mentally I shall never yield the floor again, but Dr. Anspach said he would like to make one last remark, so I will yield the floor to Dr. Anspach. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President and fellow delegates, a while ago we expressed concern for your physical welfare and physical well being. I have a way to beat the deadline.

This woman asked her mistress for 3 days off because she needed to bury her husband. Within the time, she came back and she was very happy, singing and whistling, and the good lady said, "I can't understand it. Three days ago you asked to be off in order to bury your husband; here you are the happiest I have ever seen you. Why?" "Well," she said, "you know Sam wasn't a very good person. He wasn't very faithful to us. He didn't work. He didn't support the family. Now I've got him doing something I've never been able to do before, for after he died I had him cremated, I put his ashes in an hourglass, put it on a revolving drum, and now I've got him working 24 hours a day." (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The secretary has an announcement.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative organization will meet in room D immediately after the session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Gust.

MR. GUST: I move we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion of Mr. Gust that we adjourn. Those in favor say aye.

We are adjourned until 2:00 tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 2:55 o'clock p.m. the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, January 31, 1962.]

SIXTY-NINTH DAY

Wednesday, January 31, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today is to be given by the Reverend Halley B. Oliver of the First Congregational Church of Owosso. Mr. Oliver is Delegate Bentley's pastor. Today he is using the same prayer that he used to open the United States House of Representatives in 1960. Mr. Oliver. Will you please rise.

REVEREND OLIVER: Our gracious heavenly Father, we pause before Thee to seek the blessing of Thy guidance for the work of this day.

May, O Lord, those prayers made by Thy churches and people for this nation and these Thy servants prepare hearts and minds for the working of Thy Holy Spirit.

We so often pray for Thy wisdom, Thy Spirit and Thy love; yet it is too high. We cannot attain unto it. Make us, therefore, aware that we have wisdom from Thee; help us to use it, that we have felt Thy Spirit; grant that we be receptive to it.

We know the conditions of Thy love and that it casteth out fear. May mercy and justice be shown.

Give these Thy servants the understanding that the nation and state honor them and look to their work. May what is done be pleasing in Thy sight. We pray in the name of the Master. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to the session today, we were in receipt of 2 requests to be excused from today's session: Mr. Walker, because of illness; and Dr. Hannah wishes to be excused from today's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mr. J. A. Hannah, Mr. Romney, Mr. Thomson, Mr. Walker and Mr. Woolfenden.

Absent without leave: Mr. Greene.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Greene is excused.

Delegate Proposal 1340, A proposal to limit the power of sale and disposition of certain public property and to require state officers under certain circumstances to resist condemnation by the United States government. Amends article V by adding a new section thereto; with the recommendation that the proposal be referred to the committee on emerging problems.

T. Jefferson Hoxie, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be referred to the committee on emerging problems.

Hearing none, it is referred.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports at this time, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no special orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would like to make a humorous observation—and I mean it to be humorous. At this point I would like to apologize to Dr. Anspach because I know I shall never be able to measure up to his humor.

Thus far it perhaps has been rather difficult to determine the achievements and contributions of our convention. However, in today's editorial in the Detroit Free Press, I think that we have found one. Before the convention I always read about "B" girls, but now I find that we have "B" boys, and, if you are a proponent of county home rule, I surmise that the "B" boys are almost as bad as the "B" girls. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Anspach, do you want to defend yourself? (laughter)

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration will meet in the conference room tomorrow, February 1, at 1:00 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B immediately after the session today. Robert Danhof, chairman.

The committee on rules and resolutions will meet in room 5 immediately after the session today.

The remaining committee meeting announcements are found on the composite calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is not rebuttal. The committee on finance and taxation will meet tomorrow morning at its usual time, 10:30; the business at hand will be taking of a photograph. I want to get this done before the committee disintegrates or is annihilated—(laughter) and would like every member of the committee present, please.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leaves of absence: Mr. McAllister requests to be excused from Monday's session; Dr. Anspach wishes to be excused from the sessions of Thursday and Friday, February 8 and 9. He is asking to be excused in order to keep an engagement to speak at the Arizona State University, where he has been asked to give a convocation address at the dedication of a new school of education.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

It is usually not the practice to present guests, but we have a rather unusual situation today in that the school of government from the city of Detroit — there are 62 members, a nonpartisan group interested in studying government — is here today with their educational director, Mrs. Rucker. We are very happy to welcome you and we are sorry there was not room for you. They plan to attend one of the committee sessions. (applause)

The Chair recognizes Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye; opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 2:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 2:00 o'clock p.m., Thursday, February 1, 1962.]

SEVENTIETH DAY

Thursday, February 1, 1962, 2:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will come to order.

The invocation today will be delivered by the Reverend J. H. Johnson of the Greater Middle Baptist Church, Royal Oak township. Reverend Johnson.

REVEREND JOHNSON: Our Father in heaven, again in Thy presence we come to Thee to give thanks and give adoration to Thy blessed name for Thy goodness and for Thy kindness and for Thy mercy towards the sons of men. We thank Thee for this privilege even to be in this session, to have the opportunity even to offer a word of prayer in this, another convention. We pray Lord, as they come together to bring about a better condition of life, that Thou wilt instill into their hearts and minds the better things to do in life. We pray for this constitutional convention. We pray that Thou wouldst lift the heads and hearts of the many that now are thus engaged. Help us and bless us. These words we ask in Thy name. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All those present will vote aye. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Messrs. Allen, Bonisteel, Nisbet and Powell from today's session; and Mr. Greene, indefinitely, due to illness.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests for excuse will be granted. I hear no objections; it is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Allen, Bonisteel, Greene, Nisbet, Powell and Thomson.

Absent without leave: None.

[During the proceedings, the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. Bonisteel and Powell.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on rules and resolutions, by Mr. Van Dusen, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 68, A resolution establishing the time of daily sessions. The committee reports the resolution with an amendment, recommending that the amendment be agreed to and the resolution as thus amended be adopted.

The committee amendment is as follows:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 1, after "February" by striking out "1" and inserting "2".

R. C. Van Dusen, chairman.

Following is the language as it would read:

Resolved, that beginning February 1 the convention shall meet at 2:00 o'clock p.m. on Monday, and at 9:00 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, such schedule to continue until changed by the convention.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President and members of the convention, the amendment, of course, is self explanatory. Today being February 1, we obviously cannot begin on February 1 holding sessions at 9:00 o'clock in the morning. The committee therefore has suggested we begin this tomorrow.

One general comment on the matter of scheduling. I think the resolution itself is perfectly self explanatory, and now that the committee work is over, and we have a very heavy general orders calendar to work through, it is the opinion of the rules committee that we should begin meeting on Monday at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon instead of 8:00, and on Tuesday through Friday at 9:00 o'clock in the morning. This would permit 2 sessions a day on each of these days; on Monday at 2:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. and the balance of the week at 9:00 o'clock in the morning and 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Now, a couple of comments about the first few days of this schedule. First, I think it is recognized that many of the delegates perhaps made plans for tomorrow afternoon which would make it difficult for them to attend the session then, and I think in all likelihood there would be no session tomorrow afternoon. We would simply meet at 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning and run through noon and then adjourn. On Monday afternoon, if any of you have made commitments which would necessitate your being absent, and you are interested in particular matters on the calendar, I would urge you to contact the committee chairman involved in that particular report, and I am sure there would be no difficulty in having it passed temporarily so it wouldn't be reached until evening. The committee gave careful attention to these times. They accommodate as nearly as possible the needs of our work schedule and all of the delegates, and I would urge, first, the adoption of the amendment, and second, the adoption of the resolution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment recommended by the committee to the resolution. The delegate from Washtenaw, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I would like to hear the amendment to the resolution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment to the resolution offered by the committee is to strike out "beginning February 1" and insert in lieu thereof "beginning February 2."

All those in favor of the committee amendment say aye. Those opposed, say no.

The amendment is adopted.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I do not have the resolution in front of me, but I should like to move an amendment to the resolution, to strike 9:00 o'clock and substitute 10:00, and in the process of doing so to tell a story of one of our famous professors at Ann Arbor who used to say that he didn't mind 8:00 o'clock classes because you could stay up until then, but it was 9:00 o'clock classes that bothered him. (laughter)

I think we will get more done, Mr. President, by meeting at 10:00 o'clock to 12:00 and 2:00 until the late afternoon than by starting at 9:00, and I make this motion.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Washtenaw, Mr. Pollock, offers to amend the resolution as follows:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, after "and at" by striking out "9" and inserting "10".

This would commence daily sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon rather than 9:00 o'clock. On that amendment, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, this is the first I had realized that Dr. Pollock was a 10:00 o'clock scholar. (laughter) I would mention that the committee gave this careful consideration and in our opinion it was a more satisfactory proposal to meet at 9:00 so that everybody gets here and gets down to work and then if there appears to be need for some free time for meetings, or for other matters later in the day, a recess earlier in the morning than noon would accomplish that purpose. For that reason I would oppose Dr. Pollock's amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment offered by Dr. Pollock, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would speak in support of the amendment offered by Dr. Pollock, and I would like to point out that as to this particular committee report — I have no knowledge whether it was unanimous or not for this reason: even though I am a member of the committee and I spoke to Mr. Van Dusen — he knew that I was opposed to some parts of it — there was nothing I could do about that or nothing he could do about that because I had to be in a different committee at the exact same time, namely, the legislative organization committee. This rules committee met at an unusual time, and I requested that it meet at that time, but then the legislative organization committee decided that it would meet at that time too and as a result I appeared at the legislative organization committee and when that committee finished its deliberations I asked to be excused—they were not finished, only partly finished—to attend the rules committee meeting, and found out that had been terminated.

The reason I mentioned this is not to bring up a sad story of this particular case, but simply to point out that this is the very kind of thing that is causing trouble in the convention, and that the schedule that we are about to adopt is going to continue that kind of trouble. The kind of trouble I mean is this: you must be in at least 2 places at the same time. Now, I find that I can be in approximately 1½ places at the same time but no more. I just can't quite make it. I can't be in 2 places at the same time.

Now, I would like to point this out, Mr. President: that what we are doing now is basically to take into account that we would not be in committee meetings and therefore we can be in plenary session. But I have spoken to a great many people on this point, and consulted with my own physique and mental condition too, and I found out there is some limit to how long you can debate any subject. I might add that I don't intend to find out what that limit is right this minute. But there is a limit. Many people have told me that after 2 hours they cannot understand what is going on. I noticed several times Dr. Hannah took the floor and basically said so; said that people were leaving and people couldn't tell what was happening and I believe he said in his experience 2 hours was the limit. I have taught many classes that were longer than 2 hours, 3 hours, for example, and I believe Dr. Hannah's observation on that point is exactly correct: 2 hours is the limit.

Now, another point is this: if we start at 9:00 o'clock—and I presume we would end as late as we can stay awake, 5:00 or 6:00 o'clock — there will be no time for anything whatever except the deliberation.

Now, I ask the convention to consider this question: if we do nothing but talk, that is, nothing but debate, how good will the debate be? We will have to do all our thinking on the floor. We will have no time for preparation. We will have time to prepare only while we are sitting here listening to somebody else. The debate will not be good. It will be repetitious. It will not be well organized. It will be like going into a lawsuit and being handed the brief and the information, affidavits and testimony for the first time when you walk into court. You cannot do a quick and efficient job that way. This is particularly the case right now; when the debate will be organized. Right now the majority reports are being produced, minority reports will have to be produced in response thereto, and a certain amount of time and some place is required for the preparation of those reports. A certain amount of time and some place is required further for the preparation of the debate.

Now, in my opinion, I believe Dr. Pollock is exactly correct in stating that we ought to allow some time in the morning to do something besides come in here and pop off the first thing that comes into our minds. We should have an hour, an hour and a half to do some thinking, some writing, some research. I think that the fact that this particular resolution has come up in the way it has come up — the resolution itself came up in a rush. The people could not even be there to express their views in the committee. The same thing is going to happen here. Therefore, I believe Dr. Pollock is correct and he ought to be supported.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to add to the remarks that we have heard. I am in support of the amendment for 10:00 o'clock for the simple reason that our daily journal for the prior day, which we rely on, is not delivered until 9:00 o'clock in the morning at the earliest, and if we start to convene at 9:00 o'clock in the morning we won't have the benefit of the information in the daily journal pertaining to the sessions of the day previous. For that reason alone — not alone, but in addition to other reasons — I would support Dr. Pollock's amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Allegan, Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President and delegates, I would like to support the committee's position in this matter. Nine o'clock is not an unreasonable hour. Reference was made to the fact that we could not be in 2 places at one time. With that I agree. I would suggest that we be here on the job, the place that we are being paid to be, and let's get down to work, ladies and gentlemen, and get going. Nine o'clock is not unreasonable at all. I stay at the same hotel that Dr. Pollock does, and if he needs me to get him up, I would be glad to accommodate him. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Bay, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I would like to support Dr. Pollock. I think we would save more time if we have available to us the extra hour in the morning. It is my recollection that the chairman of the rules committee advised us that by doing our homework and having our amendments prepared in advance of the session, and preparing for the debate, we could shorten the time, and I agree with him. But we need this hour in the morning from 9:00 to 10:00. I don't think that the secretaries—we need the secretarial time to prepare these amendments in writing, to consult with the committee chairmen, and I think we will have a more meaningful and well thought out debate than some that we have had in the past. For that reason I support Dr. Pollock.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President, my fellow delegates, time is important. Nine o'clock isn't too late and it isn't too early. It all depends upon what you are going to do. Now, sometimes on the farm 9:00 o'clock is too early because the hay is wet and you can't work it. Five o'clock is too late to cut it because it gets tough. (laughter) We've got to have time here in this deliberation. It depends on what you are doing. This is a very important job here. There must be time to prepare your rebuttal arguments that take place here on the floor. Now, it just depends on what you want to do. If we want to just steamroll this constitution down the people of Michigan's throats, why, we can come here at 6:00 o'clock. That is time to milk. (laughter) Just ram this thing down the people's throats.

In other words, it all depends on just what you want to do. I would like to go along with Dr. Pollock because if you come here in the morning—I know these committee people; just look at the coat rack at 8:30 and 9:00 o'clock in the morning—people are here working, trying to get their committee work done. Now, give us some chance. I think we all need it; those of us who really came here to do a job that we are expected to do.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Does the delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen, now desire to speak a second time? The chairman of the committee is entitled to speak twice.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I will defer to those who now seek recognition until they have completed their remarks.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Wayne, Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Thank you, Mr. President. Mr. Bledsoe just appealed to the farmers and those who believe in the early hour. At this time I would like to appeal to the city folk and those who are also interested in efficiency. I believe and agree with Dr. Pollock and I am very pleased that he brought up the subject of starting at 10:00 rather than 9:00. I believe that the hour before 10:00, between 9:00 and 10:00, or 8:00 and 10:00—2 hours between 8:00 and 10:00—would certainly offer an opportunity to make appointments and to do other things rather than come to the convention perhaps unprepared. So, for that reason, I rise in support of the 10:00 o'clock starting because I believe people are far more efficient at 10:00 o'clock in the morning than they are at 9:00.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Gratiot, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I am not going to be repetitious. I think everything has been said on this matter that can be said. I think the arguments in favor of the Pollock amendment far outweigh any justification for us neglecting our responsibility other than voting on matters in this convention. I rise to support the Pollock amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from St. Clair, Mr. Tweedie.

MR. TWEEDIE: Could we perhaps reach a compromise by agreeing upon 9:30 in the morning? (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Dr. Pollock, that the time of meeting be 10:00 a.m. The delegate from Quincy, Mr. Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: Mr. President, I think as I came in here today I noticed the sun was shining very bright, and I got to thinking right away, gee, it won't be long until corn planting time. We had better get this thing moving. I think that if we are going to adhere to Dr. Pollock's suggestion of 10:00 o'clock in the morning, I would like to move an amendment to the amendment that we start at 8:00 o'clock in the evening and put in 2 hours. I hate to think of going beyond the thirty-first day of March.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would have to rule that amendment not in order because that amendment couldn't be applied germanely to the morning starting time.

MR. KNIRK: I just certainly hope that we don't lose sight of the fact that we have a lot of work to do between now and March 31.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from the seventeeth district, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I think the committee needs some support and I think the delegates ought to give it to them. I don't think Mr. Van Dusen ought to have to carry the whole weight of this committee's recommendation. I think we ought to get here at 9:00 o'clock and get going and then if we need time to deliberate—we don't have to deliberate solidly from 9:00 to 5:00 in the afternoon—we can recess from time to time, or as needed, for meetings or anything else.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: At this point I would remind the delegates that this convention is now on schedule. It is not on schedule without some very considerably hard work and without the benefit of many meetings that began at 8:30 in the morning, and some at 8:00 o'clock in the morning.

The result of the amendment currently before you would be to deprive this convention of 4 hours a week of time available for general session. I think that the convention, if it is to allow ample time for debate, owes it to itself to reserve those hours available for our use. I think 9:00 o'clock is none too early to get at the work which is before us if we are to stay on schedule. I would oppose the amendment, and ask for a record roll call.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment of Dr. Pollock, upon which Mr. Van Dusen demands the yeas and nays. Is the demand for the yeas and nays supported? All those in favor, say aye. The demand is supported.

The question is upon the amendment of Dr. Pollock. The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. President, I urge you—

A DELEGATE: I have already voted, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair has never put the motion. I simply stated it.

The Chair would like to remind the delegates that unless they are anxious to show everybody in advance how they propose to vote on things, that they need not vote until the Chair says "As many as are in favor will vote aye."

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. President and fellow delegates, whether the delegates, many of them, realize or not, an awful lot of thought has been put into attempting to keep the operation of this convention on an even keel, and, again, if we adopt this amendment which is proposed by Dr. Pollock, it will, as Mr. Van Dusen has said, throw us off schedule completely. I hope that you will vote against the amendment of Dr. Pollock.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, I have a suggestion in regard to the remark you made just a moment ago. I worry about everybody looking at those lights too and I don't ever want anybody to think that I am looking at any lights. I would hope that we could figure out a way that these lights do not go on. We can read where it says yea and nay and turn the lights on after you lock the machine, and then we will get an honest vote. (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Menominee, Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I would ask through the Chair to our chairman, Mr. Van Dusen—this thing seems to be getting quite controversial—Mr. Van Dusen, have you any limitation on the evening hours if we are going to start at 9:00 o'clock in the morning? That wasn't brought up in the committee.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, if I may respond to Mr. Lundgren's question, one of the reasons for beginning at 9:00 o'clock in the morning was the hope of the committee on rules that we would not have to have evening sessions. If we begin late, we may have to work late. That's all there is to it.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Dr. Pollock that the morning starting hour on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday be at 10:00 a.m. As many as are in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and take the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment of Dr. Pollock, the yeas are 70, the nays are 64.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is adopted.

The question now is upon the resolution as amended. Mr. Elliott of Oakland.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I would like to offer an amendment to strike 10:00 o'clock and insert 9:30 a.m.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Elliott, moves to amend the resolution as follows:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, after "and at" by striking out "10" and inserting "9:30".

This would establish a meeting hour of 9:30 in the morning. The question is upon that amendment. Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I would just like to make this comment: this is not done in any spirit of facetiousness, Mr. Marshall, but because I am very concerned about the fact that we do have a job to do. I can recognize that the convention as a whole decided that the 9:00 o'clock time was apparently not wise. They had no other choice than to vote for the amendment of 10:00 o'clock. I think that the extra half hour in the morning would give us an opportunity to adjourn soon enough before lunch to get some of the work out of the way that will be required to be done during the daytime hours, so that our staff of girls that are downstairs will not be expected to be here every evening to meet the requirements of the delegates. We have dictation, we have meetings—(laughter) I was thinking primarily—(laughter) I would like to suggest that this half hour earlier time in the morning will give an opportunity for the lunch hour to be long enough so that there can be the meetings that will be required, and that the dictation and other items of business can be accomplished.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Ingham, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I support Mr. Elliott's amendment for 9:30. Nine-thirty will be ample time for the current journal to arrive and be placed on our desks. It will also give us at least 2 additional session hours each week.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Elliott, that the starting time on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays be at 9:30 in the forenoon. Mr. Wilkowski.

MR. WILKOWSKI: I demand the yeas and nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: A record roll call vote is demanded by Mr. Wilkowski. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. All those in favor of the 9:30 starting hour will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment to set the hour at 9:30, the yeas are 71, the nays are 68.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is adopted. (applause)

The question now is upon the resolution as amended. The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, it occurred to me that possibly there are some certain other hours that also have not been considered, such as 10:15 and 9:45, and so on. However, I will not move those.

I have in mind another amendment. The amendment I would like to offer at this time relates to the Monday afternoon or evening session. As we now have the resolution, it states, I believe, that the session will begin Monday at 2:00 p.m. Now, I believe that there are many delegates who told me that they want to have some time on Monday, and some time on Friday — if they are not going to have any time during the week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday — they want some time at the end of the week just the way we had it in the beginning of the convention.

Now I would point out, as to Monday and Friday we never do have any committee meetings, or at least no regular, scheduled committee meetings. Therefore, if all we are doing is replacing the committee meetings with general sessions, there is no reason to change the Monday time to afternoon, nor is there any reason to change the Friday time to the afternoon. The Friday time is not before us. The Monday time, however, is. There is a change suggested by the committee as to 2:00 p.m.

Now, it seems to me that now that we have been deprived, basically, of any time during Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday to do anything except meet here in session, and in caucus during lunchtime — presumably, if there ever will be any — and in caucus in the evening, we need some time at the beginning of the week, sometime at the end of the week to see each other, to review the work that is before us and the work that we have completed, the work we need to do the next week, and to see our constituents.

There is one other thing I think we could do if we had some time on Monday and some time on Friday, or at least on one day — so I would say Monday — and that is we could see each other. Now we will not be in committee meetings any more. We will be in session and in session you can only see approximately 4 people; the 4 people that are around you. If we are going to get any bipartisan conclaves set up, which seems to me to be indispensable in order to solve the problems before us, we have got to have some time for people wearing Republican buttons and people wearing Democrat buttons to see each other, to talk to each other, and try to iron out problems which the committee has not ironed out.

Therefore, while we won't have committee meetings, we do have to have something. We have to have something other than just sessions. We have to have some time to try to work out solutions which the committee didn't work out. I therefore move, Mr. President, that the Monday session begin at 8:00 p.m. instead of 2:00 p.m.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Nord, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, by striking out "2" and inserting "8".

This would provide that the time for meeting on Monday be reestablished at 8:00 p.m. On the amendment so offered, the gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, from time to time many of the delegates have complained about the burden of night work to which committee work has from time to time subjected them during the past few months. One of the reasons for the proposal of the committee calling for a session at 2:00 in the afternoon on Monday is to enable us to complete more of our work during the daytime hours to avoid, if at all possible, night sessions during the balance of the week. Here again the convention, which is now on schedule, is being asked to sacrifice 3 hours of time available for work in general session. If we give away this time hour by hour, the only result can be to put the convention behind schedule; to result in a rush as various deadlines approach. The purpose of this resolution is to give us ample and adequate time to complete our deliberations in an orderly fashion. I strongly oppose the amendment offered by Dr. Nord.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment offered by Dr. Nord, the gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. President, I believe that the committee work of the last week trying to meet this deadline is the best reason in support of this amendment. In trying to meet this time schedule, I think that many of us feel that the work that has been done in the committee has been inconclusive and poorly done, and it is going to have to necessitate much more discussion on the floor because in many instances people are voting on things merely to get them out to meet a deadline, and not because they believe in them. If we are to transfer this, do the same thing on the floor, we will come up with a constitution which is going to be as indefensible as many of the committee reports. For that reason, I support the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I have to agree with Mr. Van Dusen that we seem to be on schedule, but I am one of the delegates that is a little bit concerned about what we have sacrificed in order to make this schedule. I think that during the last week we have seen months of very hard work on the part of a great many people in this constitutional convention resolved by quick decisions in the committee. That came about as the result of a desire to get something done on time.

It appears to me that although we are on schedule, we are all a little bit like the engineer of the old steam locomotive days, who was proud of the fact that he had never left the station behind schedule, only to discover, to his embarrassment, one day when he got 10 miles out of town he had left without the rest of the train. In all deference to Mr. Farnsworth, he recalls to me what was said about the incident when a very famous admiral, engaged in battle on Lake Erie, was asked by the British commander if he would surrender, and he said, "Surrender, hell. We have not yet begun to fight," and one of the poor sailors down in the scuppers, who had been swabbing the overheated cannon, looked up wearily and said, "There's always some guy that doesn't get the word." (laughter)

I submit that we have been working and running at full pace, but we have reached the stage where our efficiency is very seriously impaired. I don't think that we want to hastily jump into an acceleration here that is going to further impair the efficiency. I think that we are at the very critical stage of this constitution now, and if we want to make anything come out of the hard work that has been put into it, both before the convention started and since we have been here, I think that we ought to slow down a little bit so the rest of the train catches up, and sit down and really work this thing out; and that giving us a little time to get together, as has been suggested by Dr. Nord, would go a long way toward coming to some real understanding without a lot of unnecessary battling on the floor.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. President, so far I have heard a lot about trains and time tables, but I have yet to hear a whistle. I would like to oppose the Nord amendment for the particular reason that Mr. Hodges mentioned. We will have very much discussion on the floor, and by cutting out this time as proposed in the amendment, I would like to thoroughly oppose it.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Jackson, Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. President, I also want to oppose the amendment. There is much work to be done. I think we can do it more efficiently in the daytime than we can at night sessions, and unless we settle down to work we will have night sessions. I oppose the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I rise simply to ask for a record roll call, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen demands the yeas and nays on the Nord amendment. Is the demand supported? A sufficient number is up. Mr. Snyder, do you desire recognition on the amendment?

MR. SNYDER: Just a question of Mr. Van Dusen. Will this mean both an afternoon and an evening session on Monday?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Yes.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Ionia, Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, that answers my question. There seems to have been an inference on the part of some of the delegates in their remarks that this afternoon session would replace the evening session, and it was not so understood by me, and I just thought we should know what we are doing and what the picture would be and what the alternatives are before we act. It is now my understanding, from what has been said, that it is the thought to meet both in the afternoon and in the evening, and, if so, I am favorable to that program.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The lady from Wayne, Mrs. Conklin.

MRS. CONKLIN: May I ask Mr. Van Dusen a question? Do you intend to have an adjournment at 5:00 o'clock set? If we meet at 2:00, will we adjourn at a given hour before we return at 8:00?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, Mrs. Conklin, the convention would presumably recess for an appropriate period for dinner. I would imagine that the exact time of the recess would depend upon the stage of the debate, rather than having a fixed time in which the debate would terminate in mid sentence.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Nord that the time of the meeting on Monday be at 8:00 o'clock p.m. A record roll call has been demanded. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: At the risk of some embarrassment, I think that perhaps I should express some concern for the delegates. Now, we have worked very hard in committees to maintain the schedule that was set for us. Some of us are serving at this convention at a material economic disadvantage. I think that it is to the advantage of the people of Michigan that we do have a good cross section of persons representing them at this convention. I know that there are some delegates who are going to return to their normal pursuits when this convention is over. There are others who will probably become full time politicians. For those, I am sure there is no disadvantage to continuing an accelerated schedule. But for those who do have the responsibility of returning to normal pursuits, there is some necessity for maintaining contact; contact not only with those enterprises that are deteriorating—and I would like to remind those of my resolution of the other day, the possible need for retraining of some of us to replace the work that we are letting deteriorate while we are serving here—there is a very definite need to maintain contact not only with our businesses and professions, but also with our constituents. As we go into debate, it is going to be necessary to consult with our constituents as we arrive at conclusions. I am afraid that if we do maintain this accelerated schedule, there will be less opportunity for maintaining contact with our constituents and with some of our responsibilities that we will have to return to when this is over.

Now, if it should develop as the deliberations progress that we need to accelerate our efforts, we could just as easily do that on the days we are here full time: Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and possibly even Fridays. So, I am certainly going to vote for the Nord amendment, and I sincerely hope that those of you who have the same concern that I have will do likewise.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, responding to Mr. Austin's comment, I would say that the effort to complete this convention on schedule is designed to permit those of us who serve here at an economic disadvantage to return to the full time practice of our professions at the earliest possible moment. I therefore, for the precise reason Mr. Austin gave, oppose the Nord amendment, and urge a no vote.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question. When will the committee on style and drafting meet?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Does the chairman of the committee on style and drafting desire to answer the question?

MR. CUDLIP: Yes. Mr. President, the next meeting of the committee on style and drafting is next Wednesday, in the evening. The reason for this delay is because the problems this week prevented research and drafting from doing our work, and you know the rest.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Nord, that the time of the meeting on Monday be at 8:00 o'clock p.m. A record roll call has been demanded and supported. All those in favor of meeting at 8:00 on Monday will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment to establish the time of the meeting on Monday at 8:00 o'clock p.m., the yeas are 57; the nays are 79.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, at this time I would like to move an amendment to set the time at 6:00 o'clock Monday evening. This will give us an additional 2 hours to work, and I believe that what everybody wants to do is get in the time.

We won't do any more than get in about 2 hours in the afternoon, and all we are going to do is just do an awful lot of rushing to get here at 2:00, and then get out of here in time for dinner, then come back at 8:00 o'clock and work a couple more hours. If we get in here by 6:00, this does give 56 delegates in this convention the opportunity to carry on a law practice, because I know personally that the judges throughout this state are setting cases on Monday so that these attorneys can carry on their practice. I also know this, too: that there are people who are interested in their business and want a little time. Frankly, I will be honest with you and tell you I, too, would like to get in one day when we are not in here when I can compensate for some of the expense of being here, and I am losing money by being here. We can all do this to help each other, and we will get in that time that you want. So let's have some time and be honest with ourselves.

At this time I would like to move for a 6:00 o'clock starting time on Monday evening.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Madar offers the following amendment:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, by striking out "2" and inserting "6".

This would set the starting time on Monday evening at 6:00 p.m. On the amendment, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I would simply point out what Mr. Madar is asking for is a very long single sitting. That is something which is unproductive, generally. Two sittings of reasonable length will accomplish a great deal more. I oppose the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President, I happen to be one of those lawyers in these particular cases involved, in which I became engaged and had received retainers prior to my election here. Both of them are major felonies. One of them is a murder case, and one of them is in Marquette, the upper peninsula. I got 2 of the judges to accommodate me so that I could leave Friday and get there and get back here by Monday. That was done last summer. I would hate very much to absent myself for any reason from any session of this convention.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Madar that the time of the meeting on Monday be set at 6:00 p.m. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Record roll call, please.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Upon which amendment Mr. Van Dusen demands the yeas and nays. Is the demand supported? All those in favor will rise. The demand is supported. All those in favor of Mr. Madar's amendment to start at 6:00 in the evening on Monday will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I ask for the vote of the Chair, please.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair has voted. The Chair votes no.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Madar to set the starting time on Monday at 6:00 o'clock, the yeas are 72 and the nays are 64.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments to the body of the resolution?

Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I would like to offer a further amendment to the committee's resolution, and that is with regard to the length of the sessions. We now have provided that we will have sessions most of these days beginning at 9:30 in the morning and I know we understand they will terminate at some time or another. At least I believe we expect them to terminate, because otherwise we couldn't get started again at 9:30 the next morning. It would be the same session.

The question is when they will terminate. I think we should take into account the facts of life; that people require refueling from time to time, and possibly the converse as well. (laughter) I believe we ought to make some schedule which is as definite as can be without being rigid. I believe it is conducive to meeting with other people. We know we are going to have lunch. If we are going to have lunch, we could make use of that time to meet with people and discuss things if we know what time we are going to have lunch. We should be able to make appointments during the day.

I suggest we ought to provide two things: one, a definite time for lunch, which I would state should be between 12:00 and 2:00 p.m. each day where there is a morning session. There should be an adjournment for lunch, except to this extent: that the adjournment should begin at 12:00 p.m. or as near as may be in the discretion of the chairman of the convention or the committee of the whole, whichever is in session. That should begin at 12:00, or as near as may be, and should end at 2:00. At the sessions which are held in the afternoon, they should end at 5:00 or as near as may be in the discretion of the Chair, whichever it may be, in the convention or the committee of the whole, and that further, any session that lasts 2 hours, at the end of 2 hours there should be a 15 minute recess; again the exact time to be determined by the Chair, whatever it may be, the chairman of the session or of the committee of the whole.

To recapitulate, my amendments are as follows: "On each day on which we meet in the morning and afternoon sessions, it will be 12:00 to 2:00, adjournment as near as may be, and at the end of any 2 hour period there be a 15 minute recess, again, as near as may be.".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would state to Mr. Nord that in order to permit the working in of his amendments in line with the body of the resolution, it is requested that he should submit those amendments in writing.

MR. NORD: Does the Chair have any opposition to having a vote on the thing while I prepare the writing? There is no point in waiting for me to sit down while I compose a document. If you wish to have a recess for 10 or 15 minutes — I don't think that is required. My understanding is as long as it is supplied in writing we could vote on it in the meantime. Am I correct or incorrect?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Of course, the Chair is interested in being sure that the records of the proceedings accurately reflect the intent of the delegates. All I can say is that the Chair will not demand that the matter be placed in writing ahead of voting on it, unless some delegate here thinks he doesn't understand exactly what is intended. Is there opposition to consideration of these amendments before they are reduced to writing?

A DELEGATE: I object, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Objection is heard.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, may I be permitted, as a point of personal privilege, to dictate to the secretary and, in that way, get it in writing? Is that permissible?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Yes, you may dictate it that way.

MR. NORD: All right. It may take me quite a long time because I am not much of a dictator, but I will attempt it. (laughter)

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 4, after "convention" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That any session which lasts 2 hours shall be interrupted by a recess for 15 minutes, the beginning thereof to be determined at the discretion of the Chair and as near as may be to the end of said 2 hour period: Provided further, That on all days in which there should be both a morning and an afternoon session, there shall be an adjournment between the hours of 12:00 o'clock noon and 2:00 o'clock p.m., as nearly as may be, at the discretion of the Chair.".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Dr. Nord. The gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I will not protract the debate, Mr. President. I will simply say I oppose it.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. All those in favor — Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I demand the yeas and nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Iverson demands a record roll call vote upon the amendment of Mr. Nord. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. All those in favor of Mr. Nord's amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The Chair votes no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment by Dr. Nord, the yeas are 52, the nays are 79.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

MR. KUHN: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: My parliamentary inquiry is this: under what authority did we set up the rules Monday night at 8:00 o'clock; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 2:00 p.m.; and Friday, 10:00 a.m.?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The resolution of the convention so determined, Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Is that controlled by the proposition that this type of a resolution would have to have a majority vote of those elected to this convention to change or not?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair understands it requires only a majority of those voting.

MR. KUHN: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. President, I wish to make an amendment and the secretary has it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Woolfenden offers the following amendment:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, by striking out "6" and inserting "4".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Woolfenden that the hour of meeting on Monday be 4:00 o'clock p.m. On the amendment, the Chair recognizes Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I believe that we delegates have a very sober responsibility in this convention, part of which is a responsibility to secure approval by the electors of the state of Michigan on the product of this convention.

In the debate so far an inference has been drawn, or an inference has been left by the speeches of some of the delegates, that the deadline of April 1 has been capriciously or arbitrarily arrived at. That is certainly not the fact. It is a self imposed deadline, imposed by the delegates themselves to meet a situation resulting from an opinion of the attorney general that if this constitution is to go on the ballot in November, we must complete our work by April 1. In order to complete our work, it is essential that we avail ourselves of every possible reasonable hour in which to do our work.

I am one of those 56 self employed professional men that Mr. Austin referred to. I feel myself that it is the responsibility of every one of us to get this job done, and I do not believe in a long session starting from 6:00 o'clock and lasting until midnight on Monday. I think that we should amend that to provide for an afternoon session on Monday and 4:00 o'clock seems to me to be a reasonable compromise. It will let every professional man in the state at least get in a few licks at his office before he comes here on Monday. I earnestly hope that you will support the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment of Mr. Woolfenden, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I do believe that there isn't a delegate in this convention who believes that I ever just infer anything. (laughter) When I have anything to say, I usually say it and I speak out because I believe in everything that I do say, and I try to find out whether I am right or not before I get up to speak, and so I also try to figure out just what effect it will have on everyone else. I am not an old man, and I'm not retired, and I haven't a large business firm, nor have I a large law firm wherein I may give my assistants or some of my partners my work to do. Everything that I do I must do myself, and I pride myself on the fact that I do, and I am sure that at least 90 per cent of the delegates in this organization feel the same way. When I say 90 per cent, I am just stating that figure. It doesn't really mean anything because I feel that we all are proud of what we do.

If we met at 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon we would have to recess for dinner. I know some of you will ask why. I figured that somebody would ask that question facetiously. I do believe, though, that we will take some time out to have dinner. So, right away we lose at least 1½ to 2 hours. So why come here at 4:00 o'clock? If we get here by 6:00, we can go through from 6:00 o'clock until 10:00 or 11:00, with possibly a break of 10 or 15 minutes. We can accomplish the things that we wish to accomplish and I defy anyone, I defy anybody to say that we can't finish by the first of April if we want to finish by the first of April, and I can assure you that I do; because the sooner I get back to my desk at the Detroit health department, the better I am going to like it. But before I go back there I want to do everything I possibly can for the people of my district and for the people of this state, and to do this I don't believe that I ought to have anything else to worry me, and I don't believe I ought to go ahead and waste time or to rush things, but to do them properly. Ladies and gentlemen of this constitutional convention, I ask you to turn down the 4:00 o'clock amendment.

MR. HIGGS: Point of order, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Will the gentleman state the point, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I question, and will ask for a ruling from the Chair, as to whether Mr. Woolfenden's motion is in order. We have voted on 2:00 o'clock and we have voted on 6:00 o'clock, and I would think it would require a motion to reconsider.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: It is the opinion of the Chair that the amendment is in order.

The gentleman from Ingham, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I support Mr. Woolfenden's amendment. I think a lot of delegates may be under the impression, from the words, "accelerated schedule" that have been used, if we adopt more general session time, that we are going to have to work harder than we are now. I call to the delegates' attention the fact that our committee meetings which have been taking so much of our time are going to take little, if any, of our time during the future. I also think that it is inefficient for us to come here, to meet at 6:00 o'clock, as Mr. Madar suggests, for 5 hours, with only a 10 minute break, from 6:00 to 11:00. I don't think that can be done. I believe that the good of the state demands that we get this extra time in general session and that we get it efficiently, and I think that in that case the good of the state should be placed above the personal economic consideration of any delegate at this convention.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from the twenty-fifth district, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I think every answer to every question that has been raised, every argument that has been given for time off is answered by a glance at either one of these clocks on the wall of this hall. There is a short month here. There are only a limited number of hours in which we can work each day. We have a lot to do and we have spent 73 minutes and are not yet in general orders. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Ottawa, Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the demand for the previous question supported? The demand is supported. The question now is: Shall the main question now be put? All those in favor will say aye. All those opposed will say no.

The previous question is ordered. The question is upon the amendment of Mr. Woolfenden. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I demand the yeas and nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the demand for the yeas and nays supported? The demand is supported.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Wayne arise?

MR. NORD: Am I correct in recalling that a motion to limit debate would take precedence over the motion to move the previous question?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: It does.

MR. NORD: I move we limit debate for 15 minutes rather than terminate debate.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion of Mr. Nord that debate upon this amendment be limited to 15 additional minutes, which motion takes precedence. All those in favor of limiting debate say aye. Those opposed, say no.

The motion does not prevail. The previous question is ordered, and the yeas and nays have been ordered. As many as are in favor of Mr. Woolfenden's amendment that the time of meeting be at 4:00 o'clock on Monday afternoon will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The Chair votes aye. Has everyone voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

For what purpose does the gentleman arise, Mr. Madar?

MR. MADAR: Just being up so that I will be ready whenever they turn this down. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The secretary will announce the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Woolfenden, the yeas are 71 and the nays are 63.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is adopted.

The question is upon the adoption of the resolution as amended. Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, I am having a hard time trying to find out the real wishes of this convention. They voted down 8:00, passed 6:00 o'clock, now they passed 4:00 o'clock. So I think it would be in order to find out just what we mean. Therefore, I think we might as well try, say 5:30, (laughter) and I therefore offer the following amendment:

1. Amend the resolving clause, line 2, by striking out "4" and inserting "5:30".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair is of the opinion that the process of this convention—simply reaching out trying one time after another, is thoroughly dilatory. In the opinion of the Chair, the convention has made a determination upon this matter, and if you want to spend all afternoon quarrelling about this matter, it is up to the convention.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move the previous question on the resolution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bentley moves the previous question upon the resolution. Is the demand for the previous question supported? The demand is supported.

MR. HIGGS: Point of order, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is the point of order, Mr. Higgs?

MR. HIGGS: I understand there is a motion before the house offered by Delegate Kuhn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Do you insist upon your amendment, Mr. Kuhn?

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, I disagree with you wholeheartedly. If anyone is trying to be dilatory it is the 4:00 o'clock amendment. We turned down the 8:00 o'clock, and in all good conscience we accepted the 6:00 o'clock. Now you are saying we don't know what we mean when we say 6:00 o'clock; let's go to 4:00 o'clock. I am in agreement with Mr. Higgs. The 4:00 o'clock should have been ruled out of order. I therefore think we are in order, and I think we should settle this.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Upon this matter, however, Mr. Bentley has moved the previous question.

MR. BENTLEY: And all amendments thereto.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair has not recognized the amendment as yet.

Mr. Faxon, for what purpose does the gentleman arise?

MR. FAXON: Point of information, Mr. President. Do we have a text of this resolution on which we are voting?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Yes. The text is on the secretary's desk. The secretary will read the resolution after we determine whether or not we are going to order the previous question. The question is upon Mr. Bentley's motion to order the previous question. Is the demand supported? It is supported. All those in favor of the previous question say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The previous question is ordered. The question is upon the resolution.

MR. MADAR: Point of order! Point of order! Mr. President, have we got a gag rule?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The previous question has been ordered. Mr. Kuhn has offered an amendment, which is in order. The amendment is recognized but it is not debatable. Mr. Kuhn's amendment is that the — the gentleman will state his amendment again.

MR. KUHN: Well, now, I want to be sure we understand parliamentary procedure. I thought I did, and Mr. Chase just corrected me. The previous question means you cannot debate, but it doesn't mean you cannot offer an amendment, is that right, Mr. Chase? Then I will talk from there.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon your amendment, Mr. Kuhn, but your amendment is not debatable.

MR. KUHN: That is correct.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: And your amendment is to start the work at 5:30 Monday afternoon?

MR. KUHN: Correct.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of commencing at 5:30 — Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I demand the yeas and nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is the demand for a record roll call supported? It is supported. As many as are in favor of starting at 5:30 on Monday afternoon will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Marshall, arise?

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Will you please wait until after the roll call is completed.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

The secretary will announce the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 53; the nays are 79.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

The question is upon the resolution as amended. The previous question has been ordered. As many as are favor of the adoption of the resolution —

The secretary will read the resolution as it now stands.

SECRETARY CHASE: The full text of the resolution as originally offered will be found in the journal, page 387. It is as follows, as now amended:

> Resolved, that beginning February 2 the convention shall meet at 4:00 o'clock p.m. on Monday, and at 9:30 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, such schedule to continue until changed by the convention.

MR. FAXON: Point of order, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Faxon raises a point of order. What is your point of order, Mr. Faxon?

MR. FAXON: Did the Chair rule that any amendments that were offered would still be voted upon without debate?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair understands the rule to require that when the previous question is ordered, those amendments already on the desk are in order, but that other amendments are out of order. The amendment of Mr. Kuhn was received prior to the previous question being ordered, and therefore it was in order. There are no further amendments in order except those that were filed previous to that time with the secretary, and he advises me that there are none.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I demand the yeas and nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the resolution as amended, and the yeas and nays have been demanded. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. All those in favor of the resolution as amended will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the resolution, the yeas are 95; the nays are 40.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The resolution, as amended, is adopted.

Following is Resolution 68 as amended and adopted:

A resolution establishing the time of daily sessions.

Resolved, That beginning February 2 the convention shall meet at 4:00 o'clock p.m. on Monday, and at 9:30 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, such schedule to continue until changed by the convention.

The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I want to ask a question as to how you go about obtaining the floor. I was on the floor and there were at least 2, and I think 3, who went to the mike after I did, who were recognized. The question is, do we get the floor by walking up to the mike and standing there, or do we get recognition on the floor by jumping up and down and shouting? When I asked for the floor I wanted to support the remarks of Mr. Brake, because I felt, and I still feel, we have all looked ridiculous here in the last few minutes and at this time, Mr. Elliott, I don't know who is being facetious and who isn't. I do know that it seems that a lot of us like to hear ourselves talk over the microphone, and the only thing I can say is that I would like to know if I can obtain the floor by orderly procedure or do I jump up and down and shout like a few of the previous speakers did, trying to obtain the mike? The least that I can say, not knowing who is being facetious and who isn't, is that many of the previous speakers certainly were awfully spenorious, (laughter) and for the benefit of those who do not know the correct definition of spenorious: that is an orator who is speaking when his brain and mouth aren't functioning simultaneously. (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Washtenaw, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, I would like to rise on a point of personal privilege.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: You are recognized for the purpose.

MR. LAWRENCE: What I have to say, I assure you, fellow delegates, I say this in the best of good will — perhaps with tongue in cheek slightly, and maybe with sort of puckish satisfaction. Some of you may recall that a week ago Monday night, on January 22, it was my privilege to speak to you. After I had concluded and while we were in the convention, so I had no opportunity to reply, 2 of my good friends referred to me by name, and it is to the remarks made by them that I would like at this time to reply; for I have early learned in the practice of law that the rule is if you want to dish it out, you've got to be able to take it. It works both ways.

The remarks of the distinguished delegate, statesman and constitutional lawyer from Stanton, in which he stated that I gave a hypothetical case and he gave actual cases, is the first one I would like to reply to. For the benefit of any of you who have the paper or care to refer to it, either for verification or to keep it for future reference, I am referring to the Wednesday, January 31 issue of the Detroit News. The issue I have is the late final edition. The item is on page 5-B. I would like to read it. It will only take me a minute. It is headed Seizure of Gun In Car Ruled Out By O'Hara. It goes on:

> A portion of the state constitution giving police the right to seize as evidence guns found in automobiles was held invalid today by Executive Circuit Judge Chester P. O'Hara. The ruling grew out of the August arrest of James Kendrick, 3478 Onaway, and Lee C. Burnell, 30240 Pierce, both of Inkster, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon in an automobile without a permit.
> The facts are not disputed. State police stopped a car driven by Kendrick when they saw him driving left of the center of Beverly road, Romulus township.
> When both Kendrick and Burnell, a passenger, got out of the car at the request of the police, an unloaded 38 caliber revolver was found under a paper bag on the front seat. Both Kendrick and Burnell were then arrested on the concealed weapons charge. "No ticket was issued for the alleged traffic violation," O'Hara said, "although the car was actually stopped for this offense."
> He noted that the police had no knowledge of the defendants violating any other law.
> O'Hara granted a motion by George C. Parsons, attorney for the men, to suppress the gun as evidence. At this, Edward S. Ferris, chief of the criminal division of the prosecutor's office, said the case against the men would be dropped.

O'Hara, quoting a ruling last June by the U. S. supreme court growing out of an Ohio case:

> We hold that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the federal constitution is, by that same authority, inadmissable in a state court.

For the record, I would like to state that this is not a hypothetical case involving hypothetical people by a hypothetical court in a hypothetical newspaper, and if the words quoted sound fairly familiar, you will find them on page 1090 of the July advance sheets of the United States Supreme Court Reports, law edition.

The second reference in which my name was used was by my distinguished friend, colleague, ex jurist, the man whom I have the honor of sitting across the aisle from. (laughter) He told the convention that I was unable to count in reference to a 37,000 to 6,000 vote in Washtenaw county. Well, I was never very good in higher mathematics, fellow delegates, but I have found out one thing: I at least am able to read and understand what I have read. Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Reports of standing committees.

The gentleman from Isabella, Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: I rise to a point of personal privilege for comments.

We had quite a session this afternoon. I think that we can profit, perhaps, by this story of the teacher who, in the fall of the year, went out to a pasture, and she was dirty and tired and weary. She came to a beautiful stream that went down through the pasture. So she thought she would go swimming, but she had no bathing suit. After a while she decided she would go bathing because there was nobody within 2 miles of the place. So she went swimming. After a while she looked up, hearing a noise, and saw some youngsters tying knots in her clothing. She tried to shoo them away and frighten them away, but they wouldn't shoo and frighten. Moving around under water she stubbed her toe on something, reached down and discovered it was a tub. She brought the tub up and placed it in front of her in this fashion [indicating] and advanced on these youngsters, with her eyes blazing. She said, "You know what I think?" One kid said, "Yes. You think there's a bottom in the tub." (laughter)

[President Nisbet entered the chamber and assumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Hutchinson, for taking charge for me while I was away.

Mr. Chase, reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on administration, by Mr. DeVries, chairman, recommends to the president the following person for appointment to the staff of the constitutional convention: Miss Patricia Arber as convention guide.

Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the recommendation is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The president appoints, pursuant to authorization by the convention, and with the approval of the committee on administration, the aforenamed person to the position indicated.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the appointment is approved.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 59, A proposal pertaining to vacancies in the office of governor. Amends article VI, section 16; with the recommendation that it pass.

John B. Martin, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 59 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below under date of March 29.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin, for the committee on executive branch, introduces Committee Proposal 60, A proposal pertaining to succession to the governorship. Amends article VI, section 17; with the recommendation that it pass.

John B. Martin, chairman.

Claud R. Erickson, chairman.

For Committee Proposal 61 and the reasons submitted in support thereof, see below under date of April 16.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar.

Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. President, I move that the committee reports be considered read, referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders in view of the fact that they will be published in the journal. And in view of our great deliberation over hours, I doubt whether we will be able to understand or comprehend the stack that Mr. Chase has before him.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hanna that the reports be considered read, referred to the committee of the whole and placed on the general orders calendar. Any discussion? Is there objection? If not, all in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and it is so ordered.

Following are the committee proposals introduced February 1, 1962, which were considered read, referred to the committee of the whole and placed on general orders:

Mr. Erickson, for the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, introduced Committee Proposal 62, A proposal pertaining to grants of extra compensation. Amends the first sentence of section 3, article XVI; with the recommendation that it pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET (continuing): Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: Office of the Governor, Lansing.

January 31, 1962.

The Honorable Stephen S. Nisbet, President
Michigan Constitutional Convention
Constitution Hall
Civic Center
Lansing, Michigan

Dear Mr. President:

Transmitted to you with this letter is my Message to the Fifth Michigan Constitutional Convention on the subject of Property Tax Assessments.

Sincerely yours,
John B. Swainson,
governor.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be printed in the journal. Hearing none, it is so ordered.

Following is the message:

Ladies and gentlemen of the constitutional convention:

I am in receipt of a report and recommendation from a study committee of my special commission on industrial development legislation concerning nonuniformity of property taxation in the state of Michigan. The findings and recommendation of the committee were endorsed by the commission and are matters which should be called to your attention and considered in your deliberations on the subject of property taxes.

It was the unanimous finding of the committee that an unhealthy lack of uniformity in property taxation exists in Michigan and the primary basis for this condition is the wide variation of assessments. There are no professional qualifications for assessing officers and standards for the performance of their duties are practically nonexistent.

This situation has an impact on the economic development of Michigan because it is impossible under these conditions to assure an industry seeking to settle in this state that it will be treated equitably in the matter of property taxes. The training, technique, and skill of the assessor are so varied in this state that in some instances it has been a deterrent to new industry.

Dr. Harvey E. Brazer, of the University of Michigan, an eminent authority in this field, has stated that a study of a typical Michigan county revealed that some properties were assessed at less than 2 per cent of market value, and others were assessed as high as 175 per cent of their sales price. In one of our large metropolitan counties we have witnessed the practice of assessing inventories at 80 per cent of book value, machinery and equipment at 100 per cent of depreciated value, and real property assessed at 50 per cent of current value. These examples graphically demonstrate the discriminatory practices we encounter in real and personal property taxation in Michigan.

The recommendation of the study committee which was adopted by the commission states:

> The constitutional convention should direct the state tax commission to make all assessments of real and personal property which values should be used by local units of government.

I am convinced that unless some such plan as the foregoing is prescribed by the convention or made a requirement of legislation in this area, uniformity of assessment and taxation in this state will not be assured.

In the event the convention desires the testimony and counsel of the study committee members, I am sure these gentlemen would respond without hesitation.

Members of the committee are Edwin O. George, vice president, Detroit Edison company, who was chairman; W. D. McDonnell, president, Great Lakes Steel corporation; H. A. Sanders, vice president and general manager, Grand Trunk western railroad; Albert Bush, executive vice president, Hackley Union National Bank and Trust company; and Arnold M. Lumbers, Victory Machine company, inc.

Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin. All those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Martin, will you please take the Chair.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The calendar you have on your desk is for last Monday. There has not been the opportunity to prepare a new one. The first 5 items on the calendar have been considered and reported and referred to the committee on style and drafting; and item 7 has likewise been so treated. The next item for consideration today, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 26, A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin.

Following is Committee Proposal 26 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

NO PERSON SHALL BE DENIED THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS; NOR SHALL ANY PERSON BE DENIED THE ENJOYMENT OF HIS CIVIL OR POLITICAL RIGHTS OR BE DISCRIMINATED AGAINST IN THE EXERCISE THEREOF BECAUSE OF RACE, RELIGION, SEX OR NATIONAL ORIGIN. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL IMPLEMENT THIS SECTION BY APPROPRIATE LEGISLATION.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 26:

This proposal has the unanimous support of all members of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. Five members of the committee, as will be seen from the accompanying minority "preference report", would have preferred to report out the text of Delegate Proposal 1621, which they consider to be more adequate in certain respects. But they wish to emphasize that they also support the present committee recommendation.

The present proposal is a modification and synthesis of the civil rights provision in the recently adopted Hawaiian constitution incorporated in the second paragraph of Delegate Proposal 1455, introduced by Mr. J. A. Hannah, and Delegate Proposal 1014, introduced by Mr. Norris. It will be observed that the committee draft adds an equal protection clause to the Hawaiian language. The committee, in recognition of the modern doctrine of the equality of women, has also incorporated a guarantee against discrimination on account of sex.

Several factors have impressed the committee with the advisability of incorporating an equal protection and civil rights section in the new constitution. Delegate John Hannah, who, it will be observed, is the chairman of the United States commission on civil rights, gave impressive and moving testimony before the committee upon the wisdom and necessity of such a clause, to protect negroes and other minorities against discrimination in housing, employment, education and the like. In this connection, the attention of the delegates is called to the recently published reports of the Michigan advisory commission on civil rights to the United States civil rights commission, setting forth in some detail the situation in certain Michigan communities. Delegates will recollect, also, the impressive and moving advice President Eisenhower tendered to the convention upon the need for state constitutional civil rights guarantees, emphasizing the matter of states retaining and preserving the reserved powers. Appropriate data in support of the same objective were submitted by numerous citizen groups. As Mr. Hannah stated in his paper to the committee, "Civil rights as used herein means guarantees to protect against discrimination and segregation because of race, color, religion, ancestry or national origin. . . ." The principal, but not exclusive, areas of concern are equal opportunities in employment, education, housing, and public accommodations.

The committee noted, also, that there has been a distinct trend in recent state constitutions to incorporate equal protection or civil rights clauses to apply to all persons as well as those singled out for special attention because of more apparent discrimination. New York, New Jersey, Wyoming, Arkansas, Hawaii and Alaska all have provisions in this category. In short, the incorporation of civil rights provisions is in accord with the contemporary trend in state constitution writing.

Following is the minority report to Committee Proposal 26, as offered, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Norris, Dade, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hodges and Buback, a minority of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 26:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

EACH PERSON IN MICHIGAN SHALL ENJOY THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAW. NO PERSON SHALL, BECAUSE OF HIS RACE, COLOR, RELIGION, NATIONAL ORIGIN OR ANCESTRY, BE DISCRIMINATED AGAINST IN EMPLOYMENT, HOUSING, PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS, EDUCATION, OR IN HIS ENJOYMENT OF ALL OTHER OF HIS CIVIL RIGHTS, BY THE STATE OR ANY POLITICAL OR CIVIL SUBDIVISION THEREOF, OR ANY FIRM, CORPORATION, INSTITUTION, LABOR ORGANIZATION OR ANY OTHER PERSON.

Messrs. Norris, Dade, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hodges and Buback, a minority of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 22:

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The minority wishes to stress that its report is one of "preference" rather than "opposition" to the committee civil rights proposal. We simply prefer Delegate Proposal 1621 as being a more adequate declaration of rights in the light of contemporary reality than the committee formulation. We wish to promote the committee recommendation as well, as we assisted, in common with all members of the committee, in its formulation and support. If the proposal we prefer is not adopted, we respectfully urge the adoption of the committee recommendation.

We urge the adoption of the language of Delegate Proposal 1621 because it contains 2 fundamental and strategic propositions not clearly or adequately delineated in the committee proposal.

In our view both propositions, one creating certain rights, and one imposing certain duties, are essential to an adequate declaration of rights on behalf of full citizenship for all persons in Michigan.

The first proposition contained in Delegate Proposal 1621 and not expressed in the committee proposal is the declaration of the right of all persons to equal opportunity to secure employment, housing, education and public accommodations as explicit political and civil rights. This explicit declaration in Delegate Proposal 1621 is for the purpose of specificity and enforceability, and the enumeration does not connote limitation.

The second proposition contained in Delegate Proposal 1621 and not expressed in the committee proposal is the imposition of a duty of nondiscrimination on private as well as public or state agencies in the exercise or enjoyment by all persons of political and civil rights.

Thus, the 2 propositions supplement each other and mean that discrimination is unlawful if based on the irrelevant criterion of "race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry" by the "state or political subdivision thereof or any firm, corporation, institution, labor organization or any other person" in relation to the exercise by any person of such political or civil rights as the right to equal opportunity to secure "employment, housing, public accommodations and education." In short, public or private discrimination is only proscribed in the area of, and in relation to, political and civil rights, and not in areas not related thereto.

A. Reasons for an explicit declaration of certain rights.

The fourteenth amendment prohibits a state from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. "It does not, however," said Chief Justice Waite, "add anything to the rights which one citizen has under the constitution against another. . . . Every republican government is in duty bound to protect all its citizens in the enjoyment of equality of right. . . . That duty was originally assumed by the states, and it still remains there."; U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542. Hence, the duty of adding or declaring and enforcing civil and political rights is a duty of the state of Michigan. Delegate Proposal 1621 is a proposed constitutional expression and implementation of that duty.

The need for compliance with that duty by the state of Michigan was demonstrated by the quantity of segregation and discrimination disclosed by official reports and by testimony before our committee. The reports of the United States civil rights commission, of which Dr. John Hannah is chairman, and of the Michigan advisory committee to the commission, of which Mr. Charles E. Wilson was chairman, have described in detail the dimensions of discrimination in Michigan in the areas of employment, housing, education, and public accommodations. Committee testimony produced similar conclusions. The present and foreseeable period moved Mr. Harry J. Kelly of Grand Rapids, chairman of Michigan's fair employment practices commission, to relate the constitution and civil rights in this statement to our committee hearing:

The constitution is an instrument of high purpose which protects the individual against the encroachment of the corporate structure of the state as well as the corporate structures which are conceived for the benefit of segments of the population. It protects the fundamental rights of the individual. Employment, housing, public accommodations and education are fundamental rights in our complex society. Without equal access to the enjoyment of these rights the individual is deprived of his full stature as a man and is deprived of his right of full equality as a citizen. We recognize that the constitution is a blueprint, that it is not meant to supply the bricks and mortar but if the blueprint is deficient in its general specifications, the structure which results will be faulty and may threaten the safety and welfare of those who must use it. We know that a constitution is a statement of goals and not a detailing of means, but surely our goals must include the intent that each of our citizens, all of our citizens, shall enjoy equal protection of the law in all areas of living which involve fundamental human rights, fundamental civil rights in this our beloved state of Michigan.

Such intent, the intent that each of Michigan's citizens have "equal access" to the "fundamental rights in our complex society" to "employment, housing, public accommodations and education" should in our opinion be stated simply and clearly as a matter of constitutional policy. Because such rights are "fundamental" and prerequisite to full equality and dignity as a citizen, the state should declare them so in its constitution. This would be in keeping with the most modern and authoritative statement of our purpose and objectives as a nation. President Eisenhower's commission on national goals declared in 1960:

> Respect for the individual means respect for every individual. Every man and woman must have equal rights before the law, and an equal opportunity to vote . . . to be educated, to get a job . . . to buy a home. . . . These goals, which are at the core of our system must be achieved by action at all levels.

B. Reasons for imposing a duty of nondiscrimination on both public and private conduct.

The fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution has been construed to apply to acts of discrimination practiced by the state itself and not to acts of individuals. Chief Justice Warren declared recently that > Since the decision of this court in the civil rights cases, the principle has become firmly embedded in our constitutional law that the action inhibited by the first section of the fourteenth amendment is only such action as may fairly be said to be that of the states. That amendment erects no shield against merely private conduct, however discriminatory or wrongful. . . .

Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1, 13.

Hence, if a shield of constitutional protection is to be constructed against discrimination by private agencies, that shield can be constructed by the states. To construct that shield, the 1938 Constitution of the State of New York proscribed discriminatory conduct by both state and private agencies, and, in this regard, substantially identical language has been incorporated in Delegate Proposal 1621, to wit: ". . . by the state or any political or civil subdivision thereof, or any firm, corporation, institution, labor organization or any other person." If, as Justice Cardozo has stated, "a constitution should not only deal with matters of the passing hour, but with principles of the future," it is fitting and necessary that the largest agency of discrimination, present and future, namely that of private conduct, be the subject matter of constitutional attention. Moreover, to those who contend that private discriminatory conduct should remain free of constitutional prohibition, Justice Frankfurter has supplied this pertinent answer:

> Of course a state may leave abstention from such discrimination to the conscience of individuals. On the other hand, a state may choose to put its authority behind one of the cherished aims of American feeling by forbidding indulgence in racial or religious prejudice to another's hurt. To use the fourteenth amendment as a sword against such state power would stultify that amendment. Certainly the insistence by individuals on their private prejudices as to race, color or creed, in relations like those now before us, ought not to have a higher constitutional sanction than the determination of a state to extend the area of nondiscrimination beyond that which the constitution itself exacts.

Railway Mail Association v. Corsi, 326 U.S. 88, 98 (1945).

Conclusion

Accordingly, because the committee proposal does not make explicit the propositions contained in Delegate Proposal 1621, and because we think the declaration of rights as part of the Michigan constitution ought to state these fundamental rights more adequately and explicitly, we prefer and recommend the adoption of the language of Delegate Proposal 1621.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, I should like to make just a brief introduction to this proposal in addition to the comment which you will find in Journal 61, page 353. I hope we can approach this matter calmly and seriously because, in my opinion, this is one of the most progressive and momentous decisions we will have to make. In order to put the matter in proper historical perspective, I should like to present, for just a few moments, as background, Michigan's constitutional and legislative civil rights history. It is a good history. Michigan has always been in the lead in this field, and it is the purpose of our proposal to keep Michigan in a leading position.

I establish this by reference to these facts: in the first Michigan Constitution of 1835, qualified electors were limited to white male citizens. The word "white" was eliminated in the Constitution of 1850. This constitution also provided that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this state. The Constitution of 1908 reestablished this section.

The equal protection clause of the 1908 constitution read as follows, "All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal benefit, security and protection."

By amendment approved on November 5, 1940, a section of civil service was added to the Michigan Constitution of 1908 containing this clause, "No removal from or demotion in the state civil service shall be made for partisan, racial or religious considerations." So much for the constitutional history up to date on this matter.

The first civil rights legislation passed in Michigan was in 1867, when segregation in public education was banned. In 1869 the legislature prohibited life insurance companies doing business within the state from making any distinction or discrimination between white and colored persons. The ban against miscegenation was removed in 1883. In 1885 the Michigan state legislature prohibited racial discrimination in public places of accommodation, amusement and recreation, and in the selection and qualification of jurors. This statute was also reenacted in the penal code of 1931, and strengthened in 1937, 1952 and 1956. The 1952 amendment extended its coverage to government public housing. In 1955 the Michigan fair employment practices act was placed on the statute books.

You can see, therefore, that the Michigan record has been a good one and a progressively good one.

The committee, in studying this matter, had several choices. We paid attention, of course, to what had been the constitutional trend in those states which have recently adopted new constitutions; notably New Jersey, New York, Alaska and Hawaii. As a result of our deliberations on this matter, we have now come forth with a proposal which is more similar, I believe, to the recent Hawaiian proposal than to any other. We felt that, in the event we wanted to have a specific nondiscrimination clause, it would be better to state as a general policy of the constitution that there shall be no discrimination based on race, religion or national origin in the enjoyment of political or civil rights, and that the legislature should have the power to enforce this by appropriate legislation.

This seemed to be the preferred type of nondiscrimination clause. It defines on the one hand the general policy of this state and also makes it clear that this is not a directly enforceable provision in regard to private persons, but will depend upon legislation which will then have to define what is meant by political and civil rights, the extent to which discrimination will be considered a violation and the appropriate sanctions to be applied. The majority of the committee considered this preferable, both because, as a general proposition, constitutional limitations should serve to restrain governmental action and not to define private duties, and because the areas in which private discrimination should be forbidden, the extent to which discrimination is prohibited, and the sanctions to be applied are matters that we think are appropriately left for legislation. As we say in the comment to our proposal, the proposal has the unanimous support of all the members of the committee. Five members of the committee — as will be seen from the accompanying minority report — would have preferred to report out the text of Delegate Proposal 1621, which they considered to be more adequate in certain respects. But they wished to emphasize that they also support the present committee recommendation.

Our proposal, then, is a modification and synthesis of the civil rights provision in the recently adopted Hawaiian constitution incorporated in the second paragraph of Delegate Proposal 1455, introduced by Mr. J. A. Hannah, and Delegate Proposal 1014, introduced by Mr. Norris. It will be observed that the committee draft also adds an equal protection clause to the Hawaiian language. The committee, in recognition of the modern doctrine, also, of the equality of women, has also incorporated a guarantee against discrimination on account of sex.

I hope you will find this a workmanlike job, and one which will appeal to you as being significant, as it is to us.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Dr. Pollock. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Messrs. Norris, Dade, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hodges and Buback,

Mr. Norris offers the following substitute for Committee Proposal 26:

A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin.

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Each person in Michigan shall enjoy the equal protection of the law. No person shall, because of his race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry, be discriminated against in employment, housing, public accommodations, education, or in his enjoyment of all other of his civil rights, by the state or any political or civil subdivision thereof, or any firm, corporation, institution, labor organization or any other person.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee of the whole, as the secretary has indicated, there are 2 reports and 2 proposals: one, the committee report which you will find in Journal 61, beginning on page 353 — and the minority report of preference, which you will find in Journal 62 on pages 360 through 362. The matter which we have before us, on which I move the substitution, is a grave matter, and one in which I am certain there is tremendous interest in our state. The minority, in this case a minority report of preference, wants to underscore the fact that we contributed to the formulation which Dr. Pollock has put upon the floor, and we do not oppose it. We prefer, however, Delegate Proposal 1621 as being a more adequate declaration of rights, in the light of contemporary reality, than the committee formulation. We wish to promote the committee recommendation as well, as we assisted, in common with all the praiseworthy efforts of all members of that committee, in its formulation and support. If the proposal we prefer is not adopted, we respectfully urge the adoption of the committee recommendation.

Now, we urge the adoption of the language of Delegate Proposal 1621 because it contains 2 fundamental and strategic propositions not clearly or adequately delineated in the committee proposal. In our view both propositions, one proposition creating certain rights, and one proposition imposing certain duties, are essential to an adequate declaration of rights on behalf of full citizenship for all persons in Michigan. The first proposition contained in Delegate Proposal 1621 and not expressed adequately in the committee proposal is the declaration of the right of all persons to equal opportunity to secure employment, housing, education and public accommodations as explicit political and civil rights. This explicit declaration in Delegate Proposal 1621 is for the purpose of specificity and enforceability, and this enumeration does not connote limitation. You will note in Professor Pollock's statement that he felt that this ought to be left to the legislature. It is the submission of those who have subscribed to this report, Father Dade, Lillian Hatcher, Robert Hodges, Peter Buback and myself, that we ought to spell out these rights in specific form. The second proposition contained in Delegate Proposal 1621 and not adequately expressed in the committee proposal is the imposition of a duty of nondiscrimination on private as well as public or state agencies in the exercise or enjoyment by all persons of political and civil rights.

Now, these 2 propositions, in our judgment, complement each other and supplement each other. They mean that discrimination is to be proscribed if based on the irrelevant criterion of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry by state or political subdivision thereof or any firm, corporation, institution, labor organization or any other person. This proscription is in relation to the exercise by any person of such political or civil rights as the right to equal opportunity to secure employment, housing, public accommodations and education. In short, public or private discrimination is only proscribed in the area of, and in relation to, political and civil rights, and not in areas not related thereto.

As Dr. Pollock has pointed out, we have had considerable testimony before our committee from statewide organizations; the Michigan coordinating council of civil rights; you have received a publication from them and from other organizations, and we have also had before us the most recent and authoritative publication of the United States civil rights commission, of which Dr. John Hannah is chairman, and of the Michigan advisory committee to the commission, of which the late Mr. Charles Wilson was chairman. These reports have described in detail the quantity and quality of discrimination and segregation in Michigan, particularly in the areas of employment, housing, education and public accommodations, and their testimony was buttressed with preciseness and clarity before our committee by Mr. Harry J. Kelly, of Grand Rapids, the chairman of the Michigan fair employment practices commission. I want to suggest to you that he projected to us the basic premise of Delegate Proposal 1621, and that is this: that employment, housing, public accommodations and education are fundamental rights in our complex society. Without equal access — and I underscore that, equal access — to the enjoyment of these rights the individual is deprived of his full stature as a man and is deprived of his right of full equality as a citizen.

Now, we know that a constitution is a statement of goals and not a detailing of means, but surely our goals must include the intent that each of our citizens, all of our citizens, shall enjoy equal protection of the law in those particular areas of living which involve fundamental human rights, fundamental civil rights, in our state. Such intent, the intent that each of Michigan's citizens have equal access to the fundamental rights to employment, housing, public accommodation and education, should, in our opinion, be stated simply, clearly and enforceably as a matter of constitutional policy. Because such rights are fundamental and prerequisite to full equality and dignity as a citizen, the state should declare them so in a declaration of rights in its constitution. Now, this straightforward declaration would be in keeping with the most modern and authoritative statement of our purpose and objectives as a nation.

President Eisenhower appointed a commission on national goals, and in 1960 that commission declared, with particular relevance to the matter now at hand,

> Respect for the individual means respect for every individual. Every man and woman must have equal rights before the law, and an equal opportunity to vote . . . to be educated, to get a job . . . to buy a home. . . . These goals, which are at the core of our system, must be achieved by action at all levels.

I submit that at this level, that is, from the high ground of constitution writing, we ought to be able to survey the sweep of history. We ought to note the provision in this category in the constitutions of New York, New Jersey, Wyoming, Arkansas and Alaska and Hawaii. We ought to be able to see that human rights in specific forms are the goals of people throughout the world. We ought to be mindful that the Charter of the United Nations — to which the United States is a signatory nation — has declared that certain human rights are inviolate and every member is to promote and take action for "close uniform respect and observance of human rights as fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language and religion." Now, in many treaties the United States has committed itself, as it did in the interAmerican conference of 1945, "to make every effort to prevent all acts which provoke discrimination among individuals because of race or religion." Now, if we are to write a constitution in the twentieth century, we ought to declare in our declaration of rights a twentieth century appraisal of human rights.

May I conclude this portion of what I have to say by stressing this proposition: that the central premise of the American nation is the dignity and worth of every individual. It is the theory of this nation that its progress on behalf of all mankind is best promoted by regarding every individual on the basis of merit and character. Stemming from this premise is the obligation to constitutionally protect that dignity by promoting equality — the specific means of equality — by stating simply, clearly and enforceably the right to equal opportunity of each to be educated, to get a job, to buy a home. To the degree that we strengthen this right for each, to that degree do we secure this right for all. We ought, as President Eisenhower stated to this group when he appeared before us, to stand 4 square on this principle. May I, in humility and in deepest respect for the conscience of every delegate present, urge your support for the preferred recommendation contained in the substitute proposal contained in the minority report.

Mr. Chairman, in support of the minority report several of the people who have subscribed thereto have asked to speak and, I believe, have a contribution to make to this discussion. I refer specifically to Father Dade, Mrs. Lillian Hatcher and Mr. Buback. I wonder if they might be called on at this time.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, as a member of the committee who participated in this, and who listened to the speeches, and who spent more time listening to this one proposal than any other one, I wish to endorse the committee's proposal. We feel that we have covered all the necessary things. We felt, in fact, that the mere equal protection clause would, in itself, cover it, but realizing that it was something of a special case, we made the concession to this end: that we would specify that we would put into the constitution certain specific things which would apply to the persons mentioned therein: persons should not be discriminated against because of sex, religion, color, race or national origin. To that end, we decided, or a majority decided, that it was neither wise, proper nor desirable that we should apply this to individual persons, or that we should attempt to legislate in the constitution. We provided all the background the legislature might possibly need. The legislature has already, over the years, made — and we feel will continue to make — any provisions necessary in regard to places of business open to the public, such as theaters, hotels, stores, and so forth, and we feel that it is not necessary to enumerate such things in the constitution.

We also had in mind protecting, to some degree, the rights of property owners whom we thought should not, as individuals, particularly home owners, be required by law to sell their property to any person to whom they did not wish to sell without having to defend themselves thereon. In connection with that there will be offered later a proposal to that end. The point is that the committee feels that it has done everything necessary and proper to take care of this problem. We do recognize the problem. We feel we gave it a lot of time. We feel that we have given the legislature any powers it may need hereon. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the minority report. Father Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I address you, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, to urge that you vote yes in favor of the substitute proposal commonly called 1621.

You know, it's one thing to look at this problem in an academic way, to look at it in a philosophical way; it is another thing to look at it in a way which no one in this committee — no one in this convention — can look at it as I can look at it. A short time ago it was my misfortune to be attacked by a mob. I was attacked by a mob because I was exercising a simple act of decency, and this mob would have beaten me, mauled me, trampled me down. I am here this afternoon because of the courage of a lone white woman who momentarily cowered this mob and together with a negro porter called for help. Now, ladies and gentlemen, I mention this for one fact: that the people who came before us in the public hearing, which some of the committee had called pressure groups, in the eyes and the voices of those people I saw the same kind of courage, the same kind of Christian declaration of extending to individuals, regardless of their race, color or creed, the basic rights which should be accorded to every citizen. I speak specifically of the monsignor representing the roman catholic diocese of Saginaw; I speak of that single capable woman representing the 3300 members of the league of women voters; I speak of the Republican industrialist from Grand Rapids; I speak of a lone young woman who so captivated this committee that the previous speaker went down and further talked with her about the difficulty she was experiencing in public accommodations. These people came before this committee and they said, "We want 1621." And so I speak for them, which I call a report, not on preference alone but, in my book, a report on priority.

In the second place, I want to make a report. I went back — not into my district, but to talk to people. I said, "Look at these 2 proposals. Tell me what you think of them." They looked at the proposals and here is what they said. They are just down to earth, grass roots people. Here is what they said: "We don't want any kind of 'let George do it, leave it to the legislature, pass the buck'. We want it spelled out in the constitution. We feel that if a right is to be enjoyed, it is to be enjoyed now or not at all. We don't want it left to the future. We want it spelled out right now." I said, "Well, what about the possibility it might hurt somebody else?" They said, "Bosh! Isn't it true that the basic property rights of every individual is protected? No one is compelled to convey his property to anyone else if he doesn't want to." I said, "I thought that." And then I said, "Well, what about what I heard at the convention, that you may be receiving special treatment?" They said, "Tell the convention, remind them, of the constitution where it spells out involuntary servitude, and tell them that therein it mentions no race, no group; it speaks of individuals, and we as individuals are asking that we be treated as individuals, and that this be spelled out in the constitution, in the law of this state of ours."

Ladies and gentlemen of this committee, I feel that this is a simple matter of basic justice, freedom and equality; and that basic justice and freedom and equality cannot be divided — they are indivisible. I wish I could repeat the words of the president, President Eisenhower. Put it this way: when you take away the freedom of equality or justice of any individual, you all suffer. I remember a short time ago, a few years ago, having an audience with the ambassador to London under the Eisenhower administration, and I, as an American citizen, was ashamed to have him confess to this American group that the one thing he found himself continually humiliated by was the fact that he could not explain away discrimination in his own country.

And so I say to you, ladies and gentlemen, vote aye, vote for this substitute proposal. Spell it out — spell it out so we can all see it — that these basic rights should be accorded to all people. I am standing here this afternoon — I am not speaking because I happen to be black — I am standing here speaking, not for black alone, nor white, nor protestant, nor catholic, nor quaker, nor mormon, but I am standing here speaking for what I have always stood for, for the rights of people, for the elementary decent rights of people that I think should be spelled out in this constitution we are writing today. And, there are those who say I should be more patient, and to them I say: time is running out. I say the map of the world has had a repaint job, and that those who have repainted are asking that we match our practice with our precept, and they want it spelled out. I would remind you that today's majority may be tomorrow's minority. And for these reasons I urge that you vote aye on the language of 1621, and send out a light of hope and brotherhood that will reach far beyond the borders of this great state of ours.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the minority report as a matter of preference of 1621. I would like at this time to extend my remarks and compliments to the remarks of Mr. Norris, the vice chairman of our declaration of rights, suffrage and elections committee, and the remarks made by Father Dade, the previous speaker. Let me, first of all and foremost, make it clear that I voted in support of the majority report. I voted in favor of the majority report because I feel that it is a very good report. However, I favored and preferred the language of 1621 because of the contents and the quality that it embraced. I also want to take this opportunity to compliment the chairman of the declaration of rights, suffrage and elections committee, Dr. James Pollock, who, in my opinion, offered very sound and constructive leadership in attempting to bring the committee members through the days of deliberation, of examining article II of our constitution, and guiding us through the very difficult period of trying to have a meeting of minds; realizing that this was the very first time that 15 people who are citizens of the state of Michigan had had the opportunity to sit down and discuss the very fundamental issues that were before us in the constitutional article II.

I feel that the majority of the members of that committee dealt with the subject forthrightly and in honesty — in all honesty — based on experience that they had had in the various fields that perhaps complemented their activities as members of the committee. However, there were many times we were in basic disagreement on matters that were discussed, but at no time did we ever lose our dignity or respect for each other as individuals. I believe that the fact that we did have such a subject matter of the magnitude as the discussion of civil rights and the question of equal protection perhaps made our committee a little more distinctive than some of the others were. Because, despite how important the other matters before other committees were, we were dealing with the fundamental principles of human relationship and human dignity, which, I believe, transcend all other elements that this convention may be confronted with at this time. I have been more or less guided by my own individual opinion as to how citizens of Michigan are concerned about the image that we will set forth here in this constitution, and just how concerned are the people in Michigan — how concerned are they — with the question of human dignity.

I want to say that, throughout the world, people are constantly on the move attempting to try to seek a greater degree of security and peace, and despite the lack of personal experience that one may have in the field of civil rights, or equal protection or lack of equal protection, I don't believe that any person in this constitutional delegation, or in the state of Michigan, or in the world, as a matter of fact, who can read or hear, can deny the fact that the problems that seem to beset the people of color is one of significant importance. Every news media, TV, radio, slick page magazines and daily publications are constantly reporting to the people of the United States, the state of Michigan, the city of Detroit and Lansing, the problems that are confronting them. Many organizations have taken special interest in attempting to try to study and understand the problems that beset people of color. Women's clubs have adopted as part of their agenda the importance of discussing human relations and human values, and the importance of human understanding. Civic groups have likewise stepped up their programs throughout the state of Michigan and throughout the United States in an effort to try to bring together a better degree of understanding. Religious bodies all over the nation and the world are concerned about the question of color. It has been on the convention agenda of many denominational groups as to whether or not they will accept black citizens as members of their organization, their church group, as well as other members, and this has been a major and splitting problem among church and religious groups throughout our country. Likewise, governmental agencies are doing more to insure equal protection and equal opportunity to people of color and of religious differences. Also, school boards have found it necessary to do something more in terms of trying to afford equality of opportunity in education. It is well to say, in addition, that the Republican party and the Democratic party in their convention platforms that they run on every 4 years when they are seeking the top positions of the nation, mainly, the standard bearer of the office of president, usually refer to and include in their platform a section dealing with civil rights; and I am beginning to wonder just how sincere these 2 parties are when it comes to the question of really putting into effect the things that they say in the Democratic platform as well as in the Republican platform.

I don't imagine my comments here will persuade the opinion of many people here, but I believe the facts and the issues of the day certainly are subjects with which the diplomats and the ambassadors and the leadership of our nation are concerned. For that reason I trust that the delegates will bear with me in these reflections that I would like to leave as a matter of concern to this delegation.

I am also concerned about how this document that we are attempting to write will be received by the people. It is true that there are those of us in this convention who have ambitions beyond this convention, whether they are political, economic or whatever they happen to be. I believe that we have a responsibility to bring back to the people something more than perhaps they had in the last constitution, because I think that the document ought to reflect progress and future achievement, rather than taking away from the people some of the rights that we presently are enjoying. I think, and I certainly know, that the responsibility of delegates to this convention was first of all to review and revise and to possibly improve the constitution in many areas, — not just in the area of declaration of rights, but in many other areas.

I might say, going back to my committee's role for just a moment, that the declaration of rights, suffrage and elections committee voted unanimously to support a resolution to hold hearings in other sections of the state in order that other citizens throughout the state could have the opportunity to discuss problems of concern regarding civil rights with the committee directly. We heard people in Lansing, Detroit, Saginaw and Flint, as well as people who journeyed from other sections, like Muskegon, Ann Arbor, Grand Rapids, and various other sections of our state; at which time the majority of the people were either representing themselves as individuals, an organization, or they were a part of the coordinating council, and each of the representatives who spoke representing the coordinating council supported Delegate Proposal 1621, and that was my reason, and it is still my reason, for rising at this time in support of the minority report presented by Mr. Norris. I feel that the minority report is one of preference because it goes further, in many ways, in spelling out the content and the problem that we have involved in the area of civil rights, and I would like to at this time endorse the coordinating council on civil rights, the proposal that they presented at the time that we held hearings in Detroit relative to the question of an equal protection clause. Their reasons were ing 8 sections:

1. Discrimination is a major evil in the United States and in Michigan.
2. The people of Michigan have the affirmative responsibility to place civil rights protection in the highest law of the state, their constitution.
3. The securing of these rights should not be dependent on changing interpretations of the federal and state courts.
4. The present Michigan constitutional civil rights guarantees are fragmentary and incomplete.
5. Adequate protection is not provided by the thirteenth, fourteenth or fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution nor by federal civil rights laws.
6. Other states have recently included civil rights protection sections in their constitutions.
7. Michigan policy and a swiftly growing public concern supports civil rights guarantees.
8. Delegate Proposal 1621 provides equal protection of the law, recognizing as a civil right freedom from discrimination in key areas of modern life, and prohibits discrimination by the state or other agencies or persons.

I could perhaps take more time of the committee — I haven't used up the number of words that one delegate said we are all accorded — but I believe I have more or less said to you many of the things that I felt were important to say at this time, and other colleagues of mine, members of the committee, I am sure are anxious to make their remarks as well.

I feel that the committee's report, supporting the proposal submitted by our chairman, Dr. Pollock, is one that I can feel very secure and confident of. I participated in the discussion regarding that proposal, and I feel that it was done in good faith. However, my preference still remains with the substance of 1621; but it was not possible for us to secure that, and I wanted to make my position clear concerning this matter. So that is the reason I rise to give these few comments. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mrs. Hatcher. Mr. Buback.

MR. BUBACK: I yield to Mrs. Butler.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as a member of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, I rise to support the committee report. In our study of this section, we felt that the wording of our proposal covered all the rights enumerated by the minority. I urge your support of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Buback.

MR. BUBACK: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise in support of the minority report of preference. As a member of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, I wish to state that in our visits to the cities of Detroit, Saginaw and Flint, where public hearings were held, much of the testimony we heard was in behalf of Delegate Proposal 1621, which had the support and backing of the coordinating council of Michigan, consisting of some 31 organizations. I would be remiss in my duty if I didn't speak in behalf of this minority report of preference. May I just take a moment of your time to read one of the many letters and telegrams that I have received relative to the minority report of preference?

Dear Mr. Buback:

I would like to have you know that I feel very strongly that Proposal 1621 should have a place in our new constitution. I believe that discrimination because of race, color, religion or national origin is both immoral and a stumbling block in the path of progress, and that the specific guarantees of civil rights contained in Proposal 1621 should be written into our basic law, the constitution of Michigan.

I feel Michigan should take its place amongst the states which have included civil rights protection in their constitutions.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Cora Madison,
A white citizen.

Now, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I urge your support for the minority report of preference.

In closing, I wish to commend the committee on declaration of rights and suffrage, and all the members who worked as a group. I also voted for the majority report. I think it is a good report, but I just think the minority report of preference goes a little step further. I think Dr. Pollock did an excellent job as chairman of our committee, and I also wish to commend him. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, as a member of the committee, I want to agree with Dr. Norris and Mrs. Hatcher, that we did give very sober and conscientious consideration to this matter, and I feel that Michigan has made a great step forward in the area of discrimination in the majority report. So I rise to support the majority report of this committee.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I wish to rise in support of the minority report. Before I entered high school in 1943 I was somewhat experienced in racial matters due to the race riot in Detroit in 1943. Shortly thereafter Detroit common council formed our Detroit commission on community relations. Since that time I have had the opportunity of making the acquaintance at Wayne State University of one of its commissioners, Mr. Wallace A. Witkowski. Mr. Witkowski and his teams were a part of the Polish underground who fought the nazis. He came here not too long ago, and presently he is one of the commissioners of the Detroit commission on community relations. He testified before the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, and with your indulgence, I would like to take a few minutes to read some of the more pertinent parts of his very short speech. He starts out:

Having been born and raised on the continent, I am a part and product of the generation which witnessed persecution, torture and death inflicted upon the millions of men by parties, societies and governments simply because the victims were of a different nationality, race, religion or ancestry.

The Detroit commission on community relations was formed upon petition by the shocked citizens of our community less than 20 years ago. It was created to redress and prevent grave wrongs and injustices which caused death, violence and destruction of property within Detroit's city limits, and, above all, resulted in destruction of the image of a free and unprejudiced society around us. It all happened within our generation.

The existence of our commission, the enormous task it faces, its efforts, difficulties and history over the past 18 years are the most dramatic proof of the lack of and the need for a broad statement of the principles of equality of all men to be placed in our new constitution, guaranteeing under law equal protection against discrimination and equal opportunities.

These principles should be plainly stated and the legislature charged with their implementation by appropriate legislation.

There are those who feel that there is no need to spell out in our constitution the rights of every citizen. We have learned that when principles are involved we must put them in our laws, our ideas and our deeds. We must state them again and again. We must remember them every day, and must remind every citizen of this state not only of the rights he has but of the rights he must respect in another man, in his fellowman. Without clear statement of such rights, without implementation by legislative enactments of our beliefs in equality under the law, in equal opportunities and freedom from discrimination, in the words of Dr. Seymour Lipset:

the self perpetuating mechanism of prejudice existing in every society, stemming from the ignorance and selfishness of man, will infringe upon, limit, restrict and erode our freedom until there will be none.

Man's mind is a repository not only of hopes and dreams and ideals of mankind, but also, as someone said recently, of all the misconceptions, biases, false traditions, fables, myths and falsehoods of centuries of ignorance and hatred.

We must educate, we must preach, we must restate the principles of equality, and must remind everyone, every time and everywhere, of them. The constitution is where it should begin. People must unlearn wrong ideas and false ideas, and the constitution must point the way.

Ours is a generation that has the ambitious aspiration to create a good society free of inequities and political handicaps. And yet, this is the generation that has killed men based on the accidental difference of their birth. Others have been threatened for the simple act of moving into homes that their incomes and tastes warrant. It was in our city that 3,000 men walked out of the factory because 3 negroes were upgraded on the assembly line. This happened and happens in this city in this generation.

During this past year in several areas in northwest Detroit we witnessed both destruction of property and harassment, because of their color, of families that sought peaceably to occupy homes which they had purchased.

It is in our city today that we have organizations created ostensibly to protect the economic value and character of the neighborhoods but which in effect violate man's most cherished rights.

Prejudice exists today in our midst in both the open and notorious form as well as the more subtle and sophisticated one.

It is up to you members of the constitutional convention, this sovereign body, repository of all the powers of self government that people have ever had on earth, the beholder of all our noble principles and ideals, it is up to you to recognize the need for a strong, resolute and bold restatement of the principles on which this country has been founded.

It is up to you to include in the new constitution the statement of an individual's rights to equal protection of the law, to freedom from discrimination by anyone because of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry, to equal opportunities and enjoyment of civil and political rights, and to provide for legislative implementation of these principles.

Will we do this?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, I recognize the difference between the committee's report and the proposal of the minority report, the preference proposal. I realize that the committee's report does, in general language, what the minority preference proposal provides in more specific language. I realize that the preferred proposal of the minority is, to some extent, statutory in character, and normally I would oppose the inclusion of such statutory language. However, for many years I have stood 4 square in support of equal recognition before the law and equal rights.

To my knowledge, my company was the only major company that in 1955 publicly supported the enactment of the fair employment practices act. I think that we are dealing with an unusual problem. We are dealing with a problem that is of importance not only in the state of Michigan, but it is important throughout the world. This country will not be able to communicate its ideals and hopes effectively to the rest of the peoples of the world until we eliminate from within the type of discrimination that does exist, and I think that it justifies highlighting in the constitution of Michigan this problem in a more specific way than would be true ordinarily.

I realize that this language is subject to some abuse. After all, with civil rights we can abuse rights. But I think that the risk of such abuse is not sufficient reason to fail to do what can be done to correct the problem that is long overdue in its correction. Therefore, I urge you to support the preferred minority proposal. I think it justifies the risk of abuse, and I think it also desirable to be more specific in this case in the constitution because of the urgency of dealing with this problem promptly and thus taking steps that are important to harmony within our state, and to the understanding of our true attitude and position in the world. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Murphy.

MR. MURPHY: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise in support of the minority preference report to the committee report of rights, suffrage and elections. In doing so I am not at all unmindful of the fact that certain personal considerations might be affecting my judgment. On the other hand, however, there seems to me certain cogent reasons why the proposal contained in the minority report should be adopted, and it is to these reasons that I should like to address myself.

First and foremost, the problem of racial inequality in the United States is no longer a purely domestic issue, for it vitally affects our foreign relations. Let me hasten to add that I recognize that the delegates to this convention cannot legislate for our country as a whole, but I am equally certain that what we do here in the next few weeks will be watched by the world and will have its impact for good or for bad.

In 1959 as national committeeman for the young Democratic clubs of Michigan, representing the young Democratic clubs of America, along with young Republicans of America, it was my privilege to attend a NATO conference in Paris, and Tours, France. Before embarking upon that conference we were briefed in Washington about what to expect and how we should conduct ourselves. Economic considerations played a large part in that briefing. During our rather extensive tour of the NATO countries, however, I found a grass roots concern not with economic problems but with problems of human relations. The people of those countries seemed much more interested in the fact that our group was traveling, living and eating together in Europe while these basic human needs could not always be satisfactorily achieved in our own country. Throughout Europe these people raised questions about racial segregation and the denial of equal opportunity within our borders.

Few aspects of American life are more highly publicized throughout the world than our denial of equal opportunity, and this attack is difficult to counter because of the element of truth in it. And every action, either by a state or by an individual, that deprives other individuals, because of their race or color, of rights and privileges enjoyed by others in some measure burdens the nation in its cold war struggle. In the struggle between the free world and the communist bloc for the allegiance of the so called "uncommitted peoples," almost all of whom are nonwhite, the United States is seriously handicapped by its continued practice of the denial of equal opportunity because of race, religion or color. In this struggle we should be impressing upon the world our genuine respect for the dignity of human beings regardless of the color of their skin; and certainly a strong, unequivocal and broad declaration of such respect in our own Michigan constitution is a good place to begin.

There are other reasons for my preference for an equal protection clause which treats the areas of employment, housing, public accommodations and education. These are the areas where discrimination falls most heavily on the persons discriminated against; consequently, these areas ought to be spelled out in our equal protection provision. Many people doubt the possibility of promoting racial equality by law, but if law can be used to enforce discrimination, it can be employed to promote equal rights. It is also often said that social customs cannot be legislated. Proponents of this argument cite the failure of prohibition laws and the nonenforcement of many state laws against discrimination during the latter part of the last century. These legislative failures certainly demonstrate that a mere passage of legislation is no infallible cure, but they do not justify our failure to be as specific in this area as we can. Laws can be a potent force for changing social habits and modifying attitudes. Of more importance, however, we should note that the proposal contained in the minority report does not require any person to change any attitude, but to refrain from certain discriminatory acts particularly in the areas spelled out.

Now, Mr. Chairman, let me move on to my reasons for preferring the minority proposal, which covers discrimination by individuals, firms, corporations and labor organizations. Individuals may be discriminated against by the state, on the one hand, or by private conduct on the other. Ever since the civil rights cases in 1896, the United States supreme court has consistently held that the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution prohibits only the denial of equal protection by the states or their political subdivisions, or officers acting under color of state law. As the minority report indicates, Chief Justice Warren recently indicated that the amendment erects no shield against merely private conduct however discriminatory or wrongful. I submit to you the proposition that to proscribe state discrimination while at the same time permitting private discrimination is to make one only half free. Consequently, to bring about that equality envisioned — that Mr. Norris mentioned a few minutes ago — in President Eisenhower's report, the state must bridge the gap by prohibiting private conduct which discriminates on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin.

It is often stated that to accord equal treatment to members of a minority is to violate the rights of others such as the right to associate with persons of one's choice, or the right to choose one's neighbors, or the right to dispose of one's property. There is no doubt that there is a potential conflict, but the resolution of conflicts is precisely the business of government. And so, in the sphere of private conduct, we must resolve the potential conflict between the right of an individual to practice racial discrimination, morally reprehensible as it is, and the right of the state to curtail this freedom for the good of the whole. Individual liberties are never absolute, and are always curtailed when it can be justified by persuasive demonstration of a public good to be served.

The report of the commission on race and housing, University of California Press, 1958, points out very succinctly 3 principal grounds in the American tradition for restricting individual liberty. They are:

1. Private activities affected by a public interest. When private activities, because of their nature or scope, affect the welfare of large numbers of people, they cease to be purely private and may justifiably be subject to control in the public interest. Certainly housing, employment, public accommodations, and education are areas in which conduct by private persons must acknowledge a responsibility to the public.

2. The second area in which we have consistently curtailed individual freedom is where there has been an inequality of private power. Respect for individual freedom is a principle that rests upon an assumption of substantial equality of power among individuals. Whenever marked inequalities of private power have developed, they have always generated a demand for correction. Again, may I point out that where discrimination is practiced, the minority individual is confronted not merely with the prejudices of private persons but with the power of organized groups to determine where he shall live, work or go to school.

3. The third area in which individual liberty is curtailed is where we do so for the express purpose of preserving and extending freedom itself. In many ways the enforcement of limitations on the freedom of minority persons brings restrictions on the freedom and opportunities of others as well.

By way of conclusion, let me briefly state my reasons for supporting the minority proposal. First, it will improve our image abroad by stating the core of our system in which every man shall be afforded the equal protection of the law. Secondly, it will enhance the accomplishment of our national goals. Third, it prohibits discrimination in that broad area in which discrimination is now practiced, and which is now proscribed by the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution. And, fourth, because the curtailment on private discriminatory conduct is a reasonable one for the enhancement of the public good. For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I support the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Murphy. Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in support of the majority report for the following reasons. They will be very brief. I think we have all agreed that the committee has heard a great deal of testimony. The committee has worked diligently, and has come to an agreement that nobody is against anything, but we are all for something. This is, if we could use the phrase used in this convention and applied to the other committees, a continuing emerging problem. I don't think anyone will disagree with that fact. The very fact that it is a continuing emerging problem and based on a question asked in our committee as to a specific word in the minority report, namely, housing—did this mean depriving the individual property owner of his right to dispose of his property as he saw fit? No real estate agent, nobody else involved, just the individual citizen living in his homestead? And the answer was yes, that this would prohibit him from disposing of his property as he saw fit. Now, then, that brings us to the point that here we have an emerging problem and I think that all the previous speakers have agreed, at least in part, or in total, that this is something that is not going to be cured today or tomorrow. It is going to take time.

In the short span of my lifetime we have seen a great deal of progress in Michigan. We have seen a great deal of progress in my own home city, where we have a human relations commission that is doing a beautiful job, as was testified to at the hearing held in Saginaw on December 19 before this committee.

I simply point out to you that the majority report leaves the details to be expanded as long as the constitution of the state of Michigan that we are writing, and which we hope and pray will be adopted when submitted to the people, will then be in a position to go even beyond the restricted clauses found in the minority report. Mr. Chairman, members of the delegation, I support the majority report. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Leppien. Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am also a member of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections and for the past 3 months we have been developing a bill of rights. In the process of developing that bill of rights we have come up with a proposal that we consider to be a satisfactory addition to the bill of rights. I would like to point out to you, in support of the majority report, that the minority report goes much too far in its attempt to preserve individual freedom. And I suggest to you it goes so far that individual freedom would be infringed to the nth degree. And I would like to point out to you the final phrase of the substitute proposal, "or any other person." I still believe that individuals in this country would like to have some degree of freedom. I would like to have freedom, and I know that the people who are battling for this minority report would like to have freedom also. I respect their integrity, I respect their wishes, and I respect their position, and I have listened patiently and long, but I feel that in their zeal to get what they consider a victory, they will have injured everyone in our free society. I urge you to support the majority report and truly preserve individual freedom. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. White.

MR. WHITE: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as one of 15 members who has sat through 4 months of, I think, rather high level deliberation on this and other matters having to do with human relations and civil rights, I rise, respectfully, to oppose the minority report and support the committee's proposal. I have a keen sympathy for and an understanding of the problems involved, I think, and I sincerely believe that the committee's proposal meets our requirements. It is a fair and equitable civil rights provision, and a broad and bold statement on equality. I urge its adoption by the committee. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the adoption of the minority substitute proposal. Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the substitute proposal at the desk.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley offers the following amendment to the minority substitute:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "employment,", by striking out "housing, public" and inserting "public housing and", so the language will read, ". . . be discriminated against in employment, public housing and accommodations, education, or in his enjoyment of all other of his civil rights. . . ."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I have read with considerable sympathy and interest the committee proposal and the supporting reasons thereof, and find myself in agreement. I have also read with equal sympathy and interest the minority proposal and the supporting reasons thereof, and find myself likewise in basic agreement. I would venture, Mr. Chairman, that the vast majority of the delegates assembled in this hall are in sympathy with the objectives contained in both proposals, and I might say at this time that I would hope that the final action on whatever decision the committee takes will be done as it should be done, by an overwhelming vote of all the delegates assembled in this hall on so important a proposal as we have before us at this time.

Mr. Chairman, if there is one possible area of controversy within the minority proposal it occurs, I believe, within the area just referred to by the gentleman from Saginaw, Mr. Leppien, which would be in the field of so called nonpublic or private housing. I think this area, which everyone knows is extremely controversial as to interpretation, should probably be left to both judicial and statutory action for its implementation. It is not my purpose to evade controversy. It is not my purpose to evade issues or areas of the entire field of civil rights which should be thrashed out by this committee and by the convention as a whole. But I do feel it is so important to endeavor to obtain, if possible, an overwhelming majority vote, and to prevent division, whether partisan or otherwise, in disposing of this issue, that I offer this amendment, in the utmost sincerity and good faith, in an effort to, perhaps, resolve one possible area of controversy which may arise in consideration of this particular matter. My purpose, I say, is to try to command a large majority of support, which I think is as it should be. I would be very frank to say that if this amendment is adopted I would support the minority proposal with pleasure, just as I would support the committee's proposal if that were the final vote insofar as this committee is concerned.

Actually, I find myself in the position of the minority. I support the committee's proposal. I would prefer, perhaps, the minority because of its specific reference with the exception of this one possible area to which my amendment refers. So far as the question of discrimination in employment and measures taken to prevent it, I feel there is little or no division within this committee. So far as the question of discrimination in the field of education, and measures taken to prevent it, I likewise feel there is no division within this committee. As a matter of fact, the committee on education, of which I am chairman, has a proposal already on general orders that is very similar to the lines of the minority proposal insofar as the question of education is concerned. In the field of public accommodations, I likewise feel that there is little or no division within the committee of the whole on this matter. I sincerely believe that it is only possibly with respect to this one area of housing that there may be sharp and honest difference of opinion within the group which we have assembled here. Therefore, I offer, as I say, this amendment in sincere good faith, in an endeavor to resolve a possible area of controversy which I think might prevent what should result, and that is an overwhelming vote of approval for a civil rights proposal in our constitution.

I might add, Mr. Chairman, that in this record of endeavoring to prevent discrimination in public housing my own position is historically clear. I believe it was when I was in congress about 3 years ago I offered an amendment in the house of representatives to forbid — this was an amendment to the house amendment to the housing act of 1959 — the use of federal funds in any form in any type of public supported housing at the federal level where discrimination might or could be practiced. That amendment was voted down. I remember being sharply criticized by the chairman of the committee who was handling the bill on the floor — a gentleman from the fine state of Alabama — Mr. Rains, that I was offering that amendment at that time in the spirit of attempting to kill the entire housing bill because he termed it a "Powell" type of amendment. That accusation, I may say to my regret, was reechoed in the editorial column in one of our metropolitan newspapers. My purpose in offering that amendment at that time was sincere. My purpose in offering the amendment at this time, ladies and gentlemen, is imbued with equal sincerity, and although I am not trying to evade any stand on the question of discrimination in the field of nonpublic or private housing — and I'll be glad to state my own belief, if I am asked to do so — I do believe that if the committee, or rather the minority, might wish to accept this particular amendment to their substitute proposal, it would result in removing a great area of possible controversy, possible misinterpretation, possible doubt; and I think we could then have a civil rights proposal that the majority of the delegates would all support in good faith and conscience. At least I trust so. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Bentley. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I trust that we will not get into this tedious job of amending 2 carefully drafted alternatives. The decision can be made very clearly. If you like the minority report, vote for the minority report. It was also carefully considered by the committee, as well as the majority report. The way to get unity, if I may suggest it, is not to propose other amendments, but to vote down the minority report, because the minority have already indicated that they are in favor of the majority report, too, and I see no reason in the world why the original proposal of the committee cannot secure the unanimous support of this committee easier than any one which is tinkered with, be it either the minority one or the other one.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendment to the substitute proposal. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to the amendment. Normally in a deliberative matter of this kind, where feelings are strong, I would go along with a compromise for the sake of unanimity, and I wish to say I have no question whatsoever as to the motives or integrity or sincerity of the delegate who offered the amendment. I can respect those motives and yet I can disagree with the amendment.

The reason I disagree with it is that the matter of housing is so vital to the matter of segregation. Our first proposal was that religion, morality and knowledge be part of our educational process, and I believe in that and support it. But if we do not eliminate segregation in housing, we then have segregation in schools, and when we have segregated schools we have inferior schools, and when we have inferior schools we are dooming those children to inequality of education. This is for those that are doomed to be in segregated schools. We have 2 kinds; one that is segregated with only minorities and one that is segregated with what we call majorities. In this day and age I am not quite sure what a majority or minority is. I speak now as a parent, and I want, in a civilized society, the children of my wife and myself to have the opportunity to be in an integrated school in the first grade and kindergarten, so that our children can begin to feel the basic dignity and equality of people, rather than to wait until they are fortunate enough to take a course in anthropology or psychology in college and learn that they were wrong when as children they had impressions that some races were superior and others were otherwise.

I believe that if we really want to get at the heart of this — and I speak to those of us who are a little critical sometimes of the people in the deep south wrestling with their problems — we too must face this problem openly and honestly. In conclusion I would say that in preparing a document here we are preparing a document that reflects our hopes and not our fears; our hopes for the life to come of our children and our children's children. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: I want to talk to the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Bentley's amendment. Is there further discussion? Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I ask that it be read, and then I ask for a division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley's amendment to the minority report is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "employment,", by striking out "housing, public" and inserting "public housing and", so that the language will then read, beginning in the second sentence:

> No person shall, because of his race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry, be discriminated against in employment, public housing and accommodations, education, or in his enjoyment of all other of his civil rights, . . .

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I assume that the Chair might rule my comments out of order since they are only by indirection applicable to the amendment before us. I had expected to remain quiet on this issue because a few weeks ago some folks thought that I intruded a matter of civil rights into another matter. I see in this discussion in the last few minutes, however, well intentioned people in the process of dividing themselves on an issue where there need be no division. The people of Michigan have a very good record in the field of civil rights — not as good as it should be, but good by comparison to most other states and areas.

When I was elected as a delegate to this convention, I asked the staff of the federal commission on civil rights in Washington — and they have devoted more time and attention and thought to this problem, I am sure, than any individual in this hall — I asked them to give serious consideration to the words that they thought would be appropriate to make for the maximum progress in the area that we are now talking about, civil rights, and appropriate to be included in a state constitution. Those words were included in my Delegate Proposal 1455, referred to by Dr. Pollock in the committee report. After you leave the section that had to do with inherent rights, the staff of our commission on civil rights thought that everything that needed to be said to adequately protect the civil rights of people and to make it possible for a state like Michigan to make the greatest progress that can be made are these simple words:

> Civil rights. No person is to be denied the enjoyment of any civil or political right because of race, color, religion, ancestry or national origin. The legislature shall implement this section.

The committee has changed it a little. They have added some words, they have left out a word or two. But essentially this is what they have included.

Now, you see in the speeches that have recently been made; in the well intentioned amendment by Mr. Bentley; what happens when you try to provide for every possible contingency. I speak now against the Bentley amendment — against the minority proposal — because I believe, with great sincerity and conviction, that the words prepared by our staff are about all that are essential, necessary or desirable, and I am afraid you are going to divide in an area where no well intentioned people should divide themselves.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: I wanted to talk after the Bentley amendment is disposed of.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges, do you want to speak on the Bentley amendment?

MR. HODGES: I would like to speak in opposition to the Bentley amendment. I would just like to read a paragraph here.

> We observe that in our state today the only commodity that an individual family cannot buy on a free and open market is a house. This in turn creates school and community segregation and generates prejudice. It causes crowding, lower civilian morale, and makes for substandard living conditions.
> We pledge that we will work for constructive legislation aimed at abolishing discrimination in the sale or rental of housing, and that we will make for an open housing market in this state.

That is the Republican state platform of last year.

Now, what Mr. Bentley's well intentioned amendment would do is foreclose, for the next 50 years if this constitution is adopted, the field of private housing. I do not think any of us here today want to say how far in the future we will go in this field. There are many other areas, other than the individual home owner, when we raise the question of private housing. There are multiple dwellings. There are large tracts where 500 and 1,000 homes are sold at one crack. There may well be a time when appropriate legislation in these areas will be thought necessary, and by deliberately excluding, as this amendment would do, the field of housing, we would be doing a disservice by stating for all time, at least for the great life of this constitution, that we do not feel that this is a proper area. I do not feel that this is something we should do. Therefore, I oppose the amendment, and remind the delegates of both party platforms in this regard.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendment. Mr. Habermehl, do you wish to speak on that?

MR. HABERMEHL: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I believe like Dr. Hannah. I feel there might be a feeling here that there are issues involved where there are no actual issues. This does directly affect, I believe, the Bentley amendment.

The language of the majority report reads: "The legislature shall implement this section." I think it worthwhile calling to the attention of the delegates that this is not a matter of passing the buck or evading legislative action. The legislature has already implemented the section, and has since the year 1885. I think it may be worthwhile to read the statute. It's a very short one:

> All persons within the jurisdiction of this state shall be entitled to full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities and privileges of any restaurants, eating houses, barber shops, public conveyances on land and water, theaters, motion picture houses, and all other places of public accommodations, amusement and recreation, and all public educational institutions of this state, subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law and applicable alike to all citizens.

It is a criminal statute which provides criminal penalty for its violation.

On the question of employment mentioned in the minority report, of course, the act is the fair employment practices act, act 251 of 1955, which makes any discriminatory policy by employer or employee representative — in other words, labor unions — an unfair labor practice. I would not want the delegates to feel that this is something that the legislature must implement in the future. It has already been implemented.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendment to the substitute proposal. A division has been requested. Is the demand seconded?

A sufficient number is up. As many as are in favor of the Bentley amendment will rise.

Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. Chairman, just a point of order. It seems we were going to install buzzers for letting people know when we were going to vote. I know there are some people downstairs.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Is that the buzzer? It's all news to me. (laughter) Do we have a rule on this, Mr. Van Dusen, about buzzers?

MR. VAN DUSEN: We have no rule, Mr. Chairman, on buzzers. There is a buzzer system on which Dr. DeVries is the authority. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. DeVries, are you the buzzer expert?

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I will yield to the secretary. He set up the alarm system. I forgot what it is. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: On page 345, Journal 60, Mr. DeVries reported that the committee on administration had arranged for the installation of a bell warning system to convey signals to all areas of the convention where delegates might be meeting, and asked the secretary to specify how such warning system would be used. The secretary spelled out 3 different systems here, but the one in particular that would apply to this has not yet been figured out. So I rang the bell just once just now.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Those in favor of the Bentley amendment will rise. Those opposed will rise.

[Yeas, 8; nays 80.]

The amendment is not adopted.

The question now is on the minority report substitute. Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I too am a member of the committee on the declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. This has been given extensive consideration. The majority felt very strongly that the majority report, in which the minority concurred 100 per cent, was adequate, was sufficiently detailed, and said what was needed to be said. When you analyze as to why we are here, beyond a doubt the most important thing is that of the protection of minorities. In the final analysis, again, everyone is a member of a minority. I have asked various times if anyone knows anyone who is not a member of a minority, and I have never been able to find a single person that says he knows somebody that is not a member of a minority. In the final analysis, again, every person is a minority of one. So why we are here is to protect the rights of minorities.

Sometimes in an attempt to correct an evil a greater evil is created, and I believe there is the possibility of that in the minority preference. I therefore strongly urge that the minority report not be adopted, and that the committee proposal be adopted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Shanahan. Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I want to urge the dames to vote against the substitute because there's no sex in it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I am the only member of this civil rights committee that hasn't spoken. I have kept silent, listening to the different dissertations upon this proposition from the members of the committee and from those not members of the committee. We had a very exhaustive study of this question. We had a great many witnesses before us on this matter. I, of course, voted with all the rest of the committee for the committee report. It was a unanimous report. And then, of course, they filed this supplemental report, or a minority report. I am very sorry they did, because I have been fearful that by their minority report they might hurt the adoption of the majority report. The majority report is the proper report. We worked it out.

We held all these different meetings, and so forth, and in the city of Flint, when we had that meeting, I pointed out to the members of this committee how the city of Flint was. They have 143 negro teachers in the Flint city schools, and they are not in a segregated area because there is no segregated area in Flint. They work in the shops, and I pointed out to them that the Chevrolet factory in Flint is 1/3 negro in its employees. So, I myself might be a member of a discriminated group. Peculiarly, I ran for office a good many times, you know, and I pointed out to our committee and the members of this committee the points on that: when the colored people of the city of Flint went out saying, "Don't vote for him. He is a catholic." But I didn't resent that. It was their privilege. It was their right. If they wanted to hate me, they could hate me. That was all right. I didn't hate them for it, and I don't, and I believe in according them their rights and privileges just the same as I ask for myself.

Therefore we, after careful consideration, adopted this majority report, and we urge that it will answer the question, and we urge it upon this committee to adopt it as part of the constitution of the state of Michigan establishing the absolute rights and privileges of every member of every group of any kind or nature in the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the minority report substitute. Father Dade.

MR. DADE: I don't want to get into a squabble over who voted and how, but I was under the impression I did not vote to make the majority report a unanimous report, and I specifically said the minority report, for me, was a report of preference and priority.

I want to make one observation that might be of interest; that the young white woman who saved my life in the south some months ago was a roman catholic girl.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the minority report substitute for the committee proposal. As many as are in favor will say aye.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: A request for a division. Is the demand supported? A sufficient number up. The question is on the substitute for the committee proposal. As many as are in favor will rise.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, the question is on the substitute proposal of Mr. Norris, which is explained in the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: My understanding, Dr. Pollock, is that a minority report is offered as an amendment to the committee report. So we are considering it as an amendment or substitute.

MR. POLLOCK: That's right, and as chairman of the committee I urge you to vote no on that question.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: As many as are in favor will vote aye. As many as are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will take the tally.

Mr. Gust.

MR. GUST: Mr. Chairman, it might be more political good judgment on my part to wait and see what Mr. Chase has as a tally before I rise to correct my vote; and much as I would like to vote both ways on this for many political reasons, I feel constrained to follow my leader in the chairman of the committee on rights, suffrage and elections and I choose to have my yes/no vote recorded as a no vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the substitute proposed by the minority, the yeas are 50; the nays are 80.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The substitute is not adopted.

The question now is on the committee report, Committee Proposal 26. Mr. Seyferth has 2 amendments. Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, in view of the hour being late, and we have been sitting and listening for a long time, I move that the committee do rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth moves that the committee do now rise. The question is on Mr. Seyferth's motion. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

A DELEGATE: A division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? Sufficient number up. The question, then, is on whether the committee shall rise. As many as are in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thirty-one.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: As many as are opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Seventy-three.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion does not prevail.

Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I ask for the question now on the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth has 2 amendments, Dr. Pollock. The secretary will read the amendments.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Seyferth offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, by striking out "religion, sex or national origin" and inserting, "color, religion, national origin or ancestry", so that the language will then read:

. . . nor shall any person be denied the enjoyment of his civil or political rights or be discriminated against in the exercise thereof because of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think you now see the reason why I would like to have blown this place when we have to talk about sex at this late hour. (laughter) In all sincerity, I feel that the use of the words in the amendment now on the secretary's desk more justly lends dignity to a much deserved area of dignity, and that the use of race, creed, color or national origin is more fitting than that which the proposal contains. I am not against sex. I feel that the verbiage of the committee proposal does not differentiate between feminine or masculine gender, but it is implied that the feminine gender is as protected in civil rights as in the masculine gender. Therefore my amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Seyferth amendment. Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, as a member of the committee and on behalf of the committee, we would like to oppose the amendment. We gave great consideration to this matter. We did not feel so much it was necessary, but the ladies wanted it in. They felt they might be discriminated against as a minority group or as a group. We studied the matter and the committee felt that there was no reason to believe that this would in any way interfere with the statutory or constitutional rights which have been provided for women. It would simply provide that they would have the same protection as certain other minorities.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Seyferth amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Seyferth offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "origin.", by inserting "The equal protection of the laws shall be defined to mean, among other things, that no private corporation or association of any kind or individual shall enter into any agreement, written or oral, which excludes any person from employment because of membership or nonmembership in any labor organization or be compelled to pay dues, fees or charges of any kind to any labor organization as a requirement of employment or as a condition of continuing employment.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to impose on your valuable time for the next few minutes to explain this amendment as best I am capable of explaining. At the outset, let it be known that the amendment now before you for consideration is a right to work proposal.

On January 6, I appeared before the committee on rights, suffrage and elections to present my Delegate Proposal 1562, right to work. In time the committee, according to their action journal, decided by a majority vote that right to work should be a legislative action and not a constitutional provision. Technically, the committee decision is correct. Right to work can be handled as a statute but it also can be a constitutional provision. On this committee decision I respectfully disagree and I speak now through amendment procedure and privilege in support of the amendment now before you.

The substantive content of the amendment answers in fact whether compulsory union membership should be authorized and fostered in Michigan or should compulsory union membership be banned in the interest of protecting individual rights, and freedom of choice. Today, the right of Michigan workers to join a union is protected by law. This is as it should be. However, a Michigan worker's right to refrain from joining a union is not protected by law. This is not as it should be.

The Taft-Hartley act of 1947 provided for the union shop legal stature. A union shop is one where a union has bargaining authority and all employees must join the union to hold their job; hence, compulsory unionism. The Taft-Hartley act also provides, under the now very famous section 14(b), that each state can forbid said compulsory union shop contracts if the people of that state so desire. Tangible expression of this desire must be through a constitutional provision or a legislative act. Nineteen states now have right to work laws of this kind. Seven states are by constitutional provision and 12 states take the form of statutes. These laws have been upheld as consistent with federal and state constitutions. The Taft-Hartley act then provides that the right of the employee to join a union is a basic right protected by law and the Taft-Hartley act also provides, through individual state action, that the right of the employee not to join or support a union if he so chooses can be equally protected.

The state of Michigan enjoys a predominant industrial complex which in turn supports a vocal labor union membership. This formidable wall of opposition to the principles of right to work could conceivably present to a legislature a very convincing argument against right to work laws so that the rights, suffrage and election committee's reasoning — leave it to the legislature — in my humble opinion will not handle the question fairly in behalf of the people of the state of Michigan. The import of this expression of individual freedom demands the dignity of constitutional status.

We are writing a new state constitution. This is the time and the place to consider presentation to the people of the state of Michigan of a constitutional provision as exemplified in this amendment now before us. So much for the mechanical and technical side.

Now let us discuss the touchy aspect of right to work and here we do not have to look very far for material. In this area, we find strong emotional pros and cons of the issue before us. Let's take a look at this right to work amendment and see what it really means.

First, let it be known that all of the people of the state of Michigan and of the United States should be sick from shame for having allowed ourselves to be conned into this situation through ill conceived federal legislation which now makes it necessary for each state to pass laws or effect constitutional changes in order to protect or reprotect, if you please, our God given, constitutionally supported individual rights.

From this position right to work laws must be considered an unfortunate necessity to restore balance between management, the individual and the union. A right to work provision provides an employee freedom to choose either membership or nonmembership in a labor union. Right to work means that an employee cannot be forced to join or pay money to a labor union — or any other private organization — in order to obtain or retain a job.

The federal bill of rights, our state declaration of rights are dedicated to the protection of individual liberties, equal protection under the laws, freedom for the individual, including his right to choose or reject so long as the right of others are not infringed upon.

The right to work principle does not interfere in any way with legitimate union activity. It does not restrict the right of employees to organize or bargain collectively with their employers.

Organized labor claims union busting, lower pay, free riders and other objectionable conditions follow in states where right to work provisions have been adopted. This is not true. Evidence to the contrary is well documented to indicate that unions have not been broken, pay rates have not deteriorated, collective bargaining has not broken down. What does happen is that labor unions lose their monopoly power over their membership. The right to work provision returns to the individual employee his freedom of action and freedom of choice. The labor leaders then find themselves having to sell their product for a change, based on merit and value and no longer to a captive audience. This, incidentally, is the American way.

No other segment of our Michigan economy has as much unbridled legal monopoly power as labor unions. Is there any doubt why unions object so strongly to the right to work provisions? This monopoly power breeds objectionable byproducts, such as coercion, power and the misuse of power. But these byproducts are the direct result of any monopoly power concentrated in any segment of our economic or social complex whenever freedom controls are relaxed or abandoned.

Labor unions, actively supported through a membership based on free individual choice, are fundamentally necessary in our modern Michigan industrial complex. If this industrial complex is to provide all of the jobs required and necessary for the success of our state's future, then we today had better decide equal ground rules applicable to all the members playing on the same side towards a common goal.

Bear in mind, that for the labor unions to have obtained their monopoly status through compulsory unionism, our government and management and the people with labor had to agree collectively to abrogate and foreclose on the freedom and rights of the Michigan worker. The union could not have done it alone. No, this freedom steal is not all by union bad guys. It had to be helped by management not looking and not collectively objecting and by government through political logrolling for the labor vote block.

Now here we sit as elected delegates to write a new state constitution. We have the power — yes, and the privilege — to restore to Michigan workers their individual freedom of action and equal protection under law. This then is the equalizing ground rule needed to put Michigan's great industrial complex back in the game of providing jobs and more jobs for our dynamic future.

A final thought. Compelling a man to join any organization is denying him his freedom. Freedom depends on choice and when choice is denied, freedom is then denied. To deny freedom of choice is to deny freedom to the minority. In order to deny freedom to the minority in any organization, there must be compulsion.

Force applied in this manner is an enemy of freedom and, of course, morally wrong and certainly contrary to our dedicated individual rights. And for the people of the state of Michigan, we can set into motion action that will correct this condition.

In this interest, I urge your support of the amendment before you and the committee proposal to follow.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: We had all hoped we could get a unanimous vote on the committee proposal. This amendment by Mr. Seyferth is obviously not germane to our proposal. I would consider it a rider, and without regard to the merits of the subject he is talking about one way or the other, it is a separate issue. I therefore urge you, without regard to your feeling on the question of the right to work — the committee considered this, and it considered it as a separate matter, and it considered it as a statutory matter and not one of constitutional nature. That was the decision of the committee. And even if the committee had proposed it as a constitutional section, it never would be put in this section. Therefore, I urge you to defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on Mr. Seyferth's amendment. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, the time is late, I realize, and I would at this time be willing to yield to Mr. Pollock if he wanted to ask that the committee now rise. However, if that is not the case, I would proceed.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Pollock?

MR. POLLOCK: I do not so wish.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Do you have a long statement, Mr. Boothby?

MR. BOOTHBY: I have a rather long statement, yes.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The chairman of the committee does not wish to move that the committee rise, so I think you may proceed.

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I hate to do this, but I must remind most of the delegates that we have a meeting within a few minutes. For that reason, I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Iverson moves that the committee do now rise. The question is on Mr. Iverson's motion. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt. As many as are in favor will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Sixty-five.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: As many as are opposed will rise.

SECRETARY CHASE: Forty.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration various matters on which the secretary will give a report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 26, has considered this committee proposal, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

Pursuant to the deadline established for filing of committee proposals and supporting reports under the terms of Resolution 45, and in accordance with the understanding of the convention relative thereto, as suggested by the vice president and agreed to by unanimous consent on January 30, the secretary announced that the following notices of committee proposals and exclusion reports had been filed on yesterday, January 31:

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Madar requests that the delegates who have not done so please sign his copy of Mason's manual.

The following announcement from the director of public information, Mr. Stuart Kirvan: NBC-TV news called us last night and informed us that the 8:00 to 8:30 a.m. segment of the Wednesday, February 7 "Today" show will be devoted to the Michigan constitutional convention. "Today" is carried in the Detroit area by WWJ-TV, channel 4, and in the Lansing area by WILX-TV, channel 10.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I would like to make one inquiry of the secretary through the Chair. Now that we are on early hours for session at 9:30, will the secretarial staff be available from 9:00 or earlier?

PRESIDENT NISBET: I think that is Mr. DeVries' — I don't see Mr. DeVries here. Let me suggest that the secretary take this inquiry and discuss it with Mr. DeVries, and have an answer for you tomorrow morning.

MR. YEAGER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I move that we reconsider the vote on the resolution setting the times when our convention is going to meet. There was a very close vote. One vote was recorded 71 to 68 by roll call. We had a yea vote cast where the gentleman was not in the building. It's an error that I hope we can correct in the future. It could have changed the whole vote. It was done by accident. Someone voted yes at 10:00 o'clock and they left the building and no one turned the machine off. So when the 9:30 amendment came up, automatically they voted yes. Therefore, I move at this time to reconsider and request a roll call vote to settle the question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on Mr. Kuhn's motion to reconsider.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I have a preferential motion. I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, and in pursuance of Resolution 68, at 5:45 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Friday, February 2, 1962.]

SEVENTY-FIRST DAY

Friday, February 2, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the Reverend Leonard Rowell of the Methodist Church of Alto. Will you please rise.

REVEREND ROWELL: Let us pray. Almighty God, in whom mercy and power are united, hear the thoughts of Thy people among whom power and mercy are mixed and disordered. Temper with compassion the power we hold or seek, that concord and justice may be our goal. Enliven our mercy and compassion with power, that this end may be obtained.

Make us aware of our limitations that, reaching this point, we may not forge further in senseless hindrance. Remind us of our common frailties, that stubborn pride may not be confused with persistence, nor personal prestige with entrusted privilege. Allow to each one of us that step beyond self interest which is constantly needed, lest division come for vanity's sake.

Stir within us the living knowledge that we have abundantly received. With hearty thanks, let us set the course of our days that others may not fare less because of us. In all our labors we pray for Thy guidance, for integrity in deliberation and dedication in decision. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked, and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Miss Hart, Messrs. G. E. Brown, Higgs and Mosier from today's session; Mr. Heideman from the sessions of today and Monday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Mr. G. E. Brown, Mrs. Butler, Miss Hart, Messrs. Heideman, Higgs, Mosier and Thomson.

Absent without leave: Messrs. T. S. Brown, Dean Doty, Lawrence and Pugsley.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

[During the proceedings, the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. T. S. Brown, Dean Doty, Lawrence and Pugsley.]

The Chair recognizes Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, if no one moves we adjourn this morning, I would like to make another motion that we reconsider the vote on the question of what times we should meet during the week; and I think we can conclude this whole subject within 5 minutes. I do not want to go through my little speech which I made yesterday about the machine recording votes wrong by accident, and things of that nature. Therefore I move the previous question on that subject.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Kuhn that the vote on Resolution 68, adopted yesterday, be reconsidered. He also moves the previous question. Is the previous question seconded? Those in favor please rise.

There is a sufficient number up.

The question now is: Shall the main question now be put? Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and the previous question is ordered.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, would it be proper to ask that the question be divided into two parts, one concerning Monday night, and the other concerning Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question has not yet been put on reconsidering, Mr. King. The question is now on reconsidering the vote of yesterday. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I will ask for a record roll call, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on a record roll call. Is there a sufficient number up? There is a sufficient number up. Those in favor of reconsidering the vote of the resolution yesterday — Do you want to read that, Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: The resolution is as follows:

> Resolved, That beginning February 2 the convention shall meet at 4:00 o'clock p.m. on Monday, and at 9:30 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, such schedule to continue until changed by the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of reconsidering the vote on that resolution will vote aye. Those opposed to reconsidering will vote nay.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked, and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read the matter which was being last considered when we rose from the committee of the whole yesterday afternoon.

SECRETARY CHASE: Presently under consideration is Committee Proposal 26, A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 26, see above, page 739.

Pending at the time the committee rose was an amendment offered by Mr. Seyferth as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "origin.", by inserting "The equal protection of the laws shall be defined to mean, among other things, that no private corporation or association of any kind or individual shall enter into any agreement, written or oral, which excludes any person from employment because of membership or nonmembership in any labor organization or be compelled to pay dues, fees or charges of any kind to any labor organization as a requirement of employment or as a condition of continuing employment.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: When the committee rose Mr. Boothby had been recognized, and I recognize Mr. Boothby at this time.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished delegate from Muskegon, Mr. Seyferth.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Fellow delegates, in the interests of presenting to the people of the state of Michigan a concerted, well thought out civil rights proposal, I request the privilege of withdrawing the amendment now before us.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn.

Are there any other amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 26 is passed.

The secretary will read the next order of business on the general orders calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 8 on the calendar as you have it on your desk, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 28, A proposal to provide for compensation of the legislature. Amends article V, section 9.

Following is Committee Proposal 28 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The compensation and expenses of the members of the legislature shall be determined by law: Provided, That no change in compensation or expenses shall be effective during the term of office for which the legislature making the change was elected. [Each member shall be entitled to 1 copy of the laws, journals and documents of the legislature of which he is a member, but shall not receive, at the expense of the state, books, newspapers or perquisites of the office not expressly authorized by this constitution.]

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 28:

It is the opinion of the committee that the part of the section deleted is surplusage and does not deserve inclusion in the constitution. The right of members to have journals and other documents may be provided by rules of the respective houses.

The committee felt it was proper to allow the legislature to continue to fix their compensation. This is in conformity with the federal constitution and those of many other states.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, under our organization of the committee on legislative powers, this proposal and the next 3 proposals were assigned to our subcommittee 1, Richard Kuhn as chairman, Charles Youngblood, Cliff Perras and Lewis Hubbs. I would like at this time to yield to Mr. Kuhn, the subcommittee chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, the committee recommends the retention of the first part, which leaves the pay of the legislators to their own discretion. And we are following the federal constitution and the constitutions of most states. We are also following the recommendation of the model state constitution. We had some delegate proposals that asked us to set a floor on salaries, and also to put in some specific salaries. As the delegates may well know, in 1835, in our first constitution, it was left to the discretion of the legislators to set their pay, and then they changed it in 1850 and 1908. But this worked out in such an inefficient manner that they had to amend it twice between 1908 and the present time. Therefore, it is our recommendation that we leave it up to their discretion. And it is also well known that they cannot change their pay during the term for which they were elected.

Now, as far as the balance of the section is concerned, it was the opinion of the committee that the part of the section deleted is surplusage, and does not deserve inclusion in the constitution. The right of members to have journals and other documents may be provided for by the rules of the respective houses. That's all we have to say at this time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 28 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 9 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 29, A proposal to provide for the form of laws. Retains article V, section 20.

Following is Committee Proposal 29 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

The style of the laws shall be: "The people of the state of Michigan enact."

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 29:

The committee recommends the retention of the section unchanged. Since 1835 the constitution has contained a provision on the style of laws. The present form originated in 1850. It has been held by the courts that every bill must have an enacting clause. A single form will provide consistency.

The use of the term, "The people" indicates the source of all laws in our society, even though action is through the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman:

[The reasons submitted in support of Committee Proposal 29 were read by Mr. Kuhn. For text, see above.]

Therefore, we ask that this be retained as is.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 29 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 10 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Exclusion Report 2009, A report recommending that article V, section 10 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Following is Exclusion Report 2009 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on legislative powers recommends that article V, section 10 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2009:

The committee has discovered that the section does not conform to practice. Both officers receive $1,000.00 more than salary for expenses which are inherent in the offices held.

Proposed section 9, it is felt, will allow the legislature to provide additional compensation for these offices. It appears proper to the committee that the legislature be allowed to determine such matters.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to call to the delegates' attention that the full text on these sections can be found in Journal 61, on page 357. This section, Mr. Chairman, has to do with the compensation for the president and speaker. It is the recommendation of the committtee that this be deleted. It is the committee's opinion that the legislature should also have complete control over this section, and they should have complete control over the pay of the speaker and the president of the senate. Today, under this section, it says that they should not receive any more than a member of the legislature. We know as a matter of fact that they do give them an extra $1,000 for expenses. We have no recommendation whether they should receive more pay or not, but we do feel that it should be left to the sound discretion of the legislature. This is also in conformity with our federal constitution and the constitutions of most states.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2009 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 11 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Exclusion Report 2010, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 11.

Following is Exclusion Report 2010 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on legislative powers recommends that article V, section 11 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2010:

This section has been deleted because it is the opinion of the committee that it is not a matter of constitutional importance, and is a matter that can without problem be resolved by law or by the rules of the respective houses.

There is, as a practical concern, no need for this provision since the legislature will not authorize the payment of salary to any person until he has been seated. The provision is unusual in state constitutions and, at best, demonstrates only ancient distrust of the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, once again we are asking for this section to be deleted. This has to do with contested elections, and says that only the one that is declared to be seated should be paid and receive compensation for his travel. This is not a matter that the committee feels should be in our constitution, and we once again feel that this should be left to the sound discretion of our legislature.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2010 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 12 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Exclusion Report 2011, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 32.

Following is Exclusion Report 2011 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on legislative powers recommends that article V, section 32 of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2011:

We see no necessity for this provision in a new constitution. We cannot conceive that the legislature would become involved in the granting of divorces and we are assuming that the new constitution will have restrictions against local and special acts.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the next 2 items on the calendar fall in the jurisdiction of our subcommittee composed of Stanley Powell as chairman, Martin Baginski, Don Habermehl and Raymond Murphy. I yield to Mr. Powell.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, perhaps I should read section 32, which is a very brief sentence. "Divorces shall not be granted by the legislature." You will notice on the same page on which we recommend the exclusion, we explain our position in this way:

[The reasons submitted in support of Exclusion Report 2011 were read by Mr. Powell. For text, see above.]

Mr. Chairman, that is provided in another section of our report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2011 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 13 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Exclusion Report 2012, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 35.

Following is Exclusion Report 2012 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on legislative powers recommends that article V, section 35 of the present constitution be excluded entirely from the new constitution.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2012:

This provision appears to be unique among state constitutions. Since there is a strong trend in the United States against the establishment of official newspapers of the type prohibited by section 35, we feel that this provision is entirely unnecessary and unsuitable for constitutional status.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this section 35 is also an exceedingly brief section, reading, "The legislature shall not establish a state paper."

[Exclusion Report 2012 and the reasons submitted in support thereof were read by Mr. Powell. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2012 is passed.

The secretary will read the next item.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 14 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Committee Proposal 30, A proposal pertaining to free public and elementary schools. Replaces article XI, section 9.

Following is Committee Proposal 30 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The legislature shall [continue] MAINTAIN AND SUPPORT a system of [primary] FREE PUBLIC ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY schools[,]. [whereby] Every school district [in the state] shall provide for the education of its pupils without [charge for tuition;] DISCRIMINATION AS TO RACE, CREED, COLOR, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN. [and all instruction in such schools shall be conducted in the English language. If any school district shall neglect to maintain a school within its borders as prescribed by law for at least 5 months in each year, or to provide for the education of its pupils in another district or districts for an equal period, it shall be deprived for the ensuing year of its proportion of the primary school interest fund. If any school district shall, on the second Monday in July of any year, have on hand a sufficient amount of money in the primary school interest fund to pay its teachers for the next ensuing 2 years as determined from the pay roll of said district for the last school year, and in case of a primary district, all tuition for the next ensuing 2 years, based upon the then enrollment in the seventh and eighth grades in said school district, the children in said district shall not be counted in making the next apportionment of primary school money by the superintendent of public instruction; nor shall such children be counted in making such apportionment until the amount of money in the primary school interest fund in said district shall be insufficient to pay teachers' wages or tuition as herein set forth for the next ensuing 2 years.]

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 30:

This section is written to replace section 9 of article XI. It is the recommendation of the committee that it be placed in the education article so as to directly follow the "Religion, morality and knowledge . . ." clause.

Section 9 of article XI in the 1908 constitution fixed responsibility on the legislature to provide "primary" education. The term "primary" is too limiting for present day practice. Since the Kalamazoo case, this term has been interpreted broadly to allow the support of "elementary and secondary" (kindergarten through grade 12) education and therefore these new terms have been used in our proposed new section. It is not the intention of this committee to force every school district into a kindergarten through grade 12 program, since the committee feels this is a legislative determination.

The remainder of section 9 of the 1908 constitution is being excluded because restrictions as to finance and definitions as to basic qualifications needed to be eligible for state aid might better be determined by the legislature through a state aid formula.

The anti discrimination clause is placed in this section with the full knowledge that some may say it is unnecessary because of the rights established in our federal constitution and United States supreme court decisions.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The committee feels this concept is so important to the preservation of our democracy that it wishes to leave no doubt as to where Michigan stands on this question.

The committee on finance and taxation has waived its concurrent jurisdiction.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in dealing with section 9 of the education article in the present constitution, the committee on education decided to delete a large part of this particular section, provisions of which are in a great part obsolete, and provisions which the committee thought are properly legislative rather than constitutional in nature. However, the committee on education, in reaffirming its belief that the legislature is responsible for the maintenance and support of a system of free public elementary and secondary schools, also felt it desirable to include a specific provision, in light of recent developments—not necessarily in Michigan, but more particularly elsewhere in this country—that such free public education should be provided without any discrimination, very much along the lines of the proposal that the committee was concerned with yesterday.

At this time, Mr. Chairman, without yielding the floor, I would like to yield for appropriate remarks to the chairman of the subcommittee which handled this particular matter, the distinguished vice president of the convention, the gentleman from Bloomfield Hills, Mr. Romney.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if you will turn to page 367 of the journal, you will find not only the language of the committee proposal, but also the deleted language; and following that the committee reasons, which I would like to read.

[The reasons submitted in support of Committee Proposal 30 were read by Mr. Romney. For text, see above, page 762.]

In other words, the language, as explained in the first 2 paragraphs, permits school districts to arrange for the education of their children in other school districts, but it does require them to make provision for education of their children from the kindergarten through grade 12.

This, in substance, is the committee report, and I think it very well indicates the strengthening of this language in the proposed constitution by requiring a provision for education of children from kindergarten through grade 12 without discrimination.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I would be glad to yield for any questions at this time. If there are no questions, I will be glad to yield the floor.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Bentley, I noticed the word "continue" is deleted, and the words "maintain and support" are inserted. Does this raise a question as to whether or not the state is obligated to pay for all of these schools, rather than the financing by the local units?

MR. BENTLEY: I think not, Mr. Chairman. The committee took this language from the provision in the model state constitution, which is in chapter 11, on page 10 of your citizens research council book, and which reads: "The legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a system of free public schools open to all children in the state." I believe that no such interpretation, Mr. Chairman, can reasonably be placed upon this language.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any further questions? If not, are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Hearing none, the proposal will be passed.

Committee Proposal 30 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 15 on the calendar, from the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Exclusion Report 2013, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 3.

Following is Exclusion Report 2013 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on judicial branch recommends that article VII, section 3 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2013:

The committee is unanimously of the opinion that the subject matter covered in section 3 can best be left to the discretion of the court to be determined by court rule. It would appear likely that in the future it will be necessary to either increase or decrease the terms of the supreme court. As a matter of practice, the supreme court sets its cases for hearing as rapidly as possible and the committee is of the opinion that to fix a certain number of terms within a constitution does not serve a useful purpose.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, very early in our deliberations in the committee, in going through article VII, the judicial article, it was unanimously agreed that the constitutional requirement of 4 terms annually for the supreme court was, in this day and age, unnecessary and unneeded in the constitution. The committee was unanimously of the opinion that this matter should be left to the rules of the court to set the terms as may be needed, which may be either more or less in the future. It was certainly felt that this was not a matter to be left in the constitution. Therefore, we recommend exclusion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2013 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 16 on the calendar, from the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Exclusion Report 2014, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 18.

Following is Exclusion Report 2014 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on judicial branch recommends that article VII, section 18 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2014:

The committee has carefully reviewed the provisions of article VII, section 18 and is unanimously of the opinion that the provisions contained therein should not be included in a new constitution. The purpose of this provision is not clear and investigation by the research department has failed to bring to light any reasons why it was continued in the 1908 constitution except that it appeared in the 1850 constitution and was continued without change except as to phraseology. The purpose would appear to be that judicial officials named in the section may make arrests within their respective jurisdiction. The committee is of the opinion that a judicial officer should not be an arresting officer and this should be left to the police agency or arms of the executive branch.

It was the further opinion of the committee that the section is statutory in nature and can be enacted by the legislature if needed. The vote of the committee to exclude this provision and the idea contained therein was unanimous.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, once again the committee was practically of the same opinion as has previously been stated. We endeavored to ascertain the history of section 18—its purpose. Research was unable to develop a clear reason, except that it was retained from the former constitution. The purpose seemed to be to allow certain judges or justices to have arresting power within their respective jurisdictions. The comments by the 3 gentlemen who have served upon the bench of this state was that it had not been used, and was a matter that could be better left to the law enforcement agencies, and should be divorced from the judiciary. Hence we recommended the exclusion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2014 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 17 on the calendar, from the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Exclusion Report 2015, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 22.

Following is Exclusion Report 2015 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on judicial branch recommends that article VII, section 22 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2015:

The committee carefully reviewed the provision of article VII, section 22, and concluded that the subject matter of the section is presently handled by court rule which is entirely proper. The provisions contained in the section are procedural, not substantive, and relate solely to the form in which an indictment should be drawn.

It is possible that in the future the style should be changed and therefore a certain amount of flexibility should be maintained. Accordingly, the committee unanimously voted that the provisions of section 22 and the subject matter contained therein be excluded from the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, once again, this was felt to be a legislative or rule making item and, consequently, not required to be contained in the constitution. The committee again unanimously recommended exclusion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2015 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 18 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Committee Proposal 31, A proposal to amend article XI, section 14 of the present constitution pertaining to public libraries.

[Committee Proposal 31 was read by the secretary. For full text, see below, page 822.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. It is the desire of the committee on education to have this proposal passed over until other items now on general orders are considered and disposed of. The parliamentary inquiry is: would it be in order to ask unanimous consent for the placing of this proposal on general orders following certain other proposals which are now on this matter?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: It is in order, without objection.

MR. BENTLEY: Then, Mr. Chairman, if I may, I ask consent that this item on general orders, Committee Proposal 31, not be considered in committee of the whole until the committee has dealt with Committee Proposals 38 and 39, which are items 25 and 26 on the general orders calendar.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Without objection—I hear none—it is so ordered.

The secretary will read the next item of business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 19 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 32, A proposal to provide for eligibility to serve in the legislature. Retains article V, section 5.

Following is Committee Proposal 32 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. Each senator and representative shall be a citizen of the United States, at least 21 years of age, and a qualified elector of the district he represents, and his removal from the district shall be deemed a vacation of the office. No person who has been convicted of subversion or of a felony involving a breach of public trust shall be eligible for either house of the legislature.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 32:

The committee feels that there is no reason to change the existing section. With the changes proposed in article VI, section 13, the 2 clauses become consistent.

Most states have eligibility requirements for their legislators within their constitutions. Michigan has had requirements since 1835. The last amendment was in 1956. This amendment contained the age requirement and added the sentence providing ineligibility because of conviction for subversion or for certain felonies.

The requirement of residence clearly enhances a legislator's concern for local matters and the committee feels that a legislator should represent those who elected him. The 1956 amendment is a recent expression of popular will and there is no need to change it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, once again this item and the next 3 on the calendar fall under the jurisdiction of our subcommittee 1, chairman Dick Kuhn. I yield to Mr. Kuhn.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the committee on legislative powers thought that there should be no change in this section. This section requires that any representative or state senator must be a qualified elector of the district he represents. There was an amendment added to our constitution in 1956 which provided, "No person who has been convicted of subversion or of a felony involving a breach of public trust shall be eligible for either house of the legislature." It was the committee's thought that this should be retained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I don't have an amendment. I just want to pose a question to the committee. Is that proper now?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Yes.

MR. LUNDGREN: Yesterday, in our organization committee, we were talking about annexation, and the problem came up: what about a person who might be a representative or senator in an annexed area? In what category does he fall, or how do we protect him?

MR. KUHN: I would say, Mr. Lundgren, the only thing I could put down is that you would have to live in the district you represent. If you do not—if you moved out or it was switched on you—you would vacate that office. Now, if they do switch any lines, obviously it would not take effect until the next legislative session. So I think anyone who would be in a district would be protected if they switched lines.

MR. LUNDGREN: I'm just wondering if it ought to be more specific and more explicit than that.

MR. KUHN: I think it is very clear. I would like to read this:

Each senator and representative shall be a citizen of the United States, at least 21 years of age, and a qualified elector of the district he represents, and his removal from the district shall be deemed a vacation of the office.

MR. LUNDGREN: I would still say it's a tricky question.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to remind Mr.

Lundgren that in the report of the committee on legislative organization, which was filed yesterday or today, we deal with that question by providing that where the area in which the senator or representative resides is annexed to an area outside, that he shall not be thereby prevented from continuing to serve until the end of the term for which he was elected. I think this can be disposed of when we reach that section.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Judge Dehnke.

Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I was just going to add, Mr. Chairman, that I believe an annexation does not change the political district lines; it takes further action to change the political district lines.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to ask Mr. Kuhn if his committee has interpreted the words "qualified elector" to mean a registered voter?

MR. KUHN: Yes, we have. And, as you know, Mr. Mahinske, this language "registered elector" was used in the executive section of the constitution, and that's why we didn't even change it. Because now it is consistent throughout the constitution.

MR. MAHINSKE: You are not saying "registered" here. You are saying "qualified elector."

MR. KUHN: That's the language they use, "qualified elector." You asked me if I interpreted it to mean that, and I said, yes, that's the way I interpreted it.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I notice that other committees have changed the language "qualified elector," because a constitutional convention delegate is a qualified elector, but doesn't necessarily have to be a registered voter. This is how the courts have interpreted this. We have changed the language in a number of articles to read "registered voter."

MR. KUHN: Well, I understood that they did the direct opposite. If you check the executive section on this for the governor, and so forth, they used the words "qualified elector."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair might furnish the information that the provision now reads "qualified registered elector." Both words are now used in the amendment that was made on the floor.

MR. KUHN: We have no objection to such an amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Perhaps the matter could be left to style and drafting. If not taken care of there, it could be taken care of at a subsequent time.

Are there any other amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 32 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 20 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 33, A proposal to provide for immunity of legislators from arrest during sessions except for certain crimes. Amends article V, section 8.

Following is Committee Proposal 33 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. Senators and representatives shall in all cases, except for treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during sessions of the legislature and for [15] 5 days next before the commencement and after the termination thereof. They shall not be subject to any civil process during the same period. They shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech in either house.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 33:

The committee recommends the retention of this section with only one minor change. This provision, or ones similar to it, have appeared in the constitution since 1835. Its purpose was to prevent harassment of legislators.

While this consideration may not be of prime importance at present, its long standing tradition and occasional use would warrant its continuance.

Legislators should be allowed to represent the people who elected them, if at all possible, and should be exempt for reasonable periods to allow the carrying out of their duties.

The one change is a shortening of the immunity before and after the session from 15 to 5 days. This recognizes the benefits of modern travel.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, the committee's comments can be found in Journal 64 on page 373.

[The reasons submitted in support of Committee Proposal 33 were read by Mr. Kuhn. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 33 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 21 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 34, A proposal to provide for quorums of the house and senate and the right of these bodies to compel attendance. Amends article V, section 14.

Following is Committee Proposal 34 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. A majority of THE MEMBERS ELECTED AND SERVING IN each house shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may prescribe.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 34:

The committee feels that this section, which has been in its present form since 1850, should remain in the proposed constitution with only minor clarification.

The proposed wording takes care of any ambiguity in the term "majority." It is felt by the committee that "majority" should be computed only upon the number of members that can serve. This means where a legislative seat has been vacated for any reason, and not filled, it shall not be counted in computing a quorum.

Almost all state constitutions have similar provisions. Especially prevalent is the clause allowing a number smaller than a quorum to adjourn from day to day. This, of course, allows temporary adjournment after a session has opened. If this provision were deleted, no adjournment could take place from day to day without the presence of a majority.

The right to compel attendance is important in that legislators cannot, by remaining away, thwart the business of the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, a provision of this kind is in most constitutions. And the only change here is in the first sentence, where it says, "A majority of the members elected and serving in each house shall constitute a quorum . . . ." This is Senator Hutchinson's proposal, which received the unanimous agreement of our committee. It takes into account the fact that there could be a disaster, or something could happen, and would simplify reaching a quorum. It would help the legislature to proceed in case of any real disaster.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 34 is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 22 on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 35, A proposal to provide that the form of legislation shall be by bill. Retains article V, section 19.

Following is Committee Proposal 35 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. All legislation by the legislature shall be by bill and may originate in either house of the legislature.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 35:

The committee recommends the retention of this section. It first appeared in the 1908 constitution. Prior to that time the legislature used concurrent and joint resolutions in the lawmaking process to such an extent that it was deemed to have been abused.

Allowing legislation to originate in either house of the legislature has been part of the Michigan constitution since 1835. A similar provision appears in about half of the state constitutions.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, the committee recommends the retention of this section. It first appeared in the 1908 constitution. Prior to that time the legislature used to use concurrent and joint resolutions in order to get around the governor's signature in order to make laws. So this clause was put in to enable them only to make laws that would have to cross the governor's desk.

Allowing legislation to originate in either house of the legislature has been part of the Michigan constitution since 1835. A similar provision appears in about half of the state constitutions.

I would like to say that we did have one recommendation that revenue bills start in the house of representatives. This is the federal practice. The committee did not feel that we should put this in our constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 35 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 23 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 36, A proposal with reference to the use to be made of the primary school interest fund, covering the subject matter now found in article X, section 1 of the 1908 constitution.

[Committee Proposal 36 was read by the secretary. For full text, see below, page 818.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, the next 5 items on the calendar are items from the finance and taxation committee. I move that they be taken up in the following order: 37, 40, 38, 39 and 36.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake has asked that the items be taken up in this order, Committee Proposals 37, 40, 38, 39 and 36.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Without objection, and I hear none, it is so ordered.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 24 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 37, A proposal to provide for care and control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 15, 16, 17, 18 and 13 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 37 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. No state money shall be deposited in banks other than those organized under the national or state banking laws. No state money shall be deposited in any bank in excess of 50 per cent of the capital and surplus of such bank. Any bank receiving deposits of state money shall show the amount of state money so deposited as a separate item in all published statements.

Sec. b. No money shall be paid out of the state treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law.

Sec. c. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE ANNUAL ACCOUNTING FOR ALL PUBLIC MONEYS, STATE AND LOCAL, AND MAY ALSO PROVIDE BY LAW FOR INTERIM ACCOUNTING. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE AUDIT OF STATE AND COUNTY ACCOUNTS BY COMPETENT STATE AUTHORITY, AND MAY ALSO PROVIDE FOR THE AUDIT OF ANY OTHER PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

ALL ACCOUNTINGS, RECORDS, AUDIT REPORTS AND OTHER REPORTS OF PUBLIC MONEYS SHALL BE PUBLIC RECORDS AND OPEN TO INSPECTION. A DETAILED STATEMENT OF ALL REVENUES AND EXPENDITURES OF PUBLIC MONEYS SHALL BE PUBLISHED AND DISTRIBUTED ANNUALLY AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Sec. d. The state shall not subscribe to, nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation, EXCEPT THAT FUNDS ACCUMULATED TO PROVIDE RETIREMENT OR PENSION BENEFITS FOR PUBLIC OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES MAY BE INVESTED AS PROVIDED BY LAW; AND EXCEPT THAT ENDOWMENT FUNDS CREATED FOR CHARITABLE OR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES MAY BE INVESTED AS PROVIDED BY LAW GOVERNING THE INVESTMENT OF FUNDS HELD IN TRUST BY TRUSTEES.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 37:

Sec. a. The first paragraph of the proposal dealing with state deposits in banks is section 15, article X of the present constitution unchanged. In the opinion of the committee and of the fiscal officers of the state it is adequate and satisfactory.

Sec. b. This section is section 16 of article X of the 1908 constitution unchanged. The committee's former proposal for the management of state funds in a more essential manner than that now provided by law, was the one that ran into trouble on the floor of the convention. In part the need for the proposal formerly submitted by the committee has been met by the short term borrowing provisions which passed through the committee of the whole, and is now in committee on style and drafting. While the majority of the committee still feels that there should be authorization for such fund management, a constitutional provision to that effect, which excepted earmarked funds, would be useless. The committee simply yields to the apparent thinking of the convention that it does not wish to expressly authorize any commingling of earmarked funds in the constitution.

Sec. c. The committee recommends adoption of the third and fourth paragraphs of this proposal to provide adequately for accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports. Sections 17 and 18 of article X of the present constitution have provided the framework for these functions in the past.

Section 17 of the present constitution, which relates to the publication of reports, is ambiguous.

Section 18 was first introduced into the Michigan constitution in 1908 as a way to force the legislature to make suitable provision for uniform accounts and audits. When appraised against this background it does not appear to perform a useful purpose in the new constitution. A uniform accounting law was passed in 1919 which contains considerable detail in prescribing accounting and auditing responsibilities and duties. Moreover, accounting and auditing concepts and techniques have advanced to the point where a body of generally accepted standards of uniformity, consistency and competence is available as a guide.

Section 18, which provides for the keeping of uniform records and the supervision, audit and inspection thereof, includes legislative detail which is no longer needed in the constitution. The language is so restrictive as to fail to accomplish its purpose. Substantively, the only changes proposed are that the legislature is given authority to provide for interim accountings where desirable and broader authority to provide for the audit of public accounts.

Sec. d. Section 13 of article X of the present constitution, which is revised by the committee proposal, has the desirable object of preventing state ownership of private business. However, it has some other results which the committee believes are unduly restrictive. The development, since the adoption of the present constitution, of substantial public employee retirement funds and university endowment funds, has made necessary reexamination of the type of investments available for such funds. The committee believes that if these funds are to earn the best return and are to be protected against inflation, the legislature should have the power to permit, under appropriate restrictions as to quality and amount, investment of these funds (but not other public funds) in such things as share accounts in savings and loan associations, and high grade corporate securities.

[Section a was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 766.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, this is the language of the present constitution. It is the opinion of the committee and of the fiscal officers of the state at present that it is needed in the constitution, that it is adequate, and that it should be adopted unchanged.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the section? Mr. Secretary, do you have an amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: I have none to this section, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All right. If there are no amendments, it will be passed.

Section a is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b.

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 766.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, this is the section that produced a furor when we had it before the committee of the whole on another occasion, and which was sent back to committee. The usual legislative practice when a proposal is sent back to committee is it is for one of two purposes: either to make a considerable change in it or to kill it. The fund management proposals that we had before you at that time we still think were advisable, and that they would have produced a more workable management of state funds. But there was considerable disagreement on the floor, and the need for that fund management is lessened if other provisions of the committee's recommendations are finally accepted.

You have already approved—and it has gone to style and drafting—a proposal for short term borrowing that makes what we have in this section before you less necessary, at least. We have proposed to you a change in the sales tax amendment to the constitution—that will, perhaps, be before us today—which also makes less necessary the language that we presented to you on that other occasion.

What we have here now is simply the language of the present constitution; that no money shall be paid out of the state treasury unless it is appropriated by the legislature. That certainly is needed as a minimum.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to this section? If not, it will be passed.

Section b is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c.

[Section c was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 766.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, for an explanation of these sections having to do with accounting and reporting, I yield the floor to our vice chairman of the committee, Mr. Austin.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, the last time I was on the floor in regard to this section I think we had quite a debate, and I think my job today should be a lot easier, because we have not returned the item that caused most of the controversy.

At the time we discussed the commingling section, I also gave an explanation of the need for some change in sections 17 and 18. I don't think it is necessary to repeat what I said at that time, because even then there did not seem to be any need to review in detail the language that was proposed by the committee. I will say simply this: that section 17, which now provides for the publication of reports, is somewhat ambiguous, and needs to be changed. The recommended language is found at the end of the second paragraph of section c of the proposal. I think you will find that that language is a lot more clear and certainly serves the purpose better. It gives the legislature a little more freedom.

The second paragraph of this proposal is a rewriting of the language that is found in section 18, which provides for public accountings. The only substantive changes that we have made are that the legislature is given authority to provide for interim accountings where desirable, and broader authority to provide for the audit of public accounts. I would rather not go into detail on these sections unless there are questions.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any questions? If not, the section will be passed.

Section c is passed.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section d.

[Section d was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 766.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, the final section of this proposal has to do with investments, and for an explanation of that I yield the floor to Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think this can be explained rather simply. The present constitution provides, as I believe you all know, that the state shall not subscribe to nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation. This section has the very desirable objective of keeping the state out of private business. However, in considering the consequences of the section, the committee concluded that it had 2 somewhat undesirably restrictive consequences. There are 2 kinds of very substantial funds held for long term purposes by state authorities: one, the pension and retirement funds; the other, the endowment funds held to provide income for our major state universities. It was believed by the committee that it would be desirable to permit, under restrictions imposed by the legislature, the investment of these long term funds in securities, including the equity securities of corporations, if the legislature felt that was desirable. This is a protection against inflation. It provides for a balanced portfolio. It would permit universities to retain securities which were given, for example, to the university.

One of the problems that we have had in our retirement funds has been that the money that was put in in the 1930s is worth only half as much now as it was when it was put in. Consequently, the capital funds of these pension funds have suffered materially from inflation.

Accordingly, it is the recommendation of the committee that an exception be created to the general prohibition against the state being interested in the stock of a corporation; an exception, first, that funds accumulated to provide retirement or pension benefits for public officials and employees may be invested as provided by law. And an exception, second, that endowment funds created for charitable or educational purposes may be invested as provided by law governing the investment of funds held in trust by trustees. Now, the reason for the separate exceptions is this: our state universities currently hold very large endowment funds which, in the absence of some enabling statute, are subject to question as to their right to do so. The reference in the constitutional provision to the law governing the investment of trust funds by trustees is simply a reference to existing law and, therefore, with the adoption of this constitutional provision, the university endowment funds could be held and managed pursuant to the existing law governing the investment of trust funds, which is the "prudent man" rule.

The committee believes that these are sensible changes in the present constitution, designed to take account of changing economic conditions. We recommend their adoption.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Any amendments to the provisions of the section? Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to ask the gentleman from Birmingham a question. Does this section have a direct relationship upon the next order of business? That is, Committee Proposal 40?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Bentley, there is a relationship to the extent, of course, that both sections deal with retirement funds maintained for the benefit of public employees. I don't believe there is any direct relationship, but quite obviously they both deal with certain aspects of the problems which have arisen since the adoption of the 1908 constitution as a result of the growth of public employee retirement funds.

MR. BENTLEY: My further question to the gentleman then would be this: in adopting this section, the committee will not be prejudging its action on the ensuing proposal? It will not, will it?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Bentley, that's quite correct. The committee on finance and taxation would strongly urge the adoption of this proposal, regardless of what action is taken on the immediately following one.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: With regard to public employees' retirement plans and funds that back them, it has been traditional to be very restrictive in the manner of the investment of such a fund. Would this change, Mr. Van Dusen, in any way make it possible for the legislature to permit the investment of such funds in private corporation stock to the extent that they could become involved in the speculation of business trends, as distinguished from the kind of investments they now make?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Ford, quite obviously the purpose of the provision is to broaden the authority for state investment of pension funds beyond what is now permitted. However, there will be no change in the investment powers of the managers of these pension funds unless specifically authorized by the legislature. And it is contemplated by the committee, as expressed in our committee's report, that the legislature would adopt appropriate restrictions both as to quantity and quality of investments of these funds in the future.

MR. FORD: I hope you don't suggest that by making reference to the trust requirements, that there's now built into the law some protection that is going to guarantee the wisdom of the investments. This merely goes to the standard of care to be used by the trustee, doesn't it?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Ford, that is why there are separate provisions with respect to the law governing the investment of pension funds and the law governing the investment of endowment funds. In the case of endowment funds, very frequently the universities are given large blocks of stock which would not in the ordinary course have been purchased as part of an investment program. Frequently the terms of the gift require the retention of that particular security; and if the university wants the benefit of the gift, it takes it with the strings attached.

Now, the same considerations do not obtain in the case of public employee retirement funds, where the 2 sources of the funds are: one, the contributions of the employees themselves; and two, public tax funds. And there the standard of care and the standard of conservatism in investment would certainly in my judgment have to be a good deal higher. Consequently, we did not prescribe simply the trust standard for those funds, but left it to the legislature to establish the requirements which in my judgment would probably be considerably more restrictive than those applicable just to trust funds.

MR. FORD: Then let me ask this: did anyone representing municipal or governmental employee organizations indicate to you their feelings about freeing the legislature in the matter of investing the funds that fund retirement plans, for example? I notice that you treat them separately here, and you are talking primarily about the desirability of being able to use this large pool of money in endowments. Now, that's one thing. But a fund that has been set up and has been contributed to jointly by a municipality, for example, or a county and its employees, has been, up until now, treated very restrictively in the matter of investment. As a matter of fact, I don't believe that we presently are allowed to invest these funds in anything except governmental securities.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Ford, that, of course, is correct. And it was for that reason that the committee recommended this change. The public employees who have contributed to the pension funds and the taxpayers who have contributed to these pension funds have seen the capital funds which they have put into these funds shrink as the result of inflation, because of the restriction of the investment powers to government securities, which obviously are subject to the hazards of inflation.

Now, it's not the intention of this provision to put the persons managing pension funds out into the stock market engaging in speculation. However, it is believed that if these funds are given, under controls imposed by the legislature, reasonable freedom to develop a balanced portfolio, then the funds which were put in in the '30s will to some extent have current value greater than that they could have under the present provision.

MR. FORD: I understand that. The only thing that concerns me is that presently we are limited to what are considered to be very conservative investments, and by being conservative and guaranteeing a return, they at the same time guarantee the stability of the retirement plan. The retirement plan is only as good as the money that is available there to pay it when it is needed. Now, as I understand this language, it would permit, whether intentionally or inadvertently, the legislature to adopt at any given time a law that would permit the investment of retirement funds in common stock in a private corporation that could be wiped out overnight. Now, if this is wrong, I hope you will correct me. I'll sit down and not belabor the subject.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Your question, Mr. Ford, is quite correct, and the answer is quite correct. The legislature could, if it chose to do so, under this provision, permit the investment of pension funds in common stock. It is deemed appropriate to leave this matter up to the legislature. Unless the legislature affirmatively acted, no such investments could be made. But the reason for the provision is to protect these funds, not the reverse.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Van Dusen, isn't this essentially the same power that the legislature has in governing investments of insurance companies, where we have the same problem of providing for adequate security of insurance policies?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hanna, that's correct.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the section?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment to section d:

1. Amend page 2, line 9, after "invested" by inserting "in nonvoting securities"; so the language will then read:

. . . except that funds accumulated to provide retirement or pension benefits for public officials and employees may be invested in nonvoting securities as provided by law. . . .

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I believe, Mr. Chairman, I raised a question when this matter was before us on a previous occasion, and attempted to make the point that there are hundreds of millions involved in these funds; that these funds are almost always under the control of a pubic official in his capacity as fund manager or trustee, or something else; that voting stock or any type of a voting security controls the destiny of private enterprises; and that it would be best that these funds not be invested in voting securities and giving these officials control, because many times far less than 50 per cent of the stock of a company is a controlling factor in determining its management and its board of directors.

Even with this amendment in the provision, should it be adopted, the funds will have a great deal more latitude than they have now for making investments. They will be able to invest in preferreds and nonvoting common, if such exist today; in private bonds; in mortgage investments and indentures of these companies only so long as they are securities which are nonvoting in nature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Wanger, the committee considered a number of different types of specific restrictions which might have been imposed, and concluded in the case of each that it would be wiser to leave to the legislature the determination and prescription of the type of investment. Now, if Mr. Wanger's amendment were to be adopted, it would in very large measure defeat the purpose of the proposal because the great majority of the securities which might be made available would be voting securities.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Since the purpose of the section seems to be to get these funds into voting securities, I am more against it than before, and I urge your support for the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to agree with Mr. Wanger. I would like to support his amendment if in fact it will prevent investment in those securities connected with private business which are generally considered, regardless of the stability or the age of the company, to be of a speculative nature, as opposed to those that are secured, such as the debentures mentioned, by something more than the financial outcome of the current year. As an example, I would gather from this that Mr. Wanger's amendment would permit the investment in utility stocks of the preferred type, with a guaranteed return of interest, which right now and for a number of years has been very good in this state, and far superior to that which we receive when we invest these funds at the local level in such things as short term notes of the United States government, and other forms of municipal bonds.

Since we don't have a tax problem at the local level when we are thinking of these funds in terms of investment, the limitation that now is on us to invest them solely in government securities is not nearly as desirable as it is for private capital. But when we get to the point where we can contemplate the possibility of an investment in what appears today to be a very sound and substantial company, looking back on what has happened in even what we considered relatively good times over the past 10 years, one of the major automobile companies that was one of the stalwart backbones of the city of Detroit for many years just isn't there anymore. I think they are even tearing the building down. I don't think 10 years ago anybody believed that there would ever be a time when we wouldn't have a Packard automobile on the street. This may have been considered by the people in the legislature 10 or 15 years ago to have been the kind of thing they would let them invest in. And I wonder where we would be in some of the small communities with our pension plans if our people had been permitted to invest in that type of stock. I support the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer one or two comments, and then ask Mr. Wanger a question about his amendment.

First of all, I think it should be noted that even under the present provisions of the constitution, where these funds can invest in nonvoting securities, there have been some bad investments. In other words, voting securities are not the only speculative investments. Some mortgages go sour. Another point is that there is a strong feeling that these funds ought to be able to deposit or invest in savings and loan organizations. This is the big area.

My question to Mr. Wanger is whether he realizes that his amendment would preclude investment in savings and loan organizations.

MR. WANGER: No, I did not realize this. This is the first that I realized that that would be the case. I intend that they not be invested in any voting stock in a company. As I understand, a savings and loan is a mortgage organization, where you deposit money and the interest is paid and divided up among the depositors. But I wish this had been previously made plain, because I wrote a letter to the committee prior to the time that this was introduced on the floor. How would this prevent investment in mortgage investments?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest that Mr. Van Dusen elaborate.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, your amendment would not prevent the investment in mortgage investments. As Mr. Austin points out, those investments could be made by these funds now. However, your amendment would prevent the investment of pension funds in share accounts in savings and loan institutions which — contrary to the regular banking function — when you put your money in, you are buying shares, and those are voting shares which entitle you to a voice in the election of the management of savings and loan institutions. Therefore, where it's highly desirable for some long term money which is intended to be kept reasonably liquid to be invested by these funds, particularly the small funds, in the share accounts of savings and loan institutions, your amendment would preclude it, because of the voting rights which are inherent in the ownership of a share account in a savings and loan institution.

And as pointed out in the committee report published in the journal, the intention of the committee here is that the legislature should have the power to permit, under appropriate restrictions as to quality and amount, the investment of these funds in such things as share accounts in savings and loan associations.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is now on the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, Mr. Ford and Mr. Wanger, I think you should be aware that there were representatives of the public employees retirement systems there who consulted with us, and that this language meets with their approval. I also want to point out the fact that we are dealing with the constitution, and it is supposed to be a basic law. It is supposed to last 50 or 75 years. I think that we need flexibility, and this provision would provide flexibility. Therefore, I speak against the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Wanger amendment. Mr. Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I completely agree with Mr. Binkowski that the legislature needs flexibility; that this constitution may last a long time. I don't think that there's anyone in this room or anyone in the legislature at the present time who would insist that pension funds be invested in equities at this time. But over the next 40 or 50 years things may change; the financial picture may change. And I think that it is wise on our part to leave to the discretion of the legislature the power to invest these pension funds. I therefore oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I also was a member of the committee, and I know one of the most complicated things we had was to try and figure out if we could impose any restrictions. I remember one thing in particular—not getting into retirement funds—we got down to where we were talking about how we would handle moneys in perpetual funds for cemeteries, and this got to be complicated. It became very obvious to us that we had to have something flexible, so we left it to the power of the legislature. So I support the committee report and oppose the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, being a member of the board of trustees of the pension system of Detroit, I have discussed this with several people that deal with our investments. And there have been some who appeared before the committee. They feel that this is a step in the right direction. I therefore oppose the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, the question has been raised as to funds that are managed by employee organizations as well as management of firms, and I can state on the basis of personal knowledge that most of those funds now provide the type of flexibility that we are suggesing here for these public retirement funds. Most of them do include some common stocks of a high grade and this is a result of the joint judgment of the unions and the management people involved.

It does seem to me that what Mr. Goebel has just said, and others, is right, and that we should support the committee in providing this flexibility to protect the long range interest of public employees.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Wanger amendment. Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to call attention to the fact that I would think a substantial percentage of the large, major trust companies today recommend in the case of pension funds a flexibility that is granted by this provision, and I would also want to object to the Wanger amendment on that account.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, in light of the confusion which the language which I proposed has caused, I would like to withdraw this amendment. I am very much opposed to the state getting into the control of any private enterprise, regardless of whether it is a savings and loan organization or anything else. But it was not my intent to put something in which would unduly restrict the investment, and in light of the people who have spoken, I think probably that the flexibility would not be abused.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn. Are there any other amendments to the section? If not, it will be passed.

Section d is passed.

The question now is on the body of the proposal. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 37 is passed.

The secretary will read item 27 on your calendar.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 27 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 40, A proposal with reference to public retirement systems. Amends article X by adding a section.

Following is Committee Proposal 40 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE ACCRUED FINANCIAL BENEFITS OF EACH PENSION PLAN AND RETIREMENT SYSTEM OF THE STATE AND ITS POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS SHALL BE A CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATION THEREOF, WHICH SHALL NOT BE DIMINISHED OR IMPAIRED THEREBY.

ALL SUCH BENEFITS ARISING ON ACCOUNT OF SERVICE RENDERED IN EACH FISCAL YEAR SHALL BE FUNDED DURING THAT YEAR AND SUCH FUNDING SHALL NOT BE USABLE FOR FINANCING UNFUNDED ACCRUED LIABILITIES.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 40:

The problem here is extremely difficult. Any public system that is set up should have put into it each year sufficient money to meet all of the liability accrued during that year. If that is done from the very beginning, the system is not an excessive burden; but when you go for years without putting in enough money to cover the liability accruing each year, then to try to catch up for the past deficiency becomes a problem of magnitude. On the state level the 2 retirement systems for public school employees are pitiful examples of what results when the state simply puts in for a long period just enough money to meet the payments for retirees due each year.

It is estimated that it would take $424,688,598.00 to make the outstate employees' system actuarially sound and $151,679,334.00 to make the Detroit system actuarially sound. This kind of money is not easily found. We were asked to retain in the constitution, section 23 of article X, the constitutional guarantee of not less than 5 per cent, nor more than 7½ per cent of the payrolls from the schools' share of the sales tax. This was not done. The 7½ per cent does not even meet the liability accruing during each year, to say nothing about catching up for the past. To meet the accrued and accruing liability each year would take about 12¼ per cent of the payroll for the outstate system and 15½ per cent for the Detroit system, so instead of putting in any fixed percentage, we have provided for these 2 systems, and all others—state or municipal—a requirement that in each fiscal year the accruing liability shall be funded during that year, thus keeping any of these systems from getting farther behind than they are now.

This is not all that ought to be done but we think it is the maximum requirement that should be written into the constitution. Fortunately many of the systems, and particularly those starting in recent years, have kept sound from the very beginning.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, we didn't want to disappoint anybody by going through a session without a battle. Let me assure you that there are more coming up.

At the time of the 1908 constitution, retirement funds for public employees were not a problem. There was therefore no section in the finance article dealing with them. Now they are a problem, in tremendous number, and with tremendous amounts of money involved; and situations have arisen in some of them that seem to make it desirable that there be some protections and some restrictions in the constitution. We have therefore proposed a new section, and for a detailed explanation of it I again yield to Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this proposal by the committee is designed to do 2 things: first, to give to the employees participating in these plans a security which they do not now enjoy, by making the accrued financial benefits of the plans contractual rights. This, you might think, would go without saying, but several judicial determinations have been made to the effect that participants in pension plans for public employees have no vested interest in the benefits which they believe they have earned; that the municipalities and the state authorities which provide these plans provide them as a gratuity, and therefore it is within the province of the municipality or the other public employer to terminate the plan at will without regard to the benefits which have been, in the judgment of the employees, earned.

Now, it is the belief of the committee that the benefits of pension plans are in a sense deferred compensation for work performed. And with respect to work performed, it is the opinion of the committee that the public employee should have a contractual right to benefits of the pension plan, which should not be diminished by the employing unit after the service has been performed. Now, this does not mean that a municipality or other public employing unit could not change the benefit structure of its pension plan so far as future employment is concerned. But what it does mean is that once an employee has performed the service in reliance upon the then prescribed level of benefits, the employee has the contractual right to receive those benefits under the terms of the statute or ordinance prescribing the plan. This is the first section. It confers the contractual right. It should confer upon public employees a considerably greater degree of security with respect to the knowledge that they will receive the benefits when the time comes.

Now, the second provision of this proposal deals with the financial aspects of the maintenance of pension plans. There are 2 kinds of problems in the funding of any pension plan. One is past service benefits which have not been adequately funded. And in the case of many of our public employee retirement systems, years have gone by when insufficient money has been put into the fund to take care of the future benefits which would in due course accrue to persons retiring from public employment.

The committee recognizes that if the proposal were to tell every public employing unit right now that you must put into these funds enough to take care of all of your sins of omission in the past, this would create a financial burden on municipalities and on the state which would be overwhelming, and which would be totally disruptive to the financial picture of the state for the immediately foreseeable future, and without any attendant real benefit to any of our citizens, including those who are participating in retirement plans. However, the committee did believe that it would be appropriate for the constitution to prescribe some ground rules so far as the future is concerned, and therefore the second paragraph of this proposal requires every public employing unit providing a pension plan or retirement system to currently fund current service benefits.

In other words, in each year, when a certain number of employees are employed who can be expected at some future point to retire and draw upon the fund for the benefits which would be contractually theirs, in each year it will be incumbent, under this provision, upon the employing unit to put into the fund enough money to provide those benefits when they accrue. This is designed to take care of not any one specific public employees' retirement fund, of which there are many in the state, but to take care of all of them: the school employees' retirement funds, the state employees' retirement funds, the police and firemen's funds, the probate judges' retirement funds, and so on. All of the pension plans and retirement systems maintained by the state and its political subdivisions will be subject, if this proposal is adopted, to the requirement that in every year the public employer must put into the fund enough money to currently fund the benefits attendant upon service rendered by its employees in that year. This is as far as we believe we can reasonably go in mandating municipalities to do what they should have been doing for many years past, but which they have not been doing for many years past.

We believe that this constitution must be a forward looking document; that it must take cognizance of the problem; that it must spell out for the future the manner in which these funds should be managed, so that our children will not, 50 years hence, suffer from the fact that we failed to put in enough money to take care of the benefits attendant upon the service currently performed by public employees.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I think the opening sentence of the committee's supporting reasons, "The problem here is extremely difficult," is probably the understatement of the session, as far as I am concerned.

I might say, Mr. Chairman, that while this proposal was not referred for concurrence to the committee on education, the committee nevertheless felt, because it did affect section 23 of article X, over which we do have concurrent jurisdiction, that we should consider the matter. The question was raised for the first time at our committee meeting only the day before yesterday. In view of the absence, as most of the committee felt, of sufficient information to reach a decision, the matter was laid on the table before the committee. Nevertheless, many members of the committee on education felt extreme reservations about the second paragraph of the particular proposal. I think there was general acceptance of the first paragraph. The amount, according to the committee on finance and taxation, of nearly $600 million to make the 2 retirement systems for public school employees actuarially sound came to many of us as a very considerable shock.

My question, specifically, of the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Chairman, would be this. First of all, I might say, as I explained, the committee on education at the moment has no suggestions to make with respect to this proposal, although naturally we reserve the right on future readings to offer amendments if it seems to us desirable. But in view of the fact, Mr. Van Dusen, that the 7½ per cent which is provided for in the present constitution has been taken from the school aid funds, what would be the effect on the school aid funds if the second paragraph were adopted, in view of your committee's statement that merely to meet the accrued and accruing liability will require 12¼ per cent outstate and 15½ per cent in Detroit? I would like to know whether you can give the committee any idea of what the effect would be on the school aid funds—whether this money would be entirely from the school aid funds, as is now the case with the 7½ per cent.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Bentley, the legislature could—and here we have to couple this proposal with the one which follows—take all or any part of the money required to be allocated for school employees' retirement systems from the school aid fund. The only requirement of this proposal is that the legislature would have to provide enough money to fund current service benefits. That is substantially the 7½ per cent, although just a little bit more, I think, than the 7½ per cent currently taken from the school aid fund under the present section 23 of article X. But this would leave the legislature free to take it all from the school aid fund or to take any part of it from the school aid fund. The source would not be material. The constitutional mandate would be that the current service benefits be currently funded, something which has not occurred over the history of the school employees' retirement fund since 1917.

MR. BENTLEY: One additional question, Mr. Van Dusen, if I may. Assuming that the legislature continued to deduct from the school aid fund the 7½ per cent which is now constitutionally required, then, do I understand it that in the Detroit area, for example, the legislature would have to find the remaining 7 per cent or 8 per cent actually from sources other than the school aid fund? Does the gentleman think that the legislature really could provide this with our present fiscal situation the way it is in the state?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think the answer, Mr. Bentley, is yes. The constitution presently provides, with respect to the sales tax, that not less than 5 or more than 7½ per cent of the school payrolls be taken from the 2 cents of the sales tax which is earmarked for schools and set aside for retirement systems. This is designed to give to those particular public employee retirement systems a protection similar to but not as great as that provided by the general proposal here recommended by the committee.

The committee believes that because we should deal with this problem in the large—not just aiming at one particular public employee retirement system, but dealing with all public employee retirement systems as a whole—the general provision is the appropriate one to adopt. But the committee also feels that in retaining the earmarked funds for school districts, it is also appropriate to permit the legislature to continue to use a portion of the earmarked sales tax funds for retirement purposes, and our proposal so states without limitation as to amount.

That would mean that the legislature would be free, as I said earlier, to take all of the retirement money required by this proposal from the school aid fund, or it could take a part. And since the legislature has in each of the last 4 years been appropriating to school districts and to retirement systems substantially greater sums than those which are currently constitutionally earmarked for that purpose, I don't believe that this provision would have any effect on a lower limit with respect to funds going into retirement systems. In effect, it would increase them.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his presentation. I have one more question. It will be very brief. That is this: I assume, Mr. Van Dusen, that the 12¼ per cent and the 15½ per cent figures contained in this committee report are based on present salary scales both outstate and in the Detroit area. If those salary scales in either system were substantially increased, I presume that those figures which you have given here would have to be revised upward?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think probably not, Mr. Bentley, because they are percentages of payroll.

MR. BENTLEY: I thank the gentleman. Mr. Chairman, as I said earlier, there were members of the committee on education that did have some reservations on this question. I hope that if any of them feel compelled to speak, they will take this opportunity to do so.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: May the Chair say he has noted the various people who want to speak and listed their names, and he will call on them in due course. So you can be seated if you want to.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I was going to emphasize, with Mr. Bentley, the fact that as to the Detroit system, our second paragraph requires approximately twice what is being put into their fund by the state at the present time; and as to the outstate system, substantially more. I thought the other delegates might be interested in the specific figures that shocked Mr. Bentley and his committee and shocked us. You can get different figures from different people when you get to these retirement systems. It is a complicated accounting system. But the figures coming from Jerry Gable, of Detroit, who is the actuary employed by both systems, are these: to make the outstate public school employees' fund actuarially sound would require $366,517,242; to make the Detroit system actuarially sound would require $148,975,941.

Always, when you mention figures like that, some teacher begins to get uneasy and thinks she or he is not going to be paid. It doesn't mean that at all. These systems have been paying, and they will continue to pay, and there are too many voters involved for the legislature to ever forget how many voters are involved as far as meeting the payments. This is not talking about meeting the payments. It is talking about better preparing the fund so it will be nearer sound, and our requirement is that they at least go no further behind than they now are.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I think there's one thing that the members of the committee of the whole—and the convention—should consider in this problem: that probably this is the greatest area in our government today in the state of Michigan and at the federal level of where we are having what we call "back door" spending. As Mr. Bentley pointed out, the accrued benefits that have not been funded or paid is around $600 million. Our state indebtedness is around $100 million. All we are saying, in effect, in this proposal is: one, that the retirement that was promised any employee which he has lived long enough to earn shall not be impaired or diminished; and two, that from now on all retirement funds that are promised by employers shall be funded properly. In other words, they should put enough money in there so when they retire the money is there. And there was a very specific purpose for this. I was one of the ones that pushed it. I wanted employers, legislative bodies and city councils to be very aware of what they were spending when they gave a person, a public employee, a retirement program. In other words, how much did it cost per year?

Now, what we have done in this paragraph is to say, also, that this indebtedness of around $600 million or maybe more doesn't have to be paid up tomorrow; all we say is it has to be paid, and that's up to the various governing bodies to figure out. But from now on any governmental body cannot avoid paying for a retirement fund that they promise an employee. They've got to make those payments annually, on time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: Mr. Chairman, as a member of both the education and the finance and taxation committees, I was deeply concerned about the wording of this section. Mr. Brake and Mr. Stafseth have both said some of the things that I intended to say. But I believe the wording of this section guarantees to our teachers and other recipients of these funds much more than the wording in the old constitution. If this is followed by the legislature, it will guarantee almost twice what the old constitution provided, a ceiling of 7½ per cent.

We have had the wording of this section checked by Mr. Christie and other managers of funds and they have felt that it is adequate and provides what is necessary. I just wanted to add that. I support the report of the committee on finance and taxation.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: Mr. Chairman, I believe this is a very healthy provision in the constitution. In the past we have noticed many pension plans that have gotten out of hand; the employees have been able to get too high a pension; and in a few years they've found that the pension plans might run 25 to 30 per cent of the payroll.

I have just one question to ask the committee. That is in regard to the statute for circuit judges. I believe that statute provides that no payments can be made from the general fund for the circuit judges' retirement system. I was just wondering what the effect of that would be on this section.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I'm sure this section would in no way change that. The circuit judges' retirement system, as far as the state is concerned, is financed by making everyone who starts a lawsuit pay into that fund as part of the entry fee of the case which he pays to the county clerk. This would make no change in it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: I would like to ask Mr. Van Dusen a question. First of all, I would like to say that I think the committee has offered here a sound statement regarding our retirement systems, and I want to say that I will support it. But I do have one question that I would like to ask Mr. Van Dusen. Under the present teachers' retirement, as he has stated, it requires that 7½ per cent of the money collected under the 2 cent sales tax shall be paid over to the retirement fund. That would be done in 6 payments at the time they make the payments to the school districts. The question I have—and it's not just a fear, because during the last few sessions of the legislature an attempt has been made to remove this payment and pass it back to the local school districts.

We have nearly 2,000 school districts. And if the legislature refused to make this appropriation and passed all the 2 cent sales tax back to the local school districts with the intention that they should make these payments, then we would have our retirement fund board dealing with 2,000 school districts, instead of taking the payment out of the funds as it comes into the state, and made over to them in 6 payments. It would be much more costly. It would be difficult as far as accounting is concerned, because of the many different kinds of boards of education that we have and the school districts that we have.

Let me say again that I will support this, and I think it is putting our retirement system on a sound basis. But I do have that question, because it has been introduced in the legislature in the last 2 or 3 sessions.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Spitler, your question, of course, Mr. Spitler, is a sound one. It is not contemplated that this would have that effect. I recognize that to the extent that a school district is the employing and contracting unit, it would share with the state the obligation for making the pension benefits available when due, and would share with the state the obligation for current funding. But it is an obligation which has increasingly in the past been assumed by the state, and it would be the expectation of the committee that it would continue in that fashion.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Could that be included in the accompanying report, that that is the intention of the committee?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I see no reason, Mr. Spitler, why that couldn't be added. We couldn't, of course, anticipate every question on the floor and cover it. It is now, to the extent that this verbatim record is a part of the proceedings of the convention, expressed as the intention of the committee.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Van Dusen a question, and I don't believe it has been answered. In the case of a municipality which presently has a pension plan, if the people of that municipality finally decided they no longer wanted it, would this language in the first paragraph be sufficient to permit them to dispense with the future operation of a pension plan?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson, there's no question but that a municipality could in the future dispense with its pension plan, so long as it did not in so doing diminish or impair the benefits which had accrued to employees who had performed service in the past.

MR. IVERSON: So that the present language was intended then to protect the accrual of benefits to the time that any municipality might dispense with a pension plan?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That is correct. This was simply designed to put pension benefits earned in public service on the same basis as deferred compensation earned in private employment. It is a contractual right.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, it is my hope that I will be able to clarify the issue here so that there will be no misunderstanding about what is before us. I have a feeling that our discussion of the 7½ per cent retirement requirement in Committee Proposal 39—that is, the earmarking of the sales tax—may have confused the issue a little with regard to Committee Proposal 40. I think we are all in favor of Committee Proposal 40, because it guarantees for the employees who are covered by all public employee pension plans, not just the school plans, that their benefits will be properly funded. And I think it is desirable that we get this proposal passed.

Now, with regard to the 7½ per cent earmarking which is covered under section 23 and which we will take up in Committee Proposal 39, we can at that time decide whether we want to earmark any portion of our funds for this purpose. I think we should agree, first of all, that we want them properly funded, and that is the purpose of Committee Proposal 40. Then, when we get to the other proposal, we can decide whether we want to earmark any money.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, as a member of the committee on finance and taxation, I would like to speak in favor of our committee proposal. I think that most of the reasons for the proposal have been brought out, but I would like to touch upon them very briefly. One of the reasons that has been expressed for making the accrued benefits contractual is the fact that the supreme court decisions have ruled that the pension or retirement systems are a gratuity. And this has been held true today in spite of the fact that we have our concept of deferred compensation. And, many of you who are living in the metropolitan areas, if you will pick up the newspapers over the weekend and read the ads by the Detroit civil service or the Wayne county civil service, or any of the other municipalities, you will find that in their ads they play up the aspect of liberal pensions. And there is no question that when an employee today takes employment with a governmental unit, he does so with the idea that there is a pension plan or retirement system involved. And, in order to protect them, we believe that the first paragraph is necessary.

I believe that Mr. Stafseth has already spoken upon the necessity to make the legislative bodies responsible in this area, and also to prevent "back door" borrowing. Of course, we in the city of Detroit have recently seen an example of this stopped by a ruling of a circuit court judge in demanding that the moneys set aside for the Detroit firemen and policemen's pensions be placed in a fund and not be used for current operating expenditures. Therefore, I favor this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as the discussion has developed, I think I see what the words mean. When I first read it I was completely lost in the bog of antecedents. Now, my only reason for arising at this time to discuss this is to present a plea that the section be written in such a way that I would not have difficulty in trying to explain what it means to somebody who would ask me. One of the criticisms I've heard of the 1908 constitution was that some people couldn't make head nor tail out of it without a lawyer's degree. And as I read this, I feel the same way about this—that this is not an improvement. I found it very heavy reading just trying to follow the thought from beginning to end. I am not here to propose an amendment, because I wouldn't know exactly how to start. I am just wondering if there is some way in which this could be rephrased so as to say the same thing, but be readily comprehensible to the average high school graduate.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question, either of Mr. Stafseth or the chairman of the committee, and I believe that his remarks did help clarify this. I speak primarily from ignorance. When the term "the accrued financial benefits" is used, as I understand from Mr. Stafseth, the purpose is to see that instead of using a pay as you go system, there would be a funded system from now on, with some plan to pick up what had not been properly funded. Now, I assume from that that if a governmental unit sets aside so much money for the funding of a pension plan, that that money could not then be used for any other purpose; and if there were an attempt to, the individual employee could use some kind of court action—injunction or mandamus—to prevent that. And, if I'm wrong, I wish the committee chairman or somebody would apprise me.

The second question and the real question that I have is: if the legislative body does not appropriate enough money for proper funding, would there be any way for the employee or the employees' organization to compel the local unit of government, or whoever is responsible, to put aside enough money each year for the proper funding?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Answering the first part of your question, I think your understanding is entirely correct. It is the intention that we will put in each year enough in every fund to take care of the liability occurring during that year, so it will not go farther and farther behind.

On the second part of your question, there is no way to compel the legislature to appropriate money. There is no way that I know of to compel a city council to raise more money. We have to put some faith in somebody, and this is being put in the legislature.

Now, I would like to say just a word, Mr. Chairman, to what Mr. Shanahan has just said. We could of course enlarge this, and very greatly enlarge it, by putting it into nontechnical language so that a layman could better understand it. The committee has been economical in the use of words. We think that we should be, in the constitution. These words that we have used and that Mr. Shanahan had some trouble in interpreting are the words understood by accountants and actuaries, who will be dealing with this problem; and always, as every lawyer knows, there's more certainty when you use technical, well defined words known to the profession involved, even though they are not quite so familiar to the general public.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, if I may elaborate briefly on Mr. Brake's answer to Mr. Downs' question, I would like to indicate that the words "accrued financial benefits" were used designedly, so that the contractual right of the employee would be limited to the deferred compensation embodied in any pension plan, and that we hope to avoid thereby a proliferation of litigation by individual participants in retirement systems talking about the general benefits structure, or something other than his specific right to receive benefits. It is not intended that an individual employee should, as a result of this language, be given the right to sue the employing unit to require the actuarial funding of past service benefits, or anything of that nature. What it is designed to do is to say that when his benefits come due, he's got a contractual right to receive them.

And, in answer to your second question, he has the contractual right to sue for them. So that he has no particular interest in the funding of somebody else's benefits as long as he has the contractual right to sue for his.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I appreciate Mr. Van Dusen's comments. Again, I want to see if I understand this. Then he would not have a remedy of legally forcing the legislative body each year to set aside the appropriate amount, but when the money did come due this would be a contractual right for which he could sue a ministerial officer that could be mandamused or enjoined; is that correct?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That's my understanding, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: And there would not be any immunity because of it being a governmental unit?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That's further my understanding.

MR. DOWNS: The other question I have, then: if the legislative body wanted to increase the pension rights, such as lowering the age at which a person would be eligible for benefits, and so on, could an additional contractual right be bestowed, or could that apply only in the future to a new financial system?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Downs, the more hypothetical the questions get, the tougher the answer is, as I'm sure Mr. Downs appreciates. However, what we are trying to deal with here are those financial benefits which have accrued. Once the employee, by working pursuant to an understanding that this is the benefit structure presently provided, has worked in reliance thereon, he has the contractual right to those benefits which may not be diminished or impaired. As far as his future service is concerned, he remains, as does any other employee, subject to the terms of employment prescribed by his employer.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: May I ask, through the Chair, another question? Then, if I understand this right, if he has the contractual right of, say, retirement at such and such a year, on a certain basis, that could not be diminished? Am I correct on that?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That is correct.

MR. DOWNS: Now, could the other be true? For example, could a cost of living increment or something else be put on to amend that contract, as any other contract could be amended?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I'm not entirely sure I understand Mr. Downs' question.

MR. DOWNS: For example, let's say there were a pension setup that would amount to $60 a month. Then could the legislative body later on say that this shall be increased 5 per cent because of a cost of living increase? Or would that be a new matter that would either be a gratuity or would have to be established on a new principle?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Certainly there's nothing here to prohibit the employer from increasing the benefit structure. The extent to which the benefit structure having been increased after the employee had completed his service and had retired might create a contractual right would be, I think, beyond the purview of this proposal. This proposal only talks about that which he has earned by working in reliance thereon.

MR. DOWNS: Then this proposal would not limit or expand the other activities by the legislative body?

MR. VAN DUSEN: That's correct.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, a question to one of the committee, if I may. If a new fund were created by a present political subdivision, or should in the future a new political subdivision be created and want to set up a pension fund, would they have to that first year put in funds sufficient to take care of past service? If not, how would past service funds be accumulated?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: The answer, Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Shackleton's first question is no, they would not have to immediately fund past service benefits. They would have to put in enough to currently fund current service benefits. And I would think that they would not consider the adoption of such a plan without making some provision in a regular and orderly fashion for funding the accrued past benefits. This is a problem which, of course, has occurred repeatedly in private industry over the course of the last 15 years in particular, and in each case provision has been made for funding past service benefits over a period of years. In that respect a public employer would be in no different situation than a private employer. The only constitutional requirement would be the current funding of current service benefits.

MR. SHACKLETON: If they did not properly take care of the past service then, where would your contractual obligation come out?

MR. VAN DUSEN: An employee who continued in the service of the public employer in reliance upon the benefits which the plan says he would receive would have the contractual right to receive those benefits, and would have the entire assets of the employer at his disposal from which to realize those benefits.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, maybe we can reduce this to ordinary layman's language quickly and attempt to enlighten ourselves on the discussion. To begin with, I think we ought to recognize that "accrued benefits" means also years of prior service before some unit of government—county, township, school district, what have you—wishes to create and bring into being a pension plan for the employees. Pension plans get into trouble when the local unit, through the legislative body which provides the money, does not provide sufficient money to cover past services. In other words, you have a person who has been on your payroll for 20 years. You are putting in a pension plan, and you want to go back 20 years to take care of that person. Now, actuarially, the state plan and other plans of like kind have all been figured out as to what per cent of the total payroll it is going to cost to take care of that prior service. And that is a funded plan, spread over—in the main—40 years. Our county, in adopting a pension plan, did just that.

Where the pension plan gets into trouble is when they have a locally administered plan and the legislative body says, well, we won't pay this today, we will pay it next week, or next month, and then eventually it isn't paid, and then you are in trouble. Whereas under the state operated plan which is in force in Michigan and available to all units, the state says you must pay it when due to the local unit, to the legislative body, because you contracted to do this. And then everybody is covered fully. In answer to Mr. Shackleton's question, I think we can quickly say this: that if the plan as adopted would start from scratch today and did not take in any prior service, that's one way. But when you go back to the service of the valued employee who has been with you 20 years, or 25—and there are those people in government—then of course you take care of them, and that is done on what is called an actuarially sound basis as arrived at by actuaries who know their figures. I think that clears us up.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, most of my questions have been answered. I had some reservations to Committee Proposal 40, but those reservations have been resolved. I think it is a good proposal, and deserves our support.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like some member of the committee to answer a question I have on the last line there, and see if I'm understanding it correctly. Could this conceivably hurt cities, and so forth, who have been borrowing from such funds?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Gover, it is designed to prevent cities from in the future using the funds which are put into a pension fund to take care of current service benefits for any other purpose. If a city has become addicted to this practice, I would think the discontinuance of the habit might be a difficult experience for the city, at least briefly. It shouldn't hurt, however, too much. (laughter)

MR. GOVER: Just what do you mean by not hurting too much?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think I can give a clearer answer to Mr. Gover's question than I did. This is designed to see that money that is put into a pension fund to service currently accruing benefits is used for no other purpose. Any city that has been putting it in with one hand and taking it out with the other has got to stop. And if that hurts, why, it hurts.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the committee proposal. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake offers the following committee amendment —

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Van Dusen, this would not prevent the pension fund, however—the moneys actually in the pension fund—from investing in the city's own special assessment, revenue or general obligation bonds; am I correct?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hanna, I think you are quite correct, yes. And Mr. Shackleton had previously made that observation to me across the aisle. It just means that they couldn't take it out and use it for current expenses.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: In taking a final look at this, we came to the conclusion that the word "such" in line 9 might be confusing. It is not necessary. We mean "all benefits," and need no qualifying word between. My amendment simply takes that word out.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake, on behalf of the committee on finance and taxation, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "All" by striking out "such"; so the language will read, "All benefits arising on account of service. . . ."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the committee amendment. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments to the committee proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 40, as amended, is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 25 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 38, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of the gas and weight taxes for highway purposes covering the subject matter of article X, section 22 of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 38 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. All taxes imposed directly or indirectly upon gasoline and like fuels sold or used to propel motor vehicles upon the highways of this state, and on all motor vehicles registered in this state, shall, after the payment of the necessary expenses of collection thereof, be used exclusively for highway purposes, AS DEFINED BY LAW, including the payment of public debts incurred therefor, and shall not be diverted nor appropriated to any other purpose: Provided, The legislature may provide by law a method of licensing, registering, and transferring motor vehicles and their certificates of title, and licensing and regulating motor vehicle dealers and operators; and may prescribe charges sufficient to pay for the enforcement thereof. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the general sales tax, the use tax, the fees and taxes collected under the auto theft and operators' and chauffeurs' license laws which are used for regulatory purposes; the application fees and mileage fees appropriated to the Michigan public utilities commission by [act 254 of 1933] LAW; the franchise or privilege fees payable generally by corporations organized for profit; nor to ad valorem taxes payable generally by manufacturers, refiners, importers, storage companies, and wholesale distributors on gasoline and like fuels held in stock or bond, and by manufacturers and dealers on motor vehicles in stock or bond.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 38:

The committee has made but 2 changes in the language of the present section 22. Following the words "highway purposes" the committee has added the words "as defined by law," thus giving to the legislature the power to define and limit the meaning of the term "highway purposes". It has also stricken the words "act 254 of 1933" and substituted the word "law".

The committee recognizes that the retention in the constitution of this or any other earmarking is controversial but because of the fact that this is a use tax it is much less controversial than is, for instance, the earmarking of sales tax. It is the feeling of the committee that there is no possibility of taking the earmarking of the gasoline and weight taxes out of the constitution by this convention and most of the members of the committee are in agreement with the idea that this earmarking should be retained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, we come now to a slightly controversial item, the matter of constitutional earmarking of state collected money. I think that before we get into this specific earmarking for highway purposes, perhaps a little background in this whole matter of earmarking of state funds will be very much in order.

We found in another meeting of some of the delegates in this convention awhile ago that with some of us our philosophies and our votes do not lead in exactly the same direction. I am led to make some remarks particularly because of things that have been said for years, but more particularly in connection with the campaign for calling this convention. Some of the organizations working for the calling of the convention said and more generally inferred that the state financial difficulty was largely due to the earmarking of funds. Newspaper editors are constantly making that inference.

The inference is not correct. I don't want anyone to jump out of his chair before I get through with this next statement, because I'm not going to be as political as you may think when I start. There has to be a cause for such a financial period as we got into in 1959, and it's a very proper thing to try to decide what that cause was, and to remedy it. But the cause for that trouble did not occur just in 1959. It was a buildup through a period of years. And the cause was just this: the inability of the governor and the legislature to agree upon a fiscal program. Now, some of us will blame one; some will blame the other. Whom you blame is your business. Whom I blame I think is my business. And I'm not arguing that here now at all. But it was the inability of those 2 bodies, both having authority, to agree and to work together that caused that financial crisis in 1959, and it was not the earmarking of funds.

I don't want to stop there with that generality. I want to analyze this picture just a little bit. I think we will be better prepared to act correctly on these 3 items that are just ahead of us if we have a little of the background involved. Let's take first these funds, the road funds. There never was a time, from the time that this earmarking was put on, until 1959, when there was any danger whatsoever of using any of those funds for anything except road purposes. An attempt was made 2 or 3 times to broaden the interpretation of what highway use meant by including the patrolling of the roads by the state police, some safety measures, and I think at least once something having to do with street lighting—and you can build a legitimate argument that those were highway uses—but they failed. The legislature refused to go even to that extent. There never was a serious question, any time, until 1959, about taking any of these road funds and using them for some other purpose. Therefore, that was not a contributing cause of the trouble.

Now, it is possible that in 1959, in desperation, the legislature, if it had had the power, might have then used some of this money, but that would have been as a cure, and not as the cause of the 1959 crisis. Well, that's simple, and hardly a matter of opinion. There was a time—as a matter of fact, there were several times—when the opposite was true; when the road people tried to get general fund appropriations for road purposes, and on one occasion they succeeded. In the Murphy administration, they got an appropriation for road purposes out of the general fund of the state for $5 million, which was then considerable money. The governor in some way—and I never understood just how—stopped them before they got it all spent. But the legislature appropriated $5 million out of the general fund for road purposes.

All right. That is comparatively simple. When you get to the matter of the sales tax, you have to use opinion. But I would suggest that it is not just a wild guess. The big bite, of course, out of the sales tax that was earmarked was for school purposes—2 cents. It is my opinion that the schools during the period involved got less money from the state because of this amendment than they would have had without it. I think probably for the first 2 or 3 years they got a little more, but for the next several years that followed that I'm very sure that they got less. Because many legislators took the position that the schools having grabbed this money and pegged it for their own use, regardless of what else the state had before it, they would let them lie in the bed they had made, and refused to give them anything in addition, even though the need was becoming more and more acute. Finally, of course, in the last 4 years, that ended, and they have had general appropriation money in addition to the 2 cents. So that very certainly, very certainly, the tying up of that 2 cents did not contribute to the coming about of that financial crisis in 1959. And in 1959, remember, the legislature went beyond the 2 cents and appropriated additional money.

That brings us to the question of the ½ cent going to cities, villages and townships. And here one is farther out in the field of opinion than he is in connection with the schools. But I think here, too, there has been very little additional cost to the state, and therefore very little bearing on the crisis of 1959. Take first the cities, and include villages with the cities. The cities in the '40s were really in trouble. The tax study commission of the first Kelly administration, of which I was the working head, but not the honorary head, recommended the payment by the state to the cities at that time of substantially the same money they got under the sales tax amendment. If the committee's recommendation had been followed, we never would have had the sales tax diversion amendment. Because it was the cities that started that drive, and not the schools. The governor, however, would not go for any program of aid to the cities unless it was based upon the showing of need by each city. And when that was the picture, the cities lost interest. So that I feel certain that the legislature would have made grants to the cities without this amendment, if their need was serious, because there are a lot of voters in the cities, and I'm confident that that has cost us very little, if anything, by having that—and by "cost us," I mean through state financing.

When you get to the townships you have a little different picture. I doubt very much if the legislature would have gone for any grants in aid to townships. But the townships' part is a minor part, and when you have said that you have not come to the end of the argument. Down through the years since the sales tax diversion and until the last 2 or 3 years, about half of the townships in the state received no millage out of the 15 mills whatsoever. Many of them did not ask for it. With their sales tax money they were able to get along. Many of those who did ask for it were refused by the allocation boards, and they couldn't get it. It was only after the change in the law 2 or 3 years ago, maybe as far back as 1957, I don't remember for sure, that the larger part of the townships were given the 1 mill that the law requires if they need it. There are still some not getting it. Now, if they had not had this sales tax money, they would have had to have millage if they were to stay alive and perform the functions they have. And if they had to have millage, where would they get it? Out of the schools' share. The counties are held to rock bottom. If we had had to give the townships more millage, the schools would have had less millage. And what would they have done? What could they have done? They would have come to the legislature for greater grants, and they would have had them. So that all of the money that has been paid to the townships under the sales tax diversion has not meant that much more money out of the state treasury. Probably it has meant some more money out of the state treasury, but only a minor amount. And their total is a minor amount. I think on that basis one can say very certainly that the diversion of sales tax money was not a primary or a major cause of the trouble we had in 1959. Now, that leaves only one—the primary school money. Nobody ever mentions that as being a cause of our trouble. Historically, it has been in the picture so long, and in the beginning, of course, came from a federal grant, that that is not blamed, and certainly it is not blamable. Because had the schools not had it, there again they would have had to have larger grants from the state.

I don't know whether we wish to go on at this time, but if we do, may I call on Mr. Stafseth for a detailed explanation, going back now just to the weight and gas tax.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake, would you care to carry the matter over to the next session, or would you like to carry forward at this time?

MR. BRAKE: I am no more hungry than the other delegates, but I'm sure they are hungry, and I move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake moves that the committee do now rise. All those in favor will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The committee will now rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain matters with respect to which the secretary will give a report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 26, A proposal for a section in the declaration of rights incorporating in the declaration of rights an "equal protection" clause and a guarantee against discrimination in civil and political rights because of race, religion, sex or national origin; Committee Proposal 28, A proposal to provide for compensation of the legislature; Committee Proposal 29, A proposal to provide for the form of laws; Committee Proposal 30, A proposal pertaining to free public and elementary schools; Committee Proposal 32, A proposal to provide for eligibility to serve in the legislature; Committee Proposal 33, A proposal to provide for immunity of legislators from arrest during sessions except for certain crimes; Committee Proposal 34, A proposal to provide for quorums of the house and senate and the right of these bodies to compel attendance; Committee Proposal 35, A proposal to provide that the form of legislation shall be by bill; and Committee Proposal 37, A proposal to provide for care and control of state funds, accounting for public moneys, audits, and publication of reports, and covering the general subject matter found in sections 15, 16, 17, 18 and 13 of article X of the 1908 constitution. The committee of the whole reports these proposals back to the convention without amendment, and with the recommendation that they do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I ask for a separate vote approving the action of the committee of the whole on Committe Proposal 30, pertaining to free public and elementary schools, and demand the yeas and nays thereon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Committee Proposal 26, Committee Proposals 28, 29, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 37 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 28 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 760.

For Committee Proposal 29 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 761.

For Committee Proposal 32 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 764.

For Committee Proposal 35 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 766.

For Committee Proposal 37 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 766.

The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Committee Proposal 30, from the committee on education, A proposal pertaining to free public and elementary schools. Replaces article XI, section 9.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the recommendation of the committee of the whole that Committee Proposal 30 pass. A record vote has been called for. Will those in favor please vote aye, and those opposed please vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked, and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. President, again, a point of order. I brought this up yesterday. I can see that the bell isn't summoning us quickly enough for a vote. I hope between now and Monday we will get a proper ruling from the Chair on the time limit, because some of us might be downstairs, and we're going to have a lot of these votes coming up.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Lundgren, we will get that smoothed out, I hope, by Monday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. President, if I'm in order, I would like to ask when the delegates may anticipate receiving the journal for yesterday. I think most of us would like to have it before we go home for the weekend.

SECRETARY CHASE: We got a report just a few minutes ago that it will be after lunch.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Do you know what time?

SECRETARY CHASE: After lunch—this afternoon.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: One minute after lunch, or 3 hours after lunch? (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: How long is the lunch period? (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: I'm sure, Mr. Woolfenden, the delay is because of the large number of reports yesterday. I hope they get here right after lunch.

SECRETARY CHASE: The yeas are 126; the nays are none.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The recommendation of the committee of the whole is concurred in and Committee Proposal 30 is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 30 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 762.

Father Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I would like to ask of the Chair how we would go about making unanimous the approval of this convention on the majority report on civil rights.

I think that we have written into the law of the state of Michigan a concept of democracy that is very fundamental and very gratifying. I also feel that this concept we have just written represents the unanimous opinion of this body. I think it would be a very historic occasion if on this measure we could vote not as a party, but as the convention. I'm asking you, sir, how that can be done.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase will explain.

SECRETARY CHASE. The secretary would like to suggest —on this proposal, as well as upon the one we just voted on— that all of these proposals will again be before the convention as a report from the committee on style and drafting. They will be up on second reading in the convention, at which time anyone can demand a record roll call vote on the proposal, or upon any amendments that may be offered to it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, in conferring with my colleagues in this corner, there seems to be a difference of opinion on the rule we arrived at the other day with regard to the time for filing minority reports. It is my understanding that we have 3 session days after the printing of the majority report in the journal. All of the delegates in this corner do not agree with me. I wonder if you might set us straight.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase says that is correct.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, in an effort to answer Father Dade's request, I would like to move the nonconcurrence of everything that we passed this morning, and reserve the right to vote contrary to my motion. And I demand a record roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. King, would you come up, please. Mr. King, is your request that we revert back to Committee Proposal 26?

MR. KING: Specifically, yes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question Mr. King asks is for us to go back to the consideration of the report of the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 26 for the purpose of having a record vote. Is there objection?

Hearing no objection, those in favor of agreeing to the committee of the whole's recommendation on Committee Proposal 26 please vote aye — Father Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. President, could I very graciously tell my colleagues that this has to do with civil rights.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 26 will vote aye. Those opposed, vote nay.

SECRETARY CHASE: Please, all vote before we lock the machine. Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked, and the vote will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

Nays—0

On the question of concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole with regard to Committee Proposal 26, the yeas are 126 and the nays are none.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It is concurred in and Committee Proposal 26 is referred to the committee on style and drafting. (applause)

For Committee Proposal 26 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 739.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 40, A proposal with reference to public retirement systems. It reports this proposal back to the convention with one minor amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "All" by striking out "such".

It is the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on agreeing to the amendment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is agreed to.

Committee Proposal 40, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 40 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The accrued financial benefits of each pension plan and retirement system of the state and its political subdivisions shall be a contractual obligation thereof, which shall not be diminished or impaired thereby.

All benefits arising on account of service rendered in each fiscal year shall be funded during that year and such funding shall not be usable for financing unfunded accrued liabilities.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration: Exclusion Report 2009, A report recommending that article V, section 10 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution; Exclusion Report 2010, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 11; Exclusion Report 2011, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 32; Exclusion Report 2012, A report recommending the exclusion of article V, section 35; Exclusion Report 2013, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 3; Exclusion Report 2014, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 18; and Exclusion Report 2015, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, section 22. The committee reports these exclusion reports back to the convention with the recommendation that they be adopted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the approval of the exclusion reports. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

Exclusion Reports 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015 are adopted and are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2009 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 761.

For Exclusion Report 2010 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 761.

For Exclusion Report 2011 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 762.

For Exclusion Report 2012 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 762.

For Exclusion Report 2013 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 763.

For Exclusion Report 2014 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 763.

For Exclusion Report 2015 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 764.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 38, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: I wish to rise to a point of order, Mr. President. A moment ago this convention witnessed one of the delegates rising and asking for a unanimous vote on a certain proposal. No explanation was given, except that they would be referred, and on second reading they would again be brought back and at that time a recorded vote could be had. Then, another delegate raises the same question, there is a conference had, the ruling is then reversed, and the delegate who arose the second time—not a member of the committee who considered this proposal and helped bring it through this convention—then is recorded as having made the request.

It seems to me, in fairness to the entire picture, that the delegate who first raised the question, though he didn't pursue his point far enough, should be given credit for having asked for a recorded vote on this particular proposal. I refer to the gentleman from Detroit, Father Dade.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will so be recorded. Hearing none, it is recorded.

Mr. King.

MR. KING: I have no objection whatsoever to withdrawing. As a matter of parliamentary procedure, it was I who suggested the device whereby I thought it could be accomplished. He merely requested information from the Chair. But it would be my great pleasure to have Father Dade recorded as the moving party.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you. Mr. Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I would like to say that this graciousness and kindness almost takes my appetite, and I feel no longer hungry. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following announcement: the committee on emerging problems will hold a public hearing next Tuesday, February 6, at 7:30 p.m. in committee room I on the third floor. Appearing will be Mr. Maclin from Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. He will be speaking on pensions. Also, Mr. Alfred Hewitt, from the Michigan national bank of Grand Rapids, will be speaking on the investment and security of pension funds. Frank Millard, chairman.

We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Wilkowski requests to be excused from Monday's session; Mr. McLogan requests to be excused from the sessions of Monday and Tuesday due to urgent business in Chicago; Mr. Snyder, from Monday's session; Mr. DeVries, from Monday's session, to keep a speaking engagement; Mr. Suzore, from Monday's session; Mr. Cudlip, from the sessions of Monday and Tuesday, because of a lawsuit which has been set for trial on those dates in which he is a party; Mr. Barthwell, from the sessions of February 6, 7, 8 and 9; Mr. William Hanna, from the session of Monday; Mr. Rood, from the session of Monday, to make a talk concerning the work of the convention; and Mr. Stamm, from the sessions of February 9, 12, 13 and 14, so that he may be in New York to participate in an annual meeting, the commitment for which was made several months ago.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. President, I have a dental appointment for Monday. May I be excused from the session?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, those who have requested to be excused will be excused.

Any other announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: Those are the announcements, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 4:00 o'clock Monday.

[Whereupon, at 12:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 4:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, February 5, 1962.]

SEVENTY-SECOND DAY

Monday, February 5, 1962, 4:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this afternoon will be given by one of our own delegates, Marjorie McGowan. Please rise.

MISS McGOWAN: In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. O God, who sees beyond our eyes, seeing things not given man to see, aid us in these deliberations. Give us the virtue of prudence. Let us see our mistake before we make it; know our position before we state it; correct our error before it harms those about us.

Give us the virtue of justice, that we might render to every man his due; that we may not consider what is due to us, 'til we have rendered what is due to Thee and those Thou hast created. Give us fortitude, that we might stand up for the right and oppose the wrong; that we might face up to evil and be the backbone for good. Give us temperance, that we might always steer a true course and fail neither by excess nor defect, being neither too scrupulous nor too lax.

Dear Lord, we ask all this of Thee: prudence; justice; fortitude; temperance. We ask it that we might do Thy will more effectively, that we might serve our fellow man more efficiently, that we might save our souls more certainly. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Messrs. Dade, King, Marshall and Rush, from today's session.

Mr. Habermehl, indefinitely, due to illness.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Cudlip, Dade, DeVries, Habermehl, Heideman, King, Marshall, McAllister, McLogan, Rood, Rush, Snyder, Suzore, Thomson and Wilkowski.

Absent without leave: Messrs. Bledsoe, Garvin and Hutchinson.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

[During the proceedings, the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. Bledsoe, Dade and Hutchinson.]

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: No committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 1 on the calendar for this week, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 38, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of the gas and weight taxes for highway purposes covering the subject matter of article X, section 22 of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 38 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. All taxes imposed directly or indirectly upon gasoline and like fuels sold or used to propel motor vehicles upon the highways of this state, and on all motor vehicles registered in this state, shall, after the payment of the necessary expenses of collection thereof, be used exclusively for highway purposes, AS DEFINED BY LAW, including the payment of public debts incurred therefor, and shall not be diverted nor appropriated to any other purpose: Provided, The legislature may provide by law a method of licensing, registering, and transferring motor vehicles and their certificates of title, and licensing and regulating motor vehicle dealers and operators; and may prescribe charges sufficient to pay for the enforcement thereof. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the general sales tax, the use tax, the fees and taxes collected under the auto theft and operators' and chauffeurs' license laws which are used for regulatory purposes; the application fees and mileage fees appropriated to the Michigan public utilities commission by [act 254 of 1933] LAW; the franchise or privilege fees payable generally by corporations organized for profit; nor to ad valorem taxes payable generally by manufacturers, refiners, importers, storage companies, and wholesale distributors on gasoline and like fuels held in stock or bond, and by manufacturers and dealers on motor vehicles in stock or bond.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 38:

The committee has made but 2 changes in the language of the present section 22. Following the words "highway purposes" the committee has added the words "as defined by law," thus giving to the legislature the power to define and limit the meaning of the term "highway purposes." It has also stricken the words "act 254 of 1933" and substituted the word "law".

The committee recognizes that the retention in the constitution of this, or any other earmarking, is controversial but because of the fact that this is a use tax it is much less controversial than is, for instance, the earmarking of sales tax. It is the feeling of the committee that there is no possibility of taking the earmarking of the gasoline and weight taxes out of the constitution by this convention and most of the members of the committee are in agreement with the idea that this earmarking should be retained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, we were ready when we adjourned Friday to start into the question of the earmarking of funds by constitutional provision and had just reached the proposal having to do with weight and gas taxes. For a discussion of that proposal, I yield to Henry Stafseth.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. First I think it would be well to explain to the members of the committee that in the highway industry the engineers look at the highway system as a utility, much like a railroad or a water utility, and in their thinking they have attempted to derive a tax structure that would be directly related to the amount of use that you make of the highways.

There are 2 major factors that contribute to the wear and tear of highways. One is the weight of the vehicle, and the other is the amount of use or the frequency or the amount of traffic on the highways. So in the design of the tax structure, you can plainly see if you have a gasoline tax that is on a per gallon use basis, you have a tax that will take care of the frequency.

In the case of the weight tax or the licensing fee, you have a tax structure that is based proportionately on the amount of weight of the vehicle. Currently now we have a 35 cents per hundred pound license fee, so the larger the truck the greater the tax they pay which is related to the weight, and weight is one of the major factors in the deterioration of the highway. There is one other thing: the weight tax can be considered quite similarly to the fee that you have in the case of a water utility system. You have a ready to serve charge or a meter charge, so a license fee is much the same as that for this utilitarian purpose.

There is one thing that I think we have to bear in mind, and that is since world war II we have been very mindful of the fact that highways do have a very realistic life span. They do wear out. The more the use the shorter the span. This is particularly true when you get in around large cities, where I imagine the pot holes are in pretty good shape this weekend.

Now, with this in mind, when you come to the proposition of Committee Proposal 38, which is fundamentally the same as it has been since 1938, you will note that in this proposal the earmarking only says that these taxes shall be used for highway purposes. It gives the legislature the latitude to raise the gas or weight tax to increase revenues; to maintain them or lower them. And I might mention that actually in the case of the weight tax, the weight tax has been lowered. It was 55 cents per hundred back just before the war or during the war, and now it is down to 35. So the legislature has the right to raise and lower this according to the needs of the highway.

With this in mind, we ought to also take a look at what the other states are doing in relation to earmarking. In the case of the gas and weight tax, there are currently 27 states that have constitutional provisions that earmark these funds. In the case of Utah, they are voting in the November election on a constitutional amendment, so if this passed, this would make 28. Currently there are 10 states that have statutory provisions which require that these funds are used for highway purposes.

In the latter part of Committee Proposal 38, you will notice that there are exceptions which allow sales tax to be applied to gasoline on a per dollar basis and on automobiles on a per dollar basis, so actually these things that are used on the highway, the automobile and the gasoline and the rest of it, do pay the same amount of sales tax as any other commercial product used by the state, which goes, of course, to the general government and all the services that the sales tax takes care of.

Now, the committee, when they considered this problem, unanimously approved the principle of earmarking gas and weight tax for highway purposes. They have made 2 changes in the existing constitutional paragraph. One is on line 10, where they have added after "highway purposes" the words "as defined by law." It was the committee's thinking that by adding these words, this will allow the legislature to define what highway purposes are. Actually, if those words were not in this paragraph, it would be up to the courts to define them. I think the committee felt that if the legislature could do this, inasmuch as they raise the funds, if there was any facet of this that wasn't clear, it would be a simple proposition to correct it.

The other change is in line 20, the last word. We struck out "act 254 of 1933." When this constitutional amendment was first proposed and voted on by the people, reference was made to a specific act, because at that time the fees that were charged by the Michigan public utilities commission — 60 per cent of them — were put in the highway fund, so, inasmuch as that was directly related to a formula, it was necessary to relate to the specific act. But on research of this problem, we find out now that the legislature can change this, so we struck out the reference to an act and just put in the word "law", which takes care of it and it doesn't make a specific reference to a legislative act. I think that pretty much summarizes the situation.

There is one committee amendment which I have on the secretary's desk, and if he will read the amendment, then I will explain it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the proposal first.

MR. STAFSETH: Excuse me.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section a.

Mr. Stafseth, for the committee on finance and taxation, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 20, after "public" by striking out "utilities" and inserting "service"; so the language will read, ". . . appropriated to the Michigan public service commission".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman, the reason for this amendment is that the public utilities commission was discontinued in Fitzgerald's second term of office, and since then it has been the service commission, so it just brings it up to date. This was an oversight.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment submitted by the committee.

Are there any further amendments? Are there any further amendments to this amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: No.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All those in favor of the amendment will signify by saying aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Cushman offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, by striking out the entire section. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Ever since I decided to speak and offer an amendment on the subject of earmarking, I have been wondering why. The policy on this matter, as far as most members of this convention are concerned, was apparently set some time ago. I have spoken to a number of delegates and the answers have been discouraging. "I'm against earmarking but," they usually say. "I'm against earmarking but if I said so my school friends would not understand." Or "I'm against earmarking but I'm sure the highway people will get it through anyway." Or "I'm against earmarking but I don't want to speak until I think I will be more effective." But there are people in this state who are against earmarking, period. In behalf of these people and because earmarking is so vital to the future of Michigan, I feel someone should point out the dangers of the path we are following. Let it be on the record of this convention that the problem was clearly considered.

For over 16 years I have studied one aspect or another of state taxation as a member of the league of women voters. Every time my fellow members and I came to the same conclusion: earmarking is not the way to meet Michigan's financial needs. Why? There are many reasons but I must stick to 3.

First, it prevents the legislature and the governor from doing their respective jobs. When 70 to 80 per cent of state receipts are in effect put aside before they get to the treasury, the legislature cannot examine the needs of state government and decide how best they are to be met, nor can the governor spell out a meaningful executive budget. Some of the needs are already taken care of and only 20 to 30 per cent of the revenue is left to take care of the rest. I do not mean to imply that the schools or the libraries or the local governments or the highways are getting more money overall than they should. There may, indeed, be worthwhile ways for them to spend much more. But unfortunately the problem is not how much money can they spend in a useful way. The problem is, in any given year, what do we need most in state government? Where can the inadequate amounts that we have do the most good? This problem is always with us. It will not be solved simply by passing an income tax, though I have no doubt that one is needed. The things we citizens are asking our state governments to do for us are increasing so rapidly that we can never catch up with them completely.

The second reason for being against earmarking is that it doesn't work in the long run. No doubt friends of libraries thought they had their problems solved when they were given penal fines in our first state constitution, the Constitution of 1835. But legal decisions and other changes have made penal fines woefully inadequate today. The schools thought they were set when 2 cents of the sales tax was earmarked for them. But 3 years ago the formula set up by the legislature could no longer be met from earmarked funds; since then the legislature has paid out millions from the general fund to meet the formula. Persons in whom I have confidence tell me that with the present spending and bonding policy of roads, it will not be too many years before the earmarked revenues will be used chiefly to pay off debt, and additional moneys will be needed from the general fund to build roads.

The third reason that earmarking is bad, in my opinion, is that earmarking leads to more earmarking. No other state has anywhere near as much as Michigan. Some states prohibit earmarking in their constitutions because it is like marijuana or salted peanuts: once you start, you take more and more. It has been said that it is only logical to use gas and weight taxes for roads because in this way the users pay for the roads. If we were to carry this theory into other fields, schools would be supported by tuition. We all pay for public schools because we all benefit from them, and in the same way we all benefit from roads. Every item in the state budget is there because it is for a "public purpose"; it benefits all of us, directly or indirectly. Every item should be on the same basis. When it becomes evident that earmarking leads to preferential status, even temporarily, more and more pressure groups try to get earmarked funds for their interests. They are almost forced into it, because the pressure on the rest of the budget becomes so intense.

Taxpayers generally come to think of new taxes as having to be linked with certain purposes. The whole philosophy of taxes becomes confused for the general public. Receiving adequate financial support becomes a question of selling your program to the voters of the whole state. Some necessary items which are not especially appealing, such as general administration or prisons, may be overlooked.

One of the chief reasons why we are here today is because of the 1959 financial crisis in Michigan. The forecast is for a debt of $100 million for the state by the end of this fiscal year. The people of the state expect us to do something to solve these problems.

This section continues a rigid system of financial management which was one of the chief causes of our state's problems. I therefore urge you to think carefully before you vote, and I urge you to vote for the amendment to delete this section in the interests of a flexible constitution and good financial management. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I would rise, Mr. Chairman, to speak against the amendment. I think there are several things that should be brought to mind. Mr. Brake in his opening remarks last Friday pointed out one problem that the committee became very aware of. I know that in all the testimony we had, in some cases the league of women voters spoke up against earmarking, and in every case I asked them if they felt that it would solve the financial crisis if earmarking were taken off, and they weren't able to answer it, and they said they didn't think so, if I remember correctly. But I know from all the testimony we got there was no question about the fact that the financial crisis in Michigan was caused very simply, as Mr. Brake pointed out, by the fact that the appropriations of the state weren't sufficient to meet the expenditures.

And I also point out that this anti diversion protection for the gallon of gas tax and the weight tax is being protected in 38 of the 50 states, so I can't see that we are creating any new precedents. As a matter of fact, in Michigan we have 24 per cent of our general fund diverted for gas and weight tax, as compared to the other 27 states with constitutional amendment, 22.8 per cent, so we are very much in line. So I would urge a no vote on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Cushman amendment. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I wish, too, to rise to urge a no vote on the amendment. I wish, too, to compliment Delegate Cushman for bringing this to the attention of the delegates because I too think a question as basic as this should receive the full discussion and attention of the delegation. I think that we must look at earmarking not so much as a theory but really a condition of life; that the constitutional earmarking in many cases — and I assume we're, by the nature of the amendment, discussing not only this but must touch on the general field of earmarking — was gotten into in many cases by the action of the people themselves to meet their needs; that the removal of earmarking would not make one more red cent available for the people of the state of Michigan. And I think there are those that in good belief say, "Well, look, here is a new highway bridge. Do we need a school more? Do we divert the one to the other?"

But the historic proof of this state has been that earmarking has guaranteed minimal incomes for certain state services. And without touching on the jurisdiction of Dr. Hannah's committee on legislative organization, I think we can only point out that one of the reasons for earmarking was, in effect, to bypass the legislative process and to see that certain moneys were received in taxes and were allocated separate from the whole legislative process. The result has been that there were more moneys available for the specific purposes the people wanted.

I think each of us may disagree as to the emphasis of what should have more money spent on it than others, but with the legislature organized the way it was, the people found this very effective avenue. I think the result has been that we have had improved services throughout the state. The people have demonstrated their support for it, and I urge that we continue the principle of earmarking and support the principles of the committee's report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I would rise to support the amendment of Mrs. Cushman. I feel that we, as delegates, have a basic responsibility to try to guide our legislature as to the basic tenets of good financial management in our state.

We say that earmarking would not give another cent to the schools or the highways. We already know that the legislature is giving more money to schools than is called for by the state constitution. We know that the highway is getting its full share of the tax and weight money. But I ask you: is this going to remain the same for the years to come? Can you and I judge today what the people need tomorrow?

In many large states similar to Michigan, they have no earmarking at all. They have not had the financial problem we have had. You can't say for sure that this has been the case, but I think that you and I should try to give the responsibility to our elected representatives, and it is not up to you nor me to decide where this money is to be spent next year. New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, New Jersey, all similar states to Michigan, do not have one cent of constitutional earmarking. The latest states to adopt constitutions, Alaska and Hawaii, have not had constitutional earmarking.

Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I believe it is up to you and me to set the tone for our financial management in the future. This was a unanimous decision of our committee, but only because we felt: what is the use? And talking in the halls and talking among the delegates, we felt this decision was already made. But perhaps it is not. Perhaps you have reconsidered this point. I would urge you to think very seriously and vote for this amendment to give our legislature the responsibility it deserves, the responsibility you and I give it when we cast our ballot for members. I urge you to support Mrs. Cushman's amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Upton. Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Because this is 1 of 3 sections we are now getting into on earmarking, I think it would be worth our time to take a minute just to get our thinking straight on what we are talking about. Earmarking as such really doesn't mean anything specifically. You have to go a step further and see how it is earmarked in the constitution.

On the finance and taxation committee, I am sure that all of us would agree, once we got into this question, you find that there is a great variety of earmarking and types of earmarking. This being so, it is necessary to analyze each one to see if the good points outweigh the bad points. You can't just say that you are for earmarking or you are against earmarking.

When you get into the highway earmarking, you will find that there are some great differences there as compared to, say, the 2 cents for schools. Number one, on highway earmarking, the rate is not specified in the constitution. It merely says that all gas and weight taxes shall be used for highway purposes. Now, when you analyze that, this means that the flexibility is there with the legislature to set what the gas and weight taxes shall be. If the legislature determines that too much money is going for roads, it can lower the rate. If there is not enough, it can raise it. But the basic responsibility is still left to the legislature.

Secondly, "highway purposes" is a broad category. The legislature has authority to say how much will go for state highway purposes, how much for local roads, so that they do have this flexibility.

On the other side of the highway earmarking, there are some definite advantages that I think have to be pointed out, and there are some good points that flow from earmarking. Number one — by its nature, highway planning is long range in nature. Having set revenue for that purpose aids in this long range planning. Also, from the standpoint of the financing rates, highways take large capital investments. By having this constitutional designation as far as gas and weight taxes, they have been able to finance at lower rates of interest than they would otherwise, short of general obligation, which is something we haven't been willing to go to, but it certainly is better than it would be by a statutory pledge of revenues for this purpose. So there are advantages. The disadvantages are not as great as under some of the other sections. It is flexible. And for that reason, myself and many other members on the committee voted for it.

But the basic thing I am trying to point out is, you can't say earmarking as such is good or bad. It is necessary to take each section of the constitution and analyze it to see how much inflexibility is caused by the section and what good can come from it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to say that I am either for or against the amendment. I just want to bring out a little information. When I do hear examples used here, I wish that they gave out all the information. In the state of Michigan we don't have toll roads, but I want you to note that in one of the delegate's examples, he used states to which we have paid an enormous amount of tolls in using their highways: New York, Indiana, New Jersey, Pennsylvania. So whenever you get thinking about these problems, just remember that they don't earmark funds for their highways; they do earmark your funds.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman and delegates to the convention, I would like to say just one short word about this particular amendment in speaking against it. It was not many days ago that this committee considered tacking on to a measure that was going through here something to try to improve the business climate in Michigan. Now, I might just point out to you that the automobile industry is the number one industry in Michigan, and I believe it follows that the tourist business is the second. I want to tell you that nationally 1 out of every 7 people who are gainfully employed are employed in the automobile business, either the manufacturing or allied industries.

Now, how does that relate to highway earmarking? Simply this: you don't build automobiles and you don't sell automobiles unless you have good roads for them to run on. We have proven that in the past. The industry goes up and up and up as you have roads and facilities to handle that traffic. So you build those roads; the sales follow; the employment follows that. One out of every 7 are employed in that industry.

I am strictly against Mrs. Cushman's amendment, and I certainly recommend that this committee adopt the highway earmarking funds. And I like to call it this, Mr. Stafseth: not earmarking, but anti diversionary. In other words, they can't divert the funds.

Now, we have been through this fight years and years ago when our roads were mud, and we finally got the taxes passed, and we finally found that they were not getting on the highways; they were diverting them to other uses. This is a specific tax for a specific purpose. The result of the amendment will be to see that the funds go to that particular purpose, and that is good roads in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Farnsworth. Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I would just like to ask when you are talking about the diversion of moneys, that you divert a few of these off of that state bridge and let us get over it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the gas tax and the weight tax and the use of the funds that are gathered from that source for the building of roads. We need roads, and it is as fair a way as I know to pay for them. But I think Mrs. Cushman has made a useful contribution in bringing before us, as we pass on the first of the diversionary sections, that if we are going to approve this one and then later we are going to talk about whether or not we shall retain in the constitution the diversion of portions of the sales tax for the public schools and other areas; if we are for the committee recommendation, some of us are going to find it very difficult indeed if at some later date someone is going to raise the question whether it is desirable that we give the legislature the responsibility to handle the state's resources for all the reasons that Mrs. Cushman indicated.

So whether or not you vote for her amendment, if you do not vote for it, so far as many of us are concerned, then this is a closed issue for the balance of this convention.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Dr. Hannah. Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: I would like to go along with Dr. Hannah in his sentiments here, because this is the way I feel. I voted for earmarking and I will continue to vote for it as far as education is concerned, as well as for libraries. I am not very convinced of the arguments advanced with respect to the user theory, and I think I have had a great deal of difficulty convincing my constituents of it.

Now, Mrs. Cushman, I would be very happy to go along with you and remove all the earmarking as per the model state constitution if we had had different experiences in the past. However, based upon our experiences in Michigan, I believe that the earmarking is essential. Now, if we saw some kind of a change with respect to the legislature — we have a more responsive legislature — then I would be willing to go along and eliminate all earmarking.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I just can't help but comment that every civilization has had its monuments to the past. We start out with the Egyptians. We see their great pyramids. We look at the Greeks and we see their fine temples. So in future generations, when they look to see our great American civilization, they will be able to see the roads that we built that lasted for years and years. I just think that we ought to be aware that this will, I think, be one of our monuments to the future. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I guess I am one of those "I'm against earmarking but" people that Mrs. Cushman referred to, and I think the discussion of this issue, earmarking, has brought us squarely to the central issue before this convention, namely, the question of reapportionment. I noticed over the weekend that some questions were raised in the newspapers as to whether or not we were wasting $2 million of the people's money. I think that is a very good question. It is my firm belief that unless we face squarely the necessity for returning control of the legislature to the people, we might as well go home now. Every issue we discuss will revert directly to the basic issue of reapportionment.

And so I am against earmarking — I agree with Mrs. Cushman — but unless and until we get a responsive and responsible legislature, I am forced to continue earmarking in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Young. Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think we have missed the major point on this earmarking of funds for highways. I am principally against earmarking of funds, and I would be against earmarking of funds for highways, but being back in the city of Detroit, I have discussed this situation with quite a few people.

First of all, we have to realize in order to have highways, we must have some underwriter underwrite bonds so we can get some money. Then we pay back these bonds. And the bond underwriters — and I won't mention any specifically — have said that without the diversion of this tax for highway funds, it would be practically impossible for the state of Michigan to get any bonds for new highways in the present fiscal state that it is in.

Therefore, I would be against the amendment until we can straighten out the other fiscal responsibility of the state of Michigan. However, in future earmarking that we are to take up, I would like to go on record that I do not feel that this particular situation has anything to do with future earmarking of funds, as Dr. Hannah expressed. I would disagree with that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Sterrett. Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, my fellow delegates, I would like to respond briefly to 2 statements made here by Mr. Binkowski and Mr. Young. Both of these gentlemen referred to the so called unresponsiveness of the legislature to the people.

I would like to submit to you that the trouble with the government today, both at the federal and state level, is that the legislatures are too responsive to the people in their spendthrift desires, and the reason we need to retain earmarking of funds is because these legislators are so interested in getting reelected that they are going to spend us into destruction if we are not careful, and we need to have earmarking of funds to protect ourselves against that sort of thing.

I am against the amendment. I favor earmarking of funds, and I am completely in disagreement with these people who keep talking about the unresponsiveness of the legislature. As far as I am concerned, the legislature is responsible. It is the people in general, occasionally expressed through pressure groups, who are unresponsible. If the masses of the people could control, and not pressure groups, we would have good government. Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Cushman amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division is called for. Is the demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. Not a sufficient number up.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Cushman offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "purpose" by inserting a colon and "Provided, That there shall be no dedication of gas and weight taxes beyond rates now being levied for any purpose".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Cushman amendment. Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: It has been often remarked that the rates of the present gas and weight taxes are not specified in the constitution; consequently, the legislature is free to vary these. This amendment would simply provide that if they were to be increased beyond the present rates, this additional amount would not be subject to earmarking.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I rise, Mr. Chairman, to speak against the amendment. I tried to bring out in the beginning of my remarks that highways are fundamentally a utility, much as a water system or a railroad system. And inflation being the way it is, there is no way of predicting what conditions will be tomorrow. This amendment in effect would put a freeze on the gas and weight taxes at their current level.

It appears and I think this could be better answered about a year from now — we have a need study that is almost completed; it will be completed probably in the next several months — but it appears that the building boom on the highway system we have now has probably gone past the high point and is getting to a point where it levels off. I do point out, as I mentioned in my opening remarks, that there have been times when this tax has been reduced, and I certainly don't feel on something that is a utility — it would be just like setting your water rates and saying you can't go any higher — that the legislature should determine what these fair rates should be. They are based on a use basis.

I point out that it would be unfair to use these moneys for general government, because a man that used his car, drove it 50,000 miles, would pay 5 times as much as a man that drove it 10,000 miles, so it certainly is geared as a fee for services rendered as a utility, and the legislature should be left flexible to raise or lower it as the needs indicate.

Now, in these needs studies, we do prepare them and they are subject to review by economists. This isn't an arbitrary decision. We have to go through a very elaborate report which is completely reviewed by experts in the financial economic field before it is presented back to the legislature. And the good roads federation, which is probably our sounding board, is made up of users, of people in the road business, farm bureau, municipal league, every facet of society that we can get represented, and if we can't get past that, we can't get past the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Turner.

MR. TURNER: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak against the amendment and for the committee proposal. I think we are missing a point here in the fact that our tourist business is number 2 in the state and that a great many people come in here using our highways and buying gasoline in this state, and therefore they would be paying directly to support and build our highways.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Cushman amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Cushman has offered the following amendment:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 781.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to ask Mr. Stafseth, before I vote on this, if in the plans for the highway, that 1970 plan is all that is going to be planned for highways in the upper peninsula. That is sent out in the report of the state highway department, and I would just like to know if that's frozen in.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Well, all I can do is make a very general statement that what they have proposed in their plan for 1970 includes all that you have up until that time, but this wouldn't prevent anything beyond that time, and I can't very well speak for John Mackie, the state highway commissioner.

MRS. BUTLER: There is only one short 4 lane highway up there and that is the plan to 1970, so I don't know why we should vote for more money.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, speaking directly to Mrs. Cushman's present amendment, I don't know just how much expediency weighs with each delegate here, but I think as far as the finance and taxation committee is concerned, everybody on it thinks that we are going to be able to draw a constitution that will be worth keeping, and we know we won't keep it unless we can get the votes to adopt it after we are through with it.

Now, if you are looking at it from that viewpoint at all, why appease or please the road people by keeping earmarking, and then alienate every single one of them in the state by saying that if you go any higher, it is for something else besides roads?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that the amendment has no meaning as it does not specify any date. When is "now"?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Cushman amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not—

Mr. Downs, do you rise?

MR. DOWNS: There are no amendments before us now, are there, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: There are no amendments.

MR. DOWNS: I wish to ask either Mr. Stafseth or the chairman, Mr. Brake, a little bit more about the addition of the words "as defined by law." Is that discussion in order at this point?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: It is in order.

MR. DOWNS: I believe that the chairman of the committee pointed out that at one time there had been a question whether highway funds could be diverted for state police patrol. I wondered if he would want to go into that a little further. I am wondering if "as defined by law" could be expanded to include state parks besides highways, or could it be limited to mean only the roads as such? I realize that as it now stands, it is up to the courts as to what the meaning is, and it would seem to me that "as defined by law" might expand this meaning. If so, I would like to know how much it expands the meaning.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Downs and ladies and gentlemen, there was a general feeling in the committee at the beginning of our discussion on this subject that the term "highway use" ought to be more closely defined than in the present constitution, and we started with proposals introduced by road people themselves, road organizations, spelling out in considerable detail just what a highway use was. It mentioned construction, maintenance and so forth. And then we got to asking the questions that you have just asked, Mr. Downs. How about a tourist information booth at New Buffalo or down by Toledo?

What about the roadside parks? How about state police for patrol work? Are these highway uses or are they not highway uses?

And our conclusion was that instead of writing those specific items into the constitution of this state, we might better leave it to the legislature to make the definition so that from time to time as needs change, the definition could be changed. And due to the fact that down through the years the legislature has beaten down every attempt to use highway funds on questionable items, we thought that it was perfectly safe to leave that matter in their hands.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I had the same question, Mr. Brake, and I was thinking, now in terms of the wording as it is presently in the constitution or in the proposed amendment, could it be construed, for instance, to mean, say, driver education classes? And then if the legislature were to so define, then it would be up to the courts to determine whether this is in the context of highway use?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I think the courts would have very little to do in that connection if the legislature specifically stated that that was a highway use. This leaves it to the legislature to define it.

MR. FAXON: Would you think, then, that driver education could be, conceivably, a part of this?

MR. BRAKE: I cannot forecast what the legislature might do except by looking at what it has refused to do in the past. On that basis I would say they would not do it.

MR. FAXON: I just want to support driver education. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Brake a similar question and probably receive a similar answer. The question has come up from time to time in connection, Mr. Brake, with possible diversion of gas and weight taxes to cities for the purpose of assisting a municipality that is having difficulty in keeping its mass transit system. This has come before the legislature from time to time. And I wonder if this point was discussed in your committee, and whether or not you would think that under the proposed language, the legislature, if it saw fit to do so, would be permitted to divert gas and weight taxes to assist cities that were having difficulty with the mass transit system.

MR. BRAKE: Well, the proposals, Mr. Allen, in the legislature as I remember it, have not been to divert it exactly, but to excuse the bus lines from paying at least as high a rate for weight and gas as other people do. I would say very certainly that kind of thing would be within the power of the legislature to define. Now, to take the money and give it to a transportation system as a sort of a bonus might be more questionable, and that has not been the approach in the legislature.

MR. ALLEN: This is why I raised the question, because I know both types have been suggested, but the one type of excusing the weight taxes was given more receptive consideration by the legislature than the other.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, a question for the chairman of the committee, please. Since so many people have expressed their opposition to earmarking as such, and since we are concerned here not with next year but with the decades which are ahead of us, I was wondering if the committee considered the possibility of attaching to such earmarking provisions a time limit within which the legislature could then get us back on a more normal basis.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: We did consider that in connection with the sales tax, Dr. Pollock, not with the weight and gas tax. We figure that there is just no use in butting our head against a stone wall on this.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: I might point out, Dr. Pollock, that actually in this road business you have a continuous maintenance proposition that you can't get away from so you have to have a continuing tax. You could never discontinue some form of income or we wouldn't have roads within a very short time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 38 is passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 39 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. [There shall be returned to local governmental units by the method hereinafter set forth, ½ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property on the 1946 statutory base (not rate). The state disbursing authority shall remit to counties as a whole on a population basis and payment shall be made to the county treasurer who shall remit to the respective cities, townships and villages within the county on a per capita basis. Population computation shall be based on the last and each succeeding statewide federal census for purposes of division among counties and upon the same basis or upon any special federal countywide census, whichever is later, for intracounty division purposes. There shall be excluded from such computation 50 per cent of the total number of persons who are wards, patients or convicts committed to or domiciled in any city institution located outside the boundaries of said city or committed to or domiciled in any county, state or federal tax supported institution, provided such persons were included in said federal census. All remittances provided shall be made on a quarterly basis.] THERE SHALL BE RETURNED TO CITIES, TOWNSHIPS AND VILLAGES ON A POPULATION BASIS, AS PROVIDED BY LAW, ½ CENT OF A STATE SALES TAX LEVY ON EACH DOLLAR OF SALES OF TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY.

There shall be set aside for the school districts 2 cents of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property [on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)], to be allocated among said school districts by law. Such taxes so collected shall be [deposited in a special school aid fund and be] expendable only by legislative appropriations for aid to the school districts and school employees' retirement purposes as shall be provided by law. [Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund.]

Prior to any division or allocation of the sales tax, the cost of collection as determined by the department of revenue shall be deducted from total collections and credited to the general fund of the state.

[The legislature shall by law appropriate from the school aid fund for such public school employees' retirement systems as shall from time to time be in effect under the laws of this state an amount which shall not be less than 5 per cent nor more than 7½ per cent of the salaries of school district employees participating in the respective retirement systems. Such percentages shall apply only to that portion of salary as may be provided by law. At no time shall the legislature levy a sales tax of more than 4 per cent.] AT NO TIME SHALL THE LEGISLATURE LEVY A SALES TAX ON RETAILERS AT A RATE OF MORE THAN 4 PER CENT OF THEIR GROSS TAXABLE SALES OF TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 39:

The committee proposes, by a majority vote, to retain the earmarking of sales tax money and to retain the distribution thereof, now prevailing. The decision of the committee was not unanimous.

A great part of the language of the present section 23 has been eliminated as unnecessary. It was the feeling of the committee that the stricken language was properly statutory and not constitutional, and that the legislature should be left with the power to supply any detail not provided for in an abbreviated statement in the new constitution.

There was a general recognition by the committee, that as a matter of theory, this is not the best way to run a government, but the majority of the committee reasoned that upon this subject the people had spoken—and had done so recently—and that when the people speak they are the "boss". The members of the committee feel that we are drawing a constitution that will be worth keeping, and are not unmindful of the fact that it will not be kept unless the voters approve it.

So far as the 2 cents for the schools are concerned, the provision is placing no additional burden on the state. For 4 years in succession the legislature has appropriated to the schools substantially more than the 2 cents and is certain to do so in the foreseeable future.

As to the ½ cent distributed to the local units of government, were this amount taken away from a city it would have to be replaced. On the average we are advised that the sales tax amounts to from 12 to 15 per cent of the cities' budgets. They are not in position to reduce their expenditures by that amount. While it may be that this convention will broaden the tax base of the municipalities it will take time before the cities are able to make use of that authority, and it may be impracticable for the smaller cities to make great use of this authority.

As to the townships the percentage of the budget coming from the sales tax is, of course, much larger, and for the ordinary township any other kind of tax other than the property tax is impracticable. They can get under our present system only a very small allocation of millage. Were they to lose the sales tax, millage would have to be given to them to replace it, and the counties are operating at minimum as it is. The extra millage to the township would come almost entirely out of the share of the 15 mills now received by the schools with the net result that the schools would be claiming so much more state aid.

Following is minority report A to Committee Proposal 39 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following minority report A to Committee Proposal 39:

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 39:

The committee on finance and taxation has submitted Committee Proposal 39 to retain in effect the dedication of sales tax revenue provided in section 23, article X of the present constitution.

Section 23 requires distribution of sales tax revenue to local governments and school districts in amounts determined "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)". The quoted language was included in the 1954 amendment to section 23 to place a floor under the base of allocations to the recipients. Even if the legislature could be persuaded to remove segments or classes of sales from the sales tax base, it could not thereby reduce the amount of distributions to local governments and school districts below that which would have been distributable had the tax base remained as it was in 1946.

The committee decided to delete from section 23 the language quoted above which requires distributions in amounts determined "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)". Deletion of this language as provided by the committee proposal tends to place the guaranteed minimum base of support in jeopardy.

The sponsors of the attached amendment to the report of the committee on finance and taxation, seeking to retain the quoted language deleted by the committee's report, submit the following comments in support of their appeal for retention:

1. The purpose of the constitutional provision for dedication of 2 cents of each 4 cents of sales tax collected for distribution to school districts and ½ cent for local governments is to assure a minimum guarantee of state support for these units. If the guarantee is to remain reasonably effective it is essential that the tax base upon which distributions are to be determined be specified in the constitution to designate and assure the level of benefits sought to be accomplished. A base date (the original 1946 date is satisfactory) therefore should be included to prevent legislative reduction of the support.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

2. There have been numerous recommendations from various sources to remove by legislation food and drugs from the sales tax base—which would result in a revenue reduction of more than $90 million annually. The impact on distributions resulting from the removal of these items from the sales tax would be as follows:

	Under present constitution (and per this amendment) (in millions)	Under the committee proposal (in millions)
Estimated sales tax revenue, fiscal 1961-62	$440	$440
Loss of revenue through exemption of food and drugs (approximate)	90	90
Estimated revenue, assuming food and drugs exempt)	350	350
Approximate distribution to local units of government—
½ cent—1946 base
½ cent—new base	55	43.75
Approximate distribution to school districts—
2 cents—1946 base
2 cents—new base	220	175

Even if the state general fund recovered the lost sales tax revenue from another source, the school funds under the committee proposal are tied to sales tax revenue. The base guarantee would be absent with no adequate guarantee to replace. As long as the 1946 base exists, the legislature is responsible for continuing the full guarantee regardless of the source and this is supported by the attorney general's opinion which has not been challenged. (Attorney general's opinion (1956) 2470).

3. With the costs of school maintenance and local government services on the incline, it does not seem appropriate to be tinkering with the minimum base of their state support.

4. Since the public support of the schools was so overwhelmingly expressed in constitutional amendments, a firm precedent has been established. School districts now depend on this guaranteed revenue base. What is sought by this amendment is continuation of this guarantee, now familiar and understood. No one quarrels with the idea that it might be possible to find substitute formulae to ensure that guarantee. But the committee's present wording does not provide such substitutes, just makes the base vulnerable to reduction by legislation.

The committee decision in effect, therefore, vitiates the deduction of sales tax for schools and local governments and amounts to a "back door" approach to weaken such earmarking.

A base is absolutely necessary to guarantee the minimum amounts insured by the present constitutional provision and by the minority report.

Without such a base, the budgets of local units of government and school districts throughout the state may be seriously endangered.

Following is minority report B to Committee Proposal 39 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Upton, Davis and Seyferth, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following minority report B to Committee Proposal 39:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

IN EACH OF THE 5 FISCAL YEARS FOLLOWING THE ADOPTION OF THIS CONSTITUTION, THE LEGISLATURE SHALL APPROPRIATE ½ CENT OF A STATE SALES TAX TO THE CITIES, VILLAGES AND TOWNSHIPS ON THE BASIS PROVIDED IN THE CONSTITUTION OF 1908. STATE SUPPORT FOR CITIES, VILLAGES AND TOWNSHIPS MAY BE CONTINUED THEREAFTER.

THE LEGISLATURE SHALL APPROPRIATE ANNUALLY TO THE SCHOOL DISTRICTS OF THIS STATE, TO SUPPLEMENT FUNDS RAISED LOCALLY, SUFFICIENT FUNDS TO ASSURE ADEQUATE OPPORTUNITY FOR PRIMARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION IN EVERY SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Messrs. Upton, Davis and Seyferth, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 39:

This minority report on the question of constitutional dedication of particular funds, otherwise known as "earmarking", is submitted because of the fundamental character of the issue involved, the clear division of opinion within the committee on finance and taxation, and the fact that the convention should have an opportunity to consider and vote upon the matter.

This report relates only to Committee Proposals 36 and 39 dealing with taxes earmarked for the primary school interest fund and the sales tax. The report does not apply to Committee Proposal 38 dealing with the earmarking of motor fuel and weight taxes for highway purposes. The amendments set forth above are presented as a complete substitute for Committee Proposals 36 and 39.

As demonstrated by their suggested amendment to the committee proposal the above named members of the finance and taxation committee believe in state support for local education to supplement funds raised locally. Furthermore, we do not object to state collection of taxes all or part of which may be redistributed by the legislature to local units of government.

We firmly believe, however, that the appropriation of state revenues is and should be the responsibility of the legislature. One of the most important functions of a legislature in a system of representative government is to review, weigh and pass upon the multitude of conflicting demands for public funds. A constitution which removes from legislative control the proceeds of 12 different state taxes (sales tax, motor fuel tax, auto weight tax, inheritance tax, corporation organization tax, foreign insurance company tax, railroad tax, telephone and telegraph tax, car loaning tax, express company tax, escheats), involving over 60 per cent of total state revenues, negatives the principle of representative government, and leaves little real power or responsibility in the hands of the elected representatives. If the legislature is to be strong, effective and responsive it must be given not only the responsibility but the flexibility and power to deal with the state's fiscal problems.

The following arguments have been made in support of the continued earmarking of the sales tax and of the taxes contributed to the primary school interest fund:

1. It is argued that without earmarking, the legislature will not appropriate enough money to local school districts. However, the fact is that in each of the last 5 fiscal years the legislature has appropriated more money in the support of local school districts than the constitution now requires. The groups interested in continued earmarking are unanimous in their insistence that the earmarked funds alone are not enough.

2. It is argued that although the legislature for several years has appropriated more than the earmarked funds it would not continue to do so in the event the state were in financial difficulty. However, in 1959 when the state's fiscal situation was so perilous that a public payroll was not met, the school districts nevertheless received more than the constitutionally earmarked funds.

3. It is argued that the earmarking does no harm. While there is no positive present evidence of harm, nevertheless it is apparent that Michigan needs major revision of its tax structure. Obviously the fact that so much of the present financial structure is inflexibly frozen in the constitution can only be an impediment to overall tax reform. The argument was made in 1954 that the 3 per cent limit on the sales tax would do no harm. However, the problems of 1959 and 1960 demonstrated the error of that prediction.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

5. It is argued that while constitutional earmarking is unsound in principle it would be discriminatory to eliminate the earmarking to which this report is directed while retaining the earmarking of highway funds. Those of us submitting this report believe that the earmarking of gasoline and weight taxes for highway purposes can be justified on the basis of the logical relationship between the source of the funds and the dedicated purpose. No similar relationship exists for example between the foreign insurance company tax and primary education, or between the sales tax and support of junior colleges or school employees' retirement systems.

6. It is argued that to eliminate constitutionally earmarked support for local units of government and for schools districts would create immediate hardship. The amendments proposed by this minority report contemplate continued state support for school districts. With respect to local units of government the present earmarking would be continued for 5 years and might be continued by statute thereafter. It is believed that 5 years should be sufficient time to enable cities and villages in particular to utilize the additional tax authority granted to them by the proposal of the committee on local government. In the case of townships, some support might be required indefinitely, but the legislature could at least make a more intelligent distribution than under the present arbitrary and inflexible system.

If Michigan's new constitution is to be a truly progressive, constructive document, setting a national example, it must be more than a rubber stamp of the 1908 constitution with all of its cluttering amendments. It should be simple and flexible, and should give to the legislature in particular broad responsibility and powers for the solution of state problems. The retention of earmarking does not meet these standards.

As a final point, the undersigned should emphasize that the committee proposals are not wholly free from progress. While we object to the retention of earmarking we believe that if it is to be retained, the language of the committee proposals represents a significant improvement over the language of the present constitution. Accordingly, if the amendments recommended by the undersigned are not adopted, we would strongly urge the support of the committee proposals.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think there is no one on the finance and taxation committee who doesn't believe that the constitutional tagging of major sources of state revenue for specific purposes is not the best way to run a government. Certainly that has been my thinking. When this question of tagging the sales tax came on in 1946, I campaigned against it from one end of the state to the other. I had charts and literature, made speeches everywhere I got a chance, but the people said I was wrong, that that was the way they wanted to do it, and they have reaffirmed their position in that connection as recently as 1960. I pointed out to you on Friday that it is not costing us anything as far as the big bite for the schools is concerned. The majority of our committee is not willing to tell the 8 million people, almost, who are our bosses that they are wrong in their method of financing.

Now, we know this is controversial. We know there will be a lot of amendments. I would ask one thing in this connection: there is a minority report which has just been passed to you having to do with those words about the 1946 base. The explanation of that, the comment upon it, is not yet available to you. I trust that we will deal with amendments to other parts, if you have amendments, and discussion of other points, if you have such discussion, pending the receipt of those comments. Delay that part of it as much as we can.

Now, for a detailed discussion of what we have tried to do in connection with this proposal, I call upon Mr. Staiger.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I attempted to point out a few minutes ago that each one of these sections, to me anyway, has to be analyzed separately to see what are the good points, if any, or the bad points, and that they cannot be taken as a whole one way or the other. Now, with this section, which is section 23 of the present article X of the constitution, I would like to analyze what the changes are, basically, that the committee has made. Really, it is divided into 2 types of so called earmarking.

You first have the ½ cent of the total of 4 cents as it now stands, ½ cent that goes back to cities, townships and villages. This is distributed, under the present constitution, on a population basis that is outlined in detail in the present constitution. The first change the committee made was as to the ½ cent, to just say that it shall go back to these local units of government on a population basis. I think this whole section is a good example of what you get into when you try to write tax legislation by amendment to the constitution. We have an awful lot of detail in this section. Even if you agree that we should have the earmarking, this detail has no place in the constitution. Just going through it, you see that we spell out what census shall be used in the old constitution, and even go into the basis on which you shall count the wards or persons in institutions, on a 50 per cent computation. All of this the committee believes can be left to the legislature, and this being so, we have provided that it simply shall be returned to the cities, villages and townships on a population basis as provided by law. That is the first change.

Now, the second change has to do with removal of the 1946 base. There is a minority report which you just received, filed by Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, on which the comments are not available as yet, so it is my understanding that we will pass over the question of the '46 base as far as their minority report is concerned until those comments are in. I don't know what the procedure is going to be on that. Mr. Austin, do you have something you want to say at this time on that?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Staiger, my understanding is that those comments will be delivered to you sometime during the session, and as soon as they are available, we will be ready to discuss our amendment.

MR. STAIGER: I will keep going, then, until somebody stops me. (laughter) The second change — that is, on the 1946 base for the ½ cent going back to local units of government — now, what the constitution did in effect was to freeze the sales tax. Not only the ½ cent must go to local units of government, but also that this must be done on the 1946 base. There is an attorney general's opinion, ruling that while the distribution must be made on the basis of the 1946 base, it would be possible for the legislature to exempt certain items that were included in that base, just so they didn't change the amount of revenue going back to the local units of government. In other words, they could exempt, say, food from the base, but in doing so, the net revenue could not be reduced going back to the local units of government. All he is saying is the distribution must be made on that basis, but the tax must not be levied. This is an attorney general's opinion. I have noticed recently there have been some questions raised as to that interpretation by the members of the legislature. That is the ½ cent for local units of government.

The second part of section 23 deals with schools. There again it says that 2 cents shall be returned for schools. Under that section, again they tie in the 1946 base. It shall be returned on the basis of the 1946 base. The committee removed that provision, and they also removed the language in which it states that this, as to schools, shall be deposited in a special school aid fund, said fund to be distinct from the state general fund. We removed that language. This in effect puts it on the same basis as your highway earmarking, which does not state and spell out that this has to be physically segregated in a special fund. It also puts it on the same basis as your ½ cent for local government, which does not contain that language. We removed that language so that while we are earmarking, we are not spelling out that it has to be physically segregated, at least by the constitution.

The third change that the committee made you will find in your report down in lines 14 through 19 on page 2. This dealt with the school employees' retirement systems, and stated that not less than 5 per cent nor more than 7½ per cent of the salaries of the school district employees participating shall be returned for retirement purposes. We removed that language, but kept in the provision that part of this 2 cents could be used for school employees' retirement purposes, as provided by law. This, again, was an attempt to take some of the disadvantages, we felt, out of the section; to give some flexibility to the legislature, but to allow them to use a part of the 2 cents for that purpose if they so wish.

The final change that we made was with regard to the 4 cent maximum sales tax that can be levied, and there you had a problem under the old language, which reads, "At no time shall the legislature levy a sales tax of more than 4 per cent". This has been interpreted so that in your different levels of sales, the amount collected on a sale could not be more than 4 cents, charged to the purchaser. It created some inequities, especially among small retail merchants who had a large volume of small sales, and in their mix, as they call it, if they had a small number of sales, in order to collect not more than 4 per cent on any one sale, they were finding that they were collecting less from the purchaser than they actually had to pay to the state. They were losing money on the sales tax. It was never the intent, I am sure, of the draftees of the sales tax language to cause this problem for small merchants, and this language has been changed so it is clear as it now reads—so that it is a maximum of 4 per cent on the gross taxable sales of tangible personal property. This corrects it so that the small sales merchant will be able to reimburse himself for the tax that he must pay to the state.

Those, basically, are the changes that we made.

I think in analyzing the whole question, particularly as to the 2 cents for schools, it should be pointed out that this section, while possibly not doing a great deal of harm—because the basic harm that it could do is if the legislature wanted to remove the sales tax and couldn't remove it—it wasn't too realistic that the state would ever be without a sales tax. On the other side, it doesn't do an awful lot of good, because for the last 4 years the legislature has had to appropriate a considerable amount over and above the 2 cents for schools, as Mr. Brake pointed out the other day. In the '59-'60 fiscal year this appropriation was over $21 million, and for '60-'61, it was over $36 million.

So there is no question on the other side that the 2 cents is ever going to be too much for schools. This would be one harm that could come from earmarking. The legislature has had to appropriate over this. The testimony was that never in the foreseeable future, certainly in the next 50 years, will the 2 cents of sales tax ever be enough for schools under the present population increase that we are having in the state, so for that purpose, it is only—as the school people say—something that they will always have as a floor to fall back on.

We were willing to leave it in at the 2 cents, but felt that in doing so, we should also take out some of the inflexibility on it which is caused by the 1946 base being tied in there so that they can't provide different exemptions, and also as far as the requirement where it was spelled out 5 to 7½ per cent shall be returned for retirement. We've left the earmarking as far as schools are concerned, but we have made it more flexible for the legislature. Are there any questions at this time?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to address a question to Mr. Staiger, if I may. Mr. Staiger, why do you provide in the sales tax that it will be allocated back to local school districts by law, and then you go to your report on the primary interest school fund and you say that should be allocated back by law? Why do you not merely give this 2 cents over to the primary school fund and have one allocation formula and statute?

The second question is why do you not say in this that the 2 cents shall be in full payment of the state's obligation for primary and secondary education?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Well, with regard to the first question, I think that there is some drafting that can be done, probably, by style and drafting on this section. This was an extremely close question in our committee. I think both sides felt that they were willing to leave it just as it was without raising the question again. Every time we raised it, we got a different vote on some of these issues, so that we didn't actually get into trying to rewrite the whole language of that section. We knocked out what we thought were some of the substantive things that needed to be changed, but didn't try to spend too much time on some of the other language. Now, what was the second question, Mr. Hanna? That you wanted to make this a limit, a maximum?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes.

MR. STAIGER: I think, clearly, if it doesn't give enough money for schools under the present system and it was going to be a maximum, it would be totally unsatisfactory to the schools. It would also put a great deal more inflexibility into the provision, which we are trying to get away from.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Staiger a question. In the first place, the language of the original constitutional provision is not too plain, although it's been interpreted to some degree by the supreme court. Did your committee give any consideration, in changing the provisions in line 20 and adding lines 21, 22 and 23 on page 2, to the question of whether this would in effect permit the legislature to levy a different type of sales tax in addition to this one?

MR. STAIGER: Our intent there was clearly to eliminate the inequities caused. I am not sure how, under these words, you can levy any—you mean a tax on the merchants rather than on the retail sales? You think that is the question that might come up under it?

MR. IVERSON: The present tax is a tax on retailers.

MR. STAIGER: Yes.

MR. IVERSON: And the present provision in the constitution says, "At no time shall the legislature levy a sales tax of more than 4 per cent." Now, so far as I am concerned, I am in favor of the new added language. I believe that some merchants should be granted some consideration where the sales tax presently costs them a considerable amount of money. But I am wondering whether or not in putting that language in and eliminating the previous line, you are not thereby opening the door to the levy of additional taxes on the consumer, additional sales taxes.

MR. STAIGER: I don't think so. It certainly wasn't our intent when we checked this language over, and I think that it is clear from our comments that we are only changing it to meet this question of the small, high volume, low sale type of retailer who was actually not able to collect, under the present limitations, as much as he had to pay to the state. That was the situation we were trying to get at, and I think it is clear from our comments that that is all we were intending to change.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to Mr. Staiger? I refer now to line 22, on page 2 of Committee Proposal 39, which recites that the sales tax is on retailers. I am wondering if the committee considered what effect that recital that it is on retailers might have, if any, on the right of the ultimate purchaser presently to get a deduction under federal income taxes. The general federal rule is that a tax is deductible only by the party who is primarily liable. Had you considered that, Mr. Staiger?

MR. STAIGER: No, we didn't go into that question. Certainly as implemented by the statute, though, it is clear that he has the right and shall collect this or reimburse himself from the customer. We didn't research the federal deduction question on that.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, perhaps Mr. Austin was going to cover this. I was simply going to say that Judge Leibrand's question is answered by the internal revenue code and the regulations issued thereunder, which makes it clear that the sales tax deduction is available even though the tax is imposed upon the retailer, so that this would make no change in the ability of a Michigan taxpayer, paying the sales tax as a consumer, to deduct it for federal income tax purposes. That is covered in the internal revenue code and the regulations thereunder.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to add some additional information on the same point, and that is that the present sales tax law as it was originally passed provides for a tax on the retailer, and we have merely conformed the constitution to the act as it was originally passed. Now, the act also gives the retailer the right to collect the tax from the consumer, and because the consumer is required to pay it, the federal government does allow it as a deduction in arriving at the federal income tax liability.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Staiger, your statement of a few moments ago as related to the 2 cents diverted to the schools indicated that, in the opinion of the committee, this would provide at least a floor or a minimum amount for educational purposes. Did the committee go into the proposition, if this be true, as to what percentage or proportion of the cost of educating a child should be borne by the local government and by the state? That is, should it be 40 per cent or 30 per cent or 75 per cent?

And if you did reach a percentage, then this necessarily might vary from year to year, and as distinguished from what we have for the highway fund, where at least the legislature has the opportunity to raise or lower the tax as the need may be required, you have frozen a 4 per cent levy. Is 2 per cent the determination of your committee as a minimum requirement that the state should put forth in educating the children? Or if it should be more, maybe we should raise it to 3 cents or maybe we should lower it to 1½ cents. I would like to know if the committee considered this in any detail.

MR. STAIGER: First, I should make it clear that it was just those that supported keeping the 2 cents in that felt that it was a floor; that is, primarily the education people who testified before us felt that while it did not give enough for education at the state level at this time, that it at least provided a floor that the legislature could not go below. We made no determination directly on what percentage the state should be providing for local schools or for schools, but I think indirectly by saying 2 per cent, we are saying that they shouldn't go below this amount.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Danhof, we didn't make any such determination and we shouldn't make any such determination. The sales tax provision is inflexible enough without our adding anything to it. The question that you raise is certainly a question for the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the committee proposal. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would at this time like to propose an amendment in the form of a minority report. I think that every delegate now has a copy of the minority proposal and also the comment. There is an error in the comment, which I will comment on later. Is it appropriate for the secretary to read the amendment at this time, or shall I proceed?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young,

Mr. Austin offers the following amendment — as a substitute, is it, Mr. Austin?

MR. AUSTIN: The way the drafting staff has drawn this, it is a little confusing. All that we are seeking to do is to reinsert the language "on the 1946 statutory base" in the 2 places where it was deleted, and I don't think it is necessary to read the whole proposal as it is written here, but merely to refer to the committee proposal and to indicate the changes that we are suggesting. So my personal view is we ought to refer back to the committee proposal and indicate where the changes are to be made. On page 2 of Committee Proposal 39, on line 3, the words "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" have been deleted. The minority report would reinsert those words.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: And on page 1 do you also reinsert?

MR. AUSTIN: On the very last line, after the word "property" would be inserted the same words, "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)". Those are the 2 changes.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin, then, on behalf of the minority, offers the following amendments:

1. Amend page 1, line 24, after "property" by inserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)".

2. Amend page 2, line 3, after "property" by reinserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to refer you now to the material which has just been passed out, the comment on the minority report. That is, on line 2, it refers to the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections. Actually it is the committee on finance and taxation.

And we submit these comments, and I think that it might be appropriate for me to read, since you have just got this material.

[Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the supporting reasons were read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 786.]

I think this is rather obvious. The purpose of that '46 base language was to make sure that the school districts and the local governments got, in effect, what they would have received under the '46 base even if items were subsequently removed from the sales tax base.

[Paragraph 3 to the table of the supporting reasons was read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 786.]

Now, this table has 2 columns of figures. The first column shows what would happen under the present constitution and under the amendment as proposed by the minority. The second column indicates what would happen under the committtee proposal.

Let's consider first the estimated sales tax revenue for the coming fiscal year or the present fiscal year, approximately $440 million. It would be the same in either case. The loss of revenue through exemption of food, and if we use the $90 million figure, we will get estimated revenue, assuming food and drugs exempt, of $350 million.

Now, what will be the distribution to the local units of government under the 2 proposals? Under the minority report or proposal, and also under the present constitution, it would be necessary to continue to distribute to these local units of government the same amount they would have received had nothing been removed from the sales tax base. In other words, the computation would still have to be made upon the 1946 base, or $55 million. Under the committee proposal, this would be reduced to $43,750,000.

Now we come to the schools. The amount to be distributed to the schools under the '46 base arrangement would be $220 million and under the new base, or under a base which would be reduced by the elimination of food and drugs from the base, it would be $175 million. As you can see, there is quite a difference.

Even if the state general fund recovered the lost sales tax revenue from another source—let's assume for a moment that in removing the food and drugs from the base, that the state would at the same time enact a new type of tax such as an income tax. The general fund would certainly recover the money through the new taxation, but there would still be no requirement that the same money be sent back to the schools and the local units of government.

[The remainder of the supporting reasons, following the table, was read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 787.]

Mr. Chairman, we move that the minority amendments be adopted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my purpose is simply to explain to you in a little more detail what the amendment does and my reasons for opposing it. I think that it should be quite clear that the purpose of the committee proposal is to give the legislature greater flexibility in solving Michigan's tax problems, greater flexibility than it can possibly enjoy if this constitution is to contain such legislative detail as the incorporation by reference of the entire sales tax as it existed in 1946.

Now, the minority report suggests in some manner that the citizens of this state can have their cake and eat it too. I think it should be clear that it is a practical impossibility to retain the language requiring the imposition of the tax on the 1946 base (not rate) and to expect that the legislature would under any circumstances exempt major segments of that base from the imposition of the tax.

I don't challenge the attorney general's opinion to which Mr. Austin referred. I simply put it to you that the legislature, confronted with the necessity for appropriating money based upon tax collection on the 1946 base, has no practical choice but to continue the 1946 base. How is the legislature going to determine how much money would have been produced by a sales tax on the 1946 base unless the tax is continued on that base? There isn't any way to determine, for example, what sales tax would have been produced by the imposition of a tax on food unless you continue the tax on food.

Therefore, I think it should be very clear to each of the delegates that if you vote for the Austin amendment, what you are doing is locking into the constitution a sales tax on food and a sales tax on drugs for the foreseeable future. There is simply no way in which you can have your cake and eat it too. If you want to give the legislature the opportunity to determine on what items the sales tax should be imposed, then you will support the committee. If you want to freeze into the constitution the present items subject to the sales tax — and that includes food and drugs — you will vote for the minority report.

I think the legislature ought to have the flexibility to remove food from the tax base if it chooses to do so in the future. For that reason, I strongly urge that you vote no on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen, may the Chair inquire, just clarifying his own understanding: when you refer to the statutory base, are you referring to the kinds of things on which it is levied, or are you referring to an amount which was the amount of sales tax collected in 1946? I am not clear on that. Perhaps others are not.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin may wish to elaborate on this, but it is the opinion, I believe, of the committee that the words "statutory base" refer to the subjects of taxation: food, drugs, automobiles, any other tangible personal property sold at retail on which the tax is levied and computed.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I think he has made it rather clear. It is the subjects of taxation. When we refer to "base" that is what is meant.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I see. The question is on the minority —

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, may I respond to one or two comments made by Mr. Van Dusen?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Van Dusen has indicated that food and drugs are now locked into the base. I don't believe that is the case, and I am sure that you will agree with me that the legislature now has the authority to remove any item from the base; not only food and drugs but it can make other exemptions from the present base.

What would happen, of course, is that if these items were removed from the base, the legislature would have to find the moneys to be distributed to the schools and local governments from another source. But this provision does not lock anything into the sales tax base.

And one other point that should be made is: remember that this is the way the people put it into the constitution. This is the way they voted it. They voted for that 1946 base because they wanted it as a minimum base.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, thank you, Mr. Austin, for clarifying that point with respect to so called locking in the food and drug tax. I certainly do not believe that this is the case as stated by Mr. Van Dusen.

I think that the basic issue before the committee is whether we want to earmark funds for schools or not. It is just that. Now, there are many here who believe that this type of earmarking should not be continued, and if so, they will gladly go along voting against the minority amendment, because it does eliminate a substantial portion of the present amount of sales tax for schools and for distribution to school districts.

Now, there is no question that if you don't want earmarking, and if you want more flexibility within the legislature, then let's go all the way and eliminate this provision entirely. Let's not go half way. And I submit that the committee report without the 1946 statutory base just goes half way toward the elimination of earmarking of funds for schools and for the local districts.

I believe that is the issue. You either want to continue your dedicated funds for schools or you don't. I don't think we should go half way and again mislead the people.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, either Mr. Austin and Mr. Binkowski missed the point of Mr. Van Dusen's argument or else I did. As I understood it, Mr. Van Dusen was not arguing that legally food and drugs, for instance, could not be taken out from under the sales tax. What he said, as I understood him, was that the economic pressure, the need for money would make it very certain that they would not be reducing the base of the sales tax. So frequently we worry ourselves about something that possibly could happen but just never will.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I would only add to what Mr. Brake has just said that not only the economic pressure but the administrative complexity of trying to calculate an artificial base upon which no tax is imposed make it a practical impossibility that if this amendment is adopted, food will ever be exempted from the sales tax.

Legally, Mr. Austin and Mr. Binkowski are quite right. Practically, they are quite wrong.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Howes.

MR. HOWES: I rise to oppose this amendment. If the words "1946 statutory base" were not removed from this section, the state would not, if enough of the articles now under the sales tax were removed, be able to collect enough money on a 4 cent sales tax to pay the amount required to be paid to the schools alone.

The words "1946 statutory base" mean that all articles under the sales tax at that time shall be used in considering the 2 cents to be paid to the schools. If we leave these words in, and if what Governor Swainson is asking for at the present time were to come to pass — that is, that food and some other items were removed from the sales tax — the state would be paying to the schools a much larger portion of the money collected under the 4 cent sales tax than it is at the present time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the Austin amendment which is on the secretary's desk.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley, on behalf of the committee on education, offers the following amendments to the amendments:

1. Amend page 2, line 3, after "property" by inserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)".

2. Amend page 2, line 4, after "shall be" by inserting "deposited in a special school aid fund and be".

3. Amend page 2, line 7, after "law.", by inserting "Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, the amendments which I offer also include the second portion of the Austin amendment, and that is to reinsert the words "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" which is why I offered it as an amendment to his amendment rather than as a separate amendment. We do not refer in this particular amendment to the question of "the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" insofar as the ½ cent on the sales tax going to local government is concerned.

Mr. Chairman, I should explain that after Committee Proposal 39 was referred by the committee on finance and taxation to the committee on education, it was the vote within the education committee — a vote of 16 to 1 — that the language, as presently in the constitution, of the first paragraph on page 2 of the committee proposal should be retained intact. The amendment which I have offered on behalf of the committee on education would reinsert the deletions in that particular paragraph which have been made by the committee on finance and taxation.

I might add that the reason, within the committee on education, for reinserting the references to the special school aid fund was the strong belief of the overwhelming majority of the committee on education that that language should be retained in the constitution. And I might add that nearly 2 months ago, when we submitted exclusion reports on sections 11, 12 and 13 of the education article — these reports, I believe, were, incidentally, referred to the committee on finance and taxation — we suggested at that time that all moneys earmarked for schools in the constitution which would be continued in the new constitution should be placed in a special school fund. Therefore, I feel that the committee on education is being consistent in recommending that references to this special school aid fund be replaced.

Other than that we do support the minority report insofar as the replacement of "the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" is concerned. I am speaking for myself, and I would assume the majority of the members of the committee on education likewise subscribe wholeheartedly to the supporting reasons advanced by the minority in this connection.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Let me point out again, just so we have this in its proper perspective, that what we are talking about is 2 cents for schools which does not now and never will in the future be, under the testimony we had, enough money for schools. We are talking about a minimum which is not a satisfactory minimum. From that standpoint, right now the schools had to rely on the legislature to the amount of about $36 million for the '60-'61 budget. They had to. They say that the 2 cent school tax does not now and never will in the future again give enough money for schools.

I think it is safe to assume in this state that we are heading for a complete tax revision and it is going to be rather wide in scope. To do that, the committee felt that the least we could do is to clear away some of the roadblocks in the way of the legislature in this area so that they could have a legitimate tax revision.

Schools now rely on the legislature. By putting this language back in, particularly as to the '46 base, you are just freezing something in there that is not now giving enough money for schools. Therefore, we oppose the Austin amendment.

With regard to the amendment by Mr. Bentley of setting it aside in a separate and distinct fund, the highway fund does not have this. They have been able to satisfactorily earmark their money. The local government money does not have this special provision to segregate it physically into a separate fund, and there is no reason to put this in as far as the schools are concerned, as far as the majority of the committee is concerned.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Austin a question. How would it be possible to administratively determine what the '46 base would be if, in fact, food and drugs and perhaps other items are eliminated from the sales tax? How do you conceive it possible to know what it would be with those back in if there is no report being made on them?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Woolfenden, it is my feeling that this would be done by statistical analysis. Just as it is possible now to determine how much revenue we lost through removal of food and drugs from the base, it would be possible then to determine what the total tax revenue would be with those items retained in the base.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: But, Mr. Austin, it is easy to make a determination of how much will be lost if they are removed because they are presently being reported, but once removed, then there is no sales tax report covering them, and it would be just conjecture as to what it amounted to, would it not?

MR. AUSTIN: I am not disputing your statement as to conjecture. It would be what we would consider to be a statistical determination. Now, whether it is conjecture or whether it is the best available information, I am not sure, but remember that this is for determination of how much is to be distributed under the sales tax amendment; that is, how much is to be distributed to the local governments. It does not affect the total revenue in any way, only the amount that is actually being distributed to the local units of government, and if the amount is not accurately determined, I don't believe any great harm would be done.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Who would make the determination?

MR. AUSTIN: I would assume that either the legislature would have that determination made or the department of administration. As it is now, the state controller makes these estimates from time to time.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest that the amendment made by Mr. Bentley be considered separately from the amendment of the minority, for the simple reason that it is different subject matter and I am not too sure that it would be appropriate to vote on both of these at the same time. This is not to say that I have any serious objection to his amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair will rule the question is first on the minority amendment and then on the Bentley amendment in order to avoid confusion.

Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I was a little confused, Mr. Chairman. I wondered if Mr. Bentley meant to amend the original committee report or the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I think he offered his amendment because the education committee had in mind that it wanted to include the '46 statutory base in the same way that the minority amendment did, but I wonder, Mr. Bentley, if for any reason your amendment can't be offered satisfactorily after the determination of this minority amendment.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, the only reason for my offering it as an amendment to the amendment by Mr. Austin was that the first part of our amendment does cover the same portion as the second portion of the Austin amendment; that is, the restoration of the 1946 statutory base, referring to the sales tax diversion for the schools. We do not mention the question of the 1946 statutory base as far as local government is concerned.

Insofar as I personally am concerned, the Chair's ruling is perfectly satisfactory. We can dispose of the Austin amendment. But since we did have the overlapping in this one portion, I felt that it might be appropriate to offer it as an amendment to his amendment. If the Chair rules that the vote will come first on his amendment, that is perfectly satisfactory to me.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise to support the minority report here. As a member of the committee on education, we have been hearing from many educators for several months as to what they would like to see in the constitution with regard to a minimum basis of support for the education of the state. I heard reference a little over an hour ago when dealing with the previous proposal, Committee Proposal 38, that we run into a stone wall when we attempt to tackle highways. Well, I think when we attempt to weaken the base of support for education, we run into a human wall of many, many people throughout the state who are vitally and deeply concerned with guaranteeing a minimum level of support.

Now, I agree with Mr. Staiger that the 2 cents doesn't provide that, but at least, as far as the educators are concerned, it provides a floor, a floor that isn't a sinking floor, and I refer to this majority proposal as a quicksand, because what you are doing is making it possible for the base to be changed, and therefore you are eating away at least at this minimum floor.

As a member of the committee on education, I think the sense of the committee was that we should do as little as we could to tamper with this very vital question of support for education, and so I wish to urge the members of the committee here to support the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Leslie Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: Mr. Chairman, I want to rise in support of the Bentley amendment. Due to the fact you have ruled otherwise at the present time, I would refrain from remarks.

But I did feel while I sat here, if it was in order, I would like to make a motion to rise and let's have a bite to eat at this time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion is that the committee do now rise. I wonder, Mr. Richards, if we could ask the chairman of the committee for his comment.

MR. BRAKE: I was hoping, Mr. Chairman, that we could vote on this one minority report and then I had intended to make the motion that Mr. Richards has now made.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: I will withdraw then on the strength of that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Thank you, Mr. Richards.

Mr. Nord, did you want to be heard on the minority amendments?

MR. NORD: I do, Mr. Chairman, but I believe Mr. Bill Hanna is before me, if I am not mistaken. I would like to speak as soon as he is finished, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a couple of questions to Mr. Austin concerning his amendments. Mr. Austin, in a general overhaul of the financial taxation picture of Michigan, if the general overhaul provided for a local income or payroll tax or a local income or payroll tax on a county level for the support of primary and secondary education, would your amendments not require the legislature to appropriate money equal to the sales tax base, and require an overall state income tax rather than local option to county school districts as such, or cities and townships in the line of a payroll tax?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure that I know exactly how the passing or the enactment of local supplements would affect what we are proposing here. What we are proposing here is exactly what is in the constitution now, and if local units of government or school districts are in need of additional revenue which would be supplied through local supplements, then I don't see how that should affect the amount to be distributed to them under the sales tax diversion amendment.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Let me be specific, Mr. Austin. Supposing that the legislature removed from the sales tax base food and drugs, and recognizing that cities, townships and villages would thereby lose revenues, they would in the same act provide that cities, townships and villages could levy a payroll tax to make up the shortage by the exemption of food and drugs from the sales tax. Your amendments would require that the legislature continue to appropriate that lost revenue, would they not?

MR. AUSTIN: That is correct. The legislature would still be required to remit to local units of government as well as to the school districts 2 cents of the sales tax on the '46 base.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Would your amendments not restrict a general overhaul of the tax structure of Michigan by the legislature because of the compulsory appropriation factor that you have here?

MR. AUSTIN: This is what I don't see.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I feel somewhat akin to the feeling that has been expressed by nonlawyers when they hear lawyers talk. Now we are hearing finance and taxation people, and I am quite puzzled myself. We have heard quite a few contradictory remarks from various people. In fact, we have heard remarks on the same side of the question which contradict each other, and I believe that we ought to get some clarification of that. We have had one group of remarks from people which are to the effect, on the one side, that if we were to adopt the minority report, the legislature, in case foods and drugs were exempted from the base, would not have enough money to provide the funds that are required to provide for schools, and therefore presumably they would not provide them. They would not provide them. That was one argument that was made, and that was summarized by saying you cannot have your cake and eat it. The legislature wouldn't provide it because they wouldn't have it. That was Mr. Van Dusen's point. As a practical matter they would not have it. That means that the schools would lose.

We also heard a remark from another gentleman — I have forgotten who it was — which said, in support of the same general conclusion, that the reverse would be true; that there is no need to worry; that the schools will certainly have enough money because the money for the schools doesn't come out of the earmarked funds anyway; it comes out of the appropriation of the legislature. And they always have done it in the past; therefore, they will do it in the future.

Both of those arguments, which run exactly contrary to each other, were in support of the proposition that, as a practical matter, you cannot leave this 1946 base in the constitution, one, because the legislature will not provide money for schools; and the other one because it would provide money for schools. I submit that at least one of those two must be wrong, and quite possibly both.

The other argument that was made in opposition to the minority report, which also seems to me to be a rather peculiar argument, is this: that, as a practical matter, there is just no way you could do this; that if you wanted to leave the 1946 base in there, you couldn't do it. You might try, but you couldn't succeed in doing it. Now, that is one of those arguments that my children are always making to me. "I wish I could do it, daddy, but I can't." Somehow or other, when you don't wish to do something, it seems you cannot do it.

Well, what was suggested by Mr. Van Dusen was this: he says, "I don't know how we would know how much money would have come in from the tax on the sale of food and drugs, because we are not taxing it. Therefore, we don't know. Therefore, we are stuck." Not being a finance and taxation expert, I don't feel too stuck. For example, the legislature is not powerless to solve this problem. If the legislature wanted to exempt food and drugs or any other items, it could do so in this way, just as one example: it could require that those people that sell food and drugs report the amount of the sales of food and drugs. It could do that if it wished to. Instead of paying the tax on the food and drugs, it could report that. There are a great many statistical surveys always being made in the state, and statistical surveys could be made on this basis. The legislature could approach it that way. If you know the amount of sales, you multiply by the percentage of the sales tax and you know what the tax would have been. If the legislature doesn't feel like doing that, it could provide other methods. It isn't necessary for us to present all of the solution. It could provide in the law when it exempts food and drugs a statistical measure to determine what the tax presumably would have been. Now, if it does that in a fair way, attempting to meet the requirement of the constitution, it will not be an unconstitutional statute and the statute will be effective and the tax base will be secure.

Therefore, let's not get mixed up on the theory that this thing simply cannot be done. Whether it is desirable to be done is one thing. But whether it can be done is an entirely different thing. It certainly can be done.

As to whether it is desirable to retain the 1946 base, my opinion is that it is desirable. This provision is a provision which would retain the security of earmarked funds for schools. My feeling is that the people in the schools and the parents of children insist on having the retention in its present form of the school fund earmarking. Now, if we want to do that, we can do so. We don't need to make any changes. I think that the minority report is sound and should be accepted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The motion is that the committee now rise. All those in favor signify by saying aye. Opposed? The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order. Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain matters on which the secretary will now give a report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 38, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of the gas and weight taxes for highway purposes covering the subject matter of article X, section 22 of the 1908 constitution; reports this proposal back with an amendment to change the designation of the public utilities commission to the public service commission; recommending that the amendment be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended do pass.

[The following is the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 20, after "public" by striking out "utilities" and inserting "service".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Those in favor will please say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

Committee Proposal 38, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 38 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. All taxes imposed directly or indirectly upon gasoline and like fuels sold or used to propel motor vehicles upon the highways of this state, and on all motor vehicles registered in this state, shall, after the payment of the necessary expenses of collection thereof, be used exclusively for highway purposes, as defined by law, including the payment of public debts incurred therefor, and shall not be diverted nor appropriated to any other purpose: Provided, The legislature may provide by law a method of licensing, registering, and transferring motor vehicles and their certificates of title, and licensing and regulating motor vehicle dealers and operators; and may prescribe charges sufficient to pay for the enforcement thereof. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the general sales tax, the use tax, the fees and taxes collected under the auto theft and operators' and chauffeurs' license laws which are used for regulatory purposes; the application fees and mileage fees appropriated to the Michigan public service commission by law; the franchise or privilege fees payable generally by corporations organized for profit; nor to ad valorem taxes payable generally by manufacturers, refiners, importers, storage companies, and wholesale distributors on gasoline and like fuels held in stock or bond, and by manufacturers and dealers on motor vehicles in stock or bond.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, I move that the convention now recess until 8:00 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Dr. Hannah. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails; we are recessed until 8:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 6:00 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I would like to rise to a point of special privilege. In reading the Detroit News Saturday I noted that Delegate Van Dusen made a remark from which the newspaper reporter seemed to infer that the Democrats were dragging their heels. This, I believe, was due to the fact we had some discussion as to whether this convention should start at 4:00 o'clock or 6:00 o'clock on Monday evenings. Now, as I understood it when I went to school, from 4:00 to 6:00 and then from 8:00 to about 10:00, or if you wish to make it to 12:00, would be 4 or 6 hours. If we started at 6:00 and went on until 10:00 or 12:00, it would still be 4 or 6 hours. Now, where we were dragging our heels I don't know, or where we might be dragging our heels I don't know, and I believe that I am speaking for the Democratic party as a whole because it was the Democratic party and the Democratic delegates whom Mr. Van Dusen was supposed to have claimed were dragging their heels. Well, anyway, the 6:00 o'clock amendment finally lost and the 4:00 o'clock amendment went through, and I wondered just who the people were who were dragging their heels, because as I looked at this board over here those people who seemed to change from 6:00 o'clock to 4:00 o'clock were not so much Democrats as Republicans, because I happened to notice names such as Mr. DeVries, Mr. Romney, Mr. Rood, Mr. Rush and several others.

And I would just like to say this, Mr. President: that when anybody gets to making inferences, they better stop and think a little bit, because we can come back, and we won't make inferences; we'll tell the truth. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: Mr. President, I would just like to correct the gentleman's statement. I did not vote for 6:00 o'clock; I voted for 4:00 o'clock.

MR. MADAR: That's right. You did vote for 4:00 o'clock, but you weren't here until after 4:00. You were late again, Mr. Romney. (laughter)

MR. ROMNEY: I didn't quite get your point. My plane was late today and I got here as fast as I could. I was a few minutes late.

MR. MADAR: I was only driving an automobile, Mr. Romney. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move that the convention now resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of matters on general orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: When the committee rose this afternoon, there was under consideration Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution. Immediately pending were the 2 amendments offered by reason of the minority report, which 2 amendments were as follows:

[The amendments were again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 790.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair will say that at the time we rose, he had the following names listed: Mr. Van Dusen, Mr. Stafseth, Mr. Downs, Mr. Goebel and Mr. Seyferth. We will proceed in that order, with any others who may wish to speak. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think the only point I felt had not been made here that I wished to add was simply that the 1946 base is a limitation on the increase in items which might be subject to the sales tax returned to schools, as well as a limitation on decrease. All of the conversation has been to the effect that if you eliminate this language, the legislature might reduce the base. I think it's important to recognize that if you eliminate the language, the legislature might increase the base, so that this is a 2 edged sword.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman, there are a couple of points I would like to make. One is that actually I think the purpose of taking out the 1946 base — at least this is the thought of the committee, and I support the committee proposal — is to keep the thing flexible and not make it complicated. In other words, you make the computations very complicated, and you make it so that actually you encourage the legislature not to take off some items such as food and drugs, because if they did take it off, the schools and the cities and the municipalities would still get the same money, but the money that goes to the general fund would be reduced. So by leaving it in, it would make less money for the general government and then it would handicap the legislature.

The other thing, Mr. Faxon in his comments was concerned about the committee's attitude on the 2 cent diversion for schools. The committee was very much in favor of the 2 cents for schools. It is just that they wanted to take out these extra legislative or statutory provisions that are within the constitutional amendment.

And thirdly, actually under the present gas and weight tax constitutional provision, the legislature tomorrow, if it saw fit — I don't think it would — could reduce the gas and weight tax to nothing. It could cut it out completely. So that in the gas and weight tax diversion, it has the right to raise it; it has the right to lower it. All we are doing is attempting to make it easier for the legislature to write a tax reform and not handicap it with statutory matter in a constitutional provision.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, in discussing the matter of financing our schools and cities, I am sure it will be very clear I am not speaking as a tax expert, but rather from the viewpoint of the concern of keeping a minimum standard or base of income into our cities and schools, and I therefore rise in favor of Mr. Austin's amendments, because I think this will provide — while it may not be adequate funds — a certain minimum base from which we can do our financing.

I am very concerned that if we remove these standards, then we may pit each city against the other, not for satisfactory services but to get lower services. I think this is particularly a problem in the hard core areas of our large cities. I am speaking not only of Detroit but our other industrial areas where we find the movements to the suburbs. While these problems cannot all be solved in the constitution, I, for one, feel it will be much more difficult to solve them if we take the presently assured revenues from our industrial areas and not be sure how to replace them. I think this provision will in fact facilitate tax reform rather than impede it, because I believe while most of us feel there should be major fiscal reform, that to get it done satisfactorily we need still to guarantee these minimums to the schools and cities, and this provision of the Austin amendments, as I understand it, will preserve those minimum sources of income and revenue, but still permit flexibility in shifting the sources of our tax revenue. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I have the feeling that perhaps we may decide this issue on the basis of fear of reduction of the number of items that will be subject to this base, and I submit to you that the record shows that in the 15 years that this amendment has been in force, the legislature has not done anything to remove from the base any subject that was taxable in 1946, so there are 15 years gone by where the legislature has not taken out of this legislation any items subject to the sales tax.

And further than that, while we have been discussing here — those that favor the minority report — the fact that there is a possibility that some items may be removed from the '46 base, I submit to you that there has been as much talk, if not more, on the matter of including other items that are not subject to the '46 base in this proposal, such as perhaps laundry, dry cleaning, services of doctors, lawyers and so on and so forth. I also think history indicates that when one tax is levied, it is pretty hard to get it off the books, that it is increased rather than decreased.

And I think, further, that the fact that the state legislature for the last 4 years, I believe, has contributed an amount of money over and above the 2 cents that goes to the school aid fund—as a matter of fact, last year I think a matter of around $40 million, I'm careless with my figures—it seems to me that any fear that the legislature will not recognize its responsibilities to schools has been pretty well dissipated, because it has been demonstrated over this period of time that the 1946 base has not been adequate to take care of the school needs as determined by the legislature itself.

Therefore, I see little chance myself that any substantial change will be made by the legislature, and I believe that any possible disadvantage, as little as it might be, certainly does not offset the possibility that the legislature shall have more flexibility and, I believe, an opportunity to overhaul our tax system. So I speak, as a member of the committee on finance and taxation, against the Austin amendments and for the committee proposal. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, we are concerned about maintaining a minimum base, as Mr. Downs has pointed out and I think he pointed it out very well. Now, as to the calculated risk on possible increases to the base, I should remind the delegates that the legislature has added items to the base since 1946, but it has very scrupulously added these to the use tax base. Instead of adding them to the sales tax, where the money would be distributed in the manner prescribed by section 23 of the constitution, these additions have been added as use tax base items, with the result that this additional money has been going into the general fund.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, much has been said on the subject, and I will hold my remarks to the minimum. First of all, I rise to speak against the Austin amendments and in favor of the committee proposal. It seems that it boils down to a very simple Q.E.D. that we are providing in the committee proposal a freedom of action for the legislature, in the years to come, to fit the requirements of the particular interested units of government under the sales tax at the moment into the then responsible fiscal management of our state government, and if we bind them in a constitutional provision, the obvious is certainly upon us. And I again reiterate the support of the committee proposal and speak against the Austin amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin has literally made the argument that I wanted to make against the adoption of the minority amendment. He mentioned that any change in the tax base has been made by the use of the use tax, and if you read this language, you are clearly flying in the face of the governor's proposed tax reform, any tax reform advocated by any civic organization that would remove food and drugs from the sales tax, because this says that you freeze the base as it existed in the statute of 1946. The item can neither be changed, added to nor detracted from. This is why the legislature has used the vehicle of the use tax to enlarge those items that are subject to the sales tax.

And if we are to have an income tax in addition to a sales tax, in all fairness to the people who are on limited incomes, who have a limited amount of resources saved and available to sell, then it certainly behooves us not to freeze into this tax structure the taxation of food and drugs, as would be done under the minority amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Page.

MR. PAGE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise in support of the Austin amendments, and I wouldn't attempt to duplicate the eloquent oratory that has taken place in the past hour or hour and a quarter. I think it is rather interesting, however, to look back and see what the popular support over the years has been for this language maintaining the 1946 base (not rate). The original sales tax diversion in which the language first appeared was adopted by a vote of 864,000 to 584,000. A year or two later the legislature decided that the people didn't know what they had adopted, so by joint resolution they proposed a repeal of the sales tax diversion which in 1948 drew 343,000 yes votes and 1,446,000 no votes. And then again in 1954 when the 2 cents was set up, the yes vote on the joint resolution proposal was 1,182,000 to 443,000. I think the voters of this state have demonstrated that they like the language that was in the 1946 sales tax diversion amendment and they have reiterated it and kept it over the years.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, reference has been made to the fact that the people of Michigan have voted on this matter and have expressed themselves rather forcibly. As a member of the committee on education, we had a large number of people in, and no one who appeared before the committee, as I recall, had anything to say about eliminating any reference to or eliminating this diversion of the tax or tampering with it in any way. The testimony was all in favor of retention.

Because all the arguments have been in favor and because I support the Austin amendments, I presume I could save some time as this man did. He had a copy of the Lord's Prayer put up on the wall, so at night all he had to do was point to it and say, "Lord, those are my sentiments," and get in bed. (laughter)

Now, when a person speaks, he generally adds up to the fact he is either going to say no or yes. That is about it. So I say yes.

But before I sit down, I want to read you some statements. This is a statement from the central Michigan school administrators' research association which is made up of representatives of school systems, Mt. Pleasant north to the straits.

> Earmarking of revenues for public education should be continued at not less than the present total levels of returns. The manner of distribution of such revenues to the schools should be on a membership basis defined by the legislature.

Second, a telegram, January 10—not today—from the Michigan association of school administrators, which is an association made up of all administrators and school superintendents in the state of Michigan:

> MASA council in convention at Grand Rapids this date unanimously approved this resolution. MASA is clearly and firmly in favor of the continuance of constitutionally earmarked funds for public school education. Further, MASA is unalterably opposed to any attempt to tamper with these dedicated funds.

Now I quote from a bulletin of the Michigan educational association:

> The board of directors adopted a resolution reaffirming their support for earmarked funds for education sufficient to the degree that the state educational programs will in no way be impaired beneath its present level and urge and encourage adequate earmarking of funds to improve greatly the existing program.

Someone may say that this merely supports the earmarking of funds; had nothing to do with the 1946 base. A while ago I called a person who was head of a professional organization, and he assured me it is essential that the 1946 base be retained.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I should probably quit while I am ahead, but there is one point that I should clear up. Mr. Hanna made the point that the 1946 base could not be reduced by the legislature. I think the point was made much earlier that the legislature does have the right to remove items from the base. That language in the constitution refers only to the distribution that is to be made, and does not refer to the tax base.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I would just like to point out on this argument we have that the people have put this in, that I think it is a matter of reviewing all of the different issues and language in this amendment as adopted, and to say that the people were for one alone, or that they could single out one and be opposed to that before another, is just impossible. It was a package that was submitted to the people. This is the only chance and the first chance that any group has had to review each item independently and have an opportunity to take out those things that are not needed. Before, when the people voted on it, it was either yes or no. You are in favor of support for schools or you are against it is about what the amendment was as a package. Now we have a chance to clean up some of this language, keep the good points, remove the parts that we think are unduly restrictive on the legislature.

This is exactly what the committee has attempted to do, and I urge your support of the committee proposal and am against the Austin amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I was interested in what Mr. Austin just got through saying. As I understood him, he said that he understood that the 1946 base had to do only with the distribution of money that went to the support of the schools and the local units of government, and it did not prohibit the legislature from reducing the base. Now, I would just like to know how in the world that would work. If, for instance, the legislature should take the sales tax off of food, then how are you going to measure the tax which goes to the schools? You see, if you take the tax off, how are you going to estimate how much money would come in when you don't have a tax on the item? I think the argument is really not very practical. I think that the situation is that actually the legislature is without power to remove anything out of that 1946 base, and I oppose the Austin amendments on that ground.

I think we are acting in a very shortsighted manner if we proceed to write this kind of statutory restrictive material into a constitution. If we are of a mind to expect the legislature to meet the fiscal problems of this state, we have to give the legislature flexibility, and you aren't going to give the legislature flexibility in this particular field if you say that whatever was taxed in 1946 has to be continued to be taxed no matter what happens. I still can't follow Mr. Austin when he says, "Well, the legislature could take something out of that base, because we can still take it out and then you would still make the distribution just as though the tax had not been removed"—because I don't see how in the world you can measuer a tax that isn't there.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I have been puzzled by a lot of this argument. I am accustomed to flexibility of lawyers' viewpoints, but not to this much flexibility in laymen's viewpoints. We have heard one person after another who has always advocated the taking of the sales tax off foods now scared to death for fear the schools are going to lose some money because the sales tax will be taken off from food. I can't reconcile the 2 viewpoints.

I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if we haven't said everything that can be said on these particular amendments. I am sure there are a dozen more in connection with this proposal. I wonder if we can't vote pretty soon.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski, I call on you next.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I share Mr. Brake's viewpoint regarding this flexibility, and if those people are urging flexibility in the area of the legislature, I wonder why we don't just eliminate all earmarking, number one. But also I am wondering what these people are going to say when we come up for discussion on the prohibition of a graduated income tax. I wonder if in that area they will want to leave the hands of the legislature untied and provide for all of this flexibility.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Hutchinson, I would like to quote from the Michigan Tax Study Staff Papers, 1958, which I think most of the delegates are familiar with. I am reading from page 426:

> Article X, section 23, contains provisions requiring that a certain amount "of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" shall be returned to local governmental units (½ cent) and school districts (2 cents). The meaning of the phrase "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)" is most obscure. For instance, does it prevent the legislature from altering the 1946 base by exempting sales of food from the sales tax? In 1956 the attorney general tendered the opinion that an attempt to carve out such an exemption would be constitutional.

and it refers to opinion 2470, opinions of the Michigan attorney general.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I shall be very brief. I am speaking in favor of the minority report. First of all, I wish to state that I support what Delegate Bentley had to say about the vote of 16 to 1. It is reminiscent of the Bryan days, but nevertheless, that was the vote that was taken in the education committee to retain the present language in the constitution. Secondly, the witnesses that appeared before our committee were, all of them, unanimous in the retention of the present language, so far as I know and as far as I can remember. The people have voted 3 times on this, and once a very definite vote to repeal, making a total of 4 times this matter has been voted upon, and on each occasion the language which we are now discussing was contained in the provisions voted upon.

If we are to do away with all earmarking, that is one thing. But if we are only going to do away with the earmarking here or with a provision which I believe is the sustaining base of the earmarking for schools and municipalities, then I think it would be highly discriminatory. I believe that the submission of this article without a base makes possible a withdrawal of base components without adequate substitution.

Then I agree also with the point of view that has been expressed here that we will be well advised to retain the language which is in this minority report if we are to follow the direction of the people, particularly when it comes to the adoption of whatever document we submit to them as a result of this convention. Again I wish to reiterate I support the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. Chairman, I was just sitting here thinking about an income tax in the state of Michigan, with a deductible millage formula to take care of the schools and another pattern to take care of the townships and local government, mixed with the sales tax diversion amendment and a few others, reminded of the votes of the people over the years and of one last fall calling for a state constitutional convention. Are we here to write a new document or to put back all the old language? I wonder where all these people are who have been hollering for tax reform. I hope they are with us. I endorse the committee report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to ask Mr. Austin 2 questions. Mr. Austin, would you say that the legislature under the present constitutional provision could repeal the sales tax law?

MR. AUSTIN: I believe the legislature could repeal the sales tax law, because the present constitution merely sets a maximum on the rate. The legislature could levy up to 4 per cent, but any amount under that, including zero.

MR. IVERSON: Then assuming that is so, if it seemed desirable for a tax renovation or whatever you want to call it, wouldn't your amendment in effect amount to a constitutional appropriation if the legislature repealed the sales tax law and decided to go on with something else?

MR. AUSTIN: I think that is correct.

MR. IVERSON: All right. One more question: I believe you talked about the question of exempting food and drugs, and I assume that your amendments are sort of contingent upon some such proposal being introduced in the legislature, if not here. Are you familiar with an attorney general's opinion of about 1936 which held that they could not exempt food and drugs as such?

MR. AUSTIN: No, I am not familiar with such an opinion.

MR. IVERSON: Well, there is such an opinion, and it held that if the legislature wanted to exempt specified items of food and drugs, they could do so, but so long as you have a uniform method of taxation provided in the constitution, it is utterly impossible to exempt food and drugs as such.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Iverson, my understanding is that the legislature can remove any items from the base, as the law is now set up on the books. It is possible for the legislature to exempt materials used in industrial processing and in agricultural processing. It does not exempt purchases made by manufacturers or by farmers that are used by these processors in other operations. Now, there is no reason why at some later date, in order to improve the industrial climate of Michigan, that we might decide that all sales to industrial manufacturers might be exempt, just as we are concerned about possibly exempting personal property used by industrial manufacturers. If any of these items are removed from the base, they will tend to reduce the amount distributed to schools and to local units of government.

MR. IVERSON: Well, may I conclude then, Mr. Chairman, by saying that apparently Mr. Austin is not familiar with what I believe is the last opinion on this matter from the attorney general, and in view of the fact that the amendments submitted by the minority would in effect constitute a constitutional appropriation if the legislature decided to rearrange our tax structure, then I feel that we should oppose these amendments and support the committee report.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Iverson, I don't think there is any question that the people intended that this should be a minimum appropriation for the support of schools and for the support of local units of government. I think that all that was intended, and that the issue before us now is whether we shall maintain this minimum base of state support, and I believe that is what the people intended, and I think we ought to vote for these amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to rise in opposition to the Austin amendments. I feel that the people are looking for financial reform. They voted last year for a 1 cent increase in sales tax. They didn't ask for this to be earmarked. People are not looking for additional funds to be earmarked.

The legislature in the last 5 years has given to the schools a greater sum than was, say, due them—if you wish to use this word—by constitutional amendment. The legislature is taking on its responsibility in the supporting of schools. In my opinion we don't need any earmarking.

But believe me, they should have the right to select a broad based tax that they may wish to impose, let's say, on us, and part of the sales tax may not be part of their picture 10 years from now or even next year, and if we insist upon putting in such things as we are calling for in this minority report, the legislature's hands are going to be tied in determining what taxes are going to support our government, both state and local, and the schools in the long run for your children and mine will suffer, and suffer to the end, because the legislature has not taken on the responsibility to give them the tax reform that they should have. I would strongly oppose the minority amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, there has been a red herring, I think, dragged across our path here. Several people have made mention of the fact that in the 4 or 5 years just past the legislature has in fact appropriated more money than the minimum prescribed by the earmarking clause. I would like to ask these people 2 questions: number one, would the legislature have appropriated the amount of money that it appropriated if the appropriation was starting from zero and going to the figure they reached rather than starting from the base and going to the figure they reached? Secondly, have you ever heard anybody in the field of education in this state indicate that the legislature has in fact appropriated enough money for what they consider the basic necessary needs of the education system of this state in the last 4 years or at any time in the last 20 years?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the minority amendments. All those in favor will say aye. All those opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division is asked for. Is the demand supported? A sufficient number up. All those in favor of the minority amendments will vote aye on the board. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the amendments proposed by Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, the yeas are 59; the nays are 67.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendments are not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley now offers the following amendments:

1. Amend page 2, line 3, after "property" by inserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)".

2. Amend page 2, line 4, after "shall be" by inserting "deposited in a special school aid fund and be".

3. Amend page 2, line 7, after "law.", by inserting "Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund."; so that the paragraph at the top of page 2 beginning in line 1 will read:

There shall be set aside for the school districts 2 cents of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property on the 1946 statutory base (not rate) to be allocated among said school districts by law. Such taxes so collected shall be deposited in a special school aid fund and be expendable only by legislative appropriations for aid to the school districts and school employees' retirement purposes, as shall be provided by law. Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw that portion of the amendment which the secretary has just read and which has already been covered by the Austin amendments on which the committee has spoken its will. In other words, if the unanimous consent request is approved, the amendment would merely refer to the school aid fund and not to the 1946 statutory base.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bentley in effect has offered 3 amendments. He is withdrawing the first one. So his amendments now are as follows:

2. Amend page 2, line 4, after "shall be" by inserting "deposited in a special school aid fund and be".

3. Amend page 2, line 7, after "law.", by inserting "Said school aid fund shall be separate and distinct from the state general fund.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendments. Mr. Bentley, do you wish to comment further?

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I already explained at the afternoon session that this reflects the vote of 16 out of 17 members of the education committee that voted on this subject. The vote was 16 to 1. And, as I said also this afternoon, the education committee earlier in its recommendations for the exclusion of certain sections made reference to a special school aid fund which the committee is very strong in believing should be retained in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think we might just as well get right down to brass tacks on this proposition. You will recall that some time ago we did bring before you and tried to get you to accept a plan for the management of state funds that would bring some system, much better practice into the handling of those funds. You didn't see fit to go along at that time. I told you Friday that there was a change in the sales tax leading in that direction. What we are trying to do is to put the school money on the same basis as the road money so far as handling is concerned in the state treasury. It takes out the words that this shall be a special fund.

You will recall that the legislature has enacted a statute which authorizes the fiscal officers to commingle the funds to the extent of meeting emergencies—not for the permanent use of the funds for any other than their specified purpose, but to manage them. That has not been possible with the school fund because of this restriction in the constitution. In other words, the treasurer has been allowed to take road money to pay the schools on time. He has not been allowed, in case of emergency for a few days, to take school money to pay the roads on time. It has been a one way street. That is the purpose for this change.

It is not a matter of using school moneys permanently for any other purpose or road money for any other purpose permanently, but a matter of management of the funds as we go along. The need is not so great, probably, after the short term borrowing provision that you have approved, but there still is need for it, still need for some management of the funds as they would be managed by a business corporation or any other business institution, and we are, as a committee, opposed to the Bentley amendments.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendments. Mr. Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: I would like to rise in support of the Bentley amendments. I had supported the minority report, hoping we would have that base rate, and it would disturb me a lot if we lost the separation of funds. Certainly I feel the money for education should be kept in a separate fund. It is a need. And I realize that one of the most important factors in our state is the education of our children, and if we are going to disturb this fund to a point where we will not separate the moneys, I think reaction of the people of the state of Michigan will be such, it will be very important to us tonight to consider to make sure we have this fund separated.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, the constitutional creation of a fund called "school aid fund" was introduced first into the picture in 1954 by the so called Conlin amendment. Prior to the Conlin amendment, there was no special fund set up in the constitution which set aside school moneys. Back before the Conlin amendment, the sales tax money was distributed to schools not on a current basis but upon the basis of the receipts earned in the last completed fiscal year. Back in the days before the Conlin amendment, then, the schools knew, even before the legislative bill was introduced, how many dollars there were to be distributed in a particular year through the school aid formula. They knew that because they already knew—it was a matter of public record—as to the amount of money which the sales tax had produced in the last completed fiscal year. In that system prior to the Conlin amendment, then, at least there was a factor of knowledge and certainty, and school boards could govern themselves accordingly. The only risk they ran was that the legislature might, during a particular session, so radically change the school aid formula that what they had gotten the year before might be greatly changed because the legislature might change the formula.

The schools thought it desirable, and many of us did also,—I supported the Conlin amendment in the legislature— to put the schools on a current basis, and to do that, the Conlin amendment in 1954 was submitted to the people. They, among other things, not only put the matter on a current basis, but they also created the special school aid fund in the constitution. This arrangement has certainly not proved beneficial, really, either to the schools or to the state treasury. It has introduced a rigidity so far as the treasury is concerned, and on the other hand has made it absolutely impossible for the several school districts in the state to know how much money they are going to get at the time when the school boards have to decide upon their budgets.

Upon further reflection on my part, I think that there were a good many features in the Conlin amendment which proved to be a mistake, and one of the features in the Conlin amendment which I accepted very reluctantly at the time is one which I always thought was wrong in principle and I reiterate it again now. I think it wrong in principle to set up constitutional funds in the state treasury. The road money is not constitutionally set up in a fund. The highway fund is not a constitutionally created fund. I think it was a mistake to create a school aid fund in the constitution as a matter of principle, and for that reason, and because of the experience which I believe we have had under the Conlin amendment, I cannot support the amendments now before you, and hope that the committee will vote them down.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Bentley amendments. All those in favor will signify by saying aye. All those opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division is called for. Is the demand seconded? A sufficient number up. All those in favor will use the voting machine and will vote aye. Those opposing the Bentley amendments will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the 2 amendments offered by Mr. Bentley, the yeas are 46; the nays are 76.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendments are not adopted. The question is on the committee proposal. Are there any other amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Spitler and Anspach offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, lines 1 and 4, after "districts" by inserting "and public school employees' retirement systems"; and amend page 2, line 6, after "districts and" by striking out "school employees' retirement purposes as shall be provided by law" and inserting "such public school employees' retirement systems as shall from time to time be in effect"; so the language will read:

> There shall be set aside for the school districts and public school employees' retirement systems 2 cents of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property, to be allocated among said school districts and public school employees' retirement systems by law. Such taxes so collected shall be expendable only by legislative appropriations for aid to the school districts and such public school employees' retirement systems as shall from time to time be in effect.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Mr. Chairman and delegates, it is not the purpose of this amendment to change the intent of the committee report. I spoke on this last Friday, and I would like to say just a word concerning it again. The intent of this is that it will make it possible for the payment to be made directly to the public school retirement systems and not to the separate school boards.

There have been during the past few years efforts made in the legislature to remove this requirement and to make payments directly to the various school districts. Now, we have nearly 2,000 of those school districts. If each of those 2,000 school districts had to make payments regarding the retirement system directly to the retirement fund board, it would cost considerably more than it does now and it would be very, very complicated. I am not so concerned about the large school districts that have the funds and have the equipment and have the personnel to take care of that, but I am concerned about the small rural school districts where the financing is not done as well as it is in the larger school districts.

It simply means that they would make 1 payment a year, or 6 payments as they are making now, directly to the public school retirement systems rather than paying it directly to the various school districts. It is not the purpose of this amendment to change the intent of the committtee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, that the spokesmen for the schools are very generous. We went over this matter very carefully, and we intentionally did not put in the retirement systems where you have inserted it by your amendment because we didn't wish to tell the legislature that they must appropriate the retirement money out of the schools' share of the sales tax.

As you know, we just Friday approved a proposal which will require the state to pay a great deal more into the retirement systems than they have been paying before, and now you are, it seems to me, practically telling the legislature to take that money out of the schools' share of the sales tax. We didn't do that. We didn't want to do that. But we still certainly provided the language under which they can pay directly into the retirement systems. Notice this:

> such taxes so collected shall be expendable only by legislative appropriations for aid to the school districts and school employees' retirement purposes as shall be provided by law.

We had no intention—and I think the language doesn't justify the idea—that we were going to have the school districts paying that money.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Spitler amendment. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to ask Chairman Brake one question, Mr. Chairman. We have, as of last Friday, provided for compulsory funding on a current basis of retirement moneys for all retirement systems—all public retirement systems—including the school retirement. The question that I want to ask is whether this provision will require the legislature to fund these retirement benefits for school employees, realizing that the legislature cannot be mandamused or forced in any way to provide moneys. I just want to make sure that the record shows exactly what the committee had in mind in regard to school retirement.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Austin, that is going back to what we decided last Friday and not the proposal we have before us. It certainly is our intention, and very clearly expressed, I am sure, that the legislature must fund each year each of those retirement systems.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Well, it is the intent of the amendment that whatever money is appropriated by the legislature to the retirement school systems shall be paid directly to the retirement school systems and not to the school districts. That is the intent of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Spitler amendment. All those in favor will signify by saying aye. All those opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division has been called for. Is the demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. I believe there is a sufficient number up. All those in favor of the Spitler amendment will vote aye on the voting machine. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Spitler and Mr. Anspach, the yeas are 50; the nays are 70.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any other amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to their minority report, Messrs. Upton, Davis and Seyferth offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the proposal and inserting:

"In each of the 5 fiscal years following the adoption of the constitution, the legislature shall appropriate ½ cent of a state sales tax to the cities, villages and townships on the basis provided in the Constitution of 1908. State support for cities, villages and townships may be continued thereafter.

The legislature shall appropriate annually to the school districts of this state, to supplement funds raised locally, sufficient funds to assure adequate opportunity for primary and secondary education in every school district.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, in speaking for the minority on the tax and finance committee, I first would like to state that this amendment is a complete substitute for Committee Proposal 39 and not to be added at the end of the proposal.

[The supporting reasons were read by Mr. Upton. For text, see above, page 787.]

Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Mr. Davis.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Davis.

MR. DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a member of the committee on finance and taxation, as Mr. Upton has just stated, there was some substantial division upon this matter which is before us, and I would like to consider this question tonight in perhaps a little different light than what it has previously been considered. I think we all recognize that Michigan as such is engaged in big business. We are now handling over a billion dollars a year, and I thought that it might be perhaps appropriate to consider this matter somewhat from a business standpoint as long as it pertains to the handling of money.

In the first place—and it has been stated here previously—better than half of the revenues of the state of Michigan are controlled within our constitution or statutory earmarking. I might say that if I owned stock in any business in which the stockholders by their bylaws or the constitution controlled better than half of the money and decided how it was to be funded, I wouldn't be able to get to a telephone quick enough to sell that stock. I believe this because I think that the management of money is important to efficient and economical handling, and to do this there needs to be flexibility and delegation of authority.

Now, many times during this convention and on numerous occasions I have noted that this convention has looked back into history, so to speak. I think that this was particularly manifest in the discussion which took place relative to the bill of rights and where, with great, meticulous care, we examined the wording in the bill of rights, examined supreme court decisions, and I felt that that was a very high level of debate and I felt that the matter was handled in a very appropriate manner.

However, in the field of business there is perhaps a little different technique used, in which you stress your major emphasis upon the future. In other words, you glance over your shoulder at the past, you take a couple of looks at the present, and with the same meticulous care you examine those things which you believe are assumptions or probabilities as to what will happen in the future. Now, I believe that this is recognized both by large business, small business, and even organizations as a valid method of determining the future. Therefore, I am not afraid to make some decisions based upon assumptions, because I think we all recognize that, as you view the future, you cannot base decisions solely upon facts because you don't have all the facts.

Therefore, at this time I would like to make a few assumptions which I believe will probably occur in this state, and I will say that assumptions are something which you can neither prove nor disprove, but which you believe are probably those things which will occur. One, I believe that there will be a major tax structure revision in Michigan; two, Michigan will levy a flat rate income tax; and three, there will be a broader tax base at the local level besides property for the support of local government and education, or else local government and education at the local level will share in state funds based upon an equitable formula, either one or the other or both, and probably both.

The major portion which is covered under the sales tax diversion amendment is that money which goes to education to the amount of 2 cents. I think that the future needs of education in the state of Michigan can be more adequately met by tax structure revision than they can be by the sales tax diversion amendment.

I will list another assumption: namely, that education at the primary and secondary level in this state will not be satisfied, nor will it be sufficient to supply the needs of education in this state in the future. We have heard it mentioned here before—and I will not dwell on it—that during the last 4 years there has been appropriated by the legislature an amount over and above all of the earmarked funds for education, and I want to point out one year specifically—the year of 1959, when we had what some consider the worst financial crisis in Michigan's history—that the state of Michigan appropriated and paid out to schools more than what these funds amounted to.

Now, I think that it seems to be apparent here that a person has to represent his views somewhat on the basis of what you like or what you don't like. I can't see how this is particularly pertinent, but I might say that I have served in this county upon local boards of education and upon the county board of education, and there have been numerous occasions when I have put my pocketbook where my mouth was in the support of education, and that is one way of determining what an individual really thinks. Also, in the election which took place last fall, the individual who was opposing me made the statement in public that if it hadn't been for my efforts on the county board of education at a critical time, we would not have had a special education program within this county. Now, I'm not going to comment upon his statement, but I will say this: that on my own time I investigated special education because I didn't know much about it. I visited schools. I went out of the county and I came back. And over the protest of some of the property owners in this county, I voted for and supported that measure. Now, in my judgment, in that I did something to support education. And I can come over here to my desk tonight and flip this switch and say, "I am supporting earmarked funds in the constitution for education; I am a good friend to it, in my judgment." It amounts to just about the flip of the switch.

I am going to say just another word on this because it was motivated by a comment which was made previously. I think that education is a good business investment. I realize that there are other points, but I cannot see it as otherwise. I was intrigued by the term "creative industry" which Delegate Norris used some time ago, and if he was thinking what I was thinking, then I like what he was thinking, (laughter) because in my judgment, in the future of the state—and we are already in a space age—there is a wonderful opportunity to develop new industry in the state of Michigan, in which education certainly will play a very important part, and I think we have some concrete evidence of this in some of the new industries which are locating on the east and west coasts, and they are located around the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard and around the University of Southern California, and I think that the reason that they are there is because of the excellence of their educational institutions, and I submit that the future of Michigan and its business climate will be somewhat determined upon the cooperation between education and industry, and I think that they can supplement each other.

And so, in general, I will take this attitude as far as education is concerned: I prefer that education face the future based upon faith and confidence, rather than preferring a position of dubious security based upon obsolescence.

Now, as far as local government is concerned and this ½ cent of sales tax, you will notice that there is a provision in this minority report which provides for local government on the same basis for the next 5 years. I might mention that Dr. Pollock raised this question, and I felt appropriately so, when he suggested if there was anything in our thinking as to whether we might do the same thing for education. And let me say that, as a member of the group which submitted this proposal, I would have no objections to putting in a minimum base for education to be taken off some time in the future. Frankly, I didn't give much consideration to it because I felt that if in the last 4 or 5 years it had not been adequate, I didn't see how it would be in the future, and I couldn't quite see the use of so much security.

In connection with my own profession, I might say that we are not quite accustomed to so much security. I never planted a crop in my life that I knew what I was going to get for it when I planted it; how much I was going to get for it, what the quality would be, whether there would be drought or flood or hail, and I have had all of them. And if I wanted to look at all of the things that might happen, I never would even buy a bag of seed to plant, let alone ever go ahead and plant it.

Now, I think that in some respects the economy of this state and the government itself have been somewhat dormant. I think that most of us recognize that where there is a progress, there must, of necessity, be change, but we likewise recognize that progress is not always steady or continuous; it comes in surges, and we have noted this many times in the history of this country.

And I will now make another assumption: I believe that there is, rising up from the grass roots of the people of the state of Michigan, a willingness and a desire to have some kind of tax reform in this state which will grant some relief to property owners, some relief to business, and can help to stimulate the general economy. This is an assumption which I can't prove, but I think that there are some straws in the wind which indicate that this is the general direction.

I would like to mention about the point of tax legislation because it has been voted into the constitution. In my judgment, I do not believe that tax legislation which is voted into the constitution is particularly good or sacred just because it has been placed there. I think that the reason these amendments were placed in our constitution is because the people wanted to support education to a higher degree than what it was. They wished to support local government more, and in some instances they were wanting to take some of the pressure off of property taxes, and I think that the reason it is found here is because some people in state government either lacked the courage or the understanding to initiate changes when changes were needed.

And I might say as a delegate I would feel a little ill at ease in pointing fingers at anyone in state government, past or present, who is unwilling to accept some changes based upon valid assumptions and facts. I would be a little reluctant to do that unless I were willing to do it myself. And I might say that in the committee on finance and taxation—and I presented somewhat the same view—one of my good friends upon the committee said, "Well, your argument makes sense, but don't you know that in government you can't do things this way? You have to figure up what everybody likes and what all the organizations think and so forth." I would like to say that I have never run for an elective position in government before, but I couldn't see how I could add to the tax structure and come up with a sound, reasonable conclusion if I had to base it upon politics, apportionment, present content of the legislature; how many people have voted for it in the past, how many people voted against it, how many organizations are for it now and how many are against it, and how many there are in each one; and, by far the greater in my judgment, the people in the state who may not particularly be members of any representative group. Now, this idea of trying to incorporate all of this into the tax structure of this state really distressed me, and the fact is that to try it would make me mad. Probably if I were a progressive thinker, I could add all of these things in, but I couldn't get my thinking apparatus to incorporate so much territory, so I decided to go ahead and do it as I have been accustomed to doing it.

For that reason, then, I would like to say that I recognize that this is somewhat, perhaps, a voice in the wilderness, and I am not unaware of the fact that the voice in the wilderness lost his head, but I will say that as far as I am concerned, the conclusions which I have reached have not been reached on the basis of like or dislike, nor from a position of fear, nor from a position of seeking favor, but from what I have added up to be the facts as I have been able to determine them after considerable study in our committee, and assumptions as to what I believe are valid, and that is where they came out.

And I would like to summarize with 4 brief points as to why I think our constitution can be improved by the adoption of this minority report. Before doing this, I would just like to make this one comment: that I recognize that perhaps there is a matter of consistency, and I personally don't see much use in being consistent just for the sake of being consistent, and I submit that sometimes it is better to be inconsistent. For example, I think it is better to be inconsistently bad than consistently bad (laughter) and if anyone should draw a parallel to this situation, why, so be it. (laughter) I think that the constitution would be better with the provisions of this minority report in it for 4 principal reasons; one, the tax structure of a state should be flexible to meet changing conditions; 2, the major part of the sales tax diversion amendment is not functional and probably won't be in the future; 3, removal will stimulate encouragement to tax structure revision in this state; and 4,—and possibly the most important, at least in my opinion—elimination will evidence faith and confidence in the state of Michigan. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, following the eloquent remarks of the 2 preceding speakers, it would be a brave man who would attempt to make a speech, and it is not my intention to do so. I have one question to be directed to either one of the 2 previous speakers, 2 of the signers of this minority report. If I understand the intent of this minority proposal, its adoption would mean the following: the indefinite retention of earmarking on highways; the elimination, after 5 years, of the earmarking for the local government units; and the immediate elimination of earmarking for our schools. Is that correct?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: That would be the intent, yes, sir.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, delegates, any remarks after that speech of Delegate Davis would be an anti climax to the subject at hand. You missed your calling, Charlie. (laughter) To qualify my remarks, I direct this statement to

Dr. Hannah. I did, Dr. Hannah, vote in favor of Mrs. Cushman's amendment. The basic purpose for this presentation on the minority report on the subject at hand has to do, in a sense, with the same interest that Mrs. Cushman presented, in that this is an important enough subject for the people of the state of Michigan to debate freely on this floor as a forum. Whether or not we agree with the principle of elimination of earmarking is our personal conviction, but there are enough people in the state of Michigan who do firmly believe that earmarking as such should be eliminated, and it certainly should be the prerogative of this convention, then, to provide for those people and for the opposing side an intelligent debate on the subject. We had such within our own committee, and we had some interesting splits when we separated the individual earmarking funds.

As individuals signing the minority report, we take this position also: that to view earmarking or all of the bad points of earmarking or the good points of earmarking currently is not placing ourselves in the proper perspective for future evaluation of our fiscal overall responsibilities. That has become a trite phrase on this floor, fiscal responsibilities, but certainly it is our obligation to look forward in the years to come to determine whether or not our action now is properly serving the future when it comes to the state of Michigan and its fiscal responsibilites.

The meaning of this minority report is just as Delegate Bentley indicated. We were outnumbered, outmaneuvered on the highway tax. As an individual I am in favor of the elimination of all of the earmarking of funds and giving to the legislature the full responsibility to determine where the budgeted income should go to meet the budgeted outgo. That is why we elect legislatures, and if we are not satisfied with the handling of the fiscal situation of the state of Michigan now or in the future, then, of course, it is our prerogative to change those faces on the floor. I speak very definitely, Mr. Chairman and delegates, in support of the minority position.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, you have noticed, of course, that the amendments proposed, except for the one, came from members of the finance and taxation committee. I want you all to know, however, that in every instance those who have suggested these changes suggested them in committee; let the whole committee understand exactly where they stood. There has been no surprise. I don't know what Mr. Seyferth meant just now when he said they were outmaneuvered on the road taxes. But the committee has been well organized. We knew what was coming. It is a matter of an honest difference of opinion as to what the policy ought to be. The argument on both sides has been very complete.

You have been told that the people ordered this, not the legislature; that they reaffirmed their position as recently as November, 1960. You have been told that it isn't costing much money, and that most of the members of the committee—not quite all, but most of the members of the committee—believe very firmly that if we were to take all earmarking out, we would be wasting the $3½ million [which includes the cost of 2 special elections] that this constitution is going to cost. We are not prepared as a committee to go in that direction. I trust that the finding of the majority of the committee will be the finding of the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I rise to support the position of flexibility and sound fiscal management as far as the state of Michigan is concerned. Flexibility is sort of like the weather: everybody seems to talk about it but very few people are willing to do anything about it.

Now, the first part of the minority report substitute relates to local government. We had a presentation made before the convention by President Eisenhower. We have heard Dr. Pollock speak on this subject, and many other people in the convention have mentioned the fact that one of the problems we face in this country is that local governments are bypassing their state governments, and state governments themselves are going to the federal level to try to solve problems of finance and other matters. It seems to me that when we go to other units of government to solve financial problems, by the time the money gets back to the unit of use, there seems to be something lost in the translation. I submit that by allowing the local governments to begin to fend for themselves at the end of 5 years, giving them sufficient authority to do so is not an unreasonable approach.

The second part of this relates to the earmarking for schools. There has been a lot of talk of the minimum base which everybody admits is woefully inadequate. I think that school financing will be hurt in the long run by maintaining this base with the so called benchmark. I think that we will begin to think in terms of an increase of X dollars above the benchmark rather than the total need of schools. I therefore urge your support of the minority report substitute.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Speaking in opposition to the minority report, I have heard several speakers refer to the fact that this base is hurting the schools. Now, as an educator, and having heard many of the people in education come before the committee on education, this is the first time I have ever heard any reference made to the fact that this minimum basis of support is hurting schools. It is actually meant as a support for the schools. It is not hurting education or not hurting educators, and there is no one in the field of education that would affirm that.

I, furthermore, am a little bit troubled by the attitude that we are not to look back at all in terms of the previous decisions of the people regarding the history of our country and our state respecting the whole field of education. I would have hoped that some of the remarks that have been made with regard to attacking school funds could have been made on the idea of earmarking when we were dealing with highways, when some of these voices weren't raised at all. When it comes to education, everybody seems to have a field day. We are dealing here not only with the section under earmarking but, as I understand it, this proposal refers also to the primary school interest fund, and this is something that I haven't yet heard anyone reach, at least in terms of its historical development.

But we are dealing with a fund which has as its basis the Ordinance of 1787, its subsequent development in our state. It has been a base of support in the Constitutions of 1835, 1850 and 1907. Now, all of a sudden, in a few short minutes we are asked to turn our back upon a whole history of development of support for public education in this state, and we are asked to turn our back to the votes of the people in 1946, in 1954 and in 1960 with regard to school support.

I don't think we are in a position to refute our tradition and our heritage with regard to school support and our responsibilities to maintain that support.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise in support of the minority report. I am sure that you are all aware that in order for a builder to build a building, he must have adequate blueprints. In my opinion, the committee proposal provides the blueprints for the basement. The minority report would be the blueprint for a very fine building, and that would be the state of Michigan, a very fine, sound, economic state.

I am sure parents will think we are against their children having an education. Well, this is not true, because as soon as these people across the street here ever go below the appropriations, our good jury up here on the left [the press] will never let them forget it.

It has been said that the legislature has appropriated more than the earmarking. As Delegate Hutchinson said, we should give our legislators more flexibility. Also, he said the school aid fund provided in the committee report as well as the first minority report sets up an undesirable rigidity.

For instance, the sales tax diversion: Mr. Austin feels that the legislature can repeal the sales tax. Where do these words leave us with the committee report if the sales tax is repealed? What if we should go into an income tax?

We should be prompted here to write a modern constitution that is workable without any stone walls in the way of the state; and the state should be able to operate in any manner of taxation that is set out to the people. Therefore, I support this minority report because I feel it is sound and sensible.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I came to this convention dedicated to the proposition that it was my responsibility to present here the views of the constituents who so honored me. Very shortly after my election as a delegate here, the superintendents of schools in my own community and in the adjacent community called for an appointment, and asked for the opportunity to voice their views to me. I was prepared then to hear an argument strongly in favor of the continuance of earmarking, particularly as it related to the sales tax diversion in favor of our schools. I had a conference lasting about an hour and a half with these 2 gentlemen, and learned they were speaking not only on behalf of themselves and the systems that they represented, but on behalf of the southeastern Michigan school representatives, and by that I do not mean to include Wayne county. To my utter astonishment, they said, in substance, that they were not particularly concerned that earmarking should be continued in our constitution because, as has been pointed out here in this debate, additional funds have been required and have been granted over the several years immediately past.

I asked them to place in writing to me their recommendations in this and other regards. I have in my hand a letter dated November 30, 1961, to which is attached a copy of a resolution adopted by the southeastern Michigan association of school administrators, covering the areas of Monroe, Lenawee, Hillsdale and Washtenaw counties. This report deals with many subjects other than that with which we are presently concerned. I will not deal with those at this time. Their tenth recommendation is this:

> We would agree to the elimination of earmarking of funds if all earmarking of funds is eliminated. However, if there is any earmarking of funds, school funds should also be earmarked, or constitutional guarantees insofar as school funds are concerned should be given.

The clear line of demarcation between the principle of earmarking as to highway funds, the sources of which come from those who use the highways, has been clearly pointed out in our debate here this afternoon. I think the proposal of the minority is within the recommendation of the school administrators for whom I speak here, and I support the report of the minority.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the remarks by Mr. Faxon, as a parent of 5 children and interested in education, and knowing that Mr. Faxon is a member of the education committee, I question whether or not the earmarking under the sales tax amendment is necessary under the proposal adopted by this committee with regard to Committee Proposal 30, which says that the legislature shall maintain and support a system of free public elementary and secondary education. The minority report submitted by Messrs. Davis, Seyferth and Upton repeats that language.

To talk about retaining the sales tax diversion amendment of 2 cents for educational purposes is to laugh at and make a mockery of what this committee has adopted and what the education committee adopted under Committee Proposal 30. If you believe what we said in Committee Proposal 30, then you believe the last part of the minority report with regard to financing.

Certainly it is important that the legislature and the governor, whoever he may be, and of whatever political party, have the right to determine how the money will be raised for education and to determine how that money will be extracted from your pocket and mine resulting in doing the least damage to the total economic structure of Michigan.

Secondly, to those people who wish to earmark specific moneys for education, let me say that we have spent a great deal of time arguing about discrimination. Are we to discriminate in favor of those people who can go to public schools at the expense of those unfortunate children that are confined to mental hospitals, those people that are in sanatoriums, the aged? Are school children—are my children any better than the crippled or injured adults or children? We have talked a lot about discrimination, and now the education people wish to discriminate in the spending of public funds to the total lack of consideration of all the needs of Michigan.

I believe that the minority report assures education a fair share of Michigan's economic wealth, and coupled with Committee Proposal 30, insures for my children and any other children in this state a good, fair, well supported, public, free elementary and secondary education. I support the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, I am sure that if we could persuade the majority members of this convention to adopt Dr. John Hannah's proposal for apportionment of the house, and Dr. Pollock's first proposal for apportionment of the senate, we would then have complete confidence that we would have fiscal reform in the state of Michigan, and that the welfare of the children we are worrying about now would be properly taken care of, and I am sure then that the minority would be perfectly willing to remove all requests for earmarking of funds for schools come 1970 when Dr. Pollock's proposal would then take further effect.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I rise to support the minority report, for the simple reason that I feel the majority report has so weakened and infringed upon the basic attitude that was originally written into this amendment, there is very little left except its appearance. The minority report squarely gives it to the legislature to take care of the issue, and I think with the other basic proposals that this committee has given to this convention, we will have a better overall fiscal policy, and therefore I urge support of the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I am especially happy to be able to concur in the stand of 2 former members of the judiciary committee. I think it is the first time we have all agreed on anything. (laughter) I want to support what has been said by Mr. Prettie and by Miss Donnelly, but for a different reason. I speak as an educator, I think—I hope I do. I spent 3 years on the board of education of the county, and then 12 years on the board of education of Grand Rapids, the last 2 as president. And as president of a board of education of a second class city, I had veto power, which is more power than Mayor Paul Goebel had when he was mayor of the city of Grand Rapids. And I think I can say that I came here to vote my convictions. I did not come here to maintain and support a constitution which is outmoded. And I don't care if it was voted on yesterday by the people of Michigan; if it is wrong in principle, I am going to be against it, and earmarking funds is wrong in principle.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak on the first part of the minority proposal, because it is this portion that pertains to local units of government. I would like to take you back to 1946 and tell you a story. Governor Kelly was then governor of Michigan. The state had a great deal of money which it had accumulated during the war. At that time there were many cities which were under the 15 mill limitation. Not only was the school and the county under it, but many cities were also, and these cities felt distressed, and they came up to see the governor and they asked that they have appropriated to them certain funds. Well, Governor Kelly was not running for reelection, and he turned the cities down. It happened that there was a former mayor of Grand Rapids by the name of George Welch, and George Welch wanted this money, so Mr. Welch started an initiated amendment, and he started out with the cities, and he said, "We are going to earmark some funds from the sales tax." He wanted ½ cent. And after he had gone a little while, he decided he didn't have enough votes, so he thought he would join the townships, and he joined the townships. And then he thought he didn't have quite enough votes, so he really fixed it up and he went and got the schools. So the combination of the schools, the cities and the townships all joined together.

Now, it happened that not all cities agreed to this, and I remember in 1946 there was a debate over the radio station in Grand Rapids. Mr. Welch was arguing in favor of it. The program was put on, I believe, by the junior chamber of commerce. There were 2 other speakers who came to that debate. One of them happened to be myself. I was the vice mayor then in Kalamazoo. And I spoke against it. There was a third person on the program. He also spoke against the Welch proposal. And that third person is now the chairman of your finance committee. (laughter) Now, I know a lot of water has gone over the dam, but I believe what I said then is still true; that if we took this money from the state and earmarked it for the cities and the villages, something bad would happen to the state. Well, it took about 12 years and it happened.

I think if the legislature would free the local units of government, and I think if the local units of government would be courageous enough not to always pass the buck to Lansing—and I am afraid that this was part of the trouble in 1946—then we could do better and we would solve our own problems. But I think it is bad to earmark in our constitution an inflexible sum for the support of local governments. I thought it was bad in 1946. I still think it is bad. I know the chairman of the finance committee thought so in 1946. I would hope he would think it was bad today.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I must respond to this because I, too, feel that we could have handled this. First of all, if all the people felt this way about throwing all this open to the legislature, then they should have done this with the highway fund. And I voted with Mrs. Cushman and her amendment at that time, but I certainly wouldn't feel right in saying it is all right to earmark our highway fund but when it comes to education, we'll trust the legislature—but not for the highways. Now, it has been automatically assumed that highways are a legitimate tax to earmark because they are a user tax. I might point out—and I am sure that the people who are on that committee are aware of the fact—that in some states highway funds are not earmarked specifically for highways but are also used for educational purposes, and I, for one, see no objection to that. So I don't want it to be understood that any type of a user tax is necessarily the best sort of thing for earmarking, because, by that token, we would earmark our cigarette taxes for TB sanatoriums, and our liquor taxes for alcoholics anonymous, and we could go down a whole list of user taxes if you want to earmark it on that basis. (laughter) But if you want to eliminate earmarking and trust your legislature, then don't just pick on the schools; pick on the rest of the full gamut of things and not just on education.

I want to refer specifically to Mr. Hanna. He referred back to me and said that the committee proposal which the education committee recommended and which was accepted by this convention—so far the committee of the whole—deals with support for the public schools, and that this also is an assurance, and it says in the language of the minority report here that the legislature shall appropriate annually to the school districts of this state, to supplement funds raised locally, sufficient funds to assure adequate opportunity for primary and secondary education. We have a lot of nice language: "maintain and support"; "adequate opportunity." This language sounds wonderful. But when it gets down to dollars and cents, that is where the differences begin to appear, and that is why the educators wanted a basis of support, a minimum basis of support, not in terms of very nice and flowery language but in terms of actual dollars and cents, and that is what the sales tax earmarking does.

Now, if we are going ahead and eliminating the earmarking on schools and trusting the legislature, I would say wonderful, if I could have full confidence that the legislature has in the past demonstrated its ability to meet the needs of the school districts and it would do so in the future. But history hasn't shown that. When it has had the opportunity in 1945, there was quarreling and whatnot. I have reference to the whole story of how this got into the constitution, but we have already heard this. Mr. Brake has given a very fine report on this. I don't have to repeat that there have been some differences of opinion between members of the legislature and local school districts as to what constitutes an adequate level of support.

Then the people took it to themselves to get this constitutional amendment put in. Now, I maintain that the people of this state are very much concerned with education and not with just the fine language that we put into the constitution about maintaining and supporting, but they are concerned with the dollar and cents level of support for education. We may trust the legislature or we may not trust the legislature. I think of a statement that Dr. Brownell made to this committee on education—I think it has been said before—that he trusts his relatives implicitly, yet he makes out a will. And I think this has reference to why we retain earmarking in the constitution for education. We trust the legislature to a certain extent, but we want this minimum level of support guaranteed, and I think that the schools in this state and the people who send their children to schools in this state are concerned with this guarantee, and the words alone are not enough. The dollars and cents allocation by the sales tax earmarking is the kind of guarantee that means something, because it actually puts the money back in the school district where it belongs.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: I have listened very attentively to all the eloquent arguments, and I hope that the previous speakers know what they are doing, but I would hate to see this convention go down in history as the body that built the big, fancy, divided lane, super highways, complete with cloverleafs and over and underpasses all the way to the little red schoolhouse, and then tore the building down. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Bentley asked a few minutes ago whether or not the minority report called for the end of earmarking of funds for schools. In my estimation, this report gives stronger support for schools than we now currently have in our earmarked clause. In reviewing the booket which we have all received from the citizens research council of Michigan, Constitutional Earmarking of State Revenues, we find that the states with the outstanding educational systems do not have earmarking for schools. The states who have earmarking for schools are states like Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Wyoming and, above all, Michigan.

I believe we do have one of the finest systems of education anywhere in the country, but it is not because of earmarked funds; it is because you and I as citizens believe education is one of the prime purposes of living in this state, of educating our children, and our legislators, Delegate Faxon and other delegates, are not going to forget this and they are not going to ignore the needs for education, and they are going to keep education on the high plane we have. But I feel that budgeting by the constitution is not the thing that we as delegates should do.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, we have heard a great deal about the principle of no earmarking as though there is some principle that earmarking is good or earmarking is bad. What principle is there from which you deduce that earmarking is good or that earmarking is bad? Is this a matter of conscience? Is this a matter of basic principle? Is this a matter of morality? What kind of principle is at stake? I suggest to you that what is at stake here is not a matter of conscience, not a matter of basic principle. What is involved is a matter of expedience.

The question is not what is a moral solution; the question is: what will work? Now, what will work will be one thing under one set of circumstances and will be another thing under another set of circumstances. If you asked many of the delegates here, maybe all the delegates here, do they believe in earmarking as an abstract principle, I believe that most of them, maybe all, would say no, they do not. I do not. I don't think much of earmarking at all. I don't think much of earmarking —similarly I don't think much of the noise in this room.

Mr. Chairman, what we are dealing with is an important matter, but it is not a matter of principle or conscience. It is a matter of expedience. As I said, if we were inventing a new state, I would not be in favor of earmarking, and I am not in favor of earmarking even now. If we accept earmarking, it must be because we feel that under the circumstances and in a particular case it is better to do it than not to do it. Now, as between highway earmarking and earmarking for schools, it seems to me there is a tremendous difference. I believe we would be ashamed to go back from this convention, look people in the eye and say, "We thought that highways were so important we had to guarantee that they would be built; that schools were not that important and that we did not have to guarantee that they would be built." If there is to be a question of priorities, it is absolutely clear in my mind if there is to be any earmarking whatever, it must be for schools.

Now, as I said, if I were starting a new state or if we were in a state which was just being organized, I would not favor any earmarking. It think it is ludicrous to spend money on highways, for example, when people in mental institutions are not being properly cared for. It is a terrible mismanagement of our affairs. I have no doubt about that. In the abstract or in a vacuum, earmarking is bad. It is bad because it is not good common sense. It is not good common sense to tie yourself up so that you must spend money for something you may not need and not be able to spend money for something you may need. Therefore, as I say, in the abstract, in a vacuum, earmarking is bad. But that is not the question. The question isn't whether it is bad in a vacuum. The question is this: is it bad in Michigan for schools at this time?

Now, in order to answer that question, as I said before, I don't know any principle from which you could deduce the answer. You have to look at the facts, look at the experience and find out whether it has been necessary to take this basically unsatisfactory position. We know that normally we would like the legislature to have power to handle this matter, just as if we were at home and we had money coming in, we would hate to be hobbled with rules that we must spend a certain amount of money for clothes when we really need food. We would think it silly. We don't like that principle. It is true we don't like earmarking. We like freedom for the legislature and freedom for every person to spend money as he needs. But does that mean that that principle, so to speak, should be followed to its ultimate limit no matter what the consequences?

And I ask you whether you have ever heard of a case where we take away from a person the power to handle the disposition of his money. Is there ever such a case with a sane person? The answer is yes, there is. It is quite a common situation. When people leave money to an improvident person, a person who is not in fact capable of handling his own affairs, they invent a spendthrift trust. He gets the benefit but he doesn't get the control. Now, similarly with the legislature. We have had experience with this question. Have they been willing and able to do everything that is needed for the schools? In my opinion, the answer is no. It doesn't really matter what my opinion is. This is the opinion of the majority of the people of the state, a great majority of the people of the state who have thought this matter over, over and over again. They are satisfied that if you leave this matter to the legislature that we have in Michigan, that it will not respond to the wishes of the people. We are not dealing with a vacuum; we are dealing with the Michigan legislature. They have not been responsive to the needs of the people on this matter. That is the verdict of the people. And I don't say that we should do it just because the people voted that way, but because that is all of our experience. We know that the legislature has not behaved properly.

The question has been raised in this body over and over again: do we trust the legislature? Half the time some of us do; half the time the same people do not. It all depends on whose ox is being gored. I don't think we can really say that we do or that we don't trust the legislature as an abstract matter. Do we trust the legislature to this extent, that we would allow them to have the power either to have or not to have a graduated income tax? Presumably the answer to that question will turn out to be no. Do we trust the legislature enough, for example, so that we would have been willing to come here as delegates with no guarantee of any pay? Would we be willing to say, "We don't need to worry; the legislature will provide for us"? Ask yourself that question. If you think the answer is yes, that you trust the legislature to handle money that way, then you are in a good position to say that no earmarking is necessary of any sort. I wouldn't answer that question the same way. I would say that whether or not you could trust the legislature depends on the particular problem at hand, and with the schools the answer has been no, you cannot trust the legislature. I realize that they have appropriated some money beyond the earmark level. I understand that. I am not satisfied that if you remove the entire earmarked funds that they will continue to do the same thing. You have to realize the amount of money that they would need to appropriate for schools if there were no earmarked funds would be a tremendous amount of money. It would be tremendous enough so that in my opinion you could be quite certain it would not be fully appropriated. They would have a 10 per cent across the board cut right from the start, probably, and schools would suffer.

Therefore, let us not get mixed up on abstract questions. Let's not say the legislature should have power on this matter. Let us just take a look at this particular problem. And in this particular case let us stick to the judgment of history on this matter, and on this matter we know the legislature is not an adequate safeguard of schools, and the only adequate safeguard is the one that people have insisted upon and do insist upon, and that is earmarked school funds.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, just one or two remarks regarding Mr. Faxon's concern over highway funds. I feel at this point that I am quite well versed in the use of highway funds, and I find that the highway funds are controlled by the legislature in this manner: the extent of the tax and the amount of the tax is controlled by the legislature. The only concern is that moneys that are collected through gas and weight taxes must be put into the highway purposes such as building roads, but the legislature does control the amount of moneys. I have heard this "Brownell will" story 2 or 3 times. I have a different slant on that. I think that Dr. Brownell is a smart man; he draws up a will to save taxes, not to bypass relations.

I think the basic assumption must be made—and it is more than an assumption; it has to be a truism—that the people of the state of Michigan are willing and able and ready to support a satisfactory educational system for their primary and secondary schools, and this sense of responsibility must be given to the legislature to fulfill.

The minority report is not a device to bypass the responsibility of the citizens of the state of Michigan to support an adequate and proud school system.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, at least 4 of the previous speakers have expressed some negative kind of thinking with regard to faith in our legislature. And I, as the father of 4 children, 2 in school and 2 of preschool age, would like to say this: I believe that we must at this convention take a positive, forward looking view of our legislature as presently constituted and as it may be constituted under any apportionment plan that we may adopt, and I would like to say to you that I have every bit of confidence that in the field of education, they will continue to do what they have done in the past, and that is support a fine educational system. Certainly I believe that among our sister states there are very few states that have done as well by their children as ours has done. I think that is all I would like to say.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I will be very brief, Mr. Chairman. I think when the sales tax diversion amendment was adopted in 1946, it was necessary. However, I think it has demonstrably served its purpose and has demonstrably outlived its usefulness. I applaud the eloquence and the courage of those who have offered this amendment and those who have supported it. I think it represents the difference between mere progress and a new constitution of genuine distinction. I am proud to stand with them in support of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Have you other speakers on the list?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I have no other speaker, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I will delay the motion that the committee rise if they are ready to vote. Otherwise I will have to make it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: All right. The question is on the Davis-Seyferth-Upton minority amendment. All those—

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, I believe I was on the list, wasn't I?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I didn't have you on the list, Mr. Stevens. I didn't see you. I'm sorry.

MR. STEVENS: I wanted to speak merely on the subject of earmarking of the primary school interest fund in the constitution. It has been stated that this was not a moral issue. In the case of the primary school interest fund, I feel that it is a moral issue. I am not talking about earmarking sales taxes.

But since some of you were not required to take a course in the history of education, I would like to go quickly back to the history of the primary school interest fund in Michigan. Most of you know it came from the land, the sixteenth section of each township, which the federal government gave the state of Michigan. The land was to be sold, the money to go into the primary school interest fund. This was to be invested, and the interest from this fund to go into the primary school interest fund. Years and years ago the legislature spent the money out of the primary school interest fund and promised, morally if not legally, that this fund would be maintained by proper taxes. Considering this a moral promise, it was written into the constitution that certain taxes should be earmarked for this fund. That is the reason the primary school interest fund comes from earmarked taxes. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Davis-Seyferth-Upton minority amendment. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment. Reference has been made to what has been done to this section, the fact that it has been emasculated, and for that reason we should probably let it go.

As one of those who fought—I don't know whether valiantly or not—for maintaining the base as solidly as possible, I don't mind admitting that although we were not able to maintain the base as I would like to have seen it, I certainly hate to see what we do have go. I would also like to remind the delegates that in our concern for developing our state economically, we must be concerned about the development of our human resources. Our people have spoken several times as to how they would like to have the development of our human resources assured in our constitution. I hope that we will not forget what the people have asked for.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Davis-Seyferth-Upton minority amendment. Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Division requested, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: A division is requested. Is the demand seconded? A sufficient number up. All those in favor of the Davis-Seyferth-Upton minority amendment will vote aye, and all those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the amendment offered by Messrs. Davis, Seyferth and Upton, the yeas are 43; the nays are 83.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I request to change my vote from aye to nay. I usually watch to see how Mr. Lundgren votes and I vote opposite. This time he faked me out and voted the way I was going to, and we got all mixed up. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: A little rebuttal: I was just getting up. I had my hand up to change my vote to nay. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair might suggest you 2 pick out somebody else to watch next time. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: Accepting the statement of Mr. Hodges, the yeas are 42; the nays are 84. There are other amendments on the desk.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Upton-Davis-Seyferth minority amendment is not adopted.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I move the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the motion that the committee do now rise. All those in favor signify by saying aye. All those opposed, no.

The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain matters on which the secretary will now give a report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution; has considered several amendments to this proposal; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following announcements of committee meetings:

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 9:00 o'clock a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

The committee on public information will meet in the conference room Wednesday, February 7, at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Ink White, chairman.

The committee meeting announced for the committee on rules and resolutions immediately after the session this evening has been postponed until Wednesday, February 7, at 1:00 o'clock p.m.

The following announcement for the information of the delegates: the schedule in the stenographers' pool has been altered as a result of the change in session time. Hereafter, the stenographers' pool schedule will be as follows: Monday, 1:00 o'clock p.m. until ½ hour after session. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 8:30 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., or ½ hour after session, whichever is later. The present policy of the stenographers remaining as long as any delegate needs them will, of course, continue. (laughter)

The meeting of the committee on style and drafting will be Wednesday evening, February 7, at 8:00 o'clock in committee room K. Consideration will be given to all committee proposals pending before the committee that can be covered during the time of the meeting. William B. Cudlip, chairman.

The apples today are from Mr. Turner. (applause)

During the session this evening the secretary was in receipt of the following special delivery letter from Mr. Garvin:

> I have not been able to change my February 5 appointment, so as a result I must request to be excused from the session of February 5. After looking at my calendar, it seems that there will be other Mondays that I will not be able to change so that I can be at the 4:00 o'clock session.
> Very truly yours, Wynne C. Garvin.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the announcements.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. President, this is one I can win. I move we adjourn. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned to 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 10:25 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Tuesday, February 6, 1952.]

SEVENTY-THIRD DAY

Tuesday, February 6, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the Reverend Robert Ward, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Ypsilanti. Will you please rise.

REVEREND WARD: Let us pray. Almighty God, upon whom we are dependent for every good thing and every good thought, help these, Thy servants, to think clearly today. Grant them tolerance of those whose opinions they do not share. Grant them honest criticism of those with whom they agree. In their differences may they be kind; in their agreements may they be right. Amid all the pressures that are brought upon them, may they follow Thy guidance that Thy will be done in this state through them. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Messrs. Danhof and Heideman, from today's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Barthwell, Cudlip, Danhof, Habermehl, Heideman and McLogan.

Absent without leave: None.

[During the proceedings, Mr. Danhof entered the chamber and took his seat.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: I am sure I speak for all the delegates when I say we are very happy to welcome back our delegate from Jackson, Mr. James Thomson, who has been ill. Jim, we are glad to have you back. (applause)

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, I rise at this point on a point of personal privilege, at least for the purpose of making a suggestion. Yesterday, prior to adjournment, I was on the floor but I wasn't recognized. I thought that I had what, in my judgment, was a constructive suggestion and that was, on the general orders calendar, in the publication we receive, that there ought to be noted with each subject matter the presence of a minority report when such minority report is filed, so that when we go through general orders, we can note not only the committee report but a minority report on the particular subject matter.

I think that will add to our deliberations, Mr. President. I don't mean by this a criticism of Mr. Chase or his staff, who have been most helpful under adverse circumstances, but I do think it would be helpful to the delegates.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Norris.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary suggest that since our calendar has been printed, as rapidly as we can we will correct that situation, but in the meantime when minority reports have been filed, we will make an announcement from the desk as to the page in the journal in which they may be found.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no motions or resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have none.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin. Those in favor, say aye; those opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Martin assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The committee will come to order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 39, see above, page 785.

Several amendments have been considered. The amendment immediately on file for consideration at this time is the one by Messrs. Hodges, Ford and T. S. Brown as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 23, after "property" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That no sales tax shall be levied on foods or medicines".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: At yesterday's debate I was somewhat overwhelmed by the amount of concern expressed by many individuals for persons paying taxes on food and drugs. I, myself, share that concern. I believe this is a matter of morality and ethics. To me there is something immoral about taxing the very life substance that individuals depend on. I think we all know the factors involved, the question of the unfair regressive nature of a sales tax, to begin with, but when you lump upon it by taxing food, which hits those that are unemployed, those of low income groups equally as hard, just about, as the most wealthy citizens of our state, we can see that this is a tremendous burden on the low income groups.

Now, many individuals here express their concern, and I would hope they would vote for this amendment. I am sure somebody is going to get on the floor and point out that this is restrictive of the legislature and therefore they could do it, and why don't we leave this to them. I merely point out that this is directed at a restrictive—already restrictive—part of this article which has a limitation on the 4 cent sales tax. All this does is further restrict it in terms of putting it on food and drugs. I might also add that I would hope that those that are advocating flexibility, if they can't see their way clear to voting on this amendment, would then also vote down the 4 cent sales tax limitation and, much more importantly, the prohibition of a graduated income tax.

I think, in the name of honesty and sincerity, those that advocate absolute flexibility should feel constrained to do so.

However, if they do feel that it is proper to put some limitations upon what should be taxed and what should not be taxed, and especially for those that advocate a prohibition and a graduated income tax, I ask you to give some thought to those at the other end of the scale who, through no fault of their own, are not in a position to pay the taxes they are asked on the very most essential things in life. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of this amendment. I am sorry. That is out of order. I recommend it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: On behalf of the committee, I am sure we would oppose this amendment. I think that there is an honest difference of opinion in the committee and on the floor. If food and drugs should be exempted, I think it would certainly be or should be almost unanimous in the consideration that this is not something that we want to try to fix for 50 years into the constitution. We are talking here about a complicated tax structure of the state of Michigan, and to knock out one item—freeze it out at this point—just is not good government. We have cleared the way so that the state can in any revision exempt food, if it is going to levy other broad base taxes. This is not the place, and it is in no way appropriate to put such an exclusion into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, may I answer that?

I would only ask Mr. Staiger if he voted for the 4 cent limitation on sales tax, and if he also voted for the prohibition on a graduated income tax, and ask him if this is not inconsistency and tying the hands of the legislature for the next 50 years.

MR. STAIGER: Well, we left the 4 cents in there. I was one of the minority that was willing to take it out. On a graduated income tax, yes, I did vote against the prohibition on that. And I think when we get to that we will be able to develop reasons for that. I don't think that the same reasons apply here, and I cannot see any reason for freezing such an exemption into the constitution.

MR. HODGES: But you can concerning the graduated income tax; is that right?

MR. STAIGER: When we get there, I will meet that issue for you.

MR. HODGES: Then it is whose ox is being gored, is that right?

MR. STAIGER: I don't think this—excuse me, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hodges amendment. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, as Bob has already indicated, I don't think that there is any student of taxation who has not been told, or anyone who has taken basic economics in college, who has not read that we are talking about perhaps the most regressive form of taxation that was ever devised for the public. This has been recognized ever since sales taxes first came into vogue in this country, and it has also been recognized that taxes being something in the nature of a necessary evil or a necessary burden, that you have to rationalize certain taxes and rationalize inequities of them, and that is what we do every time we raise the sales tax a little bit. We rationalize as we go out and tell people that they ought to vote for the sales tax because, after all, it is painless. You don't have to fill out a return at the end of the year. You don't have to go to a lot of trouble. It is cheap for the state of Michigan to collect it. They are already collecting 2 cents; why not 3? Three; why not 4, and on ad infinitum. So finally we reach a point where we say, provided, however, that there shall be no tax of this kind in excess of 4 per cent. The question comes up, however, why no more than 4. Why not more than 3½ or 4½? The answer is that the taxation committee is faced with the realities of life that although we started out with a regressive tax and it has been no less regressive, the tax has reached its saturation point.

Now, a lot of people in this convention have been talking about the urgency and the need for tax reform, and this suggested constitutional amendment would, in the opinion of those who originally put it in as a delegate proposal and last night revised it after we heard people like Mr. Van Dusen expressing their concern for the possibility of doing this, and what we took to be their preference for being able to do this in the near future as a part of an overall tax reform program, this encouraged us and we revived it in the form of this amendment. Now, I am informed that what this would amount to at the present time would be a reduction in sales tax income of approximately ¼. This would have the almost immediate effect, if we leave the earmarking as it is, of giving a form of relief to a segment of the population that would remove from the tax pot that last penny that was put on. The tax would stay the same, but the net effect to the general fund of the state of Michigan would be affected in the same manner as removing the last penny. There is no sense in anybody assuming that by giving this sort of tax relief we are not going to take a serious bite out of the general fund.

Who are we talking about taking care of? Starting out with a regressive tax, we make it even more regressive when we are one of the states that makes no exception for the basic necessities of life. Mr. Staiger has indicated that he would object to this sort of a provision being in the constitution because he says: why freeze in, for the next 50 years, this sort of a restriction? Well, I submit to you that if there is anyone in this room who can come up with the wildest possible dream that will say that we are going to have something to replace the necessity for food, regardless of your condition and status in life, in the next 50 years, then I will ask my cosponsors to withdraw this amendment. I think that we are here talking about something that is as constant as life and death. I know that we are going to have the same needs in the next 50 years.

The one possible change would be in some tremendous miraculous conversion that would result in the people of the state spending an infinitesimal amount of their total income for food. This is not the case, however. The vast majority of the people in the lower income levels spend a major portion of their money for food, for the basic necessities of their families, and one of the places that they take the biggest single bite out of their weekly budgets is in the grocery store. Now, we say that we want to encourage industry, so we exempt property to be used in industrial processes. We say we want to encourage agriculture so we exempt products to be used in agriculture, and then we turn around and tax those products at the consumer level, and in many instances, tax them in such a fashion as to impose unfairly and unjustly on people who can ill afford it, a percentage reduction of the effective tax dollar that they have for necessities.

Who does it hit the hardest? One of the delegates yesterday was talking seriously about the plight of the people with a fixed income, and when I think of the people with a fixed income I think not only of the governmental employees who have relatively fixed incomes, but the people who really have fixed incomes, that is the pensioners. These people are living on dollars that were calculated several years ago, many of them; they are living on basic subsistence levels, and we are saying to them, "You have your home paid for, you have all of the other things you need, you are now at the age where your biggest expense is providing for food for yourself and your family, but we are going to continue taxing you at the same rate as all of the rest of us." This is not in any way recognizing what I think we inevitably have to come to in this convention, as they are coming to over on capitol hill, that whatever new tax form you come up with is going to have to, in some way, relate itself to the ability to pay that tax; that we can't keep levying taxes indefinitely without regard to the ability of the person against whom the tax is levied to pay the tax.

I think that Dr. Hannah came up with a phrase that I had not heard before he used it. He talked about the economically disadvantaged people in this state. I am not really sure that Dr. Hannah and I have the same definition in mind, but I think that we have many economically disadvantaged people in this state who are being further disadvantaged by continuance of the sales tax on food, and although the amendment in its present language is a little broader, it was originally our intent to restrict it to prescription drugs, which I think is a distinction that everyone would perhaps grasp at immediately.

I think now we have a chance to determine whether or not we want to start the tax in fiscal reform in the state by saying to the legislature, "Here is a limit of 4 cents. You can't go further on this sales tax." Not only that, we are going to say to you that it is far past time that you take this off of food and prescription drugs and give this recommendation, and now you find a way to come up with a tax program that this state really needs.

There are many people in this room who are intimately familiar with various forms of a tax reform that are given very little consideration over there because it is much easier, over on capitol hill, to slide by by putting another penny on the sales tax, or putting a few cents on cigars and what have you, than it is to really face up to the problem. If you want to really give these fellows a chance to take the problem by the scruff of the neck and do something with it, let's indicate it. This is one way to do it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, we are again falling into the very common error of judging a tax just by itself. That always leads to wrong conclusions. If the sales tax were our sole source of revenue, it would indeed be unfair, unfair to the little fellow; but it is not the sole source of revenue. If the property tax were the only source of revenue, as it was 50 years ago, it would be atrocious, but it is not the only source of revenue. The only way to judge a tax fairly is to judge it just as part of the entire tax system. One part of it may be too hard on the little fellow, another part of it may be too hard on the big fellow. To judge it fairly we need to see how it fits in, and when you take all of the taxes together, then is the little fellow unfairly treated, are the big fellows unfairly treated? Where do we need to make the change? To take out 25 to 30 per cent of the state's income from the sales tax without replacing it is simply out of the question.

In the constitution, we set out to lay down the broad rules within which the legislature must work. The time may come when the legislature is in a position to take the tax off of food and replace it immediately with something else. It should be left to them to do, not here.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, and directing this to Mr. Hodges particularly, as a former merchant I would be remiss if I didn't call the attention of the committee to the complications involved in bookkeeping by taking part of your inventory out of taxation and leaving the other part in. Most of the smaller merchants are trying to operate as efficiently as possible within their budgets, and many of these items, when you exclude part of them from the tax and leave part of them taxed, requires more bookkeeping and more help. Of course, that makes more payroll too but it is one of those things that it is difficult for a small merchant to work with. I know at the time when I was in the store, certain agricultural articles were exempted — and they still are — and there was always a complication in keeping track of the bookkeeping on those things. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate Mr. Gover's concern for the merchants. I would only point out that other states do exempt it and they seem to be able to do it with the least amount of difficulty. It seems to me, when we measure the inconvenience of the merchants against the dire need of an unemployed person that is asked to pay taxes with no revenue coming in, this is a small price to pay, indeed. And as long as we are directing questions, I would just direct a simple question to Mr. Brake.

Sir, do you feel that any type of taxation on a person who has been unemployed through no fault of his own can, at all, be equitable?

MR. BRAKE: Everyone should contribute something to the support of his government.

MR. HODGES: Including those that have no revenue whatsoever?

MR. BRAKE: If they have no revenue whatsoever they are on welfare.

MR. HODGES: Well, I shouldn't bring this in, I suppose, but I have a father who is 59 years old who has been unemployed since March of 1961. He pays sales tax on food. He pays his property taxes, and yet, has exhausted even his unemployment benefits as of 6 months ago. Now, I realize that as the child of that parent I have obligations to him, but I also point out the unfairness of asking individuals such as this, who have worked for the same corporation in this state for some 27 years and have been laid off, through no fault of their own, to try to pick up the excess burden of taxation on the necessities of life.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, I have always been puzzled, and I would like an answer, if I could get it here. I teach in an area where large numbers of the parents of the children I teach are on welfare or on ADC, and I am always puzzled as to what the state gains or local government gains in giving these people money on which to live and then taking it back in sales tax.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I am glad that Mr. Brake brought up the question of the total tax picture because I would just like to quote 2 sentences from what I believe to be an impartial study put out by the institute of public administration of the University of Michigan, entitled Taxation in Michigan, an Appraisal, by Mr. Harvey E. Bretscher. I believe Mr. Bretscher is probably the best tax authority on Michigan tax structure and tax problems that we have. He said that Michigan's state and local tax structure appears to be substantially regressive in the income range up to $10,000 and progressive thereafter. This characteristic is attributable to the heavy reliance upon general and selective sales taxes and the property tax and, for families with incomes in excess of $10,000, the progressive impact of the federal tax system.

Therefore, it seems to me, coming from the area which I represent, consisting of a high proportion of people in the lower income groups, consisting of a great number of people who are unemployed, and consisting of a great proportion of people on fixed incomes — that is, pensioners — it seems to me that this amendment would lock into the constitution some tax relief for these people and therefore I would favor this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I would like to say just a few words. The words this morning remind me of some of the arguments we had last night. We are trying to devise a program for complete tax reform. Just by taking out foods and drugs does not allow the legislature enough room to work in. If we took out the 4 per cent limit, let them, if they have to, take out foods and drugs but perhaps raise the sales tax limit to 5 per cent or 6 per cent on other items, you might have a program. But here again you are only talking about one thing. I think if we wish to give the legislature a complete package to work with we should look at all the facts and not just one angle. So I would oppose this particular amendment, but I think if you wish to go into a more complete picture perhaps we should tie this in with, maybe, taking off the 4 per cent limit. This would allow the legislature to adjust the tax picture in any year in which they would operate to the best advantage for all the people. So, again, we are getting into specifics when we should be looking into the general program of taxes.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the sponsors of this amendment if they propose to exempt the sale of foods in restaurants, taverns, other public places? Would someone answer that?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: This is not my intention, Mr. Iverson, and I would hope that if this amendment is adopted, we would write that into the report regarding it, and also guidelines for statutory implementation of what would be considered and not considered. I would not consider restaurants in this matter.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I submit that the amendment was submitted by the delegates and they must have intended to include food, which the proposers of the amendment and myself buy at the Jack Tar and other places.

MR. HODGES: This may seem rather heartless, Mr. Iverson, but I am not particularly concerned with people of your economic level in this taxation. (laughter)

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, incidentally, the same is true so far as Mr. Hodges is concerned. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The delegates will please refrain from personal references to each other. Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me, as one of the signatories on this particular amendment, that the sole question we are really going to answer by our vote is whether or not the legislative tiger can be expected to change his stripes. We have had many fond hopes expressed, especially yesterday, when we entered upon this general subject matter, about the possibility — and yes, the probability — that the legislature in the coming session would overhaul the entire tax structure of the state of Michigan and come up with something that was more meaningful in our time. The proponents of this particular hope have also been encouraging us to free the hands of the legislature, to give them a little freer reign so that they may have more flexibility; I believe they used the words "flexibility to revamp this structure". Now, too often, from my point of view, flexibility and freedom do not necessarily mean the intrinsic right to be left alone, but flexibility and freedom mean the intrinsic right to aggrandize yourself or your group at the expense of other people or groups, and this is why we have had the polarization of the philosophies on the matters in question.

Now, I don't think that we can reasonably expect the old legislative tiger to change his stripes and I think since Mr. Hutchinson has indicated, say, a week ago that we are becoming more and more like the legislature — and I hope not; I hope not, personally, but perhaps we are and perhaps I am contributing to that; it is a rather insidious process and I don't really know where we stand at this juncture — but, if we are the alter ego of the legislature, since we are a product of what I consider a malapportioned legislature, and we are therefore a malapportioned body, I think this particular vote on this matter will give an indication of whether or not the legislature can really, hopefully be entrusted to overhaul the fiscal structure of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Brake made a valid point when he said that we should consider the past structure as a whole. I have heard great concern expressed here about restrictions on the legislature. Now, as a member of the committee on finance and taxation, I will state that we are prepared to make 2 recommendations to this body, both of which have to do with restricting the legislature and both of which tend to give tax concessions to the so called "big guys". One, the flat prohibition against a graduated income tax, and 2, the reduction of the assessment on all property, real and personal, to a 50 per cent level, as opposed to the ad valorem cash value in the present constitution.

Now, if we are willing to make these 2 restrictions on the legislature in relation to the "big guys", it seems to me that we should be willing to make one concession, even within the recognized 2 to 1 relationship, to the little guys. I think 2 to 1 is only fair.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hodges amendment. As many as are in favor will signify by saying aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division is called for. Is the demand seconded? Sufficient number up. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Messrs. Hodges, Ford and T. S. Brown is as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 23, after "property" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That no sales tax shall be levied on food or medicines".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment. As many as are in favor will vote aye and as many as are opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I request the chairman's vote.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The chairman votes no.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment by Messrs. Hodges, Ford and T. S. Brown, the yeas are 48; the nays are 79.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. William F. Hanna offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 24, after "property.", by inserting "There shall be returned to the counties on a population basis, as provided by law, ¼ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, in brief support of my amendment, it appears that the forgotten person or the forgotten local government in a state collected and distributed back to local government source of revenue is the counties, and I know of no other unit of government in which the state, by state law, imposes more duties and yet gives no state supported revenues. The county government is responsible, in a large measure, for welfare, courts, jails, sheriffs' departments and other services, all of which are dependent upon the population both within a particular county and throughout the state. And, while, due to our poorly organized county government, we have no direct spokesman for county government as such, in a legislative function, the members of the board of supervisors have a primary liability to the cities and townships first, and to their counties second. I believe that of all the units of government that need relief from the property tax burden to the small home owner, it is the county government. And therefore I feel that if we are going to continue the policy of a state selected nonproperty tax revenue, certainly the counties ought to share in the distribution, as my amendment will provide.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, there is no question but what there is force in what Mr. Hanna says, but the committee, as I recall it, is unanimously opposed to any additional earmarking. As you witnessed last night, there are many members of the committee that think we have altogether too much already. They are opposed to any addition to what we have.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hanna amendment. As many as are for, will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "villages" by striking out "on a population basis"; so that the language will then read:

There shall be returned to cities, townships and villages, as provided by law, ½ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in offering this amendment to strike out the reference to a population basis, as regards the formula for sending this money back to local units of government, I do it because I cannot understand how, if we say it must be on a population basis, the legislature could send it back on any other kind of a basis. It seems to me as though on a population basis, population is population. One of the problems that came up back in 1954 was whether it was really fair to send back to the township where the southern Michigan prison is located, or to the cities and the townships where the various mental institutions are located, a sales tax attributable to the population of those institutions. You will note that the final decision back in those days was to split the problem in half and give them credit for only half of the populations in those institutions.

Now, if we adopt the committee recommendation here, it seems to me that we will be going back to the same situation that we had prior to 1954, and it doesn't seem to me to be a very good constitutional policy to so restrict, if you please, the matter in the constitution. If we send this back to cities, townships and villages, as provided by law, then, as conditions change and as times change and so on, we will have the necessary flexibility. Perhaps it should go back on a population basis. Perhaps it should go back on a need basis. Perhaps it should go back on some other kind of a basis that doesn't now occur to me, but if we permit those decisions to be made by statute law, this provision will not become obsolete as times change, but it can be accommodated to the times. This is, I believe, in the true concept of a constitution, to provide the flexibility. Just think what would have happened to the Constitution of the United States if it had been written in such restrictive language as we are writing into this constitution of Michigan. It would have been impossible of breadth and expansion, even by judicial interpretation.

I understand the wisdom of including this phrase, "as provided by law" in here, and I am led to believe that the committee thought that if we said "on a population basis as provided by law" that then the legislature would be able to define what "population" is. I disagree. I don't think that the courts would say that the legislature could define population, because population is quite specific. The legislature might be able to say as of what time the population shall be counted. In the old language it was on a decennial census basis. That might be unwise, and it might be that the committee's intention was that the legislature might provide by law for special censuses sometime within the 10 year period in order to readjust this distribution as populations change. But, nevertheless, we get right back to this: if you say "on a population basis", it has got to be according to a count of people. I submit that we walk right into the difficulty that we found ourselves in back in 1954 when, by the mere circumstances that the state government, in its wisdom, had placed certain large state institutions in certain communities, they were getting a vast amount of sales tax revenue back based upon the population in those institutions when, as a matter of fact, I think it is debatable, for instance, as to whether the population in both institutions really causes that much more demand for service upon the communities involved. Service to those institutions remains a state responsibility all the way through. It is for those reasons that I offer this amendment to strike out this phrase, "on a population basis", hoping that we will thereby have a truly constitutional flexibility and a constitutional provision which will be able to serve the state as the times and the needs and the conditions change.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, speaking on this matter for the committee, I think it's important that we all realize that Mr. Hutchinson's proposed amendment does make a major substantive change. As he points out, if the words "on a population basis" were stricken, the legislature would have, then, complete authority to determine how the half cent of sales tax earmarked for cities, townships and villages should be allocated, and they could allocate it all to one city or all to another, depending upon the exigencies at the moment.

This is a major substantive change, one that the committee on finance and taxation was unwilling to make. The changes which we have recommended are those which, in our judgment, clean up the mechanics of the system of distribution, and let me just outline for you a little bit of the history which motivated this change. We have seen in the course of the last 10 years, the 10 years between the 1950 decennial census and the 1960 decennial census natural shifts in population, particularly in the metropolitan areas where we have seen moves out of the core city into suburban communities. As a consequence, along about midpoint between the 1950 decennial census and the 1960 decennial census, some communities were getting much more than their share on a population basis. Others were getting much less than their share, but because of the inflexibility built into the present constitutional language, nothing could be done about it in the absence of a special federal census. As a consequence, we felt it was highly desirable to let the legislature have the freedom to deal with the situation so that population could be counted on a more current basis than the present constitution would permit.

It's not, I believe, correct to say that population means just population and nothing else, as Mr. Hutchinson suggested. I think the present constitution which takes 10 lines or upwards of that of your proposal to define population, belies the statement and indicates the desirability of leaving this matter up to the legislature to determine what is population, where the population is, and when. Any of our 56 lawyers knows the difficulty of defining domicile and residence. This is an inherent problem in the determination of where the population is at any given time. It is one we feel ought to be left to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I rise to speak both in favor of and against the Hutchinson amendment. (laughter) I believe I am in complete agreement with the objective he speaks about, that the populations in the state institutions should not be included in sales tax diversion. If he would rephrase the amendment to use such term as "populations excluding those in state institutions", "populations who are residing on a voluntary basis", or some other such term, I would be in complete agreement. However, when he strikes the whole term "on a population basis," I am afraid we may be throwing out the baby with the bath.

Without making a prolonged speech, I think we should review, just for a minute, the history and the reasons that we got this earmarking provision in. Speaking very candidly and frankly, one of the reasons was to bypass the legislative process and, in effect, to use earmarking and constitutionally raised and allocated money to both raise revenue and to distribute it. Without being too cynical, I am very concerned that unless there is a legislature based on population, there may not be a distribution based on population. And if the convention is willing to postpone this question until the legislative organization committee has reported, I would be very glad to review it at that time. But unless the legislature is based on population, there is a real concern that the distribution will not be on population. For that reason, I would rather see the language stand as it is now, to guarantee the population distribution.

If it is in order, Mr. Chairman, I would like to amend Senator Hutchinson's amendment to provide that the term be reinstated and say "on a population basis, except for those in state institutions". I am sorry I haven't prepared that form but I just heard the Senator's amendment read, and I believe that would take care of the legitimate problem.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs, you are reinserting all of the language which he is proposing to strike out.

MR. DOWNS: No, I am doing more than that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: You are adding some additional, I know.

MR. DOWNS: I am getting a different concept. It would then read "on a population basis, excluding those in state institutions", and I belive that is a different concept and not just reinstatement.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I wonder if you will defer your amendment to his amendment and then submit it as a separate amendment, if you wish to do so. I think we will get a fairer vote on the matter.

MR. DOWNS: All right, I will do so.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am in complete accord with what Mr. Hutchinson intends by his amendment. I also see certain dangers that might arise, as pointed out by Mr. Van Dusen, in opposition to this. I am happy that Brother Downs is both for and against, and there is an amendment on the desk, Mr. Downs, which, I think, will satisfy you and give all the protection that Mr. Van Dusen thinks there should be.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I would just like to point out that we are getting into the question of drafting again. The committee, as stated by Mr. Van Dusen, feels that this language does provide for the flexibility the legislature needs to exclude partially or completely wards or people in state institutions. This is our intent. We think that it does provide for this. Now we are getting into a question of if the language adequately provides for it, and the interpretation. This is a matter that is drafting and if there is a question on this, let's leave it to the style and drafting committee to take a look at. There is no question as to our intent here, we are arguing over the meaning of words and this is something that style and drafting, I think, would adequately take a look at and bring back at second reading. I would oppose the Hutchinson amendment and the Downs amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Division is requested. Is the demand supported? The demand is not supported.

The Chair rules that the amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2 by striking out all of lines 21, 22 and 23, which read, "At no time shall the legislature levy a sales tax on retailers at a rate of more than 4 per cent of their gross taxable sales of tangible personal property."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I now rise on a matter of principle. I commend the committee of the whole and the standing committee which reported this matter in striking out any reference to a base. Now if we really wanted to do the kind of a job which in my opinion, at least, good constitutional practice requires, we should also strike out the reference to a limitation upon rate. If there is anything that is short sighted it is to so restrict and hobble the sources of taxation, either as to trying to define the tax base or the tax rate, that you eventually force the particular source to—well, not exactly dry out, but it becomes inadequate. There are only 3 types of taxation, as has already been pointed out on this floor before; you can either tax property, or you can tax the transactions upon property or you can tax the income of property, and if the constitution so restricts all 3 of those sources of taxation, then I wonder just exactly how we, as a state, are going to be expected to meet our responsibilities.

I think that when we write the limitations of tax rates and tax bases into the constitution, we contribute to the people running down to Washington and asking the federal government to do that which they cannot do themselves because they are financially unable to do it. This is a matter of principle with me. I offer this because I felt certain that, just as I always had in the legislature at every opportunity, I would do it here too to try to remove from this constitution those matters which are so restrictive that it ends up with our not having the tools sufficient with which to meet not only the problems of today but the problems of the future.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, this brings us again to the direct clash between theory and public acceptance. The people established this 4 cent limit in November of 1960. I wonder if there is anyone in this committee who thinks that the people would have voted favorably on that proposition had there been no limit, simply authorizing the legislature to raise the sales tax.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman and members of the delegation, it is not often, of course, I find myself in disagreement with my colleague from Allegan county, Senator Hutchinson, but I do have to take issue with him on this, not as a matter of principle but as a matter of personal experience. It so happens that the commodity that I make my living at in the retail sales business is subject to what you might call a sales tax at the federal level. They happen to call it an excise tax. It was one of those taxes that was put on in world war I as a temporary measure. Now it so happened that that continued until Andrew Mellon was secretary of the treasury and it was taken off on the basis it was no longer needed. That particular tax stayed off from this commodity for almost 6 months. The Hoover administration found it necessary to put it back on on a temporary basis at 3 per cent. That temporary 3 per cent tax grew to 7 per cent during the Roosevelt administration. It grew to 10 per cent during the Truman administration. It remains today at 10 per cent. Now, after you have lived through a personal experience of that kind—taxation on a commodity that you are handling—you most certainly, not as a matter of principle but simply as a matter of personal experience, must insist on keeping the 4 per cent limitation in, insofar as the state's ability to tax any retail sale. I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: As I said yesterday, I always want to make sure that when we are getting information on anything, to always make sure that we get good information and get every bit of it. We must also remember that that tax remained for 8 years while Eisenhower was president.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The Chair rules that the amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "school districts" by striking out "2" and inserting "2½"; so the language will then read, "There shall be set aside for the school districts 2½ cents of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, yesterday Mr. Danhof raised a very good question with regard to whether the base was an adequate support for education. Mr. Staiger, Mr. Upton and other members of the finance and taxation committee made the point that the present 2 cents is not an adequate base of support and that it is necessary for supplemental funds to be provided by the legislature. I don't want to belabor this point. I simply wish to, first of all, indicate that the additional ½ cent would provide an adequate basis of support in line with, I think, what the people intended back in 1946 when they first put this amendment into the constitution. At that time the 2 cents was considered an adequate amount of support. It worked for a few years, then it was not. If we really want to update the 2 cents to an actual figure that would be more practical in terms of the cost of education, we would raise it to 2½ cents. Also, I thought of this amendment with regard to the fact that we remove the 1946 base, which, by adding the extra ½ cent, would insure the making up of the deficiency of funds that might occur if the base were changed. But, in view of the comments that have been expressed, I would like to withdraw this amendment and wait for another one to speak on, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hoxie offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 24, after "property" by inserting a colon and "Provided, There shall be excluded from such population basis of computation 50 per cent of the total number of persons who are wards, patients or convicts committed to or domiciled in any city institution located outside the boundaries of said city or committed to or domiciled in any county, state or federal tax supported institution, provided such persons were included in said federal census".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hoxie amendment. Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this amendment was proposed to cure a situation that the legislature found itself in when they submitted this amendment to the people in 1954. I might say that I have talked to the chairman of the finance and taxation committee, called this to his attention, and my fears as to what the end result would be, of the wording as we have it in the proposal.

For a little history—which I think the delegates might consider—prior to the census of 1950, the populations of our various institutions were counted in the place from whence they came. In other words, their residence. But with a change of the rules of the census bureau, those individuals confined in our state institutions were counted and credited as residents of that particular community. For instance, at Jackson prison we had located in Blackman township some 6,000 people and Blackman township, of course, got a bonanza. But you must remember that in the distribution of this money, when you siphon off those individuals living in those areas where they do have a state institution, then you are penalizing all the other units of government in the state of Michigan.

My conclusion, in reading this proposal referring to a population basis—and I don't know of any other basis that you can take than the federal census as a basis for distribution of this money—then we are right back, in my opinion, where we will be distributing to such places as Blackman township, Traverse City, because of the location of the Traverse City state hospital, and so forth, money which, in my opinion and in the opinion of the legislature, when we submitted this amendment, they were not entitled to or there was no way that you could consider that they should, with any degree of justice, receive.

I also might advise you that there was considerable argument in the legislature whether they should be given any special treatment because of the location of that institution. It was a compromise. We did reduce it from a complete count to a 50 per cent, and perhaps that could be justified on the basis that where those institutions are located they do take off from the tax roll that property that's owned by the state. So I think if you want to be careful, if you want to be sure, I think there is only one way that you can do it and that is by the adoption of the amendment I have offered. I don't think the legislature or the courts, in interpretation of this language, can draw any other conclusion but the population basis will be on the basis of the census, and I certainly urge you to adopt this amendment, if for no other reason than to make sure that we clarify the intent of this constitutional convention. I would like to also add that in the comments in relationship to this proposal there is no mention of this important phase or factor of our proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Speaking again on behalf of the committee, we would oppose this amendment. I think that once more we are getting back into specifics and putting specifics back into the constitution. If we are going to worry about how we count inmates of institutions, how about the problems of students attending universities? They count patients at hospitals for long terms. How are they going to be counted? All of those things do create some inequities in where we are going to count them. This is best, in the judgment of the committee, left up to the legislature. As Mr. Van Dusen indicated earlier, we feel that as we provided on a population basis, as provided by law, gives the legislature the freedom to determine where these individuals shall be counted.

The prior language did tie in the federal census, and so, under the present section, as it now stands in the 1908 constitution, there was no question that they are bound by the determination of the federal census. This we have not tied in with the federal census. We have said "on a population basis as provided by law", not tying it into the federal census. We feel that this gives the legislature the leeway, the freedom to decide all of these problems, and there are many more too besides the question—which is actually a small part of the overall part of it—of inmates in state institutions.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, generally speaking, I rise also to speak against the Hoxie amendment for basically the same reasons that Mr. Staiger just mentioned. I would like to say, however, I also have an amendment which I think will accomplish the purpose that we want to accomplish. If it will be in order, I will withdraw until we have voted on the Hoxie amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: I would add just one remark in answer to the question that has been raised. My interpretation—and I think the interpretation of a majority of the lawyers—would be that this only indicates, as it is now worded, "There shall be returned to cities, townships and villages on a population basis, as provided by law". In other words, it is descriptive of the fact that this money is returned to the towns, cities, and villages on a population basis. To me, there is only one interpretation that you can make when you refer to a population basis —I don't know, as I said before, how the legislature could, by law, arrive at any other basis of population than by the census. The descriptive words "as provided by law" would be the method whereby this money is distributed back to local units of government. So consider it carefully, gentlemen, because I think you are going to make a bad mistake if you don't define this in some manner so that it is settled as to how this money is to go back, as far as the population factor is concerned.

I see Dr. Anspach looking at me. This in no way affects educational units of higher learning.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The quesion is on the Hoxie amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 39:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 21, 22, 23 and 24; and on page 2 by striking out all of lines 1 through 13.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. DeVries:

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, I offered that amendment on Friday and I was not here yesterday when, I understand, you discussed the intent of the amendment. This would do away with the earmarking of the sales tax for schools and local units of government. I wanted to be on the record for this, and I withdraw the amendment at this time.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is withdrawn. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 7, after "law.", by inserting "For this purpose there shall be allocated from these funds, to such public school employees' retirement systems as shall be in effect from time to time under the laws of this state, not less than 7½ per cent of the salaries of school district employees participating in the respective retirement systems.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I am reminded of an admonition of Sam Ostrow last night about the horse that went to drink too often. I hope that I am not talking on this subject too often, but I do feel compelled to raise this one last issue. I am also impressed with the remarks of Dr. Hannah, when he said that when we voted for the highway earmarking, we had passed the point of no return on this question of earmarking. I am also impressed with the remarks of Dr. Nord, when he stated that this question of earmarking, particularly for schools, is not a question of, necessarily, a principle, but one of expediency. These provisions were written into the constitution to provide some guarantees. And also of Mr. Brake when he said we can't overlook the practical aspect of the problem of earmarking.

I am also impressed with Committee Proposal 40, which in effect provides for a contractual relationship for the beneficiaries of retirement funds and also provides for current funding of the benefits of these funds on an actuarial basis. I believe that Committee Proposal 40 was desirable and I am quite pleased, as the rest of the delegates are, that we were successful in getting this convention to approve that proposal, because it not only provides a better arrangement for the school retirement funds, but also for all public retirement funds. There is one other aspect of this which we have got to consider and that is although Committee Proposal 40 provides for a contractual relationship, and also requires that current benefits be funded currently, there is still no assurance that the legislature will provide the money.

Section 23, as presently drawn, does provide for a minimum amount of contribution to the school retirement funds, and we are seeking to retain some minimum guarantee out of this earmarking. The committee on finance and taxation has recognized the bare minimum aspects of present provisions. It should follow that any weakening of this minimum guarantee jeopardizes the system. Even the requirement in the constitution of funding accruing liability during a fiscal year is, in effect, to risk shifting of presently guaranteed legislative responsibility.

The sponsors of the amendment, seeking to retain a minimal percentage provision and to support public school employment retirement systems, urge consideration of the following. This is not an earmarking of funds, it is merely a segregation of funds already agreed on to retain such earmarked funds. It does not add one cent to earmarked funds; it merely retains the status quo of the agreed on earmarking.

Involved is the security of 130,000 school employees. Both retired and active school employees have a stake in this item. They need assurance that their contributions and their right to a retirement allowance have, at least, a basic security. Placing a contractual relationship on service is not enough. This is fine, but it does not provide money with which to finance the contract. Providing that the legislature shall finance current service on a current basis is not enough. In itself, it is good. It should be extended to cover the past service of persons still in service, and all the service of persons already retired. If this isn't done, the actual provision is not as good as the one now in the constitution.

Even with full financing of all service and constitutional provisions, the constitutional provisions should be kept. Providing that the legislature shall do certain things does not constitute doing them. No one can mandamus the legislature. To remove the present guarantee without providing a better one is to pull the rug from under the security of school employees. The present guarantee should be kept as a base, with improved provisions to assure adequate financing within a reasonable time. The new constitutional guarantee does not conflict with providing adequate financing, and this point should be made clear: there is no conflict between what is requested here and the provisions of, I think, Committee Proposal 40.

The present provision merely states—or at least the recommended provision merely states—that 7½ per cent of school district payrolls shall be allocated from already earmarked funds to the retirement systems of school employees. This does not preclude additional provision for the retirement system from the general fund and is not at all in conflict with proposals for additional financing. It merely seeks to retain a basic, even though inadequate, financing until a better basis is provided. There is no need to destroy this basic assurance for 130,000 school employees. This does not provide additional or new constitutional guarantees for a special interest group. The money is already earmarked in the school aid fund. The persons served are the same persons for whom earmarking has been approved, and the same money is involved.

Retirement is deferred salary. School aid money is used for salaries, and the portion segregated for the retirement system is merely a division of that money already provided for the salaries, so that a portion of it will be paid as deferred salary on retirement allowances. A review of the history of financing for the Michigan school employees' retirement system discloses that the legislature has shown a reluctance to appropriate to meet current funding requirements. Before adoption of the 1954 guaranteeing amendment to the constitution, the legislature had never appropriated more than $9 million in a single year for school employees' retirement. Under the provisions of the guaranteeing amendment, the school retirement system received over $38 million in fiscal 1960-61. At no time has the percentage provided been sufficient to meet the obligations of the fund. However, it has been a better basic financing than the system ever had before. It is not enough but it should be improved, not discarded. It provides a base and psychological reassurance which is vital at present. To remove the base of that for retirees is hitting below the belt. I move that this amendment be adopted.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Speaking on behalf of the committee, I would like to point out, first, that we are now, on this question, leaving the field of education and talking about employees. In this field I submit that educational employees should not be any different than any other state employees. This amendment would single out for special treatment educational employees and give them something over and above the broad general provisions which the committee has recommended and which we feel adequately provides the fundamental guarantees that are needed for our present retirement systems. That section has already been passed by this body. We see no reason to single out the educational employees, as such, for something over and above this. For that reason we oppose it.

Also, tracing the history of how this came into the constitution, section 23, as we pointed out earlier, was a multiple issue amendment to the constitution. It was either take it all or not at all. This was one small section of the whole package. It did pass by a substantial majority but to say that this one section was something that the people were in favor of or opposed to is just impossible to do at this time. We feel that this language can be taken out now. We have provided that 2 cents can be used for teachers' retirement systems but, with the broad general guarantees that we have already provided, we do not feel that we have to be this specific in this section of this constitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I must confess that I am a little puzzled by the remarks and inference left by the distinguished gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin. Last week we passed Committee Proposal 40 which, in its second paragraph—referring to these accrued financial benefits—said specifically:

> All benefits arising on account of service rendered in each fiscal year shall be funded during that year and such funding shall not be usable for financing unfunded accrued liabilities.

In supporting reasons from the committee on finance and taxation, they stated, and I quote:

> . . . we have provided for these 2 systems, and all others—state or municipal—a requirement that in each fiscal year the accruing liabilities shall be funded during that year, thus keeping any of these systems from getting farther behind than they are now.

My question to the gentleman from Detroit would be: since I understood that both Committee Proposal 40 and the supporting reasons had the pretty much unanimous support of the committee on finance and taxation, and since it was stated several times during the discussion of this section that this would absolutely require the legislature, beyond any shadow of a doubt, to provide for current liabilities or current funding, as they may arise, the gentleman's amendment now would seem to indicate that he and others have doubts that Committee Proposal 40 and the supporting reasons mean what they say, and they want to write in a supporter to further strengthen it. Is that a correct interpretation, Mr. Austin?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: That is a correct interpretation. There are 2 contingencies involved. I should mention, first of all, that according to section 2 of the present constitution, the legislature is required to levy sufficient taxes to pay the estimated expenses of government. This the legislature has not done. Even though there is a requirement in the constitution that the legislature do certain things, it has not always done them. You cannot mandamus the legislature. That is my first point. Even though Committee Proposal 40, which was highly desirable, states that these accruing benefits should be funded on a current basis, there is still no assurance that the legislature will do it.

Secondly, it is within the legislature's power to shift the burden of responsibility, if it desires to do so, back to the school districts. What we are seeking to do is merely guarantee in the constitution what is already there, that at least 7½ per cent of the payrolls be earmarked or set aside from the 2 cents of sales tax that is earmarked.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, if I can respond again to the gentleman; in the first place, as I recall the discussion of last week there was no positive assurance that the entire amount—and I believe the figures quoted were 11¼ per cent outstate and 15½ per cent in Detroit—there was no positive assurance given that the entire amount might not conceivably come from the school districts, although it was deemed unlikely, and I agree with that interpretation. But secondly, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that we have reached a point in our discussions here which goes far beyond the scope of the Austin amendment, and that is to the effect, is it possible for this convention to write anything into the constitution which will absolutely require the legislature to take certain actions or, if we are to agree with the remarks of the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin, since we can't specifically force the legislature to do anything in this constitution, have we got to review all of our actions and require, in every particular case, some compelling reason that the legislature could not ignore, even if it so desired. It seems to me that that is what we are up against at this point.

MR. AUSTIN: I don't believe we are attempting to go quite that far. All we are attempting to do is say that this money shall be used for this purpose, just as we are saying that gas and weight taxes shall be used for highways. We are saying that 2 cents of the sales tax shall be set aside for schools, of which a certain portion is for retirement. Now, when we earmark these items, it simply means that the legislature shall not spend these moneys for another purpose. We are not actually trying to mandamus the legislature. We are confessing that we can't mandamus the legislature, we merely want to earmark this money.

MR. BENTLEY: Nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, I submit to my distinguished friend that what we are actually doing, if his amendment were adopted, is to say that we have already written in a specific proviso that the legislature shall do thus and so and then we are saying in effect, "We still don't trust you and we are going on and making sure you do it by putting in a separate earmarking provision."

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, just a few more comments on this in support of the committee proposal and in opposition to the amendment. As Mr. Staiger pointed out, this committee of the whole last Friday adopted a general proposal with respect to public employee retirement systems, which is broad in its application and covers all public employees, whether they are employees of the state or of a school district or of a municipality. That being the case, it seems not only unnecessary but undesirable to single out one category of public employees—public school employees—and make a specific provision for them in the constitution. If you are going to make specific provision for public school employees, why not specific provision for policemen, for firemen, for probate judges, for circuit judges, for any other category of public employees whose security is no less important than that of the category we are now talking about. In other words, because we have adopted a broad and general proposal, it seems highly undesirable to tack on a specific one for one category.

Second, I think it was very generally agreed last Friday that the broad proposal is a good and desirable one which provides first a contractual right on the part of public employees to receive their deferred compensation, and second, mandates the legislature to currently fund the pension system so that that money will be available. The proposition which is embodied in this amendment is admittedly, by its sponsors, inadequate, and what I submit they suggest is that having put a Buick in the front yard they now want to keep the horse and buggy in the garage just in case. I think that is undesirable.

Finally, I would simply point out what should be obvious, that this is simply earmarking on top of earmarking and if earmarking in the first place is not desirable, as Dr. Nord pointed out last night, earmarking on top of earmarking is even less desirable.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: I concur with Mr. Van Dusen, Mr. Chairman. I am not very facile with figures, but I would like to give Mr. Austin just a few. Since he is an accountant, I am sure a few more won't bother him a bit. I understand from latest available figures that we are increasing our school population approximately 50,000 pupils a year. That means we will have 2,000 new teachers a year with approximately 1,700 new classrooms a year, and total employees of 2,210 a year getting salaries of approximately $10 million or $11 million a year, 7½ per cent of which is about $828,000. If this is supposed to be an amendment for schools, the employees soon are going to crowd the schools out of the picture.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, several remarks have been directed to me and I think I would like to respond with some figures. I would like to quote just a few figures that indicate what the legislature has done for the state retirement fund over the past few years. In 1945 or fiscal '45-'46 the legislature appropriated $2,500,000 for pensions; in 1946-47, $2,500,000; in 1947-48, $3,800,000; in 1948-49, $6,400,000; in 1949-50, $6,500,000; in 1950-51, $6,600,000; and in 1951-52, it dropped back to $4,800,000; 1952-53, $4,500,000; 1953-54, $4,500,000; and in 1954-55, $4,600,000. And then following the Conlin amendment, which was passed in 1954 and provided for earmarking of sales tax for school retirement, this same fund received $11,842,000; in 1956-57, $14,700,000; in 1957-58, $20,700,000; in 1958-59, $26,850,000; in 1959-60, $26 million; and in 1960-61, $36 million. These are the amounts that have gone into the school retirement fund since the diversion amendment was enacted—or let's say the Conlin amendment in 1955. Now, were it not for the Conlin amendment, I think we would all agree that the amounts that the legislature in all probability would have appropriated would have ranged around $6 million for this fund.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question, if I may, to Mr. Van Dusen. It has to do with the reference to the fact that in this case the teachers be a preferred group. Isn't it so that some of the retirement funds of the state were funded from the first? If so, where are we a preferred group?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think there are only 2 of many public employee retirement systems which on any actuarial basis have been properly funded from the start. Most of the public employee retirement systems of the state are not much better funded than those of the teachers. In particular, the municipal employees' retirement systems, as witnessed in recent litigation in Detroit, are not properly funded and are not being properly funded currently.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, in response to Mr. Van Dusen's point, this last point, I think that we should be aware of the fact that we are not starting from the beginning. It is unfortunate that we cannot write into the constitution protection for the firemen and the policemen. However, the public school employees—and this includes teachers but is much broader than simply teachers—have this protection at the present time under the present constitution. By the acceptance of the majority report we are depriving them of this protection and I wonder how they will be reacting to it.

I would like to direct a question to Mr. Bentley because last Friday I thought he raised a very cogent point, and that was the problem of shifting this burden to the local school districts from the legislature. I ask Mr. Bentley, if we don't have some provision like this, will not that burden be shifted from the state back to these local school districts?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: In reply to the gentleman whom I am unfortunately unable to see, but whom I assume is one of the cosponsors of the amendment, Mr. Binkowski, it is my understanding that we did receive assurances during the discussions last Friday on this matter but it was felt that for obvious reasons the state or the legislature would not increase the burden on the school districts beyond what it is now. It might even alleviate it. I would have to refresh my memory as far as the transcript is concerned, but I do point out that I would be hopeful that the legislature would take action to keep these liabilities currently funded without creating any more hardships for the individual school districts than they already have in many cases.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, it seems to me that the position taken by Mr. Austin and the others on this amendment is bad psychology from the viewpoint of friends of the schools. Mr. Austin should remember that we did not in those years that he gave us the figures from, where they were appropriating insignificant sums, have any constitutional command that they should do otherwise; all they had was statutory. And now, if our Committee Proposal 40 goes through, we are to have a constitutional mandate saying "you shall". Now, if you say to the legislature, "You shall put in what now amounts to 12¼ per cent of the payroll in the outstate system" and then at the same time we shall express the doubt that it is going to follow the constitution and say, "Anyway, you must put in 7½ per cent," aren't you slightly inviting the legislature to disregard your top figure and pay attention to the bottom one?

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Spitler, do you wish to speak?

MR. SPITLER: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I feel that I should say a word on this in support of the amendment and I want to say the reason for that. I have stated here 2 or 3 times during the last 2 or 3 days, and I don't want to belabor that point, but I do feel that I should take a stand for it. The fear that I have is the one that I have expressed often here, that this will be passed back to the local school districts. I know the theory has been advanced here that we should allow all funds to go into a general fund, that the legislature then could consider all these and allocate as the need might be. You who have had any experience at the legislature know it just doesn't happen that way. When we get down to the last few days of the sessions of the legislature, it is a matter of who can exert the most pressure. There are pressures exerted from every source to secure a cut in that revenue. I am sure, and I feel definitely that when we earmark certain funds for a certain purpose the people have determined that we are removing at least a large share of those funds from this battle that occurs in the last session days of the legislature.

When the 2 cent sales tax was passed, it included this 7½ per cent for the retirement fund, and it was included not only that it would provide money, as Mr. Austin has said, but it was also included that it might encourage and almost require that the legislature appropriate those funds directly to the 2 retirement systems, and that is the danger that I am most fearful of. I have worked in this for 40 years. I know the problems back on the local school district level. If you are going to return, as the legislature may do when they get into the last days of the session and say, "We just don't have enough funds, we are going to return the entire 2 cents to the school districts and we are going to let them take care of the retirement," and where you have nearly 2,000 school districts, and when you know those districts as I know them and know the manner of accounting that they take care of, I am sure that you are endangering a fund here provided for schools and you are endangering a fund for those school teachers who are teaching in districts where there is poor accounting.

I am speaking in favor of the amendment for the reason that I feel we should still require the legislature, that we should encourage—and if at all possible require—the legislature to make those payments directly to the 2 retirement funds in 1 payment or 6 payments, as they are doing it now, and remove this danger of having to go back to 2,000 school districts, some which might meet this requirement and some which might not. I am in favor of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, in response to the remarks of my distinguished chairman, Mr. Brake, he criticized, I think, the psychological aspect of this proposition. I would like to respond by saying that we are requiring in this constitution that the state or that schools shall be encouraged and that funds shall be provided for the maintenance of schools. At the same time we are asking that 2 cents of the sales tax be set aside as a minimum guarantee for their support. I hold that the psychology involved in asking for the minimum base for the retirement is no different from the minimum base that we are asking for the school support.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: I don't want to engage in any argument. I would just like to clear up a point, Mr. Bentley, and that is this: that the committee on finance and taxation, in recommending Committee Proposal 40, which was adopted last week, certainly did not intend that the legislature should shift that burden back to the local school districts, but I think that you should be keenly aware, and everyone here should be keenly aware of the fact that under the present provisions there would be nothing in the constitution which would prevent the legislature from doing so if in its ultimate wisdom it desired to do so. This is a distinct possibility without the adoption of our amendment.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Austin-Binkowski amendment. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? Sufficient number up. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Will the secretary reread the amendment, please, so you are familiar with it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin and others have offered the following amendment:

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I believe it would be a good idea if we get the pages to go down through the hall announcing that we are taking a vote on this. This is of extreme importance and I think the delegates all would like to vote on it.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: We have a great many important questions coming up and it is the responsibility of the delegates to be here when the votes are called. We will ring the bell as we have been doing.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is now locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Austin and others, the yeas are 66, the nays are 66.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 7, after "law.", by inserting "There shall be set aside for the public universities, colleges, junior and community colleges, ½ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property to be allocated on a membership basis as shall be prescribed by law.".

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I hate to follow this other close vote here, but yesterday the members of this committee were in favor of earmarking a certain basic minimum support for the public elementary and secondary schools in our state. I think that our commitment to a minimum support of education is a wonderful thing and ought to be extended—extended to the higher institutions of learning, junior community colleges and the universities. I know that the additional ½ cent here is not going to provide the support itself, but in terms of our total commitment to education and in terms of being consistent with our previous action, it would seem to be in keeping with both of these features if we maintained the same and did provide for a minimum amount of support for the public higher institutions of learning. I take into account the fact that Mr. Brake feels that we don't want to add any more earmarking to the sales tax levy and if we had eliminated earmarking entirely then we wouldn't be in the process of attempting to divide it up to take care of the future interests of the state. But we are engaged in the process of dividing it up. We have already committed it to a 2½ cent diversion and if it seems that we are here concerned with giving a minimum support to higher education, we would be equally concerned with adding another ½ cent to that appropriation. And so I offer this amendment in terms of being consistent with supporting elementary and secondary education. We oughth to give some minimum support to higher education.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Faxon has stated the committee's position exactly. We are opposed to any additional earmarking.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Faxon amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Tubbs has filed with the secretary the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 24, after "property" by inserting "and the balance thereof shall be distributed to all inhabitants as of December 25 each year". (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The Chair was about to rule that the delegate must be present to have his amendment presented. Mr. Tubbs is here now. Mr. Tubbs, do you wish to speak on this amendment?

MR. TUBBS: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I was in the research department for a moment. (laughter) I wanted to be sure that December 25 was still Christmas. (laughter) We have shown so much concern for the voters of the state of Michigan in this convention that I thought we really ought to do something that would win their applause. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Tubbs amendment. All those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "villages on a" by striking out "population basis" and inserting "basis related to population"; so that the language will read:

> There shall be returned to cities, townships and villages on a basis related to population, as provided by law, ½ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to first congratulate Delegate Tubbs on his sense of humor. The second thing that I would like to do is try and point out a problem which I think might expedite our maneuvers a little bit. I offered my amendment earlier when Mr. Hoxie's amendment was being considered and Mr. Hutchinson's amendment, but because it was related to mine, it was deferred and held over until we had considered a number of other problems. I would like to inquire at this time if it is not possible for the secretary to group amendments when they come up so that those bearing on a particular point under discussion at the moment could be disposed of before we depart and go to another area within the same proposal in the future. I think this would be helpful because we don't have to switch gears so often to go back and forth.

However, I would like to get back to the subject. I completely agree with Senator Hutchinson's proposition that the population should be deleted entirely and give the legislature the authority to do this distributing on a basis as provided by law. However, like Mr. Downs, I also feel that population should be a very considerable factor in that distribution. I also agree with Mr. Hoxie about 50 per cent, because I don't think that inmates in state institutions which do not have any bearing on local problems should be considered in this distribution, and so I would like to change the wording to read, "basis related to population." I have put one word in which may be considered by some to be indefinite, but at the same time it will indicate to those who will interpret the constitution that we would want the distribution to be on a basis related to population and leave the door open to the legislature to define by law exactly how they will do the distributing. So I would therefore ask that you support my amendment and I think that it will accomplish a purpose which we all desire.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Replying on behalf of the committee, this is once more an attempt to do a drafting job in the committee of the whole. As we stated before, the committee feels the intent is the same as Mr. Hubbs feels would be accomplished by his amendment. We think it already provides for that. If it does not, they are certainly going to have a chance to review it in style and drafting, and I think that is the place to do this type of work, where we are agreed on the intent and it is just a question of the words that we are talking about. We would oppose this and any other amendments to this section until we have had a chance to review it, until style and drafting has had a chance to review this question.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I would move to make it an 80-20 formula, make it an 80 per cent population, 20 per cent land, which is the one we seem to be going to use in apportionment, and this would therefore be consistent.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think earlier in the agreement concerning Senator Hutchinson's proposition it was said that this was a definite, substantive change, and I cannot understand now how the committee reverses its position and says that it's a matter for style and drafting. If earlier in the argument it was a substantive change, it is still a substantive change, and I think that the words that I propose will eliminate the doubt as to what the legislature can do. If Mr. Hutchinson says—he being an eminent constitutional authority—that this limits the legislature, then I think that my wording would tend to loosen it up a little bit so that they could make the decision the way it should be made.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would simply state in response to Mr. Hubbs, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Hutchinson's amendment proposed to delete population entirely as a criterion and Mr. Hubbs' amendment simply makes it clear, as the committee proposal intends to, that the legislature is to determine the population basis for distribution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Hubbs has stated my exact reason for opposing what he says. He says it will loosen it up for the legislature. I certainly think it will loosen it up for the legislature. What the word "related" means is so indefinite that the legislature could go most anywhere and with the facility that the courts have for traveling off the beam in these days, the 2 of them together would have a field day. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Hubbs amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "law,", by inserting "excluding those in state institutions other than those of higher education,"; so the language will read:

> There shall be returned to cities, townships and villages on a population basis, as provided by law, excluding those in state institutions other than those of higher education, ½ cent of a state sales tax levy on each dollar of sales of tangible personal property.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I believe this amendment, in a sense, is an argument against trying to do things on the floor—after the original suggestion was brought to my attention that the wording would have excluded universities where people do spend money and receive services. This would exclude people in state institutions, such as patients in mental institutions, which Senator Hutchinson mentioned earlier today. I think it is along the principles of the amendment offered by Delegate Hoxie, and if this is adopted I would be very glad to have style and drafting do some improving on the language, but the principle here is sound. It does provide that the sales tax would be returned on a population basis, and we would exclude those exceptional situations, such as the prisoners. I urge its support.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Downs amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? Sufficient number up. As many as are in favor of Mr. Downs' amendment will vote aye. As many as are opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the amendment proposed by Mr. Downs, the yeas are 56; the nays are 66.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: These are all the amendments on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 39 is passed.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I rise for a parliamentary inquiry. I would like a ruling whether it is proper to request or demand the vote of the Chair in the committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: I will have to consult the secretary. Mr. Hoxie, there is nothing in the rules, as far as I know, which permits the vote of the Chair to be demanded, but there is also nothing in the rules which prevents the Chair from voting. My understanding, just as a matter of general practice, is that if the Chair wants to express himself on matters before the committee of the whole, that he relinquishes the Chair, but on the matter of a vote, it is my understanding that he can vote or not, as he pleases; that his vote cannot be demanded.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: I rise on a point of personal privilege for a comment that might be of assistance to Chairman Brake. These 2 duck hunters were out. They had fine shooting all day, excellent shooting, but they missed all the ducks. Along about 6:00 o'clock at night, Bill said, "Joe, we have had fine shooting all day long but we haven't bagged a duck." He said, "That's right. Tell you what we'll do; we'll miss 2 more and then we'll go home." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct this question to the Chair or the secretary. It seems that this is the first time that this has happened, but we have been considering for the past 2 or 3 days, a committee report that on the floor does not have a majority of the committee itself. We have had a minority report signed by 7 people against the committee proposal, an additional minority report signed by 3 other people against the committee report, and 1 member of the committee not present when the vote was taken. So the 20 man committee had 20 members; we have 10 people from the committee signing the minority report, and one additional person, who has signed neither of the minority reports, standing up and supporting one of the minority reports; so we have 11 people out of 20 not supporting the committee proposal, and I wonder what kind of a position this puts us in.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Your difficulty, sir, is that the minorities were not the same on the various phases of the problem. There has been nothing reported to the floor that didn't have 11 or more votes on each specific proposition. Your minorities were not the same people in connection with the different parts of the question.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I may stand corrected, but I thought that both minority reports were complete substitutions for the committee proposals. In fact, I thought one of the Republican minority reports made that pretty clear.

MR. BRAKE: I wish that you wouldn't put that name in there at all. There wasn't a single division that was based on party politics in this whole issue.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would be willing to have that stricken. This is just a means of identification here, but in the report signed by the 3 members rather than the 7 members, I thought they pointed out definitely that this was in substitution.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Mahinske, my understanding is that a majority of the committee signs the entire committee proposal, and this is, I believe, in accordance with the rules. Of course, the rules do permit minority reports by any 3 members of the committee on any phase of the committee report. Therefore, on certain occasions members of the committee may vote to report out a committee proposal but may reserve their right to put in a minority report on some particular phase of it as has been done here on the floor.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 3 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 36, A proposal with reference to the use to be made of the primary school interest fund, covering the subject matter now found in article X, section 1 of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 36 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE REVENUE DERIVED FROM all subjects of taxation now contributing to the primary school interest fund [under present laws shall continue to contribute to that fund, and all taxes from such subject shall be first applied in paying the interest upon the primary school, university and other educational funds in the order herein named, after which the surplus of such moneys shall be added to and become a part of the primary school interest fund.] SHALL BE USED EXCLUSIVELY FOR AND INCLUDED IN THE ANNUAL LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION FOR STATE AID TO PUBLIC EDUCATION.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 36:

The primary school interest fund originated from the sale of the sixteenth section of each township, which was given to the state by the federal government for the support of public schools. The fund so originated was never kept intact, but instead interest has been paid by the state as if there were actually a fund, but to that interest has been added the revenues derived from the inheritance tax, corporation organization fees, foreign insurance companies tax and the ad valorem taxes on railroads, telephone and telegraph, car loaning, express companies and escheats. The amount has grown rapidly and is now running around the amount of $60 million per year.

So far under the requirements of the law this money has been distributed to the school districts of the state on a school population basis, not on a membership basis. We are advised by an opinion of the attorney general that there is nothing in the relationship of the federal government and the state, or otherwise, which prohibits a different form of distribution, or in fact prohibits the abolition of these taxes altogether. We are therefore recommending that the funds be retained for schools but that the distribution be under the school aid formula, which rests in part upon a membership rather than a school census basis.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Actually this makes no difference as by statute at the present time the primary school interest money is a deductible item in each district. That is to say that in determining what each school district is to receive from the state in order to bring its resources up to the standard established by the legislature—$205 per student as of now—the primary school interest money as well as the deductible millage are both deductible items. The plan of putting the primary school interest money, therefore, into the school aid appropriations simplifies the procedure but does not change the dollar amount to which the district is entitled from the state.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, while this proposal was not before us yesterday, at least 2 of the speakers included it in what they had to say, and Mr. Stevens made it unnecessary for me to make part of what would otherwise have been a speech in this connection. This has to do with the primary school interest fund. As we pointed out yesterday, it is a fund only in the books, not in actual existence.

A delegate outside the hall asked me a question the other night and I was slow in the answer. He said, "Why are you making this apply only to public education and not specifically to the schools?" The answer to that is that there are others involved. The original funds coming from the sale of section 16 in each township was not owned—if you want to put it that way—exclusively by the public schools. The University of Michigan and Michigan State University, and I believe Eastern Michigan University all have an interest in it. As of now, the University of Michigan receives interest on $548,984.40; $38,428.91, I think, was the 1960 payment. Michigan State University draws interest on $1,059,378.78, and that, in '61, amounted to $71,175. Eastern draws interest on $69,366.

All of this interest taken together, of course, is a very minor part of what is paid to public education through the primary fund. That is running now around $60 million a year and is contributed on a school census basis. This includes all the youngsters from 5 to 19, regardless of whether they are in school or not in school. Back in earlier years that meant a tremendous advantage to a public school which had a lot of parochial youngsters in the district. It is no longer true because at the present time the primary fund distributed to any district is a deductible item in the school aid, the same as the 3¼ mills constitutes a deductible item, so that the dollars that go to the school district are just the same. The attorney general was consulted as to whether our relationship with the federal government, because of this grant of the sixteenth section, prevented a change in the method of distributing, and his ruling is that it does not. He went on, gratuitously, and said that the legislature has the full power to take away from the primary school fund any of the public utilities or other corporations that are taxed to make up the fund. For instance, there is nothing to prevent the legislature from stopping the taxation of the railroads, but if they are taxed, then the money received must go into this fund under the present constitution and under our proposal.

While we have taken out a lot of language and simplified the proposal, the only real change that we have made is to say that this money shall be distributed under the school aid formula along with the 2 cents of the sales tax and any supplement that the legislature puts on. This doesn't mean a change in dollars. It does mean a simplified procedure. That is the proposal that we have before you. It is earmarking. It is the most venerable of all the earmarking we have—for many, many years, the only earmarking we had—and that was true until Senator Turner of Morley got through the legislature—I believe it was in 1931—the first school aid bill outside of the primary school fund.

Incidentally, if any of you drive 131 between Grand Rapids and Big Rapids, go through that little village of Morley and on the east side see that school house. You can attribute to it the beginning of school aid, because it was the fact that that school district was so hard put to it, after they built that building, that Senator Turner got through the first school aid bill.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I would just like to say that the committee on education has unanimously concurred in Committee Proposal 36 from the committee on finance and taxation. We do have concurrent jurisdiction.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I have a question. Where the language of the section says that all subjects of taxation shall be turned into this fund, does that mean if a different type of tax, such as income tax, say, were levied against the railroads or these utilities, that the revenue derived from an income tax would then also go into this fund?

MR. BRAKE: I think so, if it were specifically applied to those utilities that contribute. We are following there the language that was used in 1908. They simply said those subjects contributing are to continue to contribute.

MR. HATCH: So subjects does mean the utility involved and not the type of taxation?

MR. BRAKE: I think so.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I have a question. I wonder if Delegate Brake would explain with regard to the committee report what is meant by this sentence:

> We are therefore recommending that the funds be retained for schools but that the distribution be under the school aid formula, which rests in part upon a membership rather than a school census basis.

And he goes on to say actually this makes no difference.

I don't know whether I am particularly dense or what, but I don't understand what is meant by the school aid formula membership rather than school census basis and why it makes no difference.

MR. BRAKE: Perhaps I didn't go into sufficient detail. I just tried to explain that. The primary money has been and is yet distributed on a school census basis. That means every youngster—and it doesn't make any difference whether he goes to school or not—if he is between 5 and 19 years, draws so much primary money for his district.

The school aid formula, as it is ordinarily spoken of, is a legislative formula and it is changed from time to time in the legislature by which the great bulk is distributed to the schools, and there they do not go on a census basis; they go on the basis of the kids that are actually in school; in other words, a membership basis. There are other items in the formula, but the bulk of it is on the basis of membership in the school. Why doesn't it make any difference? Because in the determination of what each school is entitled to under the state aid, you set your figure in the first place, at the present time, at $205 for each youngster in school. That changes. The legislature raises it from time to time. I guess they never have lowered it, but they raise it. But at the present time it is $205. So, for this district you multiply the number of kids in school by $205. That is the minimum amount that the school ought to have. Now, you take away from that the 3¼ mills that they must raise locally. Also you take away from it the amount that they get under the primary school fund, and then you pay them what you have left, the difference in order to bring that up to $205 per youngster. There are things about transportation and so forth that enter into it but, by and large, what I have told you is the method of determining what state aid shall go to each school district.

MR. HIGGS: One further question: when you speak of the 3¼ mills, can you clarify that?

MR. BRAKE: Yes. That is what we call the deductible millage. It is an attempt, and I guess everybody agrees it is not a 100 per cent successful attempt, to equalize between the rich districts—that is, the districts that have a big tax base—and the poorer ones, between the districts that have factories and so forth and those that are the so called "bedroom" districts. If your equalization is low, what you deduct at 3¼ mills is, of course, a small figure. There the state pays more. The objective is that every youngster in the state should have equal opportunity for primary and secondary education, and this deduction of millage is supposed to equalize as between rich districts and poor districts so that the kids will have the same treatment without any argument; it doesn't just exactly achieve that but that's the objective.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, we come across the word "now" again. You have omitted "under present laws," so the word standing alone, I believe, doesn't mean anything.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I think when that question was raised yesterday, I intended to cover it. I think the word "now", I hope, means 30 days after the first Tuesday following the first Monday of November of 1962, which is the time that our new constitution should go into effect. I hope it does.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, but in the old constitution you have the words "now under present laws". It has a reference, and Mr. Brake only expressed a hope and did not include a reference here.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: If that hope isn't fulfilled, what we say here will never make any difference; we will still be under the 1908 constitution.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Upton offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "Sec. a.", by striking out "The revenue derived from all subjects of taxation now contributing to the primary school interest fund" and inserting "One-half cent of the sales tax"; so the language will read, "One-half cent of the sales tax shall be used exclusively for and included in the annual legislative appropriation for state aid to public education.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, delegates, this is again realizing that earmarking of funds is required and requested by our delegates. When you think of what the primary school interest fund consists of—the inheritance tax, the corporation organization tax, the foreign insurance company tax, the railroad tax, telephone and telegraph tax, car loading tax, express company tax, et cetera — these taxes can be varied from time to time, perhaps by the desire to have a broader base; if we wish to appropriate and keep maintained the sense of the primary school interest fund, currently these taxes approximate $60 million, which would currently amount to ½ of the sales tax. It appears to me if we wish to support education by earmarking of funds it would be much easier for our state administration to have all the earmarking coming from one area and allowing the legislature to then deal with the other taxes as they see fit.

To me, this would keep the earmarking for educational purposes from coming from one area. Therefore, the primary school interest fund would be maintained as it has been with the certain revenues coming from the sales tax and not from a variety of taxes, but can go up and down, which in the future may need to be changed by the legislature. I feel this, in a sense, would maintain the sense of the primary school interest fund.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Upton amendment. The secretary will read the amendment, please.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Upton's amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Upton amendment. As many as are in favor—Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this change would, of course, change the traditional law of Michigan which has dedicated these funds for so many years it is beyond my memory, and probably the memory of all of us. I think we should hesitate before we do something of that sort.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the Upton amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 36 is passed.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN MARTIN: The question is on the motion that the committee now rise. As many as are in favor will say aye. As many as are opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and the committee will now rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain matters on which the secretary will give a detailed report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 39, A proposal with reference to the earmarking of sales tax revenues covering the subject matter of section 23 of article X of the 1908 constitution. The committee of the whole reports the proposal back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. Hodges, Mr. Ford and Mr. T. S. Brown offer the following amendment to the proposal:

1. Amend page 2, line 23, after "property" by inserting a colon and "Provided however, That no sales tax shall be levied on food or medicines".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. President, I request a recorded roll call vote on this.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Hodges. The yeas and nays have been demanded. Is the demand seconded? Sufficient number up.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is as follows: Amend page 2, line 23, after "property" by inserting a colon and the proviso: "Provided however, That no sales tax shall be levied on food or medicines".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, say no.

The motion does not prevail.

The question is on the amendment of Mr. Hodges. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Hodges, Ford and T. S. Brown, the yeas are 46; the nays are 79.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. President, is it in order to ask for a roll call vote on the amendment as voted upon last night by the committee of the whole on the substitute proposal of the minority of 3?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Do you have something on the desk, Mr. Upton?

MR. UPTON: No, sir. I move to have our minority report placed before the convention as a whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: We have 3 other amendments, Mr. Upton. Would you please prepare yours?

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I move that the convention recess until 2:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to recess. Those in favor vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The motion prevails and we are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 12:05 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Before we recessed for lunch we had under consideration the report of the committee of the whole, on Committee Proposal 39. One amendment had been proposed, which was defeated. There are other amendments on the desk. I will ask the secretary to read them.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Binkowski, Austin, Ostrow, Walker and Young offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 24, after "property" by inserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)"; and page 2, line 3, after "property" by reinserting "on the 1946 statutory base (not rate)".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I believe that we have debated this point at length. I think that you are pretty familiar at this point with the pros and cons. The proponents of this amendment believe that this will retain the present strength of our schools, and of course the opponents don't feel that this is necessary. I won't belabor the point. I would like, of course, to request a record roll call vote on this and unless someone else would like to speak upon it, I would move the previous question. However, if someone does wish to speak further, I would withdraw that motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The demand for the yeas and nays has been made. Is that demand seconded? Sufficient number up. Those who are in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, we debated this issue rather extensively this morning and I am quite sure that you are familiar with what is intended. I don't think it is necessary to elaborate any further. The vote was rather close. Some of the delegates were absent and I am hopeful that the amendment will be adopted. I would respectfully request a record roll call vote.

Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. President, on behalf of the committee I would just like to remind you that the committee opposed this in the committee of the whole. It had been considered in the committee before we made our proposal and we hope that you will defeat the Austin amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the Austin amendment. Those in favor of the Austin amendment will vote yes. Those opposed will vote no.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no other amendments on the desk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: There are no other amendments. Committee Proposal 39 is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 39 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 785.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 36, A proposal with reference to the use to be made of the primary school interest fund, covering the subject matter now found in article X, section 1 of the 1908 constitution. The committee of the whole reports this proposal back to the convention without amendment, with the recommendation that it do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Committee Proposal 36 is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 36 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 818.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: We will return to the calendar and refer to general orders. Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of proposals on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Powell. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will vote no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Powell, will you preside?

[Whereupon, Mr. Powell assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read the first proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 4 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Committee Proposal 31, A proposal to amend article XI, section 14 of the present constitution pertaining to public libraries.

Following is Committee Proposal 31 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment [of at least 1 library in each township and city;] AND SUPPORT OF PUBLIC LIBRARIES WHICH SHALL BE AVAILABLE TO ALL RESIDENTS OF THE STATE. [and] All fines assessed and collected in the several counties, cities and townships for any breach of the penal laws shall be exclusively applied to the support of such PUBLIC libraries[.], AS PROVIDED BY LAW.

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 31:

This section continues the fine Michigan tradition of encouragement and support of public libraries throughout the state, but it does attempt to eliminate some of the confusing elements of the present article XI of section 14. The 1908 constitution states: "The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of at least 1 library in each township and city; . . ." This has never been adhered to as a matter of practice. Today, only 1 out of 15 townships has a library.

The present language emphasizes that "public" libraries will be "available" to residents without fixing how or where the libraries themselves shall be organized. The committee presumes that legislation may be written so that each library may make reasonable rules for the use and control of its books.

Under this proposal present libraries will be retained. But to make libraries more available to the people their services may be expanded through cooperation, consolidation, branches and bookmobiles.

The word "support" has been included because there is a growing need for statewide support for public libraries. Our legislature has recognized this and since 1937 has been appropriating limited funds on a regular basis.

Penal fines for support of libraries have been continued. There appears to be a great deal of controversy surrounding the use of these fines but much that has been said is the result of misinformation rather than fact. State supreme court decisions have clarified the fines that may be used for library purposes and from a legal viewpoint the present plan is operating satisfactorily. The committee realizes that these fines do not adequately support libraries and that they must be supplemented by state and local funds but there is a long tradition connected with their use and they are one of the few sources of revenue collected locally outside the property tax.

The term "public libraries" has been used to further clarify eligibility for state and local support. While supreme court decisions have determined that the word libraries means public libraries and that the legislature may establish qualifications for support of these libraries, the new language makes it a matter of constitutional record.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The committee on finance and taxation has concurrent jurisdiction over this section but has not apparently acted in this matter.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The Chair recognizes Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, with this proposal, the committee on education makes its own modest contribution to that delightful and fascinating subject known as earmarking funds. I think, Mr. Chairman, I would like to constitution, and then to indicate the 2 principal changes which read this very short section as it now appears in our present the committee on education has made. As contained in our present constitution, section 14 of article XI reads as follows:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of at least 1 library in each township and city; and all fines assessed and collected in the several counties, cities and townships for any breach of the penal laws shall be exclusively applied to the support of such libraries.

Mr. Chairman, the committee proposal and the supporting reasons may be found on pages 371 and 372 of Journal 64 dated January 24. The committee has made these 2 changes: we have taken out the obsolete and unobserved provision that a library has to be found in every township or city. That provision, of course, is not now being followed literally. We have instead inserted the language which we believe to be a great improvement insofar as the intent of the constitutional convention—and we hope, the people of this state—are concerned, "The legislature shall provide . . . for the establishment and support," because the old language merely provided for the legislature to be responsible for the establishment and not the support. We have definitely inserted the word "support" which implies a continuing responsibility on the part of the legislature, even after the library has been established. Then we go on to say "of the public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state", and the intent of the committee on education, Mr. Chairman, is just exactly what those words imply.

The only other change we have made is to insert the word "public" again before "libraries" in line 12 and to add, "as provided by law", so that the legislature in its wisdom may take whatever steps it deems necessary to provide for the continuation of penal fines going to the support of our public libraries.

Without yielding the floor at this time, Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield, for whatever remarks she may care to make, to the chairman of the subcommittee on libraries of the committee on education, the lady from Port Huron, Miss Andrus.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, Mr. Bentley has told you some of the things that I had planned to say. Our first constitution in 1835 provided for these libraries. As he said, there was to be a library in each township and in each city. Very few of the townships, however, have been able to provide these libraries. Only about 1 out of 15 have been able to provide libraries. Most of the cities have done so. As he said, there was a provision made in this first constitution for the support of these libraries. It was to be what is called "penal fines". Now, perhaps most of you people know what penal fines are. Most of our committee did not. The members of my subcommittee, of which I was chairman, have learned a great deal in the last 3 or 4 months about libraries. We have had a great many people up here before us. We have had many letters and we know quite a little about penal fines now.

I don't know how much you should know to vote intelligently on this question, but there are a couple of points I would like to bring out and then you may have questions that you would like to ask. Many of you have asked me individually. The penal fines are fines collected when someone is arrested for violating state laws. These state laws were chiefly violations of game laws, things of that sort, but it included traffic and as the years have gone on, of course, we have had a great many traffic violations. I think that makes clear what we mean by penal fines in general.

There are 2 things that have happened: as cities became charter cities or home rule cities, and as some townships have become chartered, they are able to pass what are called "parallel ordinances". So a traffic law in a city, when a fine is paid, is not turned in as a penal fine. That is kept in the city treasury or in the township where they have these parallel ordinances. The result then has been a considerable decline in the amount that would be coming in. We would expect much more to be coming in to this fund as we have more and more automobiles. That has not been the case because of the parallel ordinances.

Now, another thing that you attorneys—many of you—have asked me, the supreme court has interpreted a law library—and all of the counties have law libraries—as a state library and coming under the penal fines. So first, all of the penal fines —which, by the way are sent to the county treasurer—all penal fines go into the county treasury and then are distributed to the libraries according to a census. Since a regular census is taken only every 10 years, they have been using what we call the school census, which is taken each year, as a basis for the distribution of these fines. First, they take out the amount that is needed for the law library. In the upper peninsula, when our education committee was up there, we found that often the law library gets most of it. They need money and they get it first. Then the other, as I said, is distributed.

Now, I would like to have you notice that this was in our first constitution. The people of the state of Michigan, most of them, were settlers from New England, New York state, who were interested in education and having their children have privileges which, coming out to the wilderness, were not as available as they had been back home. So they provided for this primary school fund, and they provided for libraries. They wanted those things right at the beginning for their state. There was no question at all in the 1850 constitution of retaining this or in the 1908. Our subcommittee, after studying this for a long time, was unanimous in recommending that this be retained in the constitution. We presented it to the full committee and the full committee voted unanimously to ask that this be retained.

However, as Mr. Bentley told you, we have made 2 changes. You may wish to understand a little more clearly the reasons for our recommending them. We feel, since so many of the townships have not been able to support libraries, and also I think this is a point that impressed us very much, today our reading is not so much of fiction and matters of that sort as it is for improvement. We have, with automation today, for instance, and with the very accelerated means of production, adults who want to find out more about newer lines of work. We find young people are very anxious to get information, and those books aren't ones that you can use year after year for 20 years or until they wear out. You must have the later books, the more modern books for reference. And so we had conferences and hearings with the state library board, the state association of libraries, the librarians from Detroit and other cities, from small libraries; we got all the evidence we could. They said we should have a larger base.

Most of the townships have not been able to support a library and so we feel, let's not ask each city and township to have a library in the future, as we have in the other constitutions, but we are asking for public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state. Now, several people have asked us about this. Does that mean if someone else doesn't have a library, are they going to be able to use our books that we have had to pay for? So we have made this as clear as we can in speaking to people. The libraries will be kept as they are now or as you wish them, but near Detroit—perhaps some of you have read this in the Detroit papers—there are some small suburbs or communities which haven't been able, they have felt, to support a library, and if they wanted to use books in the Detroit library they had to pay a very large fee. So Detroit has arranged with 3 of these communities that the community pays a certain amount to the Detroit library and then the Detroit library gives the residents of those areas library cards and they may use them. Birmingham is doing the same. I had a letter from the librarian in Birmingham and they are doing the same with neighboring communities who can't afford to keep the library that they would like. I also had a letter from Petoskey, I think it was. There are 5 communities around the Muskegon area who have gone in together so that they can purchase these more expensive books and have them available for their people. So it will be done in different ways but we hope by eliminating this particular provision—for instance, a village library can't get any state aid at present, it is just cities and townships the way we have it—we have eliminated any particular locality so anyone who wishes may have a library of their own. They may combine together the different ways in which they can do this.

Also I would like to leave this last word for you: in a way, this is not earmarking funds in the way we have been talking about the highway funds and the school and municipality funds. These are not taxes. No one pays these as taxes. These are fines that are collected by justices of the peace and so forth. We have provided in our first constitution that such fines shall be used for libraries. It isn't going to save anybody's taxes if this is done. Now, I think most of you know that the highways have up in the 200 millions of moneys which they get. The schools get a somewhat lower sum. The penal fines—and a number of people have asked me about this—come to $2½ million or $3 million, sometimes a little over a million, but usually about $3 million a year. These fines are ones that are paid by people who have violated laws. They are sent to the county treasurer, then they are passed out for the use of the libraries.

We have tried to find what the effect would be on the libraries if the penal fines were discontinued, and there are a great many libraries in the smaller, rural communities who would not be able to go on. In all communities, with the taking away of penal fines, libraries would have to call on their local township board or their local county or their city government for appropriations. Many of the city governments already appropriate money for their libraries, but they gladly accept the penal fines. So it means in every case of a library, there would have to be money raised and it would be out of the 15 mill funds, which limit our counties and our townships today. So every library which has contacted us, local officials, have all asked to have the penal fines retained, at least until there is some provision for replacing them.

A few weeks ago Mr. Van Dusen was speaking on something we put in the constitution. It was on this backing of school board loans. He said we should keep this for the time being. He urged us to vote for it and then he said if we don't need it later we can take it out. The way our committee feels about this, these penal fines—many libraries were filled up in the 1840s or 1850s, before the civil war on the basis of these fines and expected them to continue—until we have some other means, we urge you to keep this provision in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you, Miss Andrus. Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Thank you, Miss Andrus. Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend the work of this particular subcommittee, not only the chairman, Miss Andrus, but the work of her members, the gentleman from Garden City, Mr. T. S. Brown, the gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. Kuhn, the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Faxon, the gentleman from Hancock, Mr. Heideman. Mr. Chairman, at this time I would be glad to yield for questions to either Miss Andrus or myself. If there are no questions, I will be glad to yield the floor for the amendment procedure, if such is in order.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any questions to direct to the committee?

MR. BENTLEY: I yield the floor, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Bentley, do these fines that are referred to by Miss Andrus include the fines from ordinance violations, too?

MR. BENTLEY: They only include the fines, Mr. Bledsoe, from state laws, not municipal ordinances. That has been so held, I understand, by the courts.

MR. BLEDSOE: Just one second. Do I understand that they include township ordinances?

MR. BENTLEY: I believe I am correct in saying I believe they do. I was referring most specifically, of course, to city. I am not sure about that though. Does Miss Andrus have the information on that?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Did you get the question, Miss Andrus?

MR. BLEDSOE: May I add further—

MR. BENTLEY: May I have the answer to your first question, Mr. Bledsoe, if Miss Andrus knows it.

MR. BLEDSOE: Thank you.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Bledsoe, as I understand this, if a township is permitted to pass ordinances, those come under their own provisions, but in most of the townships the rules that impose fines for violations are paid into the county treasury. If, however, they have the power to pass a local ordinance, then that is a "parallel ordinance."

MR. BLEDSOE: Do I understand then that would be for revenue, fines for revenue? Would that be included? Would that make those fines for revenue? Can you answer that, Mr. Bentley?

MR. BENTLEY: As I understand, that would be the case, yes. But those fines that are so considered as violations of ordinances coming within the court interpretations are specifically earmarked for the support of the local libraries.

MR. BLEDSOE: Why were the traffic court fines in cities excluded?

MR. BENTLEY: Because of the interpretation again. It is my understanding violations of city ordinances would not be considered as penal fines within the present meaning of section 14.

MR. BLEDSOE: Do you have an opinion on that by somebody?

MR. BENTLEY: Well, I believe it has been held by the courts. I am sorry, Mr. Bledsoe, I don't seem to have a particular opinion to cite you on this case. It is my understanding that they have been held, however, not to be penal fines within the meaning of the section.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, may I be permitted sufficient time to prepare an amendment?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I believe there are 2 delegates that have something to contribute. Mr. Ford has been on his feet for some time, and now, Mr. Kuhn. Mr. Ford, does yours relate to this matter, or do you have something to report?

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, first of all, I am a little bit appalled at the direct answer from both Mr. Bentley and Miss Andrus, which is incorrect. No township in the state of Michigan keeps one penny of any fine or costs collected by its courts. There isn't any equivocating about this. We have the power to pass almost any police type ordinance—in the townships over 5,000, at least—that a city can. I personally have drafted over 50 ordinances for townships now in effect, and I know of not one single penny that is returned. I wanted to set the record straight on this. The question of penal fines had been interpreted in this state to mean penal fines from the violation of a state statute, period.

Now, this has gone on, however, to townships because there isn't an inherent home rule situation such as you have in the cities; and because of the fact that a township has no inherent home rule powers, the court has held that even though it adopts an ordinance, this ordinance can in no way conflict with a state statute, and it is adopted pursuant to a state statute, and to a specific empowering ordinance, and the ultimate result is that the township pays all of the costs and all of the fines from its courts. If I might be privileged to take the floor again as soon as Mr. Bentley finishes, it happens that I have the actual statistics available—and have been waiting for some time to present them—to show exactly what this means in my county.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the contribution of the distinguished expert on local government, the gentleman from Taylor township, Mr. Ford. May I ask him one question though, and that is this: since he is an expert on this particular matter, is it not true, Mr. Ford, that the fines collected in your township do go to the support of your county library?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Yes. My township contributed last year $60,000 out of a total amount in the whole county of Wayne, including the city of Detroit, of $219,000.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: I would like to say something to what Mr. Ford just said. Probably most of you are finding this a rather complicated problem. That is what our committee found, and there was much conflicting evidence. However, there are, as I understand, 3 townships which are called charter townships. There they may pass their own ordinances, as chartered cities may do. So if what I said caused some confusion, I didn't want to say all townships because there are 3, Mr. Ford, that are excepted.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you. Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I was just going to say to Mr. Bledsoe, Mr. Chairman, that the case in question that gives the ruling is Delta County vs. the City of Gladstone, and in that case it said —like Miss Andrus says—if it is a charter township it can keep the money, and if it is a city with parallel ordinances, it can keep the money, but all other ordinances and state laws shall be used in support of these libraries and that will be spread out on a county basis to be divided. Does that answer your question, Mr. Bledsoe?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I presume that that is the interpretation as the law is now?

MR. KUHN: Yes, sir. That is correct.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I believe, Mr. Kuhn, that was a supreme court ruling of 1943?

MR. KUHN: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Higgs had asked for the floor. I don't know whether this pertains to the same matter. Delegate Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I beg your pardon, Mr. Chairman, did you ask me a question?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I was asking whether your contribution related to the matter immediately under discussion. There seems to be this question here and Delegate Goebel was also on his feet.

MR. HIGGS: I will yield to Delegate Goebel. My comments have to do with an amendment that is with the secretary.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Delegate Bentley a question, through the Chair, just in order to make sure in my own mind. I am referring, Mr. Bentley, to the last clause in that particular section, "as provided by law". Could the legislature, by any chance, provide legislation that would call for the revenues from, or fines from parallel ordinances to be included and contributed to the libraries?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I presume, Mr. Goebel—and I am not a lawyer—but it is my own personal opinion that if this section did not so specifically prohibit it and the legislature was so disposed, it could. I say I am not a lawyer and there may be some question of the home rule provision in here, but in my interpretation, if the legislature wanted to, in view of the language which we have suggested, it could do it.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, may I ask: is there an attorney in the hall who would care to express himself on this matter?

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, we have a distinguished legal counsel on the committee on education and whether the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Bonisteel, feels called upon to speak on this or not, I don't know. We educators and non-educators always look to him for legal interpretations in our committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman, I think we can shorten this up. Mr. Ford didn't mention the fact that there is an amendment on the secretary's desk to take care of this situation. It seems that we are perhaps wasting a lot of time on it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you for that suggestion. I am advised that there are probably 3 or 4 amendments and the first in the sequence of filing is Delegate William Hanna's amendment. And so if Delegate Higgs will yield the floor until we dispose of this first one—Mr. Mosier.

MR. MOSIER: Before you go to an amendment, I have a question that I would like to present to the chairman of the committee. The proposal is as follows: "The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment and support of public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state." It has been explained here, as we know, that the first moneys received by the county treasurer are devoted to the law libraries. They are the libraries in the court house that contain the law books, and the allocation of those funds, as you know, is by statute based upon population of the county. Now, the question that I am proposing to the chairman of the committee is this: is it intended that the law libraries are public libraries?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman from Dowagiac that the committee did not so intend it, but I would remind the gentleman that one of the pending amendments covers specifically that point, and he may wish to address himself further to the question after that particular amendment has been read.

MR. MOSIER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: In view of the comment by the chairman and the suggestions of Delegate Bonisteel, probably many of these matters that are being brought out in your questioning would be taken care of if we proceeded to consider the amendments which have been filed with the secretary. May we have the amendment by Delegate William Hanna.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. W. F. Hanna offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "laws" by inserting "and municipal ordinances"; so the language will read:

> All fines assessed and collected in the several counties, cities and townships for any breach of the penal laws and municipal ordinances shall be exclusively applied to the support of such public libraries, as provided by law.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, speaking to this amendment, the original history of this was in the early constitution at a time before we envisioned the effect of the home rule city provision of 1907. Now, we have enlarged that, the legislature has enlarged that to allow charter townships to retain their fines from the so called charter township ordinances in the same manner as cities. What is happening about the state is that townships are incorporating as cities, that the bulk of the penal fines are collected under city ordinances. Many of these city ordinances are merely copies of state law and under provisions of the state law are now adopted merely by reference. For instance, the state traffic code in a great many cities is merely adopted by reference and is a verbatim copy of the state traffic laws. This applies to many other ordinances. If we are to earmark penal fines, then we should return to the original philosophy and earmark penal fines whether by state law or local, municipal ordinances, and that is the purpose of this amendment, to put this clearly before us.

Now I know that the cities will holler because this in effect reduces the funds available to operate their police and other inspection departments. However, I see no reason why we at this convention should discriminate against townships and counties and allow the cities a special privilege with regard to the support of libraries. In all fairness, either this should be retained and applied to all penal fines—whether under state law or city ordinance—or it should be eliminated entirely and other means found, such as earmarking some of the sales tax for libraries.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, the Hanna amendment, with a slight variation in language, is the intent and purpose of the amendment presented by Mr. Brown, Mr. Iverson and myself, and if Bill Hanna doesn't mind the unusual company, we would like to join with him in sponsoring his amendment and withdraw ours. (laughter)

I would like at this time to support this principle and present a few things for our thought here. First of all, the only way that I can form an opinion on the effect of this is to attempt to get some examples of what is actually happening. I might say that someone mentioned a few moments ago that they thought that this language in the statute was going to free the hands of the legislature to do something about establishing equity in this regard. I don't think there has been a session of the legislature in the last 10 years in which the townships have not appeared before the legislature, or at least before committees of the legislature, and asked it to do something similar to what we are doing here, either to require that all fines from all sources go to the libraries or that some kind of system be worked out so that the proportion of the fines going to the libraries is the same whether you are called a city or whether you are called a township.

Using Wayne as an example, I would like to point out what is actually happening. In Wayne county we have 30 municipalities; we have 14 townships and 25 cities, including the city of Detroit. Taking the 10 largest of the 14 townships, they contributed, in fines, to the library fund of the county of Wayne last year $125,176. The total contribution from all 30 municipalities is only $219,000. So you will see immediately that approximately ⅗ of the total income to the libraries in Wayne county from this source of revenue is coming out of townships which by the very nature of their large populations, cannot be expected to remain as either pure townships, short of charter townships, or stay away from becoming home rule cities. I can give you some more specific examples. I have the figures here indicating that in 16 of the municipal courts outside of the city of Detroit in western Wayne county, they grossed, last year in costs, $565,000. Now, if you take some of these cities—and I will take some that I don't represent as a delegate here—Allen Park, which last year took in someplace in the neighborhood of $122,000 in its municipal court, paid to the library fund $1,100. The city of Detroit which, by the testimony of Judge Watts before the judicial committee, last year turned over $5 million in its traffic and ordinance division, contributed to the library fund of Wayne county, $49,198 from the recorder's court and $18,279 from the traffic court. That's with a population of 1⅗ million people, while these little townships down here—and let me give you some of them—Taylor township last year gave as its portion of the total, $39,000; they gave a total in fines and costs to the county of $70,000, roughly $71,000; Redford township, $17,000; Nankin township, $25,000; Huron township—which has only 8,000 people in it—gave $2,055; the city of Dearborn, with 100,000 people, gave $1,134; and the the city of Lincoln Park gave $690.

Now, I heard somebody pop up over here and say, "But it's got its own library." I am informed that 5 of the municipalities in Wayne county have their own library, independent of the Wayne county library system. And I want to be fair and say that it is my understanding that the city of Detroit spent on library and allied facilities, very close to $4½ million. Mr. Iverson had the figures on this. So I am not saying that the city of Detroit is getting a free ride from the rest of the county because they maintain their own library. The city of Dearborn, I think, also maintains its own library, and before John McCauley gets up, the city of Wyandotte does too. I'd better take care of Highland Park. Now, this takes care of a few of the dissenters, I guess. The point that I think is most important to us here is not just a question of the inequity of the present language as it has been interpreted, but also the very serious question about whether we should allow the libraries to continue the false security of relying, particularly in our county, on a fund that is just going to extinguish itself.

Now, if you have any townships with the kind of population growth that is going on in the outcounty portion of Wayne county, you will recognize that the growth there is such that we are going to be forced into some kind of home rule that is going to put us in the same status with the rest of them. I don't argue that the city of Allen Park or Lincoln Park or any of the others should not be able to keep the fines and costs to maintain their police departments or to maintain their own local library, but it does seem to me to be very inequitable to have 25 out of 30 municipalities receiving the same per capita allocation for the maintenance of their local library through the county library system—if they want it, it is available to them—as the 10 townships that are actually carrying ⅘ of the total burden. In other words, in a county of 2¾ million people, you have got 234,000 people ostensibly carrying the ball on this. Admittedly, these are fast statistics, and like all statistics there are different points of view, and what value you place on them. But I don't think anybody can challenge the fact that what is happening in Wayne county now and what we know is going to happen in Wayne county in the next 5 to 10 years is going to happen in Macomb county and Oakland county and out in Genesee county and other places, and when we talk about earmarking and talk about earmarking fines with the same language we had in the 1908 constitution, we are kidding ourselves, because we are not earmarking much of anything.

As these areas become incorporated as cities, they no longer contribute and we are saying to the library people,

> Rely on this; don't go after some other form of legislation to support the libraries, take second best because the legislature will always answer your demands for more library funds by saying, "But you get the fines. Why worry?"

And then we are ready to fall into a situation where before this constitution is 10 years old, there will be at least 1 county where this library fund isn't going to amount to $5,000 a year. And this does not seem to me to be a farsighted approach to the solution of the problem that has existed for many years as a result of the provision now in the constitution, as warmed over, slightly modified, but significantly the same as presented to us here today.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, for your information, as I understand it, Delegate Bentley has reserved the floor to answer questions through himself and Miss Andrus. I have other delegates whom I have noted arise, Delegates Mahinske, Ostrow, Mrs. Cushman, Faxon and Miss Andrus. I shall call upon them now and then Delegate Madar.

Delegate Mahinske, you are recognized.

MR. MAHINSKE: I am afraid that Mr. Bentley could not answer this question and I would have to direct it to either Mr. Danhof or Mr. Ford. Now, not too long ago I was down in the judiciary committee and we were talking about the 5 tier system of judicial courts that this committee was talking about setting up. As far as Wayne county was concerned, one of the basic rationales or justifications for setting up this new system was the fact that the division of recorder's court, at least, called the traffic court in the city of Detroit, would be thrown into the county system and all the revenue from that court would go to maintain the county judicial system. Under this proposal that we have here, the revenue from the traffic division of the recorder's court would be diverted to the library fund, and I just wonder what that does to the argument for the proposed plan that the judiciary committee plans to come out with.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, there are thoughts I'd like to suggest; one is, I still haven't gotten over my surprise that I felt when I first realized that some people were thinking of this appropriation of penal fines to libraries as a form of earmarked funds. I realize, for the second point, the importance of what has been involved in these municipal ordinance fines, and I am a bit worried about that coming into this discussion. This related originally to the question of libraries, and it is true, as has been said by others, that the smaller libraries feel a deep interest in what happens on this proposal.

I am concerned, lest this little group of small libraries become buried and smothered to death under the contending titans that are now starting a big football game over whether or not municipal ordinance fines shall go into this fund too. I have heard that if that were done it would supply a much larger sum of money than is actually required for the support of libraries. So if that is to be done, perhaps there should be something else added which would give the legislature some discretion about applying those funds to the extent that they are reasonably necessary. But I hope, Mr. Chairman and delegates, that the libraries which were originally so deeply interested in maintaining this proviso, are not hurt by the controversy over these municipal ordinances.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Before I recognize another speaker, may I direct a question to Delegate William Hanna? You may have heard the suggestion from Delegate Ford, I believe it was, that if acceptable to you they would join in sponsorship of your amendment. I believe there was an amendment filed by Delegates Ford, T. S. Brown and Iverson, which was in essence the same as yours, but did spell out more detail. Are you agreeable to accepting them as joint sponsors of your pending amendment?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Then I believe Delegate Mahinske had the floor to ask certain questions. Are you satisfied with your answers, Mr. Mahinske?

MR. MAHINSKE: I had not received any answer.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I would like to attempt to answer Mr. Mahinske, and I think perhaps I can. I think your question, Mr. Mahinske, was—would you repeat it again so I know? I think I can answer it for you.

MR. MAHINSKE: When I was contesting what was proposed in the judiciary committee, as to taking the division of recorder's court, the traffic court, out of the city system and putting it in the county system because the county, overall, needed this revenue, the $5 million revenue from traffic court to take care of other contingencies and so forth, now we are not even making this available under this present proposal.

MR. IVERSON: The answer to that, Mr. Mahinske, it seems to me is this: you heard some discussion, but I think at the time you heard the discussion there were some changes in the setup of the lower level of courts in our committee, and that was left pretty much to the legislature, but with the suggestion that we still desired that fifth tier of courts. So far as Detroit is concerned—and I realize that this question came up in our committee—that the traffic court of the city of Detroit collects in fines something slightly in excess of $5 million, but I believe Mr. Ostrow was ready, with his book over there—and I had talked this over with him—and it seems to me to be no problem so far as Detroit is concerned, because if you notice their appropriation for libraries, it is some $4,600,000. So I see no problem so far as Detroit traffic court is concerned.

Now, the more important thing, it seems to me—and this discussion was had in the judicial committee—was the desire, and I don't think there was any dissenting vote among the members of that committee, to attempt to get our court structure in a position where it was not based upon fees or that there was no particular desire on the part of a judge, whether he was municipal or otherwise, to impose fines because of a particular reason other than that presumed by the statute or the ordinance and I believe I speak for all of that committee, that was primary in our minds. I think, so far as I am concerned personally, the important thing, so far as these fines are concerned, they should not be imposed for the purpose of creating revenue for the city or the state or any other branch of the government. And it seems to me—and that is one reason I let my name be on this amendment—only logical that these fines of municipal ordinances should go to the library fund, the same as those on the penal statutes of the state. I am not concerned about the fact, as the Judge raises here, that there will be too much money. I have my doubts about that, because it seems to me that the libraries, the law libraries and the individual libraries in the counties and cities need assistance, and I see no problem there at all.

MR. MAHINSKE: I wonder if either you or Mr. Ford have a distribution of the figures of the $5 million that traffic court turns over now. Just what is that money used for?

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ostrow has that.

MR. MAHINSKE: What I am trying to point out here is, is it merely going into the general fund that is being used for other purposes such as possibly welfare, public health, and so forth? Now by earmarking these—and this is what we are doing, we are earmarking these funds—at least these services that they are being used for now are going to have to be supplemented from somewhere else, and I am just wondering where this is going to come from.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: All right. Here is the breakdown of the roughly $5 million from Detroit. State cases, the kind of cases that we are talking about that would end up in front of a justice court or, as a matter of fact, in the recorder's court proper, for violations of a felony, there was $227,486 last year. That is broken down in this fashion: $196,000 of it was court costs, which goes to the county general fund; $49,000 and some odd dollars are actual fines, and that is the only part of this $227,000 that now finds its way to the library. There are city ordinance cases, general funds, city of Detroit, $4,589,000. Some place here, we should have a figure on the libraries, but it is my recollection that the city of Detroit now appropriates, out of its general fund, slightly in excess of this $4½ million for the maintenance of libraries and library services in the city of Detroit. So that as far as the city is concerned at this time, this would have no significant effect on it. In other words, you are putting it in the general fund and then you are allocating $4½ million. If we earmarked the money, it would go directly over there.

Now, the only way that this could be affected is if something happened in Detroit so that the amount of traffic fines suddenly went higher, you might end up with a surplus, but I might call your attention to the fact that as a result of a very efficient police department—and this is my opinion—and as a result of a very stringent traffic enforcement, this revenue is coming down a little bit each year, rather than going up in proportion to the population, and nobody questions the fact that the population in Detroit is not growing as fast as the rest of the area. So that there is no real sound reason to expect that this is liable to skyrocket out of proportion and result in a bonanza to the libraries to the detriment of other services in the city of Detroit.

MR. MAHINSKE: Except to the detriment of the services of the public libraries in the city of Detroit. By your very figures that you just gave, it seems to me that the city of Detroit is using all of its own ordinance fines for its home library system. In other words, they are taking the whole pie and they are using it because they need it. Now, if you are going to split this up with some 30 or 40 civil divisions of government in Wayne county, it seems to me that the city of Detroit is going to get something substantially less than the $4½ million that it needs for its own library system.

MR. FORD: I submit to you that you have a good hypothetical proposition, but if we adopt county home rule in Wayne county, this is exactly what they might end up with.

MR. MAHINSKE: This is based on "if" also.

MR. FORD: Well, there is another "if" involved. If we are going to abolish the justice of the peace in 5 years, then this $125,000 that I was talking to you about is out the window anyhow.

MR. MAHINSKE: But that still does not answer the immediate proposition that by adopting this amendment that we have in front of us, the city of Detroit would be turning over the $4½ million it is using, that we can assume that it needs, and getting somewhat less than that in return.

MR. FORD: Well, since the city of Detroit has a guaranteed majority on the board of supervisors, I can't conceive of a situation where that county is going to take $4½ million away from Detroit and give it to somebody else. I don't think they are going to leave the Wayne county library by itself.

The intent of the committee appeared to me to be the support of a statewide library system and not have a Dearborn library and a Detroit library, and a Taylor township library, but a library system available to all people of the state. If this is what they really meant, then we are saying, "Let's finance it equally by all people of the state," and let's quit having these artificial lines in between, and let's make the Detroit library system a part of the Wayne county library system, and make the people in the outcounty part of Wayne, surrounding Detroit, pay their fair share, along with the people of Detroit, for using the library.

MR. MAHINSKE: What you say you can't conceive of happening in Wayne county, we see is happening in the state as a whole, in the areas of contributions back on sales tax. We have Wayne, Oakland and Macomb county getting less back than they pay in and other counties getting up to 6 times as much back as they pay in. So this is no argument, as far as I am concerned, that you can't conceive of this happening in Wayne county.

MR. FORD: Let me point out to you that the money does not get paid into any kind of a state library fund. It goes directly to the Wayne county library. It doesn't get out of the county. You are not going to be sharing any Detroit revenues with anybody except the other residents of Wayne county.

MR. MAHINSKE: True, but then the Detroit library system just becomes another member of the Wayne county library system.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I have some 9 people listed who have sought recognition, but I believe that Delegate Hanna, who is the principal sponsor of the amendment, should have recognition. Do you wish to be heard, Delegate Hanna?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to speak to Judge Dehnke's objection. I think if you read this language, it provides that this money will be used for library purposes as provided by law, and if this money becomes such a bonanza, as Mr. Ford mentioned, this says that a "library shall be available to all people." The legislature could by law provide that some of this money go into school libraries, which would be available to all people, and thus would help out and relieve some of the burden in the educational system and our universities and so forth. I am not perturbed about this.

To Mr. Mahinske's objection, I would appreciate it if the city of Detroit would remit a couple of fines that I paid to them for my local library, because I very seldom get to use the local library, but I occasionally pay a fine in the city of Detroit.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to prolong this debate. We are listening to a very interesting preview on the subject of home rule here. I am beginning to think that we should have deferred this proposal until the proposals from the committee on local government were finally disposed of once and for all.

What I am saying is this: I think all of us want to see public library services extended throughout the state. I think we all want to see these public library services available to the public, financed and supported by the legislature or local government in the best way possible. My only concern with respect to the Hanna amendment is this: we have, Mr. Hanna, about 12 cities—I think there were 15 cities surveyed—there are 12 of those cities within the medium population bracket, say 10,000 to 50,000, that do have city ordinances but that already contribute to their local libraries more than they get from all the collections of their city ordinances. My only fear, sir, is if your amendment prevails will these cities being thus forced to turn over the revenues from the violations of their own ordinances to libraries, then cut off all other forms of local support? I feel this is something neither you nor I would want to see happen.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Next on the list that I had compiled here of those who desired to be heard was Delegate Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Everybody has quoted me so much that I have nothing left to say. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Since there have been some facts raised about the Wayne county library financial setup, I thought I might try to clear it up somewhat. Actually, over half the revenue of the Wayne county library system comes from the general fund of the county, which would be over half, then, from the city of Detroit, in the way of revenue. Actually, the Wayne county library system is essentially a cooperative system, and many of the central services are paid for by these funds. The Detroit library is on quite a different basis, whereas it actually gets some of the millage from the 15 mill business and it is considered a school library and therefore that millage comes out of what others the schools would get in Detroit. It is a rather complicated setup and I don't think I want to go into all the details but in brief, I don't know whether it would clear up a few points or not. I don't want to defend penal fines as a fair thing.

I agree with some of the comments that have been made, and I don't want to defend them as being adequate for the libraries, but I think in many areas you have got to recognize that they are about all that the libraries had. I certainly am not going to defend earmarking as a principle, but it seems to me if we accept it for the roads and the local governments and the schools, that we are sort of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel when it comes to these penal fines for libraries. As far as I am concerned, this is earmarking. But I would hate to see us in this convention appearing to go for earmarking for every single pressure group except libraries. It seems to me that this might leave us open to the charge that we took the earmarking off for the one group that was perhaps the most defenseless group, the one with the smallest lobby and, therefore, I would rise to support the committee's original proposal and let's leave it as it is without getting it more confused by any amendments.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I am assuming that those who have asked recognition desire to speak with reference to the William Hanna amendment, and I will call on them in that order. If any of you have another contribution to make, you can reserve your time and I will leave you on the list. The next name I have is Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am a member of the subcommittee that helped to draw up this proposal, and I just want to point out to you that this proposal was a product of much time and work, not only for members of the subcommittee, but we had people from the attorney general's staff, from the library commission, and the library commissioners and the librarians, and we went over this hassle many, many times, so that we would be very clear as to what we mean and as to what the intent would be behind it. I wouldn't feel right if I didn't in some way defend the Detroit public libraries here for what has been alluded to be a system whereby funds are being diverted for that library and Detroit wants a public library that just services the city of Detroit.

We heard from Mr. Ulveling, the director of the library, and I was interested in noting that the services of the Detroit public library are not only made available to the people in the county of Wayne, but they are made available to the entire state of Michigan; they conduct a considerable service for the whole state. He indicated that they loan out books to cities and to various other places, as far up as the upper part of the northern peninsula, so I just want to indicate that the Detroit public library service is a state service, and the amount of penal fines that actually go into it are very small compared to the total cost. If it is even $250,000 or $300,000, it is still a small part of the total $4½ million to $5 million budget.

The actual case in the penal fines, at least as far as our committee is concerned, is not so much a question of Wayne county suffering here, it is a question that there are many counties outside of Wayne that depend to a great extent for their support upon penal fines. And for those of you who are delegates representing counties such as Alcona, Branch, Cass, Genesee, Gladwin, Ingham, Iosco, Arenac, Jackson—and I could go down the whole list—you would find that a large percentage of the moneys that goes to support the libraries in those counties are derived from penal fines. So I don't want you to just look at this as a question that concerns Wayne county. Certainly the penal fines are more important in their support of library systems where there is no other or, in many cases, where there is very small level of support in the out-county area, in the rural areas where penal fines do make up a large portion of the budgets for the libraries.

I would urge your support for the committee recommendation, because we did go over this question of municipal fines, and I am sure Miss Andrus will add to my comments on this question. I would urge your support for the committee proposal and opposition to the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman and members, I asked to speak quite a while ago because there seemed to be a misunderstanding of 2 things about Wayne county. Mr. Iverson, however, has somewhat answered those.

I am not surprised that some of you are confused. Our committee was very confused about the penal fines until we had done a great deal of studying and investigating about them. I would like to say this—it is just filling out what Mr. Iverson said—I have figures here from the state library. For Detroit—I believe this was for the year 1959—they didn't separate the Detroit fines from the fees, as they are paid in. That is for Detroit ordinances. So all we know is that there were $5,-119,629 paid into the city treasury under fines and fees.

The city of Detroit or the board of education, as Mrs. Cushman said, supported by the taxpayers of Detroit, appropriated $3,988,253. They received in penal fines—that is the county fines—$132,318. Now, someone just said—and I don't know whether it was Mr. Ford and he misspoke himself, because he knows a lot about this, or whether it was some other delegate—the money was going to the Wayne county library. Now, they were talking about Detroit at the time, and Detroit gets $132,318 of the penal fines. You see, the penal fines don't go to the county library. As I said before, they go to the county treasurer and then the county treasurer allocates them among the different libraries.

I think it is quite clear from what has been said that most of the cities appropriate about as much to their library as they get in fines or much more. If they want a good library they have to appropriate more, and most of the cities are doing it. The difficulty today is with the small, rural libraries, the small communities who would have no service if we did not have this.

Now, I am really very interested in libraries. I think it would be fine to get more money for them. I had not planned to say this, but I think now I should: in the 1907 constitutional convention they argued this question of the city ordinance fines up and down for a long time. They decided against it. They thought it would be simpler to keep it the way it is. It is the small libraries, as Mr. Faxon said, who need these penal fines so badly.

I don't think it would matter if the cities wanted to do it, to have it all included, but I do feel that the cities are already, in most cases, appropriating as much from their general fund for their libraries as they get in the fines which they would be paying in. So our committee, I believe—though we haven't had a meeting since this amendment came up, we did discuss it—we felt it was better to leave it as it was in the 1835, the 1850 and the 1908 conventions. Three different conventions have thought about this and they have felt we should keep it this way. We would like to do the same.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: May the Chair reassure Delegate Judd that you are on my list, but there are 3 more ahead right at the moment. I still find folks rising. The next that I have is Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Somebody just said I am off, so I guess I'll start. First, I would like to take up this little task with my friend, Mr. Ford from the township of Taylor, which I think wouldn't have as much to worry about today if they incorporated. In fact, I believe this is just about where this little green card sprung from.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Let's not get into personalities, Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: We won't, Mr. Chairman. This has been going on for some time, as Mr. Elliott can vouch for. (laughter)

Mr. Chairman, I sometimes wonder what all the delegates think about. For a good many years all I ever heard was—and I am still hearing it—how rotten socialism and communism is, and do you know, we are sort of getting a taste of it here today. They say that when anybody has a lot, in socialism you must split it up amongst the rest, and this is about what we are being asked for here today.

You see, the city of Detroit is quite large and we have been paying for everything over the years in Wayne county—the taxpayers have been paying for all these things. We have been building up everything. This does come into county home rule, as Delegate Bentley stated. We have been paying for these things; building them up, and suddenly a lot of communities who don't like to pay, rather, the taxpayers in these communities that don't like to pay their share of everything that they should pay for, want to get just a little bit more for nothing. Of course, it looks good.

The city of Detroit takes in a lot of money. I grant you that. But we only take in because we are so much larger than all the rest of the communities around us, and we have that many more people. But we try to take care of those taxpayers and those citizens of our city. We give them a library. We have some wonderful libraries there and they cost us a lot of money to support. And what do they want to do? The out-county—a lot of the boys would love to take this away from us. They would like to start making the taxpayers foot the bills out of their own pockets, instead of out of these fines. Oh, yes, they say, "Well, you'll get it anyway." Get it anyway? Well, I have watched what has happened in Wayne county. And incidentally, I was hoping that this might be held over for 2 or 3 days because I am in hopes that in your box tonight you will find a brochure on what has been happening to the city of Detroit in the county of Wayne insofar as our taxes are concerned, to take care of libraries and everything else. We are being imposed on plenty. We don't like it any more than anybody else would, any more than you, if someone asked you to share what you have in your pocket when it doesn't belong to those that are asking for it. We don't ask the big corporations to go ahead and split it up with any other individual. They are asking us to. This brochure is going to tell you what is happening, and I was hoping that you might delay this.

We know that if this money got into the treasurer's office—these fines—do you think for one single minute, Detroit would get its $4,600,000 to take care of its libraries? Oh, no, they wouldn't, believe me. They would find some way to make sure we got $2,600,000, and the taxpayers could go jump in the river. They'd have to dig it out of their pockets. And I'm asking you to give us a little bit of help. Let's stick with what the committee came up with. They knew what was right, and let's vote down this amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Goebel, did you wish to speak now?

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to prolong this debate, but I want to speak against the Hanna amendment by giving you an illustration of what might happen in my city of Grand Rapids, as well as a number of other cities throughout the state who maintain very fine and substantial library systems. We received, in the city of Grand Rapids, $58,000 in fines, which are contributed to the library system, and in addition to that, out of general tax funds the city supplies $358,000, to maintain a very fine library system.

Now, if the Hanna amendment is adopted, it will mean that $810,000, representing fines of local ordinances, would have to go to the library. In other words, $400,000 more than the city of Grand Rapids is spending at the present time for a very substantial and fine library system, and I submit to you people here in the delegation that if we do this, if we adopt the Hanna amendment, you will give the city library—a fine system as it is at the present time, we would like to make it better, so, we would like to make some of our other services better, but we have a good system—you will be handing the library system in Grand Rapids $400,000 more than it needs to take care of a service that is as well handled as any service that the city of Grand Rapids has to offer to its citizens. If this is done, there will then be loaded an additional expense upon the taxpayers of the city of Grand Rapids, to the tune of $400,000, to maintain the other services which will be robbed by the donation of the $400,000 or the contribution of the $400,000 to the library system, which the library system does not need. I am not talking alone about Grand Rapids, because as I look over this list that same thing applies in perhaps different measure to many of these cities.

I do hope that this constitution will not impose such a restriction upon the city of Grand Rapids and other cities in the same boat, by adding a liability of cost or adding to the tax burden in the city of Grand Rapids, particularly, $400,000, by giving the library more than it needs to carry out a fine program, that they are doing right now. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The next 2 delegates on the list also come from Grand Rapids, and I wonder if they share the same point of view. Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, it appears to me that this amendment is an effort to kill the libraries by kindness. I consider it an invasion of home rule, and I am not talking about county home rule, but city home rule. This would be an effort, by constitutional mandate, to require the cities to do certain things with their funds. This would be contrary to the home rule principle for cities that was set up in 1908.

I would like to express some concern and perhaps surprise for Taylor township. Mr. Ford, in the first page of his statement, complained that townships do not receive any penal fines, but about 2 pages later he tells us that the libraries in Wayne county would soon suffer because in some 5 years from now there won't be any townships to receive penal fines. This is very good news to those of us on the local government committee, because we have been trying to persuade Mr. Ford for about 3 months that his township of some 50,000 people could incorporate at any time, and he could get out from under some of these township handicaps.

I feel that we have listened to the troubles of Wayne county —and I find there are many different points of view with respect to Wayne county on the part of its own delegates— for a long time, and sometimes they predominate our discussion of statewide problems. I feel that this is a case where, from all the figures that have been quoted, Wayne county can very well take care of itself and we should turn our attention to the smaller townships throughout the state that have little or no other support besides penal fines. And I would like to ask Mr. Ford if he objects to these townships having their penal fines.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Does the delegate care to answer, Delegate Ford?

MR. FORD: No, I don't object to any township having its penal fines. This would please me greatly, if you would remove this last section from this provision entirely and let us take care of our own library, because I am satisfied that we have reached a degree of civilization in this state where we no longer have to impose, by constitution, on the officeholders of this state a mandate that they must provide a library.

I might point out, however, that the language that the committee comes out with no longer guarantees—I am glad that I can agree with Mrs. Judd on at least part of what she said. She thinks that there is a tie in here with the home rule and the right of the people in a locality to govern their own affairs, and I agree wholeheartedly with her, and this stems out of the principles that that government is best that is the closest to the people—now, the present provision in the 1908 constitution guarantees that the people of my township, no matter how the county library wants to cut up the cake, are going to have the right to have a library in that township, but the new language presented by the committee would permit the county library to establish a library for my people in Lincoln Park, for example, several miles away, and this would be available to the people. But the guarantee that each township and each city would have a library is removed by the committee.

I would like to ask of the chairman, in that connection, if the committee gave any consideration to what the ultimate result will be if the recommendations of the majority of the judiciary committee are carried out, and the wishes that they are expressing are carried out by the legislature, to the end that they have a county court system that replaces all of the justice courts of the townships and places all of the courts into a single system in small counties that we are talking about.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman from Taylor township, I would like to say this: the committee on education arrived at this proposal with no consultation with any other committee, except a request for concurrence from the committee on finance and taxation—which, unfortunately, was not forthcoming. We were not governed by what the judiciary committee, the committee on local government or any other committee had before it. We handled our own business as we saw fit. I would like to say, furthermore, with respect to the gentleman's remark about removing the provision that every township have a library, there is nothing in our proposal that would prohibit Taylor township or any other township having its library, but since today only 1 out of 15 townships in the state of Michigan does have a public library, we saw no reason to continue a constitutional provision which has not been enforced in any respect.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: If anyone else wishes to speak, cheer up—maybe we'll get to you. There are only 7 ahead now. (laughter) Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Goebel and Mrs. Judd have said everything that I would say, and said it better than I could say it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you. Delegate Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, I am forced to speak because my compatriot from the second district is the one that I have to oppose in this instance. I rise to oppose the Hanna amendment for obvious reasons, as has been well spelled out by Delegate Goebel from Grand Rapids. Muskegon's situation is identically the same. We support our own library through our fine systems and we also help support our police force through some of the fines that we generate in that manner, so I oppose the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Follo.

MR. FOLLO: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise to ask you to defeat the Hanna and Ford amendment for this reason: I share with Judge Dehnke the fear that the battle of the giants or titans—whichever he called them—may lose us the support for small libraries, several of which I am acquainted with in the upper peninsula that need this very badly. This is "grass roots" democracy when we get people who are working together on a committee in a community to provide library service for themselves, and are helped by penal fines. In the city of Escanaba we spend about $42,000 a year on our library, which I think is more than we get in penal fines. I would urge you, for the sake of many small libraries in this state, to vote against the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to my colleagues and I cannot refrain from calling their attention to the work that we are dedicated here to perform. I am going to begin my remarks—and they are going to be very brief—with article XI of our own constitution, and I wish you'd ponder it. This is the article that provides for encouragement of education, which reads as follows:

> Sec. 1. Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.

Now, to me, I cannot disassociate the means of education from libraries. I am amazed that this issue of socialism and division affecting the culture of our people should arise on this floor. If it should occur that any district has more money than it needs from these funds, what about the ugly image that is created in the great cultural states as ours where we have 1 library in 15 townships. That is the image now. Does that not also coincide with the reason why we are a second class nation in the question of science? Aren't we contributing to that position that we are in today? We are struggling, trying to send a man to the moon or somewhere, and we have become an international second class nation.

I submit, my colleagues, that we are not writing township, necessarily, getting into this quarrel of home rule and so forth, we are blueprinting the constitution for the state of Michigan that will survive, we hope, if we can get past the electorate, for the next 50 years. And I submit that in the 2 positions that we have on the floor here today in the committee of the whole, I am persuaded to believe that the Hanna amendment will more nearly express the type of progress that we should go forth with, rather than to retain the abyss of 1835 and 1908. We must move forward and build libraries, big libraries, big schools, better schools, better libraries if we are to move forward and remove our nation from the position of a second class power in the field of science, and I take my stand here and now with that thesis.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to ask a question, and please don't think I am trying to be funny, because I am not. We have in the village of Houghton, I think, one of the most difficult library systems in the state, and those people that have been working with libraries throughout the state will agree with me. I am wondering what would happen to the village of Houghton library if the penal fines were discontinued, and if you have the statistics, I would like to ask how much is received in Houghton county, Keweenaw county and Luce county in penal fines.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: As I understand it, this isn't exactly pertinent to the pending Hanna amendment.

MRS. BUTLER: Please defeat the Hanna amendment. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I notice that Delegate Andrus is looking through her tabulation there. If I understood the Hanna amendment, it was bringing in more money than less, but the Chair should not comment on pending questions. Does anybody wish to reply to the question or observation of Mrs. Butler? Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: I am very sorry, Mrs. Butler, Mr. Heideman had all that information and I can't find it here and he is not here.

MRS. BUTLER: May I say that we are not trying to take the money away from Detroit, because they seem to be afraid that we might get some from them. And we hope to retaliate when they try to take our apportionment away from us in the upper peninsula. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The next delegate on the list is Delegate Suzore.

MR. SUZORE: Since my colleague from Taylor has so often mentioned the name of the city of Lincoln Park, from which I come and which is one of the cities I represent, I would like to answer him by just mentioning to him that I feel that he is trying to attack a problem from behind. He is not happy, and I think the delegates all realize that, that townships now have to pay the penal fines into the library funds, and so he is trying to take the cities in with the townships. I think in being a member of the board of supervisors of Wayne county, and having talked to many of the supervisors of the townships—and most of the townships are in Mr. Ford's and my area of the county—very few, if any of them agree with the position that is taken by Mr. Ford and Mr. Hanna, and I ask, therefore, for the defeat of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I am not going to read to you. Don't get frightened by the book here. I think perhaps a simple exposition of one man's point of view in this regard will clarify a lot of points. I was on the subcommittee for libraries and when we first got together we were all amazed, I think equally amazed, by the fact that pursuant to the terminology of the 1908 constitution the libraries in general within certain portions of the state were not getting a fair shake because the 1908 constitution—and if we start with that—was very explicit. It said, you will establish a library in every city, in every village, in every township. And then in the second portion it said that all penal fines should go from these various respective political entities into these library systems. Now, this was all very well and good, but since the passage of the 1908 constitution, we on the subcommittee were surprised—or least, I was—to find that since that time there have been several supreme court cases and attorney general's opinions indicating that those political entities that had achieved the status of cities were no longer subjected to this and need not participate if they did not want to in the county library system. Now, basically what happened after that was that you had the cities, when they achieved their independent status, establishing their own library systems. In most cases, I think as testified to by Mr. Goebel and people from Detroit, the city library systems have more than made up for whatever library system they would have had under the unaltered terminology of the 1908 constitution. In some cases, however, this is not true, especially in your rural areas. In your 1908 constitution, you have an exclusive direction that each township shall have a library, and we know, of course, this was never adhered to because as a practical matter each county has a different problem in regard to their libraries, and many areas don't have libraries in each township nor in each group of townships, nor in any particular place that has any logical, cogent reason behind its location.

Now, because each county solves the library problem in its own particular way, the committee on education felt that it would be advisable to generalize the language in the first portion of our proposal, and that was simply to say that because as a practical matter you are not having today a library in every township, we will simply say that we will extend library services so that they will be available throughout the state; that this will encompass those areas where they want to have a small, independent library, and also take care of those problems where they think perhaps a group or area library would be better suited for their needs.

The intent of the Hanna amendment certainly does not change that terminology in the least, and there has been some discussion about it in regard to whether or not this was taking away from the townships their right to have a library if they so choose. But it does not. The only thing that the Hanna amendment does, in all fairness, is take these exempted funds from the municipalities and put them back into the general pool. So that each county will be able to make its own determination as to how many libraries it wants, where they will be placed, and what they will do with the money. That is, in essence, what it does. Maybe, in most cases, it isn't necessary. Maybe, in the case of Wayne county or in the case of Kent county it isn't necessary. In some counties it may be necessary.

Now, someone has indicated that they have surpluses in the library fund within given cities which they use to pay for their police protection. It occurs to me that if a city has a surplus in the library fund which it uses to pay for police protection, it may be doing so at the expense of some other portions of the county. And let's face facts. We are all interrelated. We all depend upon one another. The city of Detroit cannot get along without the outcounty area and vice versa. If we approach the problem from a logical lead, in other words, what does any given county need for its library system, and we have a generalized fund, then I think the Hanna amendment more meets the specific needs, although I certainly have no objection to the committee proposal and I was a signatory to it.

If we simply understand the whole question here is whether or not we are going to allow the counties, as such, to plan on a total structure for their library systems, or whether we are going to allow it to proceed on a haphazard basis, then I think the issue is clear. There is no regression here. The Hanna amendment, I feel, is better than the committee proposal, but the committee proposal is certainly a step forward from the 1908 constitution, and none of the 3 are in conflict.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am wondering if we could ask ourselves how many votes have been made or lost with all the extensive debate that we have had on this particular question. I am sure many of us have made up our minds as to how we are going to vote at least an hour ago, and I would like to say that even though I do not always agree with my kind Christian friend, Mr. Madar, this is one time when I think he is right. I hope you vote against the pending amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I had reserved a space on this list for Delegate McCauley. I do not see him in the chamber. I have passed his name by and if he is not present, would anybody be interested in hearing the pending amendment? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Messrs. Hanna, Ford, T. S. Brown and Iverson is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "laws" by inserting "and municipal ordinances".

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. As many as are in favor say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. (laughter) Just give us a second here for folks to respond to the bell.

Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: If the Chair is in doubt on that one, I will loan you my hearing aid, Mr. Chairman. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Thank you, Delegate Marshall. All in favor of this amendment by Delegates Hanna, Ford, Brown and Iverson vote aye. Those opposed, vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The committee will be in order. The secretary will announce the result of the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the Hanna, Ford, Brown and Iverson amendment, the yeas are 37; the nays are 88.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The amendment is not adopted. Delegate Marshall, the Chair stands corrected. Don't say I didn't try to help you. (laughter) The secretary will read the next amendment on the desk.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "libraries" by inserting "and county law libraries"; so the language will read:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment and support of the public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state. All fines assessed and collected in the several counties, cities and townships for any breach of the penal laws shall be exclusively applied to the support of such public libraries and county law libraries, as provided by law.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Higgs, do you wish to comment on your amendment?

MR. HIGGS: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Speaking to this amendment, I feel that it is necessary to incorporate into the body of the proposal after the word "libraries" on line 13, "and county law libraries" for the reason that some years ago, and not too many—1945—the question came before the Michigan supreme court as to whether or not a county law library was a library within the meaning of the terms "library" or "such libraries" as these terms were contained in the 1908 constitutional provisions. This case is the County of Gratiot against Federspiel, and appears in volume 312 of the Michigan Reports at page 128. It appeared in that particular decision, and the trial court pointed out that the term "library" in the constitutional mandate is not qualified by any adjective and determined, from ordinary definitions of the word, that a law library satisfies the mandate. Now, the Michigan supreme court affirmed the holding of the trial court.

Inasmuch as the committee in its majority report has qualified the term "library" by the word "public", it leaves open the question, certainly, whether or not the county law library, as we know it, is presently within the terminology supplied by the committee. I think unquestionably that being the intent, as I understand it from Delegates Bentley and Andrus, we should make it very clear for the necessity of any future decision. I would say and I would like to anticipate an argument that very possibly a county law library is not a public library, in the sense in which the usage is implied in the body of the proposal.

The statute dealing with the penal fines and the county library is Michigan Statutes Annotated, 27.2224, and this statute provides that > . . . every county treasurer shall keep an accurate account of all moneys paid to him on account of fines, penalties and forfeitures, and shall credit all fines for the violation of the penal laws to the library fund, and all other fines, penalties, and forfeitures to the general fund.

And the statute goes on—and I am omitting parts of it dealing with technicalities involving recognizances—that in each county the county treasurer shall credit, semiannually, to a fund to be known as the county law library fund, sums of money. The statute goes on to specify sums of money from the very small counties under 10,000, which is $750, and to larger counties up to a million of $4,000. So we are not really talking about a lot of money, but the amount of money involved is in that range, $750 to $4,000. The statute also provides with regard to the usage of the library, and I think this is very important to this particular provision:

> . . . for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a law library for the use of the circuit and probate courts of such county, and for the officers of such courts, and persons having business in such courts.

It seems to me that this is the proper usage of the law library. The reason for having the law library is to have it available to the circuit court, the probate court, the officers of the court, and the people having business with the court, and not necessarily members of the general public. I think that does not make it necessarily less of a public matter, but it certainly does not make it a pubic library in the general sense, because these books must be available during the trial of a case to the judge, to the lawyers, and to persons having business with that court in that particular proceeding. These books must be available when needed in the process of trial, so it is not all members of the general public that are really concerned with that particular matter or with that particular book. These books should not be subject to circulation in the same sense. I point out that because I think there is a very real question as to whether or not the court, faced with this change and I don't quarrel with the change as long as in the last sentence we can include county law libraries, because I think there is a danger that we would exclude them or, at the very least, we would make necessary another court decision in order to interpret what we intended. I would certainly like to hear from any judges or lawyers who might have something else to offer in that regard.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Chairman Bentley has risen. Do you have a rejoinder?

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, before replying to the gentleman from Bay City, I cannot refrain from making a brief comment on the result of the vote that has just been taken. Some day, Mr. Chairman, I am convinced that some historian will do a study on the various coalitions that have arisen during the life of this constitutional convention. I predict that the coalition which we have just seen in operation will be one that will form one of his most interesting subjects for research.

Mr. Chairman, with reply to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Bay City, it is true that in 1945, as a result of a court decision, county law libraries were held to be beneficiaries of penal fines. Actually, county law libraries have been authorized to use such penal fines as far back as 1921, but that was a statutory decision, I believe, not a judicial one. Mr. Chairman, I can say that the intent of the committee on education was definitely—insofar as I am aware of it—not to exclude county libraries now enjoying revenue from penal fines, from continuing to receive the benefits of such revenue. While I of course cannot speak for the entire committee, I would say that insofar as I am concerned, and since the Higgs amendment would merely clarify something that I believe to be the intent of the committee already, I, as an individual and not as chairman of the committee, would be prepared to accept the Higgs amendment.

I may say, parenthetically, one word more, Mr. Chairman, and that is this: we have just passed through an interesting and stimulating discussion with advocates of various units of local government. I have not the slightest desire to spend the balance of the afternoon warring with the 56 lawyers who happen to be members of this convention. That is another, and perhaps even more compelling reason for accepting the Higgs amendment with respect to county law libraries. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman, may I add to what Mr. Bentley said? I was chairman of the subcommittee. We considered very carefully the question of the county law libraries. Perhaps no one here is familiar with a law library which is in somebody's desk or office locked up most of the time, but that is true in some of the counties in the upper part of the state. We talked this over quite thoroughly. We felt that the provision we have would include law libraries, just as much as it does in the 1908 constitution, but this word "public" might mean that any attorney or anyone who wished to look at these law books and the law publication would feel that he had a right, that they would be open to the public.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to be clear on whether Mr. Bentley is accepting the Higgs amendment. If they are accepting it, then there is no necessity for my taking any time.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bentley, I'll let you respond.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I remind Judge Pugsley, I said I was only authorized to speak as an individual. I have not polled the committee on their own feelings, but I think that the intent of the committee was that county law libraries would remain included and if the Higgs amendment clarifies the committee intent, again, as I say, as an individual, I personally will accept it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Pugsley, you have the floor.

MR. PUGSLEY: I wish to say this: I am very familiar with the practical use that has been made of county law libraries in more than half of the circuits of the state of Michigan in which it had been my pleasure to preside during the 30 years of my incumbency as a circuit judge. When I went on the bench on January 1, 1930, to preside over the 3 counties of Mecosta, Newaygo and Oceana, I found that the serviceable libraries in those respective counties were very meager, and I soon realized that in the administration of justice it was necessary to have made available for the convenience of the court and for service to the litigants and for the convenience of attorneys and others who might be interested in the proceedings of the court, not a large library, but one that would make it possible for the court to have the references and the principles of law handy at hand. It expedites the work of the court. It is a saving to the taxpayers to have the courts act as expeditiously and as promptly and as accurately as it is possible to do. These libraries have been a wonderful convenience, and from the limited amount of money which has been set aside in the counties which I have served for the purchasing of law books, I feel that the people in those respective counties have received value in return.

We are all interested in the administration of justice, and if we expect our courts to perform their part, and for lawyers to do their duty, they must have the necessary libraries with which to proceed. I thank you. I rise in support of the Higgs amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, fellow members of the committee, I am not in favor of the inclusion of the words "county law library", not because we didn't consider this but because it is not necessary with the terminology that you have before you. We discussed this in committee of the whole, and if we in our determination here have made it quite clear that we are not eliminating the inclusion of county law libraries when we talk about public libraries as provided by law, then I don't see any need for us to spell this out. If the lawyers want to spell out county law libraries, maybe we should spell out an elementary school library and an adult library and a technicians' library and an engineering library, and a number of services that we mean when we talk about public libraries. I think the terminology of the committee proposal that is before you, "such public libraries as provided by law" is quite clear; that the exact definitions for what law libraries we mean will be left to the legislature to determine, and that public libraries will be provided for.

But I would object to the inclusion here of a specific form of library in the absence of others, and I would therefore, as a single member of the committee, urge the rejection with the understanding that we do mean the inclusion of law libraries but we do not have to spell it out in the constitution specifically.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: I would like to speak in support of Mr. Higgs' amendment. If it weren't for the mistakes we lawyers make in looking up the law in these libraries, there wouldn't be any funds with which to establish these law libraries. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, my own concern is with this word "public". If Delegate Faxon can assure me that this does not mean that the county law libraries will be open to the public, in the normal sense of the word, then I would have no objection. But until he can assure me of that—and Delegate Andrus did not so assure me—then I would have to go along with the Higgs amendment. Would you care to comment on that, Mr. Faxon?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: You want an assurance that we meant to include the law libraries?

MR. KING: Yes, but not as public libraries. They are not so included at the present time.

MR. FAXON: We could take out the word "public" and leave the rest. We have the original language, "such libraries as provided by law" and that might solve the problem.

MR. KING: I think the problem here is not the idea of giving constitutional status to law libraries as such. The problem is the county law libraries are not ordinarily available to the general public, except as they are required by the public in working with the courts in a particular matter. In other words, if you are a defendant in a particular case, you are entitled to use the county law library, but it is not a reading room or a place to browse. I think that unless this is made clear—the only way I see of making it clear is to support the Higgs amendment, and I would so support it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Higgs is next.

MR. HIGGS: I think Delegate Faxon and Delegate King have brought out a good point. I had thought I had covered it but I would like to add to it again that the public interest involved in the county law library is somewhat different than the public interest involved in public libraries as included in the body of the proposal. Inasmuch as the public interest here is in having available to the court these books for the circuit and probate courts and for the officers of such courts and persons having business in such courts—in other words, during the trial of a case or the hearing of a motion or any other proceeding before the court, the public interest is in having those books immediately available, not only to the court but to any persons, with or without lawyers. The primary interest, then, is in having those books immediately available at the time that they may be required. I might have agreed with Delegate Faxon that it should be included within the word "public" as a public interest—I think it is public in that sense—but I sincerely believe that the supreme court decision which I reviewed previously raises some question as to construction, and therefore, rather than have the matter tested in court, it would be a simple matter for us to include these few words.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: I am sorry to speak again. You are probably all tired of hearing me, but I would like to speak to Mr.

King. I thought that I made this very clear, but maybe he wasn't here at the time and maybe some of the rest of you weren't. I agree with Mr. Bentley that we could put those words in, but I think in every committee we have been trying to cut down on words. We have been trying to make things clear, but to have as few words as necessary. There is no doubt at all over the years that the law libraries are considered a part of this library system, and first, before any other money is taken, money is taken out by the county treasurer for the county law libraries.

As I said before, there are some counties where a judge has these references and he has his office locked, and we had complaints and we had evidence that they would like to have it known that any attorney or someone who wanted to use these books would be able to do so. We asked, "Is that going to cost money then? Would they have to build a building?" That wouldn't be necessary.

My county has a very fine law library. I use it a great deal. I am not a lawyer, but as a teacher of government I have used it and many other people do. Don't you lawyers think you are the only ones who are interested in law. The public is, and I think that it isn't necessary; but if you want to put it in, vote for it. It isn't necessary, but we do feel on this matter of "public" that anyone who wishes to use those books might do so there. That doesn't mean they are going to circulate so they are not available to other people, but they should be available to those who need and wish to use them.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I don't want to belabor this point, Delegate Andrus, but when you say that it has always been understood and very clear that this library was part of the system, that is where I take issue, because it has not been very clear and when the question came up, they had to go to the supreme court in order to determine that the county law library was a library in the absence of any adjective description. Now that we do have an adjective description, this raises a further doubt and might possibly precipitate another supreme court decision. I would only hope to avoid that. Inasmuch as you and I do not disagree as to what the intent or purpose is, and we have never had any problem, I don't think, in our county libraries, bar libraries, with the use of these books—members of the public do use them, and there hasn't really been any trouble about it—I do think that we have a chance to avoid going to the supreme court over it again.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I merely wanted to ask a question in line with the present discussion: are we being asked here to authorize public funds for the use of a library which will not be available to the public? I address that to Mr. King or to any member sponsoring the amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate King, do you wish to answer?

MR. KING: Well, I would only say that under the present interpretation of the supreme court decisions on the matter, as carefully reviewed by Mr. Higgs, county law libraries are not open to the public in the same sense that most libraries are, and I think that the reasons for that have also been carefully covered by Mr. Higgs, and I, for one, do not wish to do anything to disturb this particular minute element of the status quo.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I suppose that a confession is a good thing about this hour of the afternoon. I am probably the one that caused all this trouble you are having here today because I happen to have been in the Federspiel case, which is the one they are citing here, as to what is the meaning of "library." And, you don't like to say that you took a shellacking in the supreme court, but I took a shellacking in the supreme court in that particular case, so I think I can speak with at least some intimate knowledge about this.

I agree with the committee. I think that the supreme court would say unquestionably if the occasion should require it to be said, that a public library would include a county law library. But I don't see any point in continuing this argument. I have no objection to the use of the words "law library" if you want to insert it in there, but I still believe that the committee, in its original interpretation, is correct, and I think that the supreme court would sustain that. Of course, the object is not to have to go to the supreme court. So, if we are going to avoid it, without giving way on what I believe to be the opinion of this committee — which I think is sound — in order to end this argument, I would say that I would also agree, as a member of the committee, to allow the use of that language.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I concur in what Mr. Bonisteel had to say, and to eliminate this argument, I think we should accept the Higgs amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of the Higgs amendment. As many as are in favor, say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes have it. The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Leibrand offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "libraries" by striking out "which shall be available to all residents of the state"; so the language will read, "The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment and support of public libraries."

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to speak to the purpose of this amendment. By implication at least, the phrase, "which shall be available to all residents of the state," means to me that the service of any library shall be available, free, to all residents of the state, or at least shall be available to everyone on the same terms as offered to the residents of the municipality which operates the library. Now, I feel that this may very well place an undue burden upon existing libraries.

For 14 or 15 years, I have been a member of the board of trustees of the Bay City public library, and this thing operates something like this: we get, for library purposes, in Bay City, about $108,000 a year, but only 20 per cent of that amount, approximately 20 per cent — it varies from year to year — comes from the penal fines. The other 80 per cent comes by appropriation of the city commission of the city of Bay City from taxable property within the city of Bay City.

Now, we have, adjoining us there in Bay City — and I am talking about other libraries where our situation is not unique. I think all of those who live in cities, particularly industrial cities of any size, will find themselves faced with the same proposition. We find ourselves with a small satellite city bordering on ours, the city of Essexville. We find ourselves fringed and hinged with 6 townships with a population of 30,000 or 35,000 people. Bay City itself has only 50,000. There is a constant demand by these adjoining townships and from the city of Essexville, to be given free library service, and it would be my opinion that under the language which I seek to delete, we might be obligated to provide free library service for these adjoining townships and the city of Essexville. This, with the city of Bay City paying 80 per cent of the operating costs, would be manifestly unfair.

I don't think any library would object to permitting a tourist or a traveling salesman to come into its reading room and look at a magazine or two, but the business of providing full time library service, with the circulation of books, is, as I say, an undue burden. Year after year I have gone to the city commission of the city of Bay City at their budget meeting, and one of the first questions that is always asked of our library committee is this: "Are you providing free service for any municipality other than the city of Bay City? If you are, we are going to reduce your budget because you are getting too much money. We, the city of Bay City, are not obligated to provide library service to these other municipalities, any more than we are obligated to provide fire department service or police department service".

So, I feel that there is a danger in the language that I seek to delete.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Chairman Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the amendment offered by my good friend from Bay City, I would like to say that the committee believed that this provision should be in this respect as broad and general in scope as possible. I would like to read to him that paragraph from the committee's supporting reasons which deals with this particular provision which he seeks to delete, and I quote:

> The present language emphasizes that public libraries will be available to residents without fixing how or where the libraries themselves shall be organized. The committee presumes that legislation may be written so that each library may make reasonable rules for the use and control of its books.

Mr. Chairman, I think that this matter, which I respect as a problem, perhaps, in Bay county and Bay City, should be handled by appropriate legislation in this respect. I do not think we have to spell it out in the constitution.

I support the language offered by the committee, by making free public library service available to all residents of the state, but obviously we recognize that there must be qualifications, there must be reservations, there must be individual problems which must be met. And I submit that we cannot and we should not try to meet them in this constitution. Let's leave that up to legislative and statutory action.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Chairman of the subcommittee, Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman and members, I would like to recall to you what I said about 2 hours ago. We spent a great deal of time talking with the members of the state board for libraries, the state library association, or association of state librarians I believe is their title, librarians from different parts of the state. And I quoted certain cases. Perhaps some of you weren't here when I told this. Detroit is having certain of the communities nearby paying so much in to the Detroit library, and then the people there may have library cards. Birmingham is doing the same. It would be done that way by the surrounding communities paying a certain amount to your library, and all could use it, or they can charge — as Mr. Bentley just said — to the individuals who will use it.

One of the first problems that came up was, people said, "We don't want to have to pay for our library and then have other people use it." We don't mean that by this language. It is not considered, in any sense. That will be a matter to be worked out. As I said, there are 5 counties working together in the upper part of the state at the present time, all contributing to a common fund which can be utilized throughout that area. We want to get away from that township and city each having a library and having a broader base, which will be available. Would you say that answers your question?

MR. LEIBRAND: Miss Andrus, what I am trying to find out is if these libraries are going to be free libraries or if they are going to be pay libraries. And if they are going to be pay libraries, who is going to pay if, under the language of the constitution, a library could refuse to provide service to a resident of the state of Michigan if he didn't pay? That is my problem.

MISS ANDRUS: Yes, there is no doubt at all about that. The state board for libraries is working out arrangements between libraries, and as I have given you these illustrations of how it can be done, it will be done from the local. It is not going to be a state telling libraries what to do, but local libraries can combine and decide. Have you ever asked these townships and that other municipality to cooperate with you?

MR. LEIBRAND: Oh, yes, Miss Andrus. We're doing it now.

MISS ANDRUS: And they refused?

MR. LEIBRAND: No, some of them have refused and some are entering into contracts, but with the free service contemplated by your chairman's statement, I can't see where we can force a contract. We have a doctor from Essexville that for years has been threatening to sue us, and I think if this new language goes in, he sure enough will.

MISS ANDRUS: If it is available, but it doesn't say free.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of the Leibrand amendment. Mr. Follo.

MR. FOLLO: I would like to direct my remarks, Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Leibrand's fear on this matter. I think we had plenty of legal advice to the effect that they did not think that this would happen, Judge. I know that you are a judge and used to interpreting these things, but one of the things we had in mind was this: that in addition to our local libraries, we also have a state library which furnishes library service to people all over the state. Also, the state library is interested in spreading library service to people in many parts of the state which do not now have it. They are interested in getting counties to set up county libraries so that more of the people of the state of Michigan will be covered by library service. They are interested in developing regional libraries where county libraries are not feasible. These are some of the things we had in mind when we put that language in there.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate William Hanna, did you seek the floor?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I just can't resist the comment that the cities want to keep the fines, the city lawyers want to use the county law library, and now they want to charge us poor folks from the country to come in and use their library in addition. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Leibrand, you were seeking recognition.

MR. LEIBRAND: I would like to inquire if it was the sense of the committee that the language we find in this Committee Proposal 31 would continue to permit libraries to make contracts with other municipal units and would continue to permit libraries to charge for library card service in other municipal units?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bentley, can you commit the committee?

MR. BENTLEY: Well, Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman from Bay City, I can say that the intent of the committee, insofar as I am aware of it, was not to make any change in the existing situation. And I again remind him of the language which I read earlier in the committee report: "The committee presumes that legislation may be written so that each library may make reasonable rules for the use and control of its books." I believe that covers the point which he has under consideration.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I will say that it is recorded in the archives of this convention. I don't know how far it will get in court. (laughter) The next man I saw on his feet was Delegate Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Bentley, and I would like to say that the consideration given this by Delegate Leibrand, from my city, here, also occured to me independently; this language "which shall be available to all residents of the state."

The first question is: is it not possible that this could be covered by legislation? Isn't what you are driving at, you want public libraries, period? Isn't the rest statutory?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Chairman Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: We think, Mr. Higgs, that a general statement of intent, such as we have included here, was desirable to show that the library services, whether intended through branch libraries, bookmobiles or what else you have, may be extended to those residents of the state who are not now adequately provided with library services. But I repeat, that so far as working out the rules for individual libraries to govern the use and control of their books, the committee felt that this matter was and should be statutory.

MR HIGGS: My question was whether or not this particular language which Delegate Leibrand seeks to strike is not possibly covered by statute. Isn't that perfectly possible to cover that by statute?

MR. BENTLEY: I suppose that it is possible to cover a great many things by statute, but the committee on education felt that a broad, general statement of encouraging the extension of library services throughout the state to all its residents, through various media, would be helpful, useful and timely to place in the constitution.

MR. HIGGS: I have a second question, Mr. Chairman, if I may direct it also: would it be your intention, if someone from some other part of the state, not Essexville, not a contiguous territory, perhaps Detroit, should be in Bay City or surrounding territory on vacation, would this be intended to apply to this person?

MR. BENTLEY: Well, I think you are speaking of a hypothetical case and I have no knowledge of how your library would handle it. Why don't we say this: why don't we let the Bay City library make whatever rules it desires for the residents of Bay City, or Bay county or Wayne county, or any other part of the state, and if somebody wants to challenge them, let them do so. I feel there is nothing in the constitution which would permit a resident of any other part of the state to come into your library in Bay City and demand services which were contrary to the regulations which you laid down yourself for the use and control of your books.

MR. HIGGS: Well, Mr. Bentley, neither the Bay City public library nor any other public library of the state would have any power whatsoever by regulation and neither would the legislature have any power to pass any statute which would contravene this language which we are placing in the constitution. When you say, "which shall be available to all residents of the state," that is pretty clear. I don't see how we could possibly deny the availability of any books to any resident of the state of Michigan. You mean the whole state, don't you?

MR. BENTLEY: What I am trying to explain, Mr. Higgs — and I am not a lawyer, as I have stated many times — but as long as a person from any part of the state can come up to your library and conform with your local regulations and rules, he can have that library and its services and its books made available to him. Would you say that that was covered?

MR. HIGGS: I would say that would be covered. I would say that when you say "which shall be available to all residents of the state" in the constitution, that you could not limit or qualify that in any way by the requirement of a deposit for the use of the book to guarantee its return or anything else. You say "It shall be available to all residents of the state." This is like saying in a criminal case, "You've got a right of appeal." When you say, "You've got a right of appeal," you've got that right whether you've got the money to pay for it or not. In fact, if you don't have the money to pay for it, the county has to provide it in that case, and I say in this case the same thing would apply.

MR. BENTLEY: I recognize your concern, Mr. Higgs, and that of Mr. Leibrand and others who may be faced with the same problem. I can only repeat that it is not the intention of the committee, as we tried to spell out in our supporting reasons, to circumscribe legislation or other rules which may be adopted by local libraries for use in the control of their books, and we have so stated specifically in the supporting reasons.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Ladies and gentlemen, I have allowed a great deal of latitude here in the dialogue. I am advised by our secretary that there is filed and on his desk a proposed amendment by Judge Dehnke which might pretty well clear up much of the controversy we have been having for the last several moments. I do have other names that have sought recognition, including Mr. Kuhn, but may I have the unanimous consent of the committee that the secretary read the amendment that has been filed? Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a word before that is read. I think Mr. Higgs has put his finger on the precise question that ought to concern all of us. Where the constitution's language is unequivocal and specific, I am sure the supreme court will go by that language and not by what was said in the attached report, and this language, as it now reads, says, "which shall be available to all residents of the state," and is broad and definite and specific. Somebody might want to come in at an odd hour of the night; something has happened in his family, he would like to look in a book about that, he needs to know right away, and other things can happen, so that I think Judge Leibrand's concern is warranted. But the amendment that I have presented to the secretary would add to the language that is there now, "under reasonable regulations" — "which shall be available to all residents of the state, under reasonable regulations." That would at least give the library board the authority to lay down some regulations to set up the hours during which the library shall be considered open and all that sort of thing.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Judge Leibrand, do you wish to comment on that amendment?

MR. LEIBRAND: Yes, if Judge Dehnke's amendment is before the committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: It is not.

MR. LEIBRAND: It is not?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: If you accept it.

MR. LEIBRAND: I will accept it and withdraw mine.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Then I would rule that it is before the committee. I think possibly the secretary should read it in its entirety so that we see exactly what is being proposed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Judge Leibrand withdraws his amendment and Mr. Dehnke has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "state" by inserting "under reasonable regulations"; so the language will read:

> The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment and support of public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state under reasonable regulations . . . .

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in opposition to this amendment. I think it is quite clear what the committee intends. Like Delegate Bentley said, the only thing that we are changing here is the fact that since it is not practical that every township have a library, we say that they shall be available to the citizens of the state of Michigan. Now, Delegate Higgs said, "Well, if you say they have an automatic right of appeal, and so forth, they can do it." But remember, they must live in the jurisdiction. There are a lot of things that they have to qualify. Just because we say that it is available doesn't mean that there are no standards. In order to get into a court you must live in that district; in order to get a divorce now, you must live in that county for 10 days, and things of that nature. I don't think we want every small detail put in our constitution; it is very clear.

I would like to answer Judge Leibrand's questions. Can he make these contracts? The answer is yes, without question he can make these contracts. We are not changing any of that. We don't want anybody to think we are. The fact that we say they shall be available to the people of the state of Michigan is just a broad, general statement. The argument that we should leave them open all night, we say we should have public education for the people of the state of Michigan; does that mean the schools should stay open all night? Someone might want to learn something at 3:00 o'clock in the morning?

I think we are carrying this too far and way out of proportion. I think the committee proposal is sound, reasonable, was well refined, and it is not out of place to change anything today.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: We spent a great deal of time on this "little thing" in the constitution, and I had no idea we would spend so much time on it in the committee of the whole. Our committee doesn't think we need to put in "county law libraries" or to put this in, "under reasonable regulations," but if you want to put it in, if it will make you feel happier, we don't have any objection. It just makes the constitution longer and we were trying to make it as brief as we could.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I will reply as I replied to the first Higgs amendment. I don't think it is necessary. I think the intent is clear — crystal clear beyond any doubt — but for the sake of trying to save some time and some argument, speaking again as an individual — and I cannot speak for the committee because this question has not been before them — since it is merely clarifying what the committee's original intent was, I, as an individual, will be willing to accept the words of the Dehnke amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I want to support Mr. Kuhn here also as a member of the same subcommittee. We seem to be getting up here and arguing. I think this question of "under reasonable regulations" is purely statutory. There is already a state board for libraries which sets up these regulations on library hours. I don't understand why there is such a need to get into such specificity with regard to this particular section when we've permitted other sections to get by in general language, and here we are demanding a detail, legislative detail if you like, in order to win the approval of the delegates. I would urge the delegates to keep the original proposed draft which came after long and careful consideration by the committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and fellow members, it is crystal clear what the committee intends. What is not crystal clear is what the court will interpret. The construction of the court, as has been pointed out, is based on the language. I see no objection to making it clear, even to the supreme court. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of Judge Dehnke's amendment. As many as are in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes have it. The amendment is adopted. Are there any other amendments on file on the secretary's desk?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: That completes the amendments on the secretary's desk. Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 31, as amended, is passed.

Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to make one remark: I hope now that we've got this going, we are going to have some law libraries. Let's make sure that there are some good English textbooks there so that we can have this done properly, as Judge Dethmers asked us to; make it simple.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 5 on the calendar from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 41, A proposal to provide for a 2/3 vote of the legislature for nongovernmental appropriations. Retains article V, section 24.

Following is Committee Proposal 41 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The assent of 2/3 of the members elected to each house of the legislature shall be requisite to every bill appropriating the public money or property for local or private purposes.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 41:

The committee recommends the retention of this section. It provides against possible misuse of the appropriation power for private gain.

The committee believes that a 2/3 vote of the members of each house of the legislature should be required for any bill appropriating public money or property for nongovernmental or nonpublic purposes, thereby protecting public funds.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The chair will recognize Delegate Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we are very proud, in the legislative powers committee, that the individual selected to preside over this session is also chairman of the subcommittee that handled this particular proposal. Because it would be improper for him to explain it from the rostrum, I, at this time, yield to Mr. Baginski, who is also a member of that committee, and also Mr. Murphy.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee of the whole, your committee on legislative powers submits Committee Proposal 41 with the recommendation that the language that has been in the constitution since 1850 be retained.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Baginski, I would like to ask a question through the Chair. Just for my own purposes here — and I spoke with regard to this particular proposal before your subcommittee — where is there a need for the appropriations of public moneys for strictly private purposes?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. Faxon, there are funds appropriated by the legislature for the veterans' service work. I believe some 4-H money is appropriated by the legislature, and that is a private purpose, you might call it. There is an aeronautical association that receives money from the legislature to carry on its work in aeronautics.

MR. FAXON: Are these moneys where the public gets no accounting as to how they are spent? Do we actually appropriate to private organizations here and they in turn spend it as they see fit?

MR. BAGINSKI: Yes, but these funds are audited and controlled by the legislature.

MR. FAXON: Then the state does get an accounting as to how this money is spent?

MR. BAGINSKI: That is right.

MR. FAXON: And there would be no mismanagement from this standpoint?

MR. BAGINSKI: I don't see how there could be.

MR. FAXON: And this has not been abused in the past in terms of excessive appropriations for private purposes?

MR. BAGINSKI: No, and as I said before, this language has been in the constitution since 1850 and in all these years there have been no embarrassing moments about it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Faxon, I might be pardoned if I say it is my understanding that also the appropriation for the tourists and resort associations might be construed as for a private purpose.

Delegate Madar, do you wish recognition?

MR. MADAR: I just wanted to mention something that I do happen to know something about. This is also used for convention purposes, and just to give you an idea of how that is taken care of, the VFW just returned, I believe it was, $5,000 of their appropriation. In fact, they did the same thing with Wayne county and the city of Detroit on their convention that they just had and this has certainly helped the entire state.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I might say to the delegates that the chairman of the committee on legislative powers, T. Jefferson Hoxie, was for many years a member of the house committee on ways and means, and if there are any specific questions, he's well qualified to answer them.

The question is on the proposal. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 41 is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next item on the calendar, from the committee on legislative powers, by Mr. Hoxie, chairman, Committee Proposal 42, A proposal to include in the constitution all of sections 1, 2, 3, 4 and 8 of article IX entitled "impeachments and removals from office."

Following is Committee Proposal 42 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. (1) The house of representatives shall have the sole power of impeaching civil officers for corrupt conduct in office, or for crimes or misdemeanors; but a majority of the members elected shall be necessary to direct an impeachment.

Sec. b. (2) When an impeachment is directed, the house of representatives shall elect from its own body 3 members, whose duty it shall be to prosecute such impeachment. No impeachment shall be tried until the final adjournment of the legislature, when the senate shall proceed to try the same.

Sec. c. (3) Every impeachment shall be tried by the senate. When the governor or lieutenant governor is tried, the chief justice of the supreme court shall preside. When an impeachment is directed, the senate shall take an oath or affirmation truly and impartially to try and determine the same according to the evidence. No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of 2/3 of the members elected. Judgment in case of impeachment shall not extend further than removal from office, but the person convicted shall be liable to punishment according to law.

Sec. d. (4) No judicial officer shall exercise his office after an impeachment is directed until he is acquitted.

Sec. e. (8) Any officer elected by a county, city, village, township or school district may be removed from office in such manner and for such cause as shall be prescribed by law.

Mr. Hoxie, chairman of the committee on legislative powers, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 42:

Sections a, b and c, being sections 1, 2 and 3 of article IX, provisions for the basic process of impeachment and trial of civil officers, including judges, were carried over from the 1850 constitution into the 1908 constitution unchanged except for the reversal in sequence of sections 2 and 3. The 1850 provisions were implemented by legislation in 1872 by act 62 of the public acts of 1872, MSA 2.191-2.206 inclusive, and this legislation is still in effect. This statute of 1872 was in preparation for the impeachment trial of a commissioner of the state land office in that year. The officer was acquitted. A judge of probate was tried and removed from office in 1943, by the impeachment process.

This legislation provides that the trial must be at the state capitol; the senate has the power to compel attendance of members; upon the appearance of the officer impeached to answer the charge, he must receive a copy of the articles and be given a reasonable time to answer them; the managers of the prosecution and the officer impeached are entitled to process to compel the appearance of witnesses and records.

These provisions on the impeachment process seem to be generally adequate for their purpose. The impeachment process has been used infrequently, but might tend to be a more influential factor, if the term of office for elective executive state officers were lengthened.

The committee on legislative powers has sole jurisdiction over sections a and b and recommends their approval. The primary jurisdiction over section c is in the legislative powers committee with concurrent jurisdiction in the executive branch committee, which committee has concurred in the recommendation of the legislative powers committee as follows:

January 19, 1962

The committee on executive branch has considered the recommendation of the committee on legislative powers that section 3 of article IX respecting impeachment be reported to the convention for inclusion in the new constitution without change. The committee unanimously concurs in this recommendation.

It is therefore recommended that the above sections a, b and c be included in the new constitution without change, and it is also recommended that the style and drafting committee be requested to consider placing these 3 sections in the legislative branch article.

Section d. (4) This was carried over from the 1850 constitution unchanged and provides for the mandatory suspension of a judicial officer when impeached until acquitted. No change in this section is deemed necessary.

Primary jurisdiction to this section is in the legislative powers committee with concurrent jurisdiction in the judicial committee, and that committee has advised as follows:

By action taken this date, January 12, 1962, the committee on judicial branch recommends that the provisions of section 4, article IX of the 1908 constitution be retained in its present form in any new article.

It is therefore recommended that this section be included in the new constitution in its present form, but it is further recommended that the style and drafting committee be requested to consider placing this section in the judicial branch article.

Section e. (8) The 1835 constitution gave the legislature power to provide by law for the removal of justices of the peace and other county and township officers. The 1850 constitution made the same provision "for the removal of any officer elected by a county, township or school district."

The 1908 provision kept the 1850 specification of elected officers, but broadened the language to include those of cities and villages.

In addition to provisions for removal of local officers by local authority through laws and charters, statutes pursuant to this section have given the governor general power to remove the following elected local government officers for cause with notice of specific charges and hearing: county officers, MSA 6.1207, including auditors, MSA 6.1238, and road commissioners, MSA 6.1268; city officers, MSA 6.1327; justices of the peace and township officers, MSA 6.1369; and village officers, MSA 6.1383.

Removal of elective local officers "in such manner and for such cause as shall be prescribed by law," as presently provided in section 8, appears to be reasonably flexible. The legislature by statute has vested power in the governor to remove such officers for cause.

The committee on legislative powers has primary jurisdiction over this section with concurrent jurisdiction in the committee on local government. That committee has given its concurrence as follows:

January 18, 1962

The committee on local government has reviewed section 8 of article IX, and finds that there is no objection from our committee on its retention in its present language.

The committee on legislative powers therefore recommends that this section be included in the new constitution in its present form. It further recommends that consideration might be given by the style and drafting committee to transfer this section to the local government article.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: We will take this up by sections. Chairman Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, our subcommittee that handled this particular proposal was composed of Messrs. Wood, Lesinski and Wanger. At this time I yield to Mr. Wood.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Wood.

MR. WOOD: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the section numbers which are in this proposal are just for identification purposes. You may find in Journal 65, page 380, the detail on this. I might add that, in considering and studying this proposal, we had the able help of our committee counsel, Delegate Millard.

[Sections a and b were read by Mr. Wood. For text, see above, page 837.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Wood, possibly we had better take these a section at a time. That was the understanding. The secretary had just read that portion of the committee report. We better confine our comments to that.

MR. WOOD: Well, in our comments, sections a, b and c are in one paragraph.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: If there is no objection, we will permit you to proceed.

MR. WOOD: Okay. With regard to the trial, conviction and judgment, section c:

[Section c was read by Mr. Wood. For text, see above, page 838.]

We can stop there. To support this:

[The reasons submitted in support of sections a, b and c were read by Mr. Wood. For text, see above, page 838.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to these 3 sections of the proposal? Do you wish to discuss that further orally, Delegate Wood?

MR. WOOD: Well, it was the conclusion of the committee that they should be retained as they were. I think that was unanimous in our committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Did you wish to comment on this part of the proposal, Delegate Martin?

MR. MARTIN: We are talking only about section a?

CHAIRMAN POWELL: We are taking up a, b and c, which are under consideration.

MR. MARTIN: I wish to comment on c, with which executive branch had a concurrent jurisdiction.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: You may do so at this time.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Wood has reported that we did concur with it. This is a very cumbersome procedure, this procedure of impeachment. The house acts and then the senate has to conduct a trial and it involves tying up large numbers of people, obviously, for a substantial period of time. The subcommitte struggled with some better procedure that we could use for impeachment than is provided here, the possibility of setting up a separate court or selecting a panel to conduct the impeachment trial. We finally satisfied ourselves that we couldn't think of anything better than is now provided. It makes it most unlikely that an impeachment proceeding will ever be held. Probably there are other better means of removing all other officers than the governor or lieutenant governor. We left it as it was because we felt that impeachment should be very rarely used and only in the most desperate situations, so we left in this rather cumbersome machinery, as it is, without suggested change.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: I believe there is a proposed amendment by Delegate Doty. It will be read by the secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Dean Doty offers the following amendment to section c:

1. Amend page 1, line 19, after "office" by inserting "and disqualification from receiving benefits under public retirement system except return of said officer's contribution to such system over any embezzlement shown"; so that the language will read — beginning in line 18 — :

> Judgment in case of impeachment shall not extend further than removal from office and disqualification from receiving benefits under public retirement system except return of said officer's contribution to such system over any embezzlement shown, but the person convicted shall be liable to punishment according to law.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the Dean Doty amendment. Mr. Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. Chairman, this will be the briefest explanation made on any amendment; it is self explanatory.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Any comment? Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: The insertion here would imply that in the case where an officer is being impeached for the charge of embezzlement, the senate is precluding a judgment in a criminal court as to his guilt, making him return the funds upon their own determination in the senate. I don't know if this is what you want to do here.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: I would just like to call the attention of the delegates to the matter of impeachment and removal from office. It is not a trial before a court. I am reminded of an elderly gentleman that was probate judge of one of our northern counties, who was removed from office because he did not properly take care of his accounts. He had been a very good probate judge through the years. He did not account for the moneys that came to his attention. However, when they investigated, they found it was a matter of neglect, that the money was in his safe. It was a matter of making the proper records. He was subject to impeachment and removal from office. I also might add that in the testimony they also found that the safe was a place to keep his spirits along with the money.

Is it the intent for an individual to be removed from office who had been capable, who had been a good servant of the public, without a trial by a court of law, and therefore be penalized any rights that he might have accumulated through the years in the way of pension? I think you have got to bear in mind, introducers of this amendment, that impeachment and removal from office do not entail conviction in a court of law. It could be removal for many minor things.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Donnelly, do you wish to speak on this?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes, I rise to support it. It would seem to me that the original sentence, line 6, is "corrupt conduct" in office. Now, I don't think that is minor, or crimes are misdemeanors. Now, you are referring to the misdemeanor that he misfiled his funds. Does this mean he is going to be impeached when he did it? Does the impeachment mean removal?

This amendment merely says that if an individual is found to have been guilty of this corruption or misconduct in office, in addition to being removed he will lose his pension, but he will get the money back he put in originally. So all he loses from this is the benefit of the office, but the money he put in he gets back. As I say, originally, I think it is very clear. I don't understand Mr. Mahinske's question or attack on it. I would be happy to try and answer it if I could understand it.

MR. MAHINSKE: What you are doing here is you are presuming guilt before you prove it and for the total amount of money that you claim is being embezzled. Now, you know as well as I do that in most embezzlement cases all you have to do is prove the embezzlement of any amount of money and not necessarily the total amount of money that is lacking. What you are doing here, if you are claiming that this man embezzled $10,000, you are going to hold him responsible for the $10,000, but at a subsequent criminal proceeding on the $10,000 —

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Mahinske, I am saying that you just return your pension. You don't get a pension. You just put it back. It has nothing to do with $10,000.

MR. MAHINSKE: Suppose at a subsequent criminal proceeding they do not prove this man guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, the jury comes in not guilty?

MISS DONNELLY: We still say he doesn't get the pension. He just gets back the money he paid into the pension fund. It's got nothing to do with the criminal aspect of it.

MR. MAHINSKE: He gives back $10,000 —

MISS DONNELLY: If anybody pays in $10,000 to the pension fund, yes.

MR. MAHINSKE: Say $1,000. You have withheld from this man's pay $1,000 on a contributing basis. Subsequently, at a criminal proceeding where this man is presumed innocent until proven otherwise, the jury comes in innocent, you have already taken his $1,000, under the amendment here, and the jury verdict means nothing.

MISS DONNELLY: No. He gets the return of said officer's contribution to such system over any embezzlement shown.

MR. MAHINSKE: Over the embezzlement shown, but shown where, in the senate or in a criminal proceeding?

MISS DONNELLY: Well, now I see what you mean — yes — all right. I would just strike "over any embezzlement shown" and just have him contribute, what his contribution was and return that part to him.

MR. MAHINSKE: Without bringing in this proposition of embezzlement?

MISS DONNELLY: I agree with you.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I suggest to the distinguished attorneys who drafted this amendment that they might read the clause in the federal constitution about vested rights and the inability of the states or any of their subdivisions to take those rights away from them. We spent several hours the other day making this pension a vested right, and I don't believe it can be taken away from the man who has earned it.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: I think he said in effect what I was going to say. You are jeopardizing this provision under the due process clause in the fourteenth amendment of the United States constitution.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of the Dean Doty amendment. Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Just briefly to speak in opposition to this amendment, I think there are historical reasons why the sentence was included which says, "Judgment in case of impeachment shall not extend further than removal from office." That was to make it clear that the only issue before the house or the senate would be the man's fitness for office. That was the sole consideration which should be in the minds of the members, either causing the impeachment or trying the impeachment, and that when we also bring into consideration money and finance, we bring in extraneous considerations which should not be made a part of a trial for impeachment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Dean Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: This is a good example of a layman getting in a battle with lawyers. You need 2 or 3 to help you. Mr. Wanger, are you trying to tell me that after this gentleman has been impeached, we should continue to provide him with a pension? That is all this amendment is trying to do, prohibit that.

MR. WANGER: I would say that in the first place there are all kinds of impeachments. I am sure some of us can think of cases where, in the past, impeachments carried or almost did carry that were unjust and were motivated by political reasons. We can also think of impeachments which were absolutely just and which no one in this convention would recommend the people pay a pension to the individual, and I know those are the ones which you have in mind. I suggest, however, that this is not a consideration for the trial of impeachments in the senate itself or in the house itself; that this should be taken care of by appropriate legislation, which could be done and could be passed by the legislature. If there is any question about vested rights to pensions, certainly we cannot change the rights of any pensions which may be vested in the past, but the legislature, in the future, can appropriately provide a clause, in any pension arrangement, which will take this into consideration and make it effective, if that is the best thing. But I think that as far as the actual trial itself is concerned, all history is on the side of limiting it to the sole matter before the senate of the state as to the man's fitness for the office itself.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I just wish to say to Mr. Dean Doty, as one layman to another so we won't have to worry about getting the attorneys mixed up in this, that they do earn that pension and they earned it long before they got into this trouble and it is a vested interest, and it is just like buying a pension through an insurance company, and he does earn it and he should get it. And frankly, I am opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the adoption of the Dean Doty amendment. Mr. Wood, do you want to comment?

MR. WOOD: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to say that the committee would be opposed to the amendment too.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: As many as are in favor of the Dean Doty amendment say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

Are there any other amendments to these 3 sections? If not, they will pass.

Sections a, b and c are passed. The secretary will read the next section, and then Mr. Wood can present the explanation or comments.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section d:

[Section d was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 838.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Mr. Wood.

MR. WOOD: The comments are as follows:

[The reasons submitted in support of section d were read by Mr. Wood, For text, see above, page 838.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to section d? If not, it will be passed.

Section d is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section e:

[Section e was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 838.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Wood.

MR. WOOD: The comments read:

[The reasons submitted in support of section e were read by Mr. Wood. For text, see above, page 838.]

CHAIRMAN POWELL: There are various folks wanting recognition. I believe I saw Delegate William Hanna first.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to Mr. Wood. Since 1907, we have had a government structure which is not included within county, city, village, township or school district, to wit: the metropolitan government or the metropolitan authority referred to. I wonder whether or not this language should be broadened to allow for the removal of persons elected to a metropolitan authority or metropolitan government. This is something developed in modern times and clearly not covered by this section.

MR. WOOD: Doesn't this cover it, removal of elective local officers in such manner and for such cause as shall be prescribed by law, as presently provided in section 8 and appears to be reasonably flexible? The legislature by statute has vested power in the governor to remove such officers for cause. It doesn't name those officers, but it would seem to me that they are covered.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Possibly the question arose from the phraseology of this section e, with an 8 in parenthesis there. Chairman Hoxie, do you wish to comment?

MR. HOXIE: Well, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am the first to admit that I thought we had covered provisions for every type of officer elected. If there is any question in your mind, Mr. Hanna, we would welcome an amendment to include them, because that was the intent of the legislative powers committee. I can't speak for the local government committee. Perhaps we can have an expression from some member of that committee.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The Chair would direct attention to the 3 lines on page 2, and if anyone cares to formulate an amendment to clarify that, you may do so. In the meantime, Delegate Madar has requested the floor.

MR. MADAR: I wanted to ask a question of Mr. Wood. I wondered whether the same provision would apply to this particular section as applied to the section that we spoke on previously, wherein they would not lose their vested interest in a pension.

MR. WOOD: They certainly would not, under this. There is nothing mentioned at all.

MR. MADAR: I just wanted to make sure of that, that they wouldn't lose it any more than any other official would.

MR. WOOD: That would certainly be true.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I'll withhold any amendments to this until after the second reading, until we see what this metropolitan animal is called after we get through local government.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Delegate Allen.

MR. ALLEN: I am not sure, Mr. Hanna, that you will know after we finish the metropolitan section. We ran into this problem in local government, and one suggestion was to make an all inclusive phrase; but this would be up to, I think, style and drafting to simply, instead of reciting "cities, townships, villages, school districts" and so on and so on, simply use the phrase "local units of government".

CHAIRMAN POWELL: Are there any amendments to this section of the committee proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Section e is passed.

Is there any amendment now to the body of Committee Proposal 42? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 42 is passed. The secretary will read.

Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure what constitutes a reasonable work day. Mr. Marshall, will you agree that I should move that the committee do now rise? I so move.

CHAIRMAN POWELL: The question is on the motion of Delegate Hoxie that the committee do now rise. As many as are in favor signify by saying aye; opposed, no.

The ayes have it. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Downs assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The convention will be in order. Delegate Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several committee proposals, of which the secretary will now make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 41, A proposal to provide for a 2/3 vote of the legislature for nongovernmental appropriations; and Committee Proposal 42, A proposal to include in the constitution all of sections 1, 2, 3, 4 and 8 of article IX entitled "impeachments and removals from office"; reports these 2 committee proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they do pass.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Committee Proposal 41 and Committee Proposal 42 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 41 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 837.

For Committee Proposal 42 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 837.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 31, A proposal to amend article XI, section 14 of the present constitution pertaining to public libraries; reports this proposal back to the convention with 2 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and that the committee proposal, as thus amended, do pass.

[Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "state" by inserting "under reasonable regulations".

2. Amend page 1, line 13, after "libraries" by inserting "and county law libraries".]

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: The question is on agreeing to the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole. Those agreeing will signify by saying aye; those opposed by nay.

The amendments are agreed to.

Committee Proposal 31, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 31 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment and support of public libraries which shall be available to all residents of the state under reasonable regulations. All fines assessed and collected in the several counties, cities and townships for any breach of the penal laws shall be exclusively applied to the support of such public libraries and county law libraries, as provided by law.

SECRETARY CHASE: That completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Are there any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: We have several announcements that are of interest to every delegate.

First, the photographs for the convention record will be taken next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, February 12, 13 and 14, here in constitution hall. There will be no charge for these sittings. The photographer will be on the premises from 1:00 o'clock p.m. to 8:00 o'clock p.m. on each of these days. All delegates are strongly urged to have a new picture taken for the record rather than submitting an existing one. If the pictorial record is to be of maximum quality and uniformity, it is highly desirable that the photographs be made under the same controlled conditions. If the first set of proofs prove unsatisfactory to you, a second sitting will be scheduled. Additional portraits may be ordered at your own expense, if so desired.

There has been a change in the television program that has been announced. There will be 2 television receivers in the lobby tomorrow morning for the benefit of those delegates and staff members who would like to watch the "Today" show in this building. The constitutional convention will be featured from 7:00 to 7:30 a.m. Note the change of time on the show, tomorrow, Wednesday, February 7, 7:00 to 7:30 a.m. on the feature "Today".

There have been some questions raised as to the filing of minority reports. The president has indicated, by a statement that he has left with the secretary, that the minority reports on those proposals which are printed in the journal of last Thursday, Journal 70, and which were not available until Friday, 3 days will expire on Wednesday, and on the proposals that were printed in Journal 71, Friday's journal, which was not received until Monday, those minority reports will have until Thursday.

We have the following notices of committee meetings:

The committee on administration will meet tomorrow at 1:15 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on judicial branch will meet in room B, tomorrow, Wednesday at 9:00 o'clock a.m. Robert Danhof, chairman.

The committee on finance and taxation will meet in room E tomorrow at 8:00 o'clock a.m. D. Hale Brake, chairman.

Tomorrow, immediately after the session, the committee on local government will meet in room A for 45 minutes. Mr. Arthur Elliott, chairman.

The committee on emerging problems wishes this emphasized again: it will hold a public hearing Tuesday, this evening, at 7:30 in committee room I on the third floor. Appearing will be Mr. Maclin of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith of New York. He will be speaking on pensions. Mr. Alfred Hewitt from the Michigan National Bank in Grand Rapids also speaking on the investment and security of pension funds. Frank G. Millard, chairman.

We have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. Norris wishes to be excused from the morning session of tomorrow; Mr. Romney wishes to be excused from tomorrow's session for the annual meeting of stockholders, and Thursday's session for a meeting of the board of directors of American Motors; Father Dade requests to be excused from the sessions of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, February 12, 13 and 14, to attend the one hundred thirty-ninth annual convention of the diocese of Michigan; Mr. Powell requests to be excused from the forenoon session of tomorrow in order to fill a speaking engagement of long standing with the county teachers' institute, at which he is to discuss developments in the constitutional convention.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Hearing no objections, the excuses will be granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the items on the secretary's desk, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: If there is no more business to come before the Chair, the Chair recognizes Delegate Haskill.

MR. HASKILL: Mr. President, I move that this convention adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT DOWNS: Is there a second to the motion? All those in favor signify by saying aye; opposed, by no.

The ayes have it and the convention is adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 5:20 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, February 7, 1962.]

SEVENTY-FOURTH DAY

Wednesday, February 7, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the Reverend Father Kouklakis, of the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church of Lansing. Will you please rise.

REVEREND KOUKLAKIS: Omnipotent God of the universe, we humbly gather here in Thy presence to do Thee honor. We are assembled here in common union, indicative of our loyalty and allegiance to this great democratic government of the United States of America and our desire to help and benefit the brotherhood of mankind. We join in silent praise to our country and all those who dwell herein, upon whom we implore Thy blessings. We acknowledge our dependence upon Thy divine grace for strength and enlightenment. Help these, Thy servants, to think clearly and speak wisely during the process of their meetings, and guide their actions and give them Thy divine counsel. We beseech Thee to bless these delegates of the constitutional convention and give them courage and strength to so conduct their future activities that they may be a credit to us and to the state and country in which we live. Help them to remain steadfast in their obligation and to do unto others as they would have others do unto them. Keep them in health and in peace until they again gather to pay Thee reverent homage and respect. These we ask in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Mr. Barthwell, Mr. Habermehl, Mr. Norris, Mr. Powell and Mr. Romney.

Absent without leave: None.

[During the proceedings, Messrs. Powell and Norris entered the chamber and took their seats.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.
SECRETARY CHASE: None, Mr. President.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Select committees.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading.
SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.
SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.
SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Bentley.

[Whereupon, Mr. Bentley assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The committee will be in order. The convention is in committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar which the secretary will report.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge, Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, I move that Committee Proposals 81 through 89, being items 51, 52, 53, 54, 55 and 61 through 64 and Exclusion Reports 2035 through 2040, being items 106 through 111 on our calendar, be made special orders on general orders for Thursday, this week, February 9.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would like to inquire of the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge, instead of making them a special order, would he prefer to have them advanced to the head of the calendar for those days?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: If it means that they would come under discussion on Thursday, that is what I would like to do.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there discussion on the motion of the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge?

MR. MADAR: Yes, sir. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: One thing I do like, I've always liked, and that's railroads. (laughter) However, I believe that they are outmoded and outdated, and I believe that the people of this country, and especially of our state, would like to see that each and every one of us here will be given an opportunity to try to get as good a constitution as we possibly can, and this can only be done when, as, and if we get the proper time to do it. Now, it will not be 3 days until today and tomorrow for the journal, and we couldn't possibly get our minority report in there in time. In fact, one of the minority reports is right now lying on the desk in the research department, and if you bring this up tomorrow, we don't have the proper time to give this consideration, and I believe this is important to at least 2 millions of people, if not to all 8 millions of them.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge again.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that I was unable to make this motion yesterday, and I am sorry that Mr. Madar and I had no opportunity for communication. However, it seems logical that we will have ample opportunity to discuss and to study the matter that he has under consideration. There is no attempt here to shortchange him in any way. It is an attempt to get some orderly procedure within the convention and the committee of the whole and to give us an opportunity to have some advance notice of the coming up on the calendar of this particular subject which I think we are all very interested in.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar, again desire recognition?

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I was here all day yesterday; I was available; never outside of this building except during lunch and during the dinner hour. I was here until after 6:00 o'clock last evening, after the session was over, available so that I could have been communicated with. And I don't see why we have to go into this. Now, it says that we want to do this in order. Order? Good heavens, it was item 52. We want to move it up above 7, 8, 9 and 10 and the rest. Why? That is not proper order. In fact, I can't understand why the rush suddenly on these particular items.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the motion of the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge? The gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire of the secretary as to probabilities of printing. One can't draw amendments and so forth very well for use here until we have these green sheets. Now, this morning I have on my desk Committee Proposals 69 and 79. When are we going to have Committee Proposal 81 on through the other local government's items on our desks?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will respond.

SECRETARY CHASE: These items are downstairs now in the machine room ready to be run, and some of them have been run. They should be on your desks today.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the motion of the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge? The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Are they running these off in order, Mr. Secretary? There is quite a batch of these. I would like to look at the article as a whole rather than getting these proposals fed to me one at a time.

SECRETARY CHASE: We are trying to run them in order in the machine room.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I think this also works into what we have from local government here. We are going to want to look at these minority reports on top of the committee proposals.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: May I ask the Chair as to whether the secretary would read the exact list so that we could be sure we know what is on it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: These are items 51, 52, 53, 54 and 55. By the way, let us be sure that we are talking about the same calendar, on the calendar for Tuesday, February 6, are items 51 through 55 and items 61 through 64, and items 106 through 111, which are exclusion reports.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the motion of the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge? The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Lincoln Park, Mr. Suzore.

MR. SUZORE: I would just like to ask Mr. Elliott, our chairman, being a member of the local government committee, as to the exact reason for advancing these on the calendar.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Pleasant Ridge is recognized.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: It is pretty easy. President Nisbet asked me whether or not I thought we would be in order, and I said that I saw no reason why we couldn't, and he asked me if we would advance them. So that is why I did.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the motion? If not, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor will say — The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, seeing as how Mr. Elliott now says Mr. Nisbet asked him, I would like to ask Mr. Nisbet, our president, why we need to do this. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will recognize the president of the convention.

MR. NISBET: Mr. Chairman, in endeavoring to schedule the activities for the next few weeks, there was discussion yesterday between people of both parties in an effort to arrive at a satisfactory arrangement for the program. Without either party committing themselves to caucus, I think, it was tentatively agreed that we would try to take local government this week, reapportionment and the report of the executive branch committee next week, in an effort to get these more difficult matters off our calendar before the deadline we had set for February 21. At that time there seemed to be no disposition to do otherwise. Consequently, I asked Mr. Elliott yesterday if his committee could be ready to report on the meeting tomorrow and Friday. It is just that simple.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit.

MR. MADAR: Then, Mr. Chairman, I would like to amend the motion of Mr. Elliott that we strike out section b of Committee Proposal 81, the one that deals with — have you that, Mr. Elliott? Because the rest of us don't seem to have it altogether yet.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I have the same journal that you have.

MR. MADAR: It is the same journal, but you were interested in having it now, and we didn't know you were going to rush this. Section b is this portion where, "When any city has attained a population of 100,000 inhabitants, the legislature may organize it into a separate county, without reference to geographical extent." I would like to amend the motion to have this particular section, section b, stricken from the items that we are to take up, and that this not be taken up until Friday.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair wishes to advise the gentleman from Detroit that Committee Proposal 81 is not before the committee at the present time, and the Chair cannot accept the gentleman's amendment.

The gentleman from Eau Claire, Mr. Richards.

MR. J. B. RICHARDS: I wish to offer an amendment to the motion. The amendment is that these be put on general orders for next Tuesday. This will give us time to get the printed material out and to be prepared.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the chairman of the committee wish to accept that amendment?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Well, I didn't realize that I was going to start this morning off at 9:30 with this kind of discussion. Of course I could not accept the amendment. I feel that we have had these in our journal. All of the committee proposals were published in Journals 70 and 71, so they have been available to us. The minority reports have not, but as I recall the discussion yesterday, Mr. Austin found himself with an amendment and reasons therefor that were just being delivered at the time that he had to discuss it, and I am sure that we can do better than that with minority reports.

The fact of the matter is, the members of my committee know that there has been a meeting called for immediately after the session this afternoon so that we could have some discussion and try to resolve any problems that might be involved. Mr. Madar will be given full opportunity to discuss any minority report which he might have and be given every consideration. So I would not support the amendment offered by Mr. Richards.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there discussion on the Richards amendment? The gentleman from Sheridan, Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman and delegates, for different reasons than Mr. Madar has, I still go along with him on some of these things — pushing these items way ahead on the calendar — and I would like to support Mr. Burton Richards' amendment postponing it until next Tuesday.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the Richards amendment? If not, those in favor will say aye. Those opposed? The Chair is in doubt and will call for a division on the Richards amendment. Does anyone desire the amendment to be read again? The secretary will read the Richards amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Richards' amendment is as follows:

1. Amend the motion by striking out "Thursday, February 8" and inserting "Tuesday, February 13".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: As many as are in favor of the amendment will respond by voting aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the amendment offered by Mr. Richards, the yeas are 77; the nays are 50.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The amendment, therefore, is adopted.

Before putting the question on the Elliott motion as amended, the Chair would like to advise Mr. Madar that if he wishes to offer an amendment to put this particular section b over until Friday, such an amendment would be in order, but not to strike it out. That would not be in order. Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, if we vote for the motion as amended, it will give us plenty of time. Tuesday will be fine.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The vote then occurs on the Elliott motion as amended by the Richards amendment to have these items put over on general orders for Tuesday. Those in favor will respond by — does the gentleman wish to be recognized again?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think we ought to take a moment here to recognize the fact that yesterday the president of this convention met with certain people — I don't know who they were, but they were representatives of both parties — and that this was their recommendation, as I understand it, and that we should recognize the problems that are confronting us here, and that unless we have some order to this schedule, we are going to find ourselves in some extreme difficulty. I personally feel that there is no reason why our committee could not be prepared to do the job that they were asked to do on Thursday and Friday of this week. I think the delay is unnecessary, and I think it does not support the president and those who made the decision yesterday.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I wish to apprise the committee that the president, Mr. Nisbet, did talk to Miss Hart and me yesterday on the whole matter of trying to work out a schedule for the convention, and we did indicate that we thought as the president of the convention, it certainly was and is his prerogative to work out what is a good and orderly procedure, and we particularly commended him for trying to get the reports of the various committees on certain subject matter together, as was done in taxation earlier this week. The unfortunate thing was that I had, without thinking too much about it, assumed the minority reports and all the material would be together.

I do feel that when we discuss these very vital items, unless we have all the materials before us, both the majority and minority reports, and the delegates have an opportunity to review them and prepare their amendments at least a little bit in advance, we end up slowing the whole process up. It happened I went over to confer with the president, and apparently my button had still been on the aye from taking the roll. I offer that as no excuse. I should have had it upright while I was checking with the president.

But I do want the committee to know that the president did confer with both Miss Hart and me, and we did have general agreement on the idea of the president working out some orderly process, but I do feel that we should have these minority reports before us at the same time.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Schoolcraft, Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, delegates of the convention, in view of the fact that we are not certain as to the time that this material will be printed and all, I would move that we table this matter.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Motion to table is nondebatable. As many as are in favor —

MR. MAHINSKE: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. Is this proper in committee of the whole?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: It is a proper motion in the committee of the whole to table a pending motion. It is not a debatable matter. Those in favor of the Brown motion to table will respond by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the problem is this: we have 4 full days of debate ahead. We have Wednesday — today — Thursday, Friday and Monday. Now, unless we get some order in this and unless we proceed on some one of these general areas, we are simply going to run out of gas here — probably not out of gas; (laughter) there seems to be plenty of that (laughter) — but we are going to have a problem as to some reasonable grouping of these various subjects, and it makes a lot more sense to take them up in some grouped order of this sort.

If Thursday is too soon, I would move to amend the present motion to provide that debate on the local government sections begin on Friday and we can move along from there.

[Following is Mr. Martin's amendment:

1. Amend the motion by striking out "Tuesday, February 13" and inserting "Friday, February 9".]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Grand Rapids moves to amend the Elliott motion as amended by providing for the debate on the proposals regarding local government to begin on Friday. Is there discussion on that amendment? The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: I would just want to say that I certainly go along with this. Friday will give us time enough on the minority report. However, as I understand it from Delegate Gover, there are other reasons, and I certainly can't speak for them. But this would certainly take care of the minority report that I would like to get in.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Highland Park, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I think probably it has been taken care of. The whole problem seems to be printing, and I can see no reason, and I would ask Mr. Chase through the Chair if these orders and the things that are coming up cannot get first preference in the printing. It is very simple. The minority reports should come up. We should have them. It is only fair. Just print them first. And I would like to ask the question if that order just can't be issued.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will respond.

SECRETARY CHASE: At the present time items through Committee Proposal 103, with one exception, have been printed.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the gentleman from Pontiac seeking recognition? Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. I am a little confused on the procedure here. It happened on our meeting times and now it is happening on days.

Mr. Elliott's motion was to bring this matter up on Thursday. The amendment was passed to bring it up on Tuesday. Now, it seemed to me that that would eliminate everything between Thursday and Tuesday. If it doesn't, then we can bring it up every single day. And the gentleman that was in the Chair presiding as president tried to tell me we had something like a dilatory motion that was up at one time. I want to know how far we can carry this out. I would like the parliamentarian to rule on this: if there is a motion for Thursday and they go to Tuesday and it passes, whether or not this doesn't exclude everything between those days.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will make the proper parliamentary reply. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Chairman, it seems to the secretary that the motion has been amended and it is now before us as a new motion, and is therefore available for additional amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: And the Chair would so rule. The gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to support Mr. Burton Richards' timing on this, and call to the attention of the delegation the fact that we are talking about the entire local government article of the constitution which has been dumped out almost en masse in 2 journals here. Friday is the last day for preparation of minority reports on the major portion of it.

I want to remind you that this is the largest committee in the convention by number of members, and that it deals with, I believe, the greatest number of sections of the constitution, and we are talking about every form of local government and all of its ramifications. And I can promise you from the experience we had in the last 2 weeks down there that you are going to have a record number of divergent opinions in the form of minority reports, and they don't have any party lines mixed into them or sectional lines, necessarily, but I think it is going to take us several days. Somebody seems to be operating on the theory that we are going to dispose of this whole article in 2 days, and without being accused of being guilty of prolonging it, I want to bet that we just don't do it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would remind the gentleman from Taylor that Thursday is the last day for minority reports. The gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think every one of us agrees with President Nisbet that we wish to proceed with the business of this convention as rapidly as possible, but I would like to direct your attention to the fact that we have spent almost ½ hour here this morning arguing over times and dates and periods when these things should be done.

The thing that disturbs me and has disturbed me for some time in this convention is the fact that there is a lack of communication to the delegates of the reasons and purposes that we desire to accomplish when these motions are made, and I believe if a satisfactory explanation had been made in the beginning as to why we sought to fix a date certain, that the delegates would have understood it and could have proceeded in an orderly manner and not have taken up ½ hour of the time already this morning in trying to fix upon a time which will be agreeable to everybody concerned. And I hope that in the future when these requests are made, at least some explanatory note will accompany these requests so that we may vote intelligently. We are, none of us, mind readers, and we can't understand these things unless someone tells us what the objective is that we seek to accomplish. I would like to remind the Chair and the members of the delegation that henceforth, if we do this, I would like an explanatory note so that each one of us may know how to vote, and how to vote intelligently. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to support Mr. Martin's amendment making this an order of business for Friday. It seems to me that in the ordinary course it might well be reached by then anyway. Mr. Madar has indicated that this will give him the time which he requires. I think it is a satisfactory compromise. I certainly support Mr. Martin's amendment and urge you to vote yes.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the Martin amendment to the Elliott motion? If not, all those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed?

The ayes have it, and the amendment is adopted. The question now is on the motion as amended. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails and it is so ordered. The secretary will now read the first item on general orders for today.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 6 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 43, A proposal pertaining to aliens and property rights. Retains article XVI, section 9.

Following is Committee Proposal 43 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. Aliens, who are or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this state, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment and inheritance of property as native born citizens.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 43:

This provision is carried forward without change from the 1908 constitution. The committee believes it necessary to continue these provisions because under the common law an alien had no right to own or inherit real property. It is to be noted that this provision assures this right only to aliens who are bona fide residents of this state. Thus, we are not prohibiting the government from protecting the title of our lands against the claims of the subjects of foreign powers, who are nonresidents of Michigan. The power of the government in this area will remain undiminished and will continue as it has existed since the Constitution of 1850.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Lansing, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I would like to yield the floor to Mr. Hutchinson for this and the next 2 committee reports.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Lansing yields to the gentleman from Fennville, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, the section immediately before you is the present section of the constitution assuring to aliens who are residents of this state the same right to inherit property as is the right of native born citizens.

We in the committee deemed it necessary and advisable to carry forward this provision of the constitution due to the fact that, under the common law, an alien has no right to inherit or to possess real property, and we doubt very much whether it would be good policy to deny to resident aliens the right to own and to inherit property in this state, and so think it necessary to carry this forward.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 43 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 7 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Exclusion Report 2016, A report recommending the exclusion of article XVI, section 4.

Following is Exclusion Report 2016 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends that article XVI, section 4 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2016:

The committee recommends that the substance of section 4 of article XVI of the Constitution of 1908 be deleted from the new constitution. This section presently empowers the board of state canvassers to conduct recounts under such laws as the legislature may prescribe, reserving to the legislature itself the power of recount as to members of the legislature, in consonance with the constitutional provision that each house shall be the sole judge of the qualifications and elections of its members.

This material is, in the opinion of the committee, purely legislative in character. The matter of breaking tie votes and determining contested elections can be governed adequately by statute. As a matter of fact the present statutory law makes such provision in great detail. The power of the legislature to enact laws upon this subject matter is indisputable and we need not direct legislative action in this field.

The above referred to statute can be found in vol. 5, MSA, sec. 6.1851, being public act 351, 1925, part IV, chap. 17, or Callaghan's Michigan Digest, elections, sec. 63 and sec. 67.

The above statute provides the procedures and methods to be used in the event of a tie vote being determined after votes for certain offices are canvassed. In the event of a tie vote, this statute sets forth the procedures to be used to determine who shall fill the office by casting lots, and who shall supervise the determination by lot among the persons who have the right to the office.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Fennville, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, this provision has to do with that section of the constitution which says presently:

> In all cases of tie vote or contested election for any state office, except a member of the legislature, any recount or other determination thereof may be conducted by the board of state canvassers under such laws as the legislature may prescribe.

In our opinion, this is a matter better left to the legislature and unnecessary to be stated in the constitution. This material is all covered in the election laws at the present time. It will continue to be so covered and is unnecessary to have a constitutional reference in order to make it work. Therefore, we think that this can be excluded from the constitution very appropriately.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I would simply like to ask Mr. Hutchinson this question: am I correct in assuming that the board of canvassers is provided for elsewhere in the constitution and it will still continue to exist? Is that so?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I understand that the board of state canvassers is provided for in the article having to do with the general elections — I think it is article III — and I understand that the committee report would continue that board, although you and I may argue about the necessity for creating a constitutional status for the board of state canvassers.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2016 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 8, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Exclusion Report 2017, A report recommending the exclusion of article XVI, section 10.

Following is Exclusion Report 2017 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends that article XVI, section 10 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2017:

The committee recommends that the substance of section 10 of article XVI of the Constitution of 1908 be deleted from the new constitution. This section limited the lease of land for agricultural purposes to a term of 12 years. The committee believes that the provision serves no useful purpose at this time. The provision applies only to agricultural lands. There seems to be no compelling reason why the lease of agricultural lands should be treated differently than other lands. The subject matter appears to be of legislative rather than constitutional import. If at any time in the future, the state should believe it necessary to limit in any way the power of alienation, it could do so by statute, which statute would be applicable to all conveyances thereafter made.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Fennville, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, this section is the old one having to do with agricultural land leases. It reads like this:

> No lease or grant of agricultural land for agricultural purposes for a longer period than 12 years, reserving any rent or service of any kind, shall be valid.

This provision seems entirely unnecessary in the middle twentieth century. We don't understand the necessity or the advisability any more of treating leases of agricultural land in any different manner than other leases of real estate, and inquiry of farm organizations in the state led us to believe that they are not concerned with this any longer. I would say again that any restriction on the right to lease property or to convey it and so on is a matter better left to statutory law, and this doesn't appear to be necessary in the constitution at all, so we recommend that it be excluded.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2017 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 9 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Exclusion Report 2018, A report recommending the exclusion of article X, sections 17 and 18 of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Exclusion Report 2018 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on finance and taxation recommends that article X, sections 17 and 18 of the present constitution, be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2018:

The substance of sections 17 and 18 of article X has been included in section c of Committee Proposal 37.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Stanton, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, sections 17 and 18 of article X cover the matter of accounting, record keeping, auditing and so forth. That material has been covered and, we believe, improved in the proposal that you approved in committee of the whole last week.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2018 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 10 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Committee Proposal 44, A proposal pertaining to the schedule. Amends sections 1 and 8 of the schedule and adds 2 sections.

Following is Committee Proposal 44 as read by the secertary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committtee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

That no inconveniene may arise from the changes in the constitution of this state, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that:

Sec. a. [The common law and the statute laws now in force,] ALL LAWS not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed.

---

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Sec. b. ALL WRITS, ACTIONS, SUITS, PROCEEDINGS, CIVIL OR CRIMINAL LIABILITIES, PROSECUTIONS, JUDGMENTS, SENTENCES, ORDERS, DECREES, APPEALS, CAUSES OF ACTION, CONTRACTS, CLAIMS, DEMANDS, TITLES AND RIGHTS OF INDIVIDUALS, BODIES CORPORATE, AND OF THIS STATE OR ANY SUBDIVISION OR AGENCY THEREOF, EXISTING ON THE EFFECTIVE DATE HEREOF SHALL CONTINUE UNAFFECTED EXCEPT AS MODIFIED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THIS CONSTITUTION.

Sec. c. ALL OFFICERS FILLING ANY OFFICE BY ELECTION OR APPOINTMENT SHALL CONTINUE TO EXERCISE THE DUTIES THEREOF, ACCORDING TO THEIR RESPECTIVE COMMISSIONS OR APPOINTMENTS, UNTIL THEIR OFFICES SHALL HAVE BEEN ABOLISHED OR THEIR SUCCESSORS SELECTED AND QUALIFIED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THIS CONSTITUTION OR THE LAWS ENACTED PURSUANT THERETO.

Sec. d. The attorney general of the state shall [prepare and report] RECOMMEND to the legislature at the commencement of the next session such changes in existing laws as may be deemed necessary to adapt the same to this constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 44:

Committee comment on section a: The committee has substituted the term "ALL LAWS" in place of the previous language which read, "The common law and the statute laws now in force". In so doing the committee has eliminated specific references to the "common law". It seemed to the committee that the general idea expressed in this section has a peculiar relevancy to statutory laws and that the notion of expiration by their own limitation or alteration or repeal is really not apt language to describe the common law of the state. In the absence of an express provision dealing with it, the law represented by the common law of the state will continue in force until repealed by statute or until modified or otherwise changed by the usual process of judicial decision. It seemed desirable to the committee to leave this to implication rather than to attempt to embrace the idea by a specific reference to the common law in this schedule.

Committee comment on section b: In this proposed section the committee has consolidated the language and the ideas previously contained in sections 2, 3 and 4 of the schedule of the Constitution of 1908. We have added to the generic terms included in section 2 the words "civil or criminal liabilities, contracts, claims, demands, titles and rights" which, in the opinion of the committee, adequately embrace all the specifics detailed in the old sections 3 and 4.

It is also to be noted here that this section allows a modification in accordance with the provisions of this constitution. This allows procedural changes to take place with respect to interests accrued or vested before the adoption of the revised constitution. This will allow, for instance, for the establishment at an early date of a new court system or for changes in the jurisdiction of courts or for procedural law changes. The committee feels there need be no fear that existing rights or liabilities would be modified in any substantial way because flexibility is written into this saving clause. It is clear that vested property and contract rights and other types of interest cannot substantially be impaired because of restrictions in the federal constitution, either under the contract clause or under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. Likewise, any changes in procedure and punishment with respect to crimes committed before the adoption of the revised constitution would be subject to ex post facto limitations under the federal constitution. In other words, permitting some modification in accordance with the provisions of this constitution would not open the door to retrospective impairment of substantive rights and liabilities but would preserve the opportunity for giving immediate effect to procedural and remedial changes consistent with the protection and continuation of accrued or vested rights and liabilities.

Committee comment on section c: The committee has consolidated into this section the concepts contained in the existing sections 5 and 7 of the 1908 constitution. The language, "ACCORDING TO THEIR RESPECTIVE COMMISSIONS OR APPOINTMENTS," includes necessarily the concept contained in the old section 7 concerning the compensation of public officers.

Committee comment on section d: The only change made by the committee in this particular section is to substitute the word "RECOMMEND" for the previous language "prepare and report". In recommending legislative changes the atttorney general may submit drafts he has prepared but the committee did not feel it was necessary to spell this out. The committee felt that the previous language might be interpreted as suggesting that legislative changes must originate with and be prepared by the attorney general. It is the committee's feeling that the revised wording adequately achieves the general purposes intended.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Lansing, Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I will yield to Delegate Durst who, along with his subcommittee, prepared this and the next 2 sections.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Lansing yields to the gentleman from Adrian, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, section a is merely what is called a "saving clause;" that is, it continues in force all the presently operative statutes in the state of Michigan until they are either changed by the legislature or expire. In fact, it just continues it pretty much as it was in the previous constitution.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to the first clause? Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Durst this question, I'm a little bit disturbed by his explanation, because I understood him to say that this would continue in force all the statutes for the state of Michigan. I will ask the gentleman if, in his opinion, this also will continue in force the common law.

MR. DURST: I think, Mr. Hutchinson, the common law continues in force in and of itself by definition. The common law is a law which exists where there is no statute or any other law which defines—it takes place where there is nothing formally promulgated.

I would point out here this was a considerable point of discussion in committee whether or not the words "the common law" should be removed. The problem is this: what we have done is adopt the language used in the model code, and the problem arises in that the common law is considered by the courts to be a living law; that is, it is a law that can change as conditions change without any formal action being taken, and the language as it reads in the 1908 constitution would require that either it expire by its own limitations or that it be altered or repealed; that is, that there be a statute passed. This has caused quite a problem in the courts. I have the annotations here of this section. It is the only section of the schedule that there have ever been any court cases on. There have been quite a few in recent years, the claim being made that the courts cannot by interpretation change the common law, because this section continues it in force until it is altered or repealed.

Now, we had this discussion, so we turned it over to the research department, and we received Professor Joiner's concurrence that this was the proper way to change this thing; that it had caused problems and this was a proper correction. We went further than that and submitted the question to Professor Kauper of the University of Michigan law school who is a professor of constitutional law and, I think it is safe to say, one of the finest experts on this subject in the United States. He gave us a very definitive discussion of the subject. I will just read his opening statement:

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

> I think the committee's action in drafting this section in this way so as to eliminate the specific reference to the common law as it appears in the 1908 constitution is wise and desirable.

He goes on to give a detailed analysis of his reasons. Most of these are set forth in the committee's report in the journal.

I do not think we are abrogating the common law, Mr. Hutchinson, in any way.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I think it desirable that there be no question at all about the fact that it is our intent that the common law continue in effect except as it is altered and so on by statute, and I say that I think it is necessary that we make this clear because I don't agree with Mr. Durst that the common law simply exists. I know in my limited knowledge my recollection is that at least 1 state in the 50 is not a common law state, that being the state of Louisiana. Down in the state of Louisiana the common law doesn't exist. It exists in Michigan. I think it is our intent that it shall continue to exist in Michigan, and I think that Mr. Durst and I perhaps take different views as to the wisdom of using those words "the common law" in this particular point. If by the meaning of the phrase "all laws" it is universally understood that that includes the common law, then I wouldn't press this point any further. I wouldn't have raised the point except, as I say, in his explanation Mr. Durst simply indicated that, in his opinion, the words "all laws" referred only to statute law.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Adrian yield to the gentleman from Lansing, Mr. Wanger, for a question?

MR. DURST: Yes, I will.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Durst, I merely wish to ask about these cases which you say raise the question as to whether or not the common law could be modified in the traditional manner. How did these cases decide the issue? Did the cases not resolve the problem favorably?

MR. DURST: Yes, the cases do resolve the problem, Mr. Wanger. They, in effect, interpret the constitution as not including the words "the common law" here. I mean they don't say so specifically, but they go on to say that this provision does not prevent the common law from changing in a normally accepted manner; that is, through customary practice and so forth.

MR. WANGER: One further question then. Would the change in language which you propose work any practical change whatsoever in the law as it stands at this time?

MR. DURST: It is not our understanding that it does. We would think that the section that we are continuing here is continued just as it has been interpreted in this state ever since the Constitution of 1908.

MR. WANGER: Would it be fair to say, then, it is the definite intention of the committee and the belief of the committee that this does not work any practical change on this matter whatsoever?

MR. DURST: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, briefly, in response to Mr. Wanger's last question, this was not the unanimous opinion of the committee. There are those of us in the committee who feel otherwise, and the secretary has an amendment on his desk.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske and Miss Donnelly offer the following amendment to section a:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by reinserting "The common law and the statute laws now in force,"; and by striking out "All laws" in line 9; so that the section will read:

> Sec. a. The common law and the statute laws now in force, not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. MAHINSKE: Without repeating any of the statements made by Mr. Hutchinson and some of the thoughts alluded to by others, I think that we are in a highly technical area here. In the future someone is liable to look at the old constitution and the new constitution and see that we have definitely stricken the words "common law" and put in "all laws." It may raise some doubt in someone's mind. And I think for the value of striking 6 or 8 words here, the hardship that may be created in the future could be avoided by leaving the old language in. And secondly, the most important area that I feel that this language comes into play is the criminal law area where there is definite reversion back to common law in areas where we don't have statutes or we don't have fines or penalties set up for certain crimes.

And just to repeat one point, I think that we are taking a dangerous step here that could be implied or applied exactly the opposite of what Mr. Durst states here. He states himself that he feels that this proposal will produce absolutely no change over and above what we have now, but I think by interpretation it may in the future, and I would like to avoid this. And I think that the amendment would preclude any misinterpretation because we would be keeping the existing language as the 1908 constitution sets it forth now.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Highland Park, cosponsor of the amendment, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to add to that to change this language and then to put forth in the report that "when we changed this language we didn't mean anything; we want it all to continue by implication" is an unnecessary act. If we mean what we say and what they said in 1908, in my opinion we should say it now, instead of saying "we don't mean anything by striking it, and by implication we mean the same thing." If we mean the same thing, we should say the same thing.

I definitely oppose the majority report in this instance, and move the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: I don't feel, Mr. Chairman, that this subject is one that requires a great amount of extensive debate, as the amendment itself would put us right back where we are now and the court interpretation would clear up the problem. The change has been made to make it conform to the way the courts have interpreted this section to read.

Now, as Mr. Mahinske said, this is a technical problem. Members of the subcommittee made their own decision. It was raised in the whole committee as to whether it was wise or not. We submitted it to research. We received the very confident opinion of Mr. Joiner. We went further and received the opinion of a man who spent many years in this particular field, Professor Kauper. You have their opinions.

If the committee wishes to replace the language as it was formerly, no great damage is going to be done, and I don't think we should spend an excessive amount of time on this.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am speaking in behalf of the 88 delegates who may have some difficulty in following the technical aspects of this thing. I will say that I am not in favor of the amendment, because when we worked the thing out in committee, we felt that we should reduce the language as much as possible in a manner that would permit all to understand. In fact, this led to a comment by Mr. Durst at the time that we have the language clarified to such a point that possibly all the laymen in the convention could understand it but the attorneys may have some difficulty, and I feel this is where we are now.

So I will say, as a self elected spokesman for the 88 people who do not have the problem, that this is something that is going to have to be decided by the 56 people who are more qualified on the thing. We feel that the intent of our discussion was that we did not want to change the content of the language as far as the spirit or the motives are concerned. We did want to reduce the language, the scope of the language, and take away from the length of the thing and simply put it in terms that we could all understand.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose the amendment and support the committee report. I would remind those who are lawyers among the group and also many that are nonlawyers of a very recent case which upset the doctrine of governmental immunity. The court itself divided on the question of whether this language in the 1908 constitution prevented the court from changing the common law, many of the members of the court saying that the language which is being eliminated did prevent that change.

Now, traditionally, lawyers and courts have always felt that the common law, as Mr. Durst has suggested, is a living law and does change. The committee report plus the explanation in the report itself clearly indicates that the common law remains but that it follows the traditional course it always has and can be changed either by statute or by court interpretation. I think it is a more accurate statement of what at least this lawyer has always believed that the law was, and I think it should be retained.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I oppose the amendment and support the committee report. I would like to point out, as has been mentioned, that the language in the constitution has caused trouble. I realize the trouble has been resolved by the court, but I believe that if we readopt the language, then the court will have to reconfirm its previous position. We are going to invite more lawsuits. It seems to me if we know that the language did cause trouble, the best thing is to make the language in such a form that it does not cause trouble.

As far as the common law is concerned, it seems to me there is no reason for using the words "common law" in the constitution at all. The common law does not arise because the constitution says so; it arises because of the necessities of the case when courts are required to make decisions. When they are required to make decisions, they use the common law because they invented it themselves. The constitution did not invent it. Therefore, I believe the committee is correct and that the advice it got from eminent professors is correct, and we ought to adhere to the committee report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Detroit and the lady from Highland Park? If not, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the amendment will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Division is demanded. Is it supported? A sufficient number up. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed, no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the vote on the Mahinske-Donnelly amendment, the yeas are 40; the nays are 75.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The amendment is not adopted. If there are no further amendments to section a, it will pass.

Section a is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b:

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 847.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian, Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, this also is a saving clause for matters other than laws. It embraces all the generic terms that are listed there. What the committee has done is to consolidate the concepts previously contained in the old sections 2, 3 and 4 of the previous schedule of 1908. We have added to the generic terms which were previously in section 2 the words "civil or criminal liabilities, contracts, claims, demands, titles and rights." And it was the opinion of the committee — and I believe this was a unanimous conclusion — that the section as presented adequately embraces all the specifics detailed in the old sections 3 and 4. I don't need to get into these if there is no question.

The last sentence on lines 19 and 20 says, ". . . shall continue unaffected except as modified in accordance with the provisions of this constitution." It is the opinion of the committee that all this does is allow changes of a procedural nature. The federal constitution under the due process clause and the contracts clause prevents any infringement upon substantive rights that are existing at the time the new constitution is adopted, but this would allow any changes that we may make of a procedural nature such as the court system or so forth to take effect as soon as the new constitution provides.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Bay City, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I have a proposed amendment on the secretary's desk which I would ask him to read.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment to section b:

1. Amend page 1, line 16, after "individuals,", by inserting "partnerships,".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Bay City is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. HIGGS: In reading the committee reasons and the proposal and in discussing this just before the session, it seems to me that this is a necessary inclusion. Certainly if we exclude it, we raise certain questions, inasmuch as today partnerships may hold title to real estate, and there may be certain rights derivative out of this relationship which are not, in my opinion, rights of individuals or rights of bodies corporate.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would point out that these words that we have put in here are the same as in the 1908 constitution, ". . . rights of individuals, bodies corporate, and of this state. . . ." I don't wish to engage in a legal argument with Mr. Higgs, but it would seem to me that under our law, a partnership does not exist as a separate person, as a corporation, so there are grounds for putting in bodies corporate as something separate. The rights of an individual and the rights of a partnership, as I see it — and I am sure as the committee saw it — are one and the same thing. I would oppose the amendment on that ground.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Bay City.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do wish to engage in some argument at this point. Inasmuch as we have had a changing growth in the body of partnership law since 1908, the fact that it does not appear in the 1908 constitution doesn't impress me at this particular moment. I do not see any reason for excluding it. I haven't been able to do a great deal of research in this particular matter or study it thoroughly, but I do know that today — and I don't know whether it was true in 1908 — partnerships do have a status as a legal entity beyond that of individuals. Certainly when you file an income tax return, you are taxed as an individual. The partnership is not an entity for federal tax purposes, but under the law of the state of Michigan, a partnership is an entity that may hold legal title, and there are certain rights that are derivative by creditors through this relationship. The exclusion of one word, I think, might cause some trouble. I would like to hear from some of the other lawyers on this.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the Higgs amendment? If not, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed? The amendment is not adopted.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Division is called for. Is the demand supported? A sufficient number. Those in favor of the Higgs amendment will vote aye. Those opposed, no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs, the yeas are 38; the nays are 60.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The amendment is not adopted. If there are no further amendments to section b, it will be passed.

Section b is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c:

[Section c was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 847.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, this again is a saving clause. It would continue in office all members presently serving in state governments until such time as their terms naturally expire or they are replaced by terms of this constitution. This would be people like civil service commissioners. All members of the present boards and commissions would continue to fill their terms and their offices.

Now, we have added and consolidated here the previous sections 5 and 7 of the schedule. In the opinion of the committee, the words "according to their respective commissions or appointments" which is the language used in the model code, would be sufficient to continue the concept of compensation which is presently included in the old section 7.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to section c? If not, it will be passed.

Section c is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section d:

[Section d was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 847.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian.

MR. DURST: We intend no substantive change here, Mr. Chairman. The deletion of the words "prepare and report" and the insertion of the word "recommend" is just thought to be perhaps more proper language. There was some thought that perhaps the words "prepare and report" would mean that the attorney general would be preparing statutes and the legislature would be obligated to consider them or something of that sort. The word "recommend" is more what we have in mind, I believe, and we ask him to report on these matters.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to section d? If not, it will pass.

Section d is passed.

Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 44 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 11 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Exclusion Report 2019, A report recommending the exclusion of sections 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7 of the schedule.

Following is Exclusion Report 2019 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends that sections 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7 of the schedule of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2019:

The committee recommends that sections 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7 of the schedule be excluded because they are being consolidated into new language in Committee Proposal 44, sections b and c.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Lansing wish recognition?

MR. ERICKSON: I have already yielded, for the next 2 reports, to Mr. Durst.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Erickson yields to Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: This exclusion report merely covers exclusion of the sections we have just passed. It excludes the old sections that we have replaced here.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2019 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 12 on the calendar, from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, by Mr. Erickson, chairman, Exclusion Report 2020, A report recommending the exclusion of section 9 of the schedule.

Following is Exclusion Report 2020 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule recommends that section 9 of the schedule of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Erickson, chairman of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2020:

The committee recommends that section 9 of the schedule be excluded. This provision was included in the 1850 constitution to cover those parts of the state land areas which had not been formally organized into a county. Apparently there were still parts of the state undeveloped in this regard in 1908, so the provision was carried over into the 1908 constitution. Now, all the land area of the state is included within the boundary of an organized county, eliminating any necessity for the provision.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Adrian.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, do we need to vote on these exclusion reports or should they just pass?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: They are passed.

MR. DURST: Without a vote?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Yes.

MR. DURST: I yield to Mr. Snyder on this exclusion report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. Chairman, this is in reference to Exclusion Report 2020, and the committee report as reported out is in the journal at page 395. We had meetings with Mr. Apol and Mr. Robert Montgomery of the elections division, and it was the unanimous conclusion that this provision was included in the 1850 constitution to cover those parts of the state land areas which had not been formally organized into a county. Apparently at that time there were still parts of the state undeveloped in this regard in 1908 so the provision was carried over in the 1908 constitution. Now all the land area of the state is included within the boundary of the organized counties, eliminating the necessity for this provision. In view of that, the committee felt that it was no longer necessary in the constitution, and they recommended the exclusion of that portion.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2020 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 13 on the calendar, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Committee Proposal 45, A proposal to guarantee the right of disposition to the owner of real property. Amends article II by adding a new section.

[Committee Proposal 45 was read by the secretary. For text, see below, under date of April 10.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: At the request of several delegates, I ask that this pass for the day.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the gentleman from Ann Arbor that this be passed for the day?

Hearing none, it is so ordered and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 14 on the calendar, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Exclusion Report 2021, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, sections 2 and 3.

Following is Exclusion Report 2021 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections recommends that article III, sections 2 and 3 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2021:

The committee has decided that all matters pertaining to the definition of residence for voting purposes are essentially legislative matters, and should be deleted from the constitution. The legislature will be empowered to define residence for voting purposes. The attempt to define residence in the constitution, and to specify conditions under which it may be gained or lost, has not been successful in this or other states. In order to grant the necessary flexibility in dealing with this important aspect of election administration, it is important to give the legislature broad powers and responsibility to deal with emerging problems concerning residence.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, these exclusion reports that are coming up now, 21, 22, 23 and 24, are from our committee as a result of its study of the whole election process. As you will see in a later proposal, we have completely made over article III into a new article, and as a result of that new formulation of article III, the provisions of the various sections of article III we are recommending should be eliminated.

Regarding this one in particular, 2021, the committee has decided that all matters pertaining to the definition of residence for voting are essentially legislative matters and should be deleted from the constitution. The legislature will be empowered to define residence for voting purposes and the attempt to define residence in the constitution to specify conditions under which it may be gained or lost hasn't been successful in this state, or any other states, and in order to grant the necessary flexibility in dealing with this important aspect of election administration, it is important to give the legislature broad powers and responsibility to deal with emerging problems concerning residence. This is covered, in other words, in our new proposal.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2021 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 15 on the calendar, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Exclusion Report 2022, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 5.

Following is Exclusion Report 2022 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections recommends that article III, section 5 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2022:

It is the feeling of the committee that the legislature, in carrying out its general responsibility for election administration, immunize electors from arrest if this is felt necessary or desirable. On the other hand, the committee does not believe that the danger either of legislative negligence or of abuse of police authority is important enough to demand a constitutional immunity for voters.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: We also feel that this section is no longer necessary in the constitution. We believe that it is adequately taken care of in our new and broader language.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2022 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 16 on the calendar, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Exclusion Report 2023, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 6.

Following is Exclusion Report 2023 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections recommends that article III, section 6 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2023:

The excluded section contains obsolete language regarding militia duty. This language was written at a time when the term "militia" referred only to the able bodied male citizens, who might be called upon to drill from time to time. It seems to have no modern relevance. The exemption from required court attendance is one of the many details of election law which should, in the view of the committee, be left to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman:

[The supporting reasons for Exclusion Report 2023 were read by Mr. Pollock. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2023 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 17 on the calendar, from the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, by Mr. Pollock, chairman, Exclusion Report 2024, A report recommending the exclusion of article III, section 7.

Following is Exclusion Report 2024 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections recommends that article III, section 7 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Pollock, chairman of the committee on declaration of rights, suffrage and elections, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2024:

The first clause is designed to insure the secrecy of the ballot. This will be covered in another section of the proposed new article. The clause regarding township officers was evidently designed to allow township officers to be chosen by viva voce voting. Present legislation requires election of township officers by ballot (election laws, section 368). In the opinion of the committee, exclusion of this language would not interfere with nomination of township officers by caucus, if provided by law as at present.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: This section we also recommend be excluded, because we are covering the first part regarding secrecy in another section of our proposed new article, and the clause regarding township officers was evidently designed to allow township officers to be chosen by viva voce voting, and present legislation requires election of township officers by ballot. In the opinion of the committee, exclusion of this language would not interfere with nomination of township officers by caucus if provided by law as at present.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will be passed.

Exclusion Report 2024 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 18 on page 2 of the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Exclusion Report 2025, A report recommending the exclusion of article XI, sections 2 and 6.

Following is Exclusion Report 2025 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on education recommends that article XI, sections 2 and 6 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2025:

The committee on education believes that sections 2 and 6 of the present constitution should be excluded because of the fact that the committee is preparing entirely new sections to replace them.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would like to recognize the gentleman from Mt. Pleasant, Dr. Anspach, as vice chairman of the committee, to read the reasons for the exclusion report. Page 399, Doctor.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, at this particular time when Chairman Bentley called on me, I was a mugwump. I suppose you know the definition of a mugwump. It's an old one. He's a bird that sits on the fence, and his mug's on one side and his wump's on the other. (laughter) So therefore, when he called on me unexpectedly, he got me over on the right side of the fence. (laughter)

The committee on education believes that sections 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10 and 16—

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Excuse me, Doctor. That is the next one. (laughter) Exclusion Report 2025.

MR. ANSPACH: I guess I'm still on the wrong side of the fence. Now I'm off for sure. You know, it's a good deal like that old story of a pointer dog I told you the other day. You get set, you finally get booted and get around all right. (laughter)

[The supporting reasons for Exclusion Report 2025 were read by Mr. Anspach. For text, see above.]

Thank you very much. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2025 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 19 on the calendar, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Exclusion Report 2026, A report recommending the exclusion of article XI, sections 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10 and 16.

Following is Exclusion Report 2026 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on education recommends that article XI, sections 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10 and 16 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Bentley, chairman of the committee on education, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2026:

The committee on education believes that sections 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10 and 16 of the present constitution should be excluded because of the fact that the committee is preparing entirely new sections to replace them.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Mt. Pleasant, Dr. Anspach. The top of page 400. (laughter)

MR. ANSPACH: I was right in the first place. I started to read it awhile ago. (laughter)

[The supporting reasons for Exclusion Report 2026 were read by Mr. Anspach. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Thank you very much, Dr. Anspach. Are there amendments to the exclusion report? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2026 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 20 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto. Amends article VI.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Grand Rapids, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move at this time that this item and the following items be passed for the day and placed at the head of the calendar for discussion on Tuesday, February 13. The items are 20, 22, 32, 35, 36, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 57, 58 and going back, item 50, being Committee Proposals 46, 48, 59, 60, 70, 71, 72, 74, 75, 76, 77 and 78 and Exclusion Report 2027. Those items all relate to article VI or related problems affecting the executive branch, and we would like to discuss them in order. I will subsequently move for a slightly different order of consideration there so that we can take them up in a logical order.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: You have heard the motion of the gentleman from Grand Rapids. Is there discussion on the motion? If not, as many as are in favor will say aye. Those opposed?

The motion prevails, it is so ordered and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 21, from the committee on education, by Mr. Bentley, chairman, Committee Proposal 47.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mt. Pleasant, Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I can't miss this one because I have a note. This was handed me. I suppose the chairman of the day heard of the absent minded professor who stepped out of his office and discovered he had forgotten a book; turned to go back to the office to get the book; saw a sign on the door that said "Be back at 3:00 o'clock," so he sat down and waited. (laughter) I ask permission of the committee, on behalf of the committee on education, to pass Committee Proposal 47 for the day.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mt. Pleasant?

If not, hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 23 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 49, A proposal with reference to the borrowing of money by public corporations and bodies. Amends article VIII by adding a section.

Following is Committee Proposal 49 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. PUBLIC CORPORATIONS AND PUBLIC BODIES SHALL HAVE POWER TO BORROW MONEY AND TO ISSUE THEIR SECURITIES EVIDENCING DEBT, SUBJECT TO CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY LIMITATIONS.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 49:

One section that is being eliminated from article VIII of the 1908 constitution is 15a, which deals with drainage district bonds. The language of the proposal is broad so that it will serve as a catchall for anything omitted of a more specific nature including section 15a.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, there has got to be somebody around here who doesn't pass. (laughter) For an explanation of this section, I yield to Delegate Don Seyferth.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Stanton yields to the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, delegates, Committee Proposal 49 just read by the secretary replaces in article VIII, sections 10, 15a and 24. This proposal had the concurrent jurisdiction of local government, and we have mutual acceptance from both committees. Section 10 of article VIII has to do with the 1/10 of a mill on assessed valuation for borrowing purposes. Section 15a of the same article has to do with drainage districts established under provisions of the law. And section 24 has to do with city and village bonded indebtedness. We move that it be accepted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there discussion? Are there any amendments to the committee proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 49 is passed and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 24 on the calendar, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 50, A proposal to require the legislature to provide sufficient taxes to meet the state's expenses covering the substance of section 2, article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 50 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. [The legislature shall provide by law for an annual tax sufficient with other resources to pay the estimated expenses of the state government, the interest on any state debt and such deficiency as may occur in the resources.] THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW TAXES SUFFICIENT WITH OTHER RESOURCES TO PAY THE EXPENSES OF STATE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 50:

This section is a directive to the legislature to use its taxing power to assure the state sufficient revenues to pay its bills. The proposed language merely restates the substance of section 2 of the 1908 constitution in simpler language. The duty expressed in this section is undoubtedly inherent in the legislature without a constitutional grant. Most state constitutions, however, contain a similar provision. The principle is so fundamental to the operation of state government that the committee believes such a directive should be continued in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, for this proposal I yield to our vice chairman, Dick Austin.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin, is recognized.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this is perhaps the most important provision of article X. I wish there were some way that we could make it stronger, because it is in this area that our legislature has been somewhat derelict. This section is a directive to the legislature to use its taxing power to assure the state sufficient revenues to pay its bills. The proposed language merely restates the substance of section 2 of the 1908 constitution in simpler language.

The duty expressed in this section is undoubtedly inherent in the legislature without a constitutional grant. Most state constitutions, however, contain a similar provision. The principle is so fundamental to the operation of state government that the committee believes that such a directive should be continued in the constitution, and we move that it do pass.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 50 is passed and the secretary will read.

The gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I don't have an amendment. I would like to ask a question, though, if I could.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The proposal has already been disposed of, Mr. King, but you are recognized for the purpose of a question.

MR. KING: Thank you. Mr. Austin, do you feel that it is necessary to put in any proviso here with regard to annually or each year? I notice that the old constitution used that word. You indicated you wish there were a way to make it stronger. Would that add anything, or do you think not?

MR. AUSTIN: I don't think it would, but I should explain that the annual tax referred to in the 1908 constitution had reference to the property tax which was levied at that time by the state. As a matter of fact, the principal state revenue at that time was an annual property tax, and I think this is what is referred to in the old language, and we do not refer to the annual tax now. We simply say that the legislature should provide sufficient taxes, along with other resources, to pay the expenses of state government.

MR. KING: But you think it is implicit in the wording that these taxes shall be provided for each and every year for the expenses of that year; is that right?

MR. AUSTIN: Such is the opinion of the committee.

MR. KING: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the next item on general orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 25, from the committee on finance and taxation, by Mr. Brake, chairman, Committee Proposal 51, A proposal setting up the uniform rule of taxation for providing for equalization a maximum limit for assessments, prohibiting a graduated income tax, and covering the subject matter of sections 3, 4, 7 and 8 of article X of the 1908 constitution.

Following is Committee Proposal 51 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW A UNIFORM RULE GOVERNING THE GENERAL AD VALOREM TAXATION OF REAL PROPERTY AND TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR THE DETERMINATION OF TRUE CASH VALUE OF SUCH PROPERTY AND SHALL SPECIFY THE PROPORTION OF TRUE CASH VALUE AT WHICH SUCH PROPERTY SHALL BE UNIFORMLY ASSESSED, WHICH SHALL NOT, AFTER JANUARY 1, 1966, EXCEED 50 PER CENT, AND SHALL PROVIDE BY LAW FOR A SYSTEM OF EQUALIZATION OF ASSESSMENTS. THE LEGISLATURE MAY PROVIDE BY LAW FOR EXEMPTION OF SUCH PROPERTY FROM TAXATION, OR FOR ALTERNATIVE MEANS OF TAXATION OF SUCH PROPERTY IN LIEU OF GENERAL AD VALOREM TAXATION, UNIFORM UPON THE CLASS OR CLASSES OF PROPERTY TO WHICH SUCH ALTERNATIVE MEANS ARE APPLIED.

EVERY OTHER TAX SHALL BE UNIFORM UPON THE CLASS ON WHICH IT OPERATES. NO INCOME TAX GRADUATED AS TO RATE OR BASE SHALL BE

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

IMPOSED BY THE STATE OR ANY OF ITS SUBDIVISIONS.

Mr. Brake, chairman of the committee on finance and taxation, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 51:

The first sentence of this section preserves the present uniformity clause of section 3 of article X, except as it presently applies to intangible personal property. Ad valorem taxation of the latter has proved unworkable, and it seems desirable to recognize this in the new constitution. Uniformity of assessment is the cornerstone of any system of general property taxation. There appears to be general agreement that while the present constitution requires uniformity, the requirement is frequently honored in the breach. The fact that uniformity has not been achieved in the past does not mean it is impossible to attain, but simply suggests the necessity for reaffirmation of the requirement and the discovery of new means to achieve it.

The first part of the second sentence of this section represents a major change, eliminating the present constitutional requirement of assessment at cash value found in section 7 of article X. The present cash value standard is almost universally ignored, but because of it a taxpayer whose property is assessed, for example, at 70 per cent of cash value has no judicial relief, in the absence of fraud, even though his neighbor's property is assessed at 30 per cent of cash value. At present, the court can simply state that since the former taxpayer is not assessed in excess of 100 per cent, the constitution affords no basis for relief. This unavailability of judicial relief has made the cash value standard a positive impediment to the achievement of uniform assessment.

To repeat, the important constitutional objective is uniformity of assessment, regardless of the level or standard at which property is commonly assessed. Permitting the legislature to fix the standard offers the possibility of moving to a more realistic standard such as, for example, the 50 per cent of cash value currently used by the state tax commission. On this basis actual uniformity could be achieved and a taxpayer aggrieved by an assessment over the level prescribed by law could obtain relief. A majority of the committee believes that the standard set by the legislature should not exceed 50 per cent. Recognizing that some jurisdictions currently assess some property in excess of 50 per cent, the committee has postponed the effective date of this limitation until 1966.

Another advantage of a standard of value fixed by law is the relative freedom with which the legislature could change the standard to reflect changes in the general price structure. Current inequities have resulted, in many cases, from the inability of assessors, with inadequate staffs, to keep up with changes in the dollar value of real property resulting from inflation, whereas personal property assessments have tended to follow inflationary trends far more rapidly.

The provision with respect to equalization is less detailed than that found in section 8 of the present article X, but nevertheless clearly imposes the requirement that assessments be equalized as between various assessing units.

The provision for exemption of property from taxation is clearly necessary and desirable.

The provision for alternative means of taxation of property, in lieu of general ad valorem taxation, is also necessary if such taxes as the automobile weight tax, the tax on boats, the severance tax on oil and gas, and state assessment and taxation of certain utilities' properties are to be maintained. This provision gives the legislature reasonable freedom to remove certain kinds of property from general property taxation and to provide alternative tax treatment of such property.

The last paragraph of the section replaces section 4 of the present article X. The uninformative designation of "specific" taxes has been dropped, and all taxes other than the general ad valorem property tax or alternative taxes based on property, are simply described as "other taxes".

The provision makes it clear that neither the state nor any local unit of government may impose a graduated income tax. The words "or base" are necessary to prevent "piggyback" taxation based on the federal tax liability. Without such language, a tax nominally imposed at a flat rate might actually adopt all of the graduation of the federal tax. A flat rate income tax is clearly permitted, and could, in the opinion of the committee, be imposed on a "piggyback" basis on income computed for federal tax purposes. The legislature could prescribe reasonable exemptions for a flat rate income tax.

The imposition of this limitation on legislative power seems desirable in order to avoid confiscatory taxation to avoid the use of a revenue measure as a device for social reform, and to prevent the entry by the state into a field largely preempted by the federal government. A further advantage of the limitation is that with it, a legislator who votes for an income tax will do so with the knowledge that it will fall proportionally as heavily on himself as upon others — a safeguard which a majority of the committee deems important.

Following is minority report A to Committee Proposal 51 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker, Young and Ostrow, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 51:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be excluded from the constitution:

Delete the last paragraph of the proposed new section.

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker, Young and Ostrow, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 51:

The last paragraph of the proposal is being included in the constitution, as stated in the majority report, to avoid confiscatory taxation, to avoid the use of a revenue measure as a device for social reform, and to prevent the entry by the state into a field largely preempted by the federal government.

The majority suggests as a further advantage:

a legislator who votes for an income tax will do so with the knowledge that it will fall proportionately as heavily on himself as upon others — a safeguard which the committee deems important.

The proponents of the minority report contend that the last paragraph should be omitted from the constitution and that the reasons stated by the majority do not justify its inclusion.

The principal objections raised against this paragraph, which includes the so called uniformity rule on all taxes other than property taxes and the prohibition against imposition of a graduated income tax, are stated below.

The proponents of this minority report do not, however, advocate that an income tax should be levied. This is a matter to be decided by the legislature.

The committee proposal raises some objections to the graduated income tax. Although the relative merits of a graduated versus flat rate income tax should not be presently at issue, the proponents of the minority position feel constrained to include some rebuttal.

The proponents for exclusion of the last paragraph of Committee Proposal 51 argue:

1. It freezes into the constitution unnecessary and undesirable restriction on the legislative power to levy taxes in the future. No authority has been cited for the advisability of inserting this unique provision into a state constitution. It does not make allowance for drastically changed circumstances beyond our present anticipation.

2. The prohibition of a graduated income tax, statutory in nature, does not have the faithful sanctity of the other restrictive measures written into the constitution, such as the sales tax rate limitation, achieved through prior approval of the people at the polls.

3. It freezes present and potential inequities in the Michigan tax structure by prohibiting the legislature from correcting them, should it desire to do so.

4. The majority committee report implies that graduation of tax bases is preempted by the federal government. There is no legal authority for this presumption.

If there is reason for concern over preemption by the federal government, such concern more properly is reflected in the comment of President Eisenhower — that many fields have been preempted by federal government because the states have failed to act in these areas. This is a far more vital area of concern than the technicality of whether graduation can be used at both federal and state levels.

5. Progressive taxation, accomplished through graduated rate structure, is not a device for social reform: on the contrary, it is a very equitable device for raising the maximum amount of revenues, without unduly burdening any individual taxpayer, on the basis of ability to pay.

Its effect does not need to be "soak the rich" or "pamper the poor". Experience actually proves these descriptions more propaganda than reality. However, there is obviously a basic difference between the majority and minority emphasis on the equity of the Michigan tax system, particularly in terms of the impact on low income and middle income families, pensioners and those on fixed incomes.

6. Ignored in the proposal is the experience of the overwhelming majority of the states which have income taxes, all but two (33 of the 35) having adopted graduated rate structures. Michigan would be placed in a unique category and at a potential disadvantage in relation to other states in its ability to raise revenue from income taxation.

The chart which follows reflects the experience in other states as well as the Michigan potential. It shows clearly that a low flat rate tax results in a continued higher contribution to the federal internal revenue. This, in turn, results in disproportionate support of federal projects in other states by Michigan taxpayers.

Comparative income tax on last $10,000 of a taxable income of $200,000

(assuming 2 different rates and state tax deductible in arriving at federal liability)

	State income tax
	Assuming 1 per cent flat rate	Assuming graduated to maximum of 10 per cent
Federal income tax on the last $10,000 of income:
Rate of tax in subject bracket	89 per cent
Amount of federal income tax if there is no state income tax	$8,900
State income tax:
Amount of state income tax	$ 100	$ 1,000
Amount borne by federal government	$ 89	$ 890
Amount borne by taxpayer	11	110
Division of the last $10,000*
Amount of tax going to federal government	$ 8,811	$ 8,010
Amount of tax going to state government	100	1,000
Amount of last $10,000 retained by taxpayer	1,089	990
Together	$10,000	$10,000

*By graduating the rate structure up to 10 per cent, assuming a beginning rate of 1 per cent, the revenue of the state is increased by $900 while the amount retained by the taxpayer is reduced by only $99. The contribution to the federal government is reduced by $801.

7. The experience with the federal income tax has been raised as one of the objections to a graduated rate structure. It is argued, to the contrary, that the existence of the steeply graduated federal rate structure could be one of the reasons for adopting a graduated structure at the state level. Because of the deductibility of state income tax in arriving at federal liability, the impact of the state tax at the higher income levels would be softened.

Consider, for example, the comparative impacts of the 1 per cent and 10 per cent state income tax rates, described in the chart.

Following is minority report B to Committee Proposal 51 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 51:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be excluded from the constitution:

On page 1, line 13, after the word "assessed" delete the comma and the following words, "which shall not, after January 1, 1966, exceed 50 per cent,".

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 51:

The proponents of the minority report agree with the majority on the merits of providing that the standard of value for assessment of property be fixed by law, giving the legislature freedom to reflect changes in the general price index and to shift with inflationary trends. The minority do not agree, however, that there should be a constitutional limitation of 50 per cent of cash value.

The principal objections raised against the inclusion of the 50 per cent of cash value standard are as follows:

1. A 50 per cent of cash value standard proposed by the majority of the committee coupled with the tax rate limitations proposed in another part of the report, in effect imposes upon many communities an effective tax rate limit not of 15 mill but of 7½ mill, or half of whatever rate may apply to each unit of government under that proposal.

2. Since 1933 when the state itself abandoned the base of the property tax for its own purposes, the property tax has been mentioned as being the primary source of revenue for units of local government — to be levied and administered in accordance with the needs of each unit of local government. The local property tax has thus been administered within the broad limits of general law. The 50 per cent limitation proposed by the majority of the committee now proposes to leave to local units a tax source which they no longer will have any discretion over in its administration and effect. It is indeed a fact that the "full cash value" standard has given the local communities the discretion to fix assessments and effective rates in terms of their needs. The 50 per cent standard limits this discretion to such a degree as to nullify it.

3. While it is a fact that the state tax commission has found it desirable to adopt a 50 per cent level in the equalization process as between units of government, that level has been used because it represents a near average statewide level at which equalization as between units is reasonably equitable. It follows that if the 50 per cent standard is adopted by constitutional provision, the state board of equalization in arriving at a statewide level for equalization conceivably will have to go below the 50 per cent and in a few years will arrive at an equalization standard of 30 per cent or even 25 per cent. The effect of this is too obvious to require further elaboration.

4. If indeed, the reason for going to a constitutional 50 per cent level is to relieve any particular segment of the business community from excessive burdens of property taxation, then such relief should be granted to that segment of the community by relief from certain taxes rather than by tampering with the machinery designed for the levy and administration of a local tax. And the decision to grant tax relief is a question which ought to be mediated and debated on the floor of the legislature. Such debate ought not to be restricted and tampered by restrictions imposed by the constitution which, though they do not actually forbid the legislature from dealing with the problem, effectively impose upon it the burden of dealing with the problem in a particular way.

5. Compliance with the new provision will have a devastating immediate effect on the fiscal affairs of some communities. Consider for example the remarks of Dr. Harvey E. Brazer in Michigan Pamphlet 30, Taxation in Michigan: An Appraisal, in which he says, page 20:

> The problem is particularly acute in Wayne county and the city of Detroit, where personal property is currently assessed at well above the 50 per cent of current market value standard applicable to realty. Under pressures imposed by the uniformity clause of the Michigan constitution and taxpayers' complaints, present practices in Detroit are being modified. However, on the basis of the 1959 tax levy, it is estimated that if all personal property were assessed at 50 per cent of its net book value the revenue loss to Detroit and its school district would amount to more than $30 million and the loss to the county, school districts, townships and municipalities in the rest of Wayne county would exceed $15 million. Obviously, unless some means of replacing the lost revenue were forthcoming, a reduction in tax receipts of these dimensions would produce a fiscal catastrophe for the governmental units involved.

6. In all related testimony before the committee on finance and taxation, it was disclosed that the mining industry is the only industry in which property is assessed at 100 per cent of cash value. It is obvious that the recommended provision, if adopted, would drastically reduce the revenues of communities depending on mining taxation.

7. Adoption of a constitutional 50 per cent cash value standard undoubtedly will have the effect of bringing about a material shift of property tax burden from commercial property to home owners. Unless other sources of revenue are availed, the forcing of assessments on certain personal property down to the 50 per cent level will force assessments on already overburdened home owners upward to the 50 per cent level.

8. The inclusion of an arbitrary 50 per cent limitation, statutory in nature, does not have the dignity of a mandate of the people, as does the sales tax rate limitation, expressed in a referendum.

Following is minority report C to Committee Proposal 51 as offered, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 51:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Delete the first sentence of the proposed new section and substitute therefore the following:

THE LEGISLATURE MAY BY LAW AUTHORIZE OR IMPOSE AD VALOREM AND OTHER TAXES WHICH SHALL BE UNIFORM WITHIN THE CLASSES OF PERSONS OR PROPERTY TO WHICH THEY ARE APPLIED.

Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young, a minority of the committee on finance and taxation, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 51:

The proponents of the minority report believe that the rigid uniformity clause prevents justice in taxation because the legislature cannot consider all of the problems within the various classes of real and personal property.

In other words, our present system demands that an elephant and a mouse be taxed uniformly.

Testimony taken before the committee on finance and taxation brought forth many problems which cannot be solved under the proposed uniformity clause. Some of these assets which cause assessment problems are as follows:

(a) Farm equipment which is only used a few months during the year, but taxed as if it is used every day of the year;

(b) Farm land which is located near a growing metropolitan area;

(c) The inventory of the grocer, druggist and other small businessmen;

(d) Dies, fixtures and other business equipment;

(e) The differences between residential, commercial and industrial property; and

(f) Stocks and bonds and other intangible property.

The many studies furnished the delegates indicate that the criticism of the present and proposed uniformity clauses fall into the following categories:

I. "The major controversy on uniformity is that it restricts the legislature's flexibility on tax choices and prevents the use of classified property tax." (Some Suggested Revisions of the Constitution of the State of Michigan, Donato J. Pugliese, University of Detroit, October 1961, p. II-41.)

II. ". . . It is contended that the legal uncertainties encountered by the legislature in using its specific tax powers have made that body hesitate to attempt any bold steps in improving the tax system." (The Voter and the Michigan Constitution, bureau of government, institute of public administration, University of Michigan, No. 29, 1960, pp. 89-90.)

III. "Constitutional requirements concerning uniform taxation are sometimes looked upon as unnecessary and the model state constitution contains no such provision." (Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution, citizen's research council of Michigan, vol. II, p. X-13.)

In the first Michigan constitution, dated 1835, there were no provisions dealing with problems of uniformity in taxation.

The uniformity clause first appeared in the Constitution of 1850, but the constitutional convention debates throw little light on the reasons for inserting it. The committee on finance and taxation was directed to investigate the expediency of making all taxes 'equal,' and remarks throughout the debate indicate a feeling that the burden of taxation was not being imposed equally. The uniformity clause was present in the article on finance and taxation when it came from the committee, but it was subjected to no debate in the convention itself. Nor was there any debate on it at the conventions of 1867 and 1908.

According to a recent writer in 88 U. of Pa. L. R. 728, 1940, the adoption of uniformity clauses in so many of our state constitutions during the latter half of the nineteenth century was due to economic causes. As the wealth of the county was gradually shifted from agriculture to industry, it came to consist more and more of intangibles. The general propery tax became insufficient for the needs of government. Intangible wealth was drawn under the taxing power, and state legislatures showed a tendency to classify property for taxation purposes. To some, especially the owners of real property, this seemed unfair, and it was feared that unlimited power of classification would permit excessive discrimination. Hence, the uniformity clauses were written into the state constitution.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

(Report of the Michigan Constitutional Revision Study Commission, 1942, Pt. II, pp. 2-3.)

Presently, all taxes levied on real property and personal property must be uniform, or the same. There can be no distinction between the two. The legislature cannot classify homes differently from industrial property. Distinctions between personal property and inventories cannot be considered.

Why should the legislature be prevented from introducing equity into our tax structure?

> First, there should be unanimous agreement that the so called uniformity clause and the supplementary provisions dealing with particular rules of uniformity have produced, more than anything else, confusion and litigation (emphasis added). This has been accomplished without achieving to any substantial degree the ideal of "absolute uniformity" in the distribution of the property tax burden when such was the ideal. . . . Second, it should also be clear that no policy, whether it favors a strict or liberal limitation, has profited by the overlapping and redundant uniformity structures which were so often found. Too often there has been a tendency to clutter up the constitution with a prolix and complicated uniformity structure which still left many of the really hard problems unsolved.

(Constitutional Uniformity and Equality in State Taxation, Wade J. Newhouse, Michigan legal publications, 1959, pp. 767-768.)

A cursory reference to the preparatory studies for this constitutional convention indicate beyond any question that the present article X, section 3, should be broadened to provide flexibility and untie the hands of our legislature.

Both the citizens advisory committee report on taxation and finance and the league of women voters recommend deletion of section 3.

In the study prepared by Mr. Raleigh Barlowe in the series of Michigan constitutional convention studies, it was recommended that section 3 be revised and broadened in its scope. At page 23, it was stated, "Strong questions may be raised concerning the advisability of continuing the uniformity rule of section 3 in the new constitution."

Finally, the citizens research council concludes its comments with the following quotation:

> The Michigan constitutional revision commission of 1942, subcommittee on taxation and finance; June 27, 1942; recommended that . . . the uniformity clause in the Michigan constitution as now worded is an unnecessary obstacle to effective tax legislation, and that there would be great advantage to the state if sections 3 and 4 could be redrafted to permit the legislature to graduate and classify all types of taxes, both ad valorem and specific, providing, however, for uniformity within classes.

(Comparative Analysis of the Michigan Constitution, citizens research council of Michigan, Vol, II, p. X-14.)

Therefore, the proponents of the minority report believe its recommended language will provide the necessary flexibility to solve Michigan's fiscal problems.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, we had no expectation that things would go so smoothly for long. For a discussion of this proposal, I call on Dick Van Dusen, a member of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I should first call to your attention a misprint in the green sheet committee proposal which is before you and which may, if you simply cross out the duplicated language, make your understanding of the matter somewhat easier. Line 17 on page 1 should simply be stricken in its entirety including the carryover portion of the word "taxation" at the beginning of line 18, so that that sentence will then read:

> The legislature may provide by law for exemption of such property from taxation, or for alternative means of taxation of such property in lieu of general ad valorem taxation, and so forth.

[Correction made.]

Now, I should begin by saying that this section takes the place of all of sections 3 and 4 of the present article X. It makes some provisions with respect to matter covered in section 5 though a separate section is still retained for that purpose. It also covers all of what is presently contained in sections 7 and 8 of the present article X, and it covers rather broadly the field of property taxation and the field of nonproperty taxation.

Now, I think that it is easier to take this in pieces and to discuss first the application of the committee proposal to the field of property taxation. The basic provision of the present constitution is that the legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule of taxation. The present constitution further provides that all property shall be assessed at its true cash value, and provides that the legislature shall provide a system of equalization of assessments as between assessing authorities.

Now, in large measure the requirement of uniformity imposed by the present constitution is retained in the committee proposal. The committee heard from witnesses over and over and over again that uniformity of assessment as a basis for property taxation was a desirable objective; that it was an objective not achieved under the present constitutional language in any measure in our state; and that if we could find the means of achieving uniformity of assessment, we would be accomplishing some major feat. Our proposal is designed to move in that direction, and we hope that it will provide the means by which the legislature and the municipalities and school districts imposing property taxes in this state can accomplish uniformity of assessment which is, after all, the cornerstone of any system of general property taxation.

The proposal states at the beginning that "The legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule governing the general ad valorem taxation of real property and tangible personal property." This is a basic statement that all property, real and personal, subjected to general ad valorem taxation, must be assessed at the same standard of value. It wouldn't make any difference whether this were 25 per cent of true cash value or true cash value or 75 per cent of true cash value; the uniformity rule would require that all of it be assessed at the same level, and this, after all, is something which taxpayers should reasonably be able to expect if the burden of taxation is going to be spread equally.

We found that one of the major problems of the present constitutional provision is that it requires the assessment of property at its true cash value, i.e., 100 per cent, and that while the constitution has required this at least since 1908, no one in the assessing field in the state of Michigan, with perhaps one or two exceptions, has accomplished that constitutional objective. In other words, nobody assesses at 100 per cent of true cash value. You have great disparity between assessments. The state tax commission attempts to prescribe the assessment of property at 50 per cent. In some counties this is pretty well achieved. In other counties there is wide disparity, real property frequently being assessed at 35 to 45 per cent, personal property from 65 to 80 per cent, and there is wide variation. Therefore, what the committee has proposed is that

> The legislature shall provide by law for the determination of true cash value of such property and shall specify the proportion of true cash value at which such property shall be uniformly assessed, ...

In other words, the legislature could say that all property shall be assessed at 50 per cent of its cash value, letting the state tax commission and the assessing officers go to the level for which the state tax commission says it is now striving, or they could move to a level of 25 per cent or to a level of 35 per cent.

A majority of the committee felt, however, that this level prescribed by the legislature should not in any case exceed 50 per cent. The committee was divided on this point. Some felt that the legislature should have the complete scale between 0 and 100 per cent to prescribe if they wished, but the committee proposal specifies that it shall not exceed 50 per cent.

However, we recognize that in those counties which are currently assessing some of the property at a level substantially in excess of 50 per cent, it was going to take a while to get down to the maximum 50 per cent level. The state tax commission advises that, in particular in Wayne county where this is a major problem, in cooperation with the assessing officials in Wayne county, they expect to get down to 50 per cent within 3 years. They are now in the second year of a 5 year program, and it would take 3 years from now to get down to 50 per cent. For that reason the committee has allowed some tolerance. They have allowed a period of 4 years to get down to 50 per cent.

Now, it is recognized that not all property fits the pattern of general ad valorem taxation, taxation based on the value of the property. But the legislature years ago recognized that intangible property — securities, bonds, deposits in banks and so on — didn't fit this pattern and so it imposed the intangibles tax as a specific tax in lieu of general ad valorem taxation, and so we have recognized this and have said that the legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule for the general ad valorem taxation of real property and tangible personal property. This excepts intangible property automatically.

We have also recognized, however, that there may be kinds of property which should be subjected to ad valorem taxation, or taxation directed basically to property, which, nevertheless, doesn't fit the pattern of the general ad valorem tax picture, and so we have specified that the legislature may either exempt property or that it may provide for alternative means of taxation of property in lieu of general ad valorem taxation, and that this alternative taxation should be uniform upon the class or classes to which the alternative means are applied.

Let me give you 2 or 3 examples. One is the present system of special ad valorem taxation which is applied to the property of telephone companies. A building housing an office of the telephone company is not on the general property tax rolls of the community in which it is situated. It is assessed by the state tax commission. It is subject to a special state rate of taxation. Tax is paid into the state and it is distributed back to local school districts, and this is a form of alternative taxation of property in lieu of general ad valorem taxation. There are other taxes based on property which are not a part of the general property tax. For example, automobiles are subjected to a weight tax, which is in lieu of ad valorem property taxation. And the provision here for alternative means of taxation would permit the legislature to adopt to that extent the special classification of real or tangible personal property, taking it off the general ad valorem property tax rolls.

Now that, I think, Mr. Chairman, pretty generally covers the explanation of what the committee has attempted to do in the area of property taxation. Our objective is the achievement of uniformity, the establishment of uniform assessment at a level not in excess of 50 per cent of the true cash value of the property, and the conferring upon the legislature of reasonable flexibility in determining the types of taxation to which property will be subject. I think perhaps rather than going on at this point to the second section, which deals with other nonproperty taxes and in particular the question of a graduated income tax, it may be easier to stop here and try to answer questions or deal with amendments which relate to the first section.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, just a point of information and parliamentary inquiry. It is my understanding under the rules that a minority report is supposed to be taken up first. Am I correct in this?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would rule that committee amendments will be taken up first, then minority report amendments, and then any other amendments from the floor.

MR. MARSHALL: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there questions of the gentleman from Birmingham on the first paragraph of the proposal?

The gentleman from St. Louis, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, it is not a question in relationship to the substance of the proposal, but it has occured to me that it has been the intention of this convention to keep a complete and accurate record of our proceedings, and it appears that Mr. Van Dusen suggested there was an error in the typing, which of course is not the fault of the committee, but I am wondering, for the benefit of the record, if it wouldn't be a better procedure, Mr. Van Dusen, to submit an amendment which will be printed in the journal, rather than to advise us of the striking or inclusion in these proposals from the floor.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Hoxie's point is well taken, and if there is no objection to an oral amendment, I would move to strike the duplicated language starting on line 17.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Van Dusen, on behalf of the committee on finance and taxation, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 17, by striking out "or for alternative means or taxation of such property from taxation,".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there discussion on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Birmingham?

MR. SABLICH: Mr. Chairman, I have a question to ask Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is it on the amendment?

MR. SABLICH: It is not on the amendment, no.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Will the gentleman suspend until we can dispose of the amendment.

Is there discussion on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Birmingham? If not, those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

[This amendment treated as a correction. See above, page 857.]

The gentleman from Caspian, Mr. Sablich.

MR. SABLICH: I would like to ask Mr. Van Dusen to explain further why the committee decided on the 50 per cent limitation on the taxation of real property.

MR. AUSTIN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. AUSTIN: There is a minority report on this section, and I think that the minority report ought to be taken at this time; that is, assuming that the Chair agrees.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Detroit that it was his understanding that the gentleman from Birmingham was yielding for the purpose of questions on the general proposal at this time. Does the gentleman desire to offer the minority report in the form of an amendment at this time?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Will the gentleman yield for that purpose?

MR. SABLICH: I will yield.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the amendment.

MR. GUST: Mr. Chairman, point of information.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman will state it.

MR. GUST: Mr. Chairman, I do not have a copy of this minority report. Has it been made available to the delegates? I would like to read it myself as the secretary reads. I will understand it better.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, there are 3 minority reports on this proposal. All 3 are found in today's journal—that is, yesterday's journal which was distributed today—Journal 73, beginning on page 520. The minority report applicable to this first paragraph and the one which we ought to discuss at this time is the last of the 3, found on page 523.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the proposed amendment at this time.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to minority report C of Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Ostrow, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young,

Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by striking out "The legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule governing the general ad valorem taxation of real property and tangible personal property.", and inserting "The legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem and other taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of persons or property to which they are applied.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is that the amendment the gentleman wishes to offer at this time?

MR. AUSTIN: That is the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: If you are interested in following me on this, you will turn to page 523 of the journal that was distributed this morning. The purpose of this amendment is to provide for classification of property for assessment purposes.

[The supporting reasons for minority report C to Committee Proposal 51 were read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 856.]

There were some members of the minority who felt that the uniformity clause as it relates to property should be deleted from the constitution, but the language which is recommended is in the form of a compromise, feeling that if we are going to have uniformity, let's have uniformity within classes, but let's recognize that there are classes of property that ought to be assessed differently.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Caspian desire to speak? Does the lady from Highland Park desire to speak on this amendment?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I had not yet yielded the floor. I would like at this point to yield the floor to Mr. Binkowski for additional remarks.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Binkowski, for additional remarks.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, as I indicated to you previously in the discussion on earmarking we were going to bring up this question of flexibility again, I think the problem is before us presently.

I realize that this is a rather complicated section, and I don't know to what extent you have had the opportunity to review all of the studies that we in the committee on finance and taxation have been dealing with in the last several months, but I think again the question before us is: to what extent do you want to provide flexibility, and to what extent do you want to untie the hands of the legislature? Now, if you want to maintain the present system, then, of course, you will not be in favor of our minority report. And I am sorry, Mr. Upton, I can't find your speech, because I wanted to use it with respect to this item of flexibility.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the lady from Highland Park desire to speak on the Austin amendment?

MISS DONNELLY: No. I think my question is directed more to the majority report, although it is somewhat pertinent to the minority. I would like to enlarge on why intangibles must be inflexible. I don't know why they can't be uniform, and there are conclusions all over the place that they can't be, but I would like to know why.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Do you direct that question, Miss Donnelly, to any person?

MISS DONNELLY: Well, actually it was going to be directed to Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will recognize Mr. Van Dusen for the purpose of answering the question and to speak in his own right.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, dealing first with Miss Donnelly's question, the minority report seems to suggest that under the majority proposal, the legislature could not deal separately with intangibles, stocks and bonds. I thought I made it reasonably clear that under the majority proposal, the uniform rule applying to general ad valorem taxation would not apply to intangibles. The reason is this: the rate of taxation applied to intangible property producing no income would amount to a capital levy. The legislature would simply extract a portion of the capital each year until the total amount of the capital was gone. And furthermore, intangibles have a way of escaping ad valorem taxation because it is a little bit difficult for the assessor to find 5 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph.

So, one, the great bulk of the intangibles were not being taxed under an ad valorem system; two, there was a considerable feeling on the part of the legislature when the intangibles tax was adopted that if the ad valorem tax structure were applied to intangibles, this would result, in effect, in a capital levy, and that the wiser way to tax intangibles was on a percentage of the income which they produced, which is the present system of intangible taxation. The majority proposal would permit the continuation of the present intangibles tax or some other means of the taxation of intangibles, as would the minority proposal.

Now let me, if I may, Mr. Chairman—well, perhaps it would be better to pursue Miss Donnelly's point.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The lady from Highland Park still has the floor for purposes of her question.

MISS DONNELLY: But this intangible income producing is still being taxed uniformly?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Yes.

MISS DONNELLY: And your proposal does not mean that you do not wish it to be taxed uniformly?

MR. VAN DUSEN: By no means.

MISS DONNELLY: But it has allowed it perhaps not to be. Am I correct in that assumption? This is what disturbs me.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Miss Donnelly, both the majority proposal and the minority proposal permit the classification of intangible property and the subjection of intangible property to special taxation uniform upon that class of property. That is the present system of taxation of intangible property. It would be continued under either the majority proposal or the minority proposal, unless the legislature chose, for example, to abolish the intangibles tax and adopt an income tax.

MISS DONNELLY: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Now the gentleman from Birmingham is recognized to speak in his own right, if he so desires.

MR. AUSTIN: Will you yield to comment on this?

MR. VAN DUSEN: In order to get continuity, I will yield to Mr. Austin for comment.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to deal with this intangibles question while it is fresh in the minds of the delegates. I believe that the state and local governments attempted to tax intangibles property under the ad valorem rules prior to 1939, when it was finally concluded that the intangibles property should be removed from the ad valorem base and would be taxed by the state under a specific tax arrangement.

Now, I don't believe that any of us would at this moment be willing to admit or conclude that intangibles property is better taxed under the specific tax arrangement than it would be under ad valorem. There are some disadvantages in taxing intangibles under the specific tax arrangement, and I might add that intangibles property is not taxed uniformly. Intangibles producing revenue are taxed differently from intangibles that do not produce revenue.

Now, as to the ad valorem taxation of intangibles, one of the problems in taxing intangibles, especially intangibles that do not have a par value, is that they are taxed at what is known as a stated value and they are not taxed at their real value if they do not produce any income, and many growth stocks do not pay dividends, so the state is unable to tax them on the basis of their dividends; it must tax them on their stated value. If they were taxed under ad valorem taxation, they could be taxed on their value, and I believe that the state would actually realize more revenue from the intangibles tax if they were being taxed under the ad valorem arrangement rather than under the present specific arrangement.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Birmingham still has the floor.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't wish to engage with Mr. Austin in a lengthy debate of the desirability of the intangibles tax. I would like to point out, however, the practical impossibility of subjecting intangibles to our present ad valorem tax rate. Let's just take, for example, an individual that owns $1,000 worth of American Telephone and Telegraph company stock. That stock would have produced last year an income of something in the neighborhood of $35 for him in dividends. If he were subjected on that property to ad valorem taxation, and of course it would be assessed at its full 100 per cent cash value—let's take the typical community where the average tax rate may be 25 or 35 mills—he pays for the privilege of owning that stock on an ad valorem basis for all of his dividends in ad valorem property tax. This is why people didn't report their ownership of stocks for ad valorem taxation purposes. It is the reason that it didn't work. It is the reason that the legislature changed it.

Now, so much for the intangibles tax, because actually under either Mr. Austin's minority amendment or the majority proposal, that is a matter left completely up to the legislature, and the legislature has the complete flexibility and freedom to deal with it as a class no matter which of these proposals you were to adopt.

Let me just indicate that, in the first place, much of the minority report is directed not to the majority proposal which is before you, but to the present uniformity clause of the Michigan constitution, and what the majority proposal attempts to do is to introduce into the system of taxation of property in this state a greater degree of flexibility than is possible under the present uniformity clause without, however, permitting the unlimited classification which is suggested by the minority report.

Bear in mind that the opposite of uniformity, which is what the majority report seeks in property taxation, is discrimination. You either have uniformity or you have discrimination. Now, what the minority report suggests is that the legislature ought to have the unlimited right to discriminate in subjecting property to taxation. There just isn't any question about it. Classification is a form of discrimination.

Now, a majority of the committee was unwilling to permit the legislature that degree of flexibility, believing that it was in the interests of the taxpayers of this state that all who owned property be subjected to taxation on that property on the same basis — uniformity. This is the basic structural difference between the minority amendment which is now before you and the majority report. We found in our consideration of the matter that a wide degree of classification now exists without any constitutional sanction whatsoever.

As a matter of fact, in most Michigan communities it appears that an informal system of classification exists under which the property of voters is uniformly assessed at a rate considerably lower than the property belonging to nonvoters. This is the kind of discrimination in the imposition of the property tax which has caused industry to scream loud and long about the unfair burden of taxation which it bears in the city of Detroit. It is the kind of problem which the governor's tax program tries to alleviate within the framework of the present uniformity clause. It is the kind of discrimination which the citizens for Michigan tax program attempts to eliminate. It is the kind of discrimination which can be and we hope will be eliminated under the majority proposal.

For these reasons I would urge you not to support the minority amendment, to vote no on it, and to support the majority report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question or two to Mr. Austin, if I may. Mr. Austin, can you tell me the number of states that have classification of real property as would be permitted under your amendment?

MR. AUSTIN: I don't believe I can tell you how many have real property, but there are a good number of them that classify personal property. I would be willing to agree to some restriction on classifying real property, but none on the personal property.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Austin, is the minority familiar with the Minnesota tax study, where Minnesota permits classification of real property and assesses at various rates of true cash value? And if my recollection is correct, labor, farm and business joined in the Minnesota tax study in recommending that the classification of real property be dispensed with and that the uniformity rule be applied to real property.

MR. AUSTIN: I think this is correct. And, as I said before, I would have no objection to no classification of real property.

MR. W. F. HANNA: My third question, Mr. Austin: do you know the number of states that permit classification of personal property?

MR. AUSTIN: I can't give you the number of states.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Are you familiar with the Robert Taft constitutional amendment, passed around 1933-34, allowing classification of personal property in Ohio, and the Ohio experience with that classification?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, I am.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Well, if we adopted classification, would we not have to take the second step of the Ohio experience and provide for the assessment of personal property by a state department rather than by each local township or city assessor?

MR. AUSTIN: I am not sure as to whether it would be necessary to have state assessment, but I think we would all agree that the assessment would be more equitable. Now, there is one difference between what is done in Ohio and what is suggested here. In Ohio the classifications are in the constitution. Here we are proposing that the legislature classify and the legislature may from time to time make adjustments in these classifications. But if we fix it in the constitution, we might be in trouble.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Well, Mr. Austin, after they concluded and put in the Ohio constitution a part of that proposal, after due consideration and study, they found that the individual assessors would have difficulty in classification and assessment, and I believe it was the conclusion at that time—and is still the conclusion in Ohio—that the assessing then, once you get into classification, must be made by trained personnel, and the source of such trained personnel usually is a state agency where a given person can specify and be an expert in oil wells or gas pumps, and so forth.

MR. AUSTIN: You would not object to trained personnel for assessing here in Michigan, would you?

MR. W. F. HANNA: If you limit your proposal to personal property and follow the Ohio practice to its end result, I will support you.

MR. AUSTIN: Very well. We are perfectly willing to agree to a change which would prohibit classification of real estate but permit classification of personal property.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will ask the gentleman if he desires to amend his minority report amendment, and if so, if he has anything in writing.

MR. AUSTIN: No, I don't have anything in writing because this was just suggested on the floor.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: I wonder if the gentleman can prepare something while we continue with the recognition of other delegates. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Bay City, Mr. Higgs, to speak on the Austin amendment.

MR. HIGGS: I have a question for Mr. Austin which I will defer until he gets finished with what he is doing.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Do you desire to yield the floor?

MR. HIGGS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to suggest that Mr. Binkowski and Mr. Hanna get together on an amendment if it is possible to work one out. Meanwhile, I will try to answer some of these other questions on the floor.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the chairman of the committee seeking recognition? The chairman is recognized.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I wish to comment on what Mr. Austin had to say on his minority proposal. We get down to a very clear cut question of whether or not we shall authorize the classification of property for ad valorem taxation. I want to admit in the first place that I came to the convention quite inclined to think that we might permit a limited classification, particularly a distinction between real property and tangible personal property, and the idea I had in that connection was that personal property was being taxed too high in many places and that a classification might permit a lower taxation of personal property. I thought — as I still think — that if there is any one tax being used in Michigan which has an adverse effect on our so called economic climate, it is the ad valorem taxation of tangible personal property.

We had a great many experts before the committee. Some of them thought that the classification of property, at least on a permissive basis to the legislature, was a good thing. A great many of them warned us that wherever it is tried it doesn't work, and that we ought not to go into it. But on one thing, so far as I was able to learn from their testimony, they universally agreed that what I had in mind wouldn't work out. If we were to permit classification of personal property on a different basis than real estate, instead of getting that personal property tax down, we were going to find it going up, and to that I certainly was opposed and I am still opposed.

We think that we have given the legislature everything that it needs to take care of certain kinds of personal property by a tax other than an ad valorem tax. If the legislature, for instance, should find that farm machinery that Mr. Austin has mentioned, which works only 2 or 3 or 4 days a year, should be subject to a specific tax instead of the ad valorem tax, that can be taken care of. If they find that our personal property tax is having an adverse effect on our industrial climate and wish to make a classification of tools and dies and tax them on a specific part of their cost or some other basis rather than ad valorem taxation, that they can do.

A majority of the committee is opposed to a general release from the uniformity clause and opposed to the ability on the part of the legislature or by constitutional provision to authorize classification of ad valorem taxation.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I would like to emphasize the point that the minority is not advocating any particular type of classification or any particular type of program. Again, the issue is flexibility. We are writing a basic document, and the question is to what extent you want to tie the hands of the legislature.

Now, we don't want to get involved here with the merits or demerits of any particular type of Ohio classification. The question is whether you leave all these details to the legislature or not. Let them decide. They have more time and perhaps even better experts than we had in our committee on finance and taxation.

Now, we just spent a couple of months hitting some of the high points in these areas. So the question is not any particular type of classification or system or anything else. Again, the question is flexibility. Do you want to untie the hands of the legislature so that in the next 25 or 30 or 50 years some type of proposal or some type of program which has been found workable in another state or which can be devised will then be able to be put into effect? And we maintain that under the rigid uniformity rule which the majority has suggested, the legislature will not be able to do this.

Now, the second point with respect to discrimination: one of the points that we neglected to put in our report is that you have an equal protection clause both in the state constitution and in the federal constitution so that no one can discriminate against anyone within any class unreasonably. There will have to be a reasonable classification. And anyone who has studied this matter knows that those guarantees afforded by the equal protection clauses give you the type of protection that you need with respect to uniformity.

So again — I sound like a broken record — but the question is flexibility.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Will the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Birmingham at this point? You have the floor, do you yield to the gentleman from Birmingham?

MR. BINKOWSKI: By all means.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Binkowski perhaps draws the issue rather sharply. I think that there is a question here as to how much unlimited flexibility you want to give the legislature in the area of taxation. I think that we all recognize that a constitution is a limiting document so far as the powers of the legislature are concerned, and certainly there is no area of legislative power which must be more carefully defined than the power to tax.

It is a cliche, but the power to tax is the power to destroy. Therefore, the people in establishing the basic document of the state should reasonably impose some limitations on that power, and the limitation requiring the legislature to impose taxation uniformly is, it seems to me, a highly desirable limitation.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the gentleman from Bay City seeking recognition at this time, Mr. Higgs?

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I have 2 questions that I would like to direct to Delegate Austin, and perhaps I had better direct the first one and yield to him and then direct the second. The first question has to do with the statement of Delegate Brake. I too feel that the personal property tax as it is presently being levied in Michigan is a burdensome and unfair tax and that some relief in this area would be desirable, but what do you say about the statement of Delegate Brake that this provision is likely to result in a revision upward of the personal property tax?

MR. AUSTIN: It would be left to the legislature to decide whether it wanted to lower or raise. It would be entirely up to the legislature. And let me remind you that when we talk about the taxation of personal property, we have to consider that there are all types of commercial enterprises that are involved. We like to make distinctions, for example, between those industries or commercial interests that are job producing and those that are not, and it is quite conceivable that the legislature may want to classify, for purposes of taxation, the personal property of job producing industry, particularly those that do not need to locate in Michigan but whom you may be interested in attracting to the state of Michigan, differently from the property of those businesses that must feed off the local economy.

And to be a little more specific, let us consider an automobile manufacturer who is thinking seriously of decentralizing his operations, and in order to be closer to markets may want to locate elsewhere. He may be encouraged to remain in Michigan if we are able to classify personal property so that there is some advantage given to him. On the other hand, let us consider a retailer, a department store. If a department store is to do business in a community, it must be located in that community, and there may not be the same reason for giving a similar type of concession. In other words, it is a matter of recognizing that there are different problems, different incentives, and we ought to leave it to the legislature to work them out and to make the best determination for all of the people of Michigan.

MR. HIGGS: My second question: in reading the committee proposal, section a, the first sentence provides for a uniform rule with regard to general ad valorem taxation. In line 21 the same proposal provides that every other tax shall be uniform upon the class in which it operates.

And I note that in your proposal, you state that your provision applies to ad valorem and other taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of persons or property to which they are applied. I would like to ask what other taxes—other than ad valorem taxes—are involved, and whether or not this would apply to the income tax.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, there is a separate minority report on the question of the income tax, and rather than get into a lengthy discussion of the income tax at this time, I would like to defer comment on it, except to say that the minority has no objection to uniformity within classes on any tax, whether it be specific tax or whether it be property tax. It is just that we don't feel that there should be general uniformity. We don't believe that you can apply a tax to all classes of property or all classes of subjects in exactly the same form, and I would like to just give you one brief example. I believe you are familiar with the inheritance tax. I think you are aware that there is a graduated rate structure in the inheritance tax. In designing the inheritance tax, it was concluded that it was advisable to have lower rates on lower amounts of property that are being transferred on death to other persons, and as the amounts increase, the rate is increased, and this, of course, has been established by the courts as being uniformity within classes, and we see no reason why this should not be continued.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, just one final conclusion then that I would draw: if Delegate Austin's interpretation of the inheritance tax structure is correct as applied—this language as applied to that tax—it would seem the same conclusion would apply then to the income tax and that uniformity within classes would permit a graduated income tax, would it not?

MR. AUSTIN: Well, of course, it is very difficult for the minority to see how you can permit graduation under inheritance and not permit graduation under income. But again, may I suggest that we defer our discussion on the income tax until we get into that section, because that is going to be another long subject.

MR. HIGGS: Well, Mr. Chairman, then I would conclude with the fact that I would find it difficult to vote on this particular minority report amendment if we must defer discussion on that particular proposition.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Bay City yield to the gentleman from Birmingham, who is seeking recognition, a member of the committee?

MR. HIGGS: Yes.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to comment briefly. Mr. Austin raised the question of the inheritance tax and may have left the inference that if the committee proposal were adopted, the present inheritance tax could not be continued. This is, of course, not the case. The committee proposal envisions the continuation of the inheritance tax on exactly the same basis as it is presently imposed.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, in an effort to get this discussion to a determinative phase, I would like to state the issues as I see them, what the issues are and also what the issues are not. As I see it, 2 issues have been raised by various different people. One issue is discrimination. The other is flexibility. I would like to make some comments about those 2 issues, and then I would like to comment on what is not the issue.

First of all, as to discrimination: Mr. Van Dusen has spoken in very glowing terms against discrimination. I join him in that noble motive. I don't believe in discrimination. I doubt whether anybody here will raise his hand and say that he supports discrimination. We already had 2 unanimous votes in this convention which indicate that we don't believe in discrimination, and if we did believe in discrimination, it would make no difference, as Mr. Binkowski pointed out; we are not permitted to discriminate because the federal constitution has a provision known as equal protection of the laws. It has had that for over 100 years. That has always been available to the people of the state.

I might say that I am very impressed with the equal protection of the laws clause in the United States constitution. There are suits pending right now which bear on some of the matters before us which relate specifically to that section, so you can be sure that I certainly support the idea of equal protection of the laws. But equal protection of the laws does not mean that the majority proposal is correct. It only requires uniformity within classes, not uniformity in every respect, provided the classes are reasonable, provided the distinction between one class and another is reasonable. If that is so, it does require uniformity within those classes.

Now, that is part of the federal law and it governs the state of Michigan. But I realize that up to this time, we did not have an equal protection of the laws clause within our own constitution, and if anyone wished to urge the equal protection of the laws, he would have to rely on the federal constitution. Of course, that did govern the state courts of Michigan in any event. But I would like to call to your attention that we have considered this very subject in this convention and we have decided to incorporate our own equal protection of the laws clause for the first time. We now have adopted an equal protection of the laws clause that is not in the Michigan Constitution of 1908. It will be in this constitution. Now, if we put that in, we don't need some things that were in before, and one of the things we don't need that was in before is this specific language that there must be uniformity, with no ifs, ands or buts.

The correct approach now under the equal protection of the laws clause is basically that suggested by the minority report. I noted that when Mr. Binkowski brought this question up about equal protection of the laws and pointed out that discrimination is not a question whatever here, Mr. Van Dusen, replying, implicitly agreed with him. He dropped the question of discrimination, which I think is the correct thing to do, and he limited his remarks to flexibility, and it seems to me that we can agree that discrimination is not the issue; flexibility is the issue.

Now, as to flexibility, this is one of the most baffling questions that comes before the convention. On one day some of us are in favor of flexibility and the next day we are against it and the next day we are for it. It seems to be some mysterious thing which drives us to alternate like an alternating current on this question. It seems to me that we ought to make up our minds whether we are for flexibility or whether we are not, and if we are for it, under what circumstances we are, and under what circumstances we are not. I recall in the questions about earmarking many of us said we did not want flexibility. Others said they did. I recall taking the floor on this subject myself, and I said, "To me, flexibility, or earmarking, which is an example of it, is not a basic principle of morals but it is a question of practicality and it depends on the facts." And I stated—I believe this is a correct approach — that we should always be for flexibility unless we have a darn good reason not to be in a specific case.

Now, when it comes to earmarking of school funds I thought that the history of this state and the experience of the people here showed that we had to have earmarking of school funds. I favored that. I opposed earmarking for highways because I didn't think experience dictated that we needed to do that.

Now, when it comes to this particular question of taxes and the fear that if there is flexibility, something will go wrong, I raise this question: is there any evidence to justify that fear? Has something gone wrong in the history of the state of Michigan with respect to something wrong that the legislature has sought to do or has done with respect to nonuniformity of taxes?

Here, it seems to me, we don't have any historical evidence to show that we should be afraid of flexibility and, in my opinion, when we have no reason to fear, based on experience, flexibility for the legislature, we should adhere to flexibility for the legislature. Now, I would like to point out what I believe is not the issue. I stated that, in my opinion, discrimination had been raised as an issue but it has been removed. Flexibility remains the issue. What is not the issue? What is not the issue is what type of classification would be a nifty idea. Nobody knows what type of classification at this point would be a good idea, and as far as I know, no one has suggested a scheme for classification. That is not the issue.

The issue is whether the legislature within the next 50 years should have the opportunity to investigate that question and determine the answer for itself. I would also like to point out that we have to make certain calculations and deductions and guesses as to the future, the next 50 years, in order to be certain that the majority proposal is correct. We have to assume that there never can be a proper scheme of classification. We have to be sure that we know all the different kinds of property that will exist within the next 50 years, and that none of them will require separate classification. How are we going to be sure what kinds of properties, even, to say nothing of what kind of classification schemes might exist?

I noted that several delegates pointed out that certain kinds of property already ought to be thought of in different terms than other kinds. It was pointed out by some people that real property is not exactly to be treated the same as personal property. It was also pointed out by another delegate that tangible personal property ought not to be necessarily treated the same as intangible personal property.

I suggest that there are reasons to suspect that there may be these kinds of possible distinctions between one kind of property and another, and there might even be other kinds of property that we know nothing about which could exist within the next 50 years. When in doubt, and when there is no history to show a reason why we should fear giving the legislature the power, I think we should give it.

I think further that what we are faced with now is not a logical reason for the majority proposal. I know of no reason that has been advanced in favor of it except discrimination, but that has been removed, in my opinion, as an issue. What reason is left over after that? It seems to me only one reason is left over, and that is just plain fear. I don't believe that we should glorify fear for fear's sake. If there is a reason for fear, we should be fearful, but if not, let's not raise fear to a constitutional principle. I support the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I move the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Before the Chair puts that motion, Mr. Brake, he would like to state that the following are on the list as having requested recognition: the gentleman from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie; the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder; the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Ostrow; the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Ford; the gentleman from Ypsilanti, Mr. Lawrence; the gentleman from Ridgeway, Mr. Upton; the lady from Dearborn, Mrs. Cushman.

The motion is that the committee do now rise. All those in favor vote aye. Those opposed?

The motion prevails and the committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBEST: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several items on the general orders calendar on which the secretary will give a detailed report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 43, A proposal pertaining to aliens and property rights; Committee Proposal 44, A proposal pertaining to the schedule; Committee Proposal 49, A proposal with reference to the borrowing of money by public corporations and bodies; and Committee Proposal 50, A proposal to require the legislature to provide sufficient taxes to meet the state's expenses covering the substance of section 2, article X of the 1908 constitution; reports these proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Committee Proposals 43, 44, 49 and 50 will be referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 43 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 845.

For Committee Proposal 44, as later amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting, see below, page 866.

For Committee Proposal 49 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 852.

For Committee Proposal 50 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 853.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Reports 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025 and 2026; and reports these exclusion reports back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they be adopted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the exclusion reports as listed. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

Exclusion Reports 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025 and 2026 are adopted and referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2016 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 845.

For Exclusion Report 2017 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 846.

For Exclusion Report 2018 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 846.

For Exclusion Report 2019 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 850.

For Exclusion Report 2020 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 850.

For Exclusion Report 2021 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 851.

For Exclusion Report 2022 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 851.

For Exclusion Report 2023 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 851.

For Exclusion Report 2024 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 851.

For Exclusion Report 2025 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 852.

For Exclusion Report 2026 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 852.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President, did we vote on Committee Proposal 44? It seemed to me that was referred to style and drafting without any vote in the convention. I have an amendment. I was seeking recognition at that time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, we will return to the reference of Committee Proposal 44 to committee and Mr. Higgs can offer his amendment.

MR. HIGGS: It is the same amendment which I made in the committee of the whole. I have another copy of it.

SECRETARY CHASE: This is a proposal from the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule, Committee Proposal 44, A proposal pertaining to the schedule.

Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment to the proposal:

1. Amend page 1, line 16, after "individuals,", by inserting "partnerships,".

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to recess until 2:00 o'clock. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I'd just like to remind the rules committee we have a meeting at 1:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries?

MR. DEVRIES: Mr. President, the committee on administration will meet at 1:30; not 1:15.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you. The question is on the motion to recess until 2:00 o'clock. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and we are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 12:05 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President, at the time we recessed, we were considering an amendment to Committee Proposal 44, which the secretary has at the desk. Would you like to read that?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs has offered:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 863.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Well, Mr. President and fellow delegates, I think at the time we voted on this this morning, there were only 115 delegates present, and I would like to offer this amendment again at this time because I feel that it does go to substance and that it is quite important. And the premise upon which it is based is that the rights of individuals and corporations does not necessarily include the rights that may be involved in a partnership under the uniform partnership act. As you may or may not know, title to real estate acquired in the partnership name must be conveyed in the partnership name. There are also provisions in the uniform partnership act which provide for the assignment of assets of the partnership for benefit of creditors.

Now, if you can envisage the situation where an assignee may be in the position of suing for rents or profits in the use of real estate, he would have to do that in a derivative action. In other words, the action would be in the name of the partnership because it is a legal entity for certain purposes under the Michigan law. And without belaboring that point, I would like to have it considered further.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Higgs. All those in favor of the amendment please say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

A DELEGATE: Division.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Division has been asked for. Is the demand supported? Those in favor rise. A sufficient number up. Mr. Chase will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs has offered the following:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 863.]

The language will then read:

All writs, actions, suits, proceedings, civil or criminal liabilities, prosecutions, judgments, sentences, orders, decrees, appeals, causes of action, contracts, claims, demands, titles and rights of individuals, partnerships, bodies corporate, and of this state or any subdivision or agency thereof existing on the effective date hereof shall continue unaffected except as modified in accordance with the provisions of this constitution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the amendment proposed by Mr. Higgs, the yeas are 88; the nays are 26.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske and Miss Donnelly offer the following amendment to Committee Proposal 44:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by reinserting "The common law and the statute laws now in force,"; and in line 9 by striking out "All laws"; so that the language will read:

The common law and the statute laws now in force, not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, one of the reasons why I reinstated this amendment at this time was for the basic reason we reinstated the other; that there were some 25 or 30 people who did not cast a vote in committee of the whole on this. And based on the argument by which the committee proposal is substantiated, by inserting the new words that are inserted here, the committee report says that they are in no way intending to change what we had in the old constitution. Now, if this is the basis of the reinsertion of the new words, and they do not intend to change anything, then I say we should say exactly what we mean, and if we mean the common law, we should spell it out.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. President, I would just remind the delegates that the committee recommends that this amendment not be adopted. I would also point out that we presented to you this morning the opinions of our research staff and of Professor Kauper of the University of Michigan law school that the amendment or the section as submitted to the convention was the proper way to do so.

We were attempting to correct a legal problem that has existed in this state for some time which has been taken care of by court interpretation, but we are making the constitution conform to the way the court has interpreted it to mean. We ask that the amendment be defeated.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, first I would like to have the amendment reread. Then I would like to comment on it, please.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President and members of the convention, I rise to support the Mahinske-Donnelly amendment. I would like to make a few comments in that regard. When words are used in statutes or in constitutions, the courts make certain interpretations of these words and they then receive a certain specific meaning, because the courts have stated that they mean certain things. When phrases are used by certain legislative bodies or by constitutional bodies, when they are interpreted by the courts, they receive a certain specific meaning. And the same with regard to constitutional provisions: when they have been interpreted by the courts, they receive certain specific meanings.

Now, the present committee report, which would delete the reference to the common law, was what was in the 1835 constitution, but the 1850 and the 1908 constitutions added the words which the Donnelly-Mahinske amendment seeks to put back in, the reference to the common law.

Now, the reason why I am concerned is because the courts have adopted a certain rule of construction of statutory and constitutional language, and this rule of construction is, if a legislature has reincorporated certain words or if a constitutional convention body has reincorporated certain words that were there prior thereto, and if these words had been reviewed by the courts and had been given certain specific meanings, when they reincorporate these words, it is indicated that they mean to reincorporate not only the words but also the meanings which the courts have given to them. Now, whenever you change the language which has been interpreted by the courts, then there is also a suspicion raised as to what the intent of the legislative or constitutional body is. I do not feel that we wish to raise any suspicion. This has been a part of our constitutional provisions since 1850. Incidentally, even the northwest ordinance made some reference to the common law and indicated that the people of Michigan would operate under the common law.

And for those people that are not lawyers, I would like to make this comment: the common law is a very important part of our law of the state. Many of our criminal provisions are not statutory law but common law, and many of our procedures are common law procedures and not statutory procedures.

If we make any deviation from this, it will seriously hamper the progress of criminal prosecution, I am quite sure, and many other phases of law. I hope that you will give detailed and considered consideration to this particular amendment and not dismiss this very lightly, because I feel that we may get into more litigation than we would like by adopting the committee report. I would like to ask some of the former members of the bench for their opinion, and I would like to call upon Judge Dehnke and ask his opinion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Well, Mr. President and delegates, I have to remind you once again as I have before that curbstone opinions are usually worth about what they cost. But on this proposition, as far as my opinion goes, I agree with Mr. Boothby.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Boothby or Judge Dehnke. As I read this language, forgetting for a moment the words "statute laws now in force," it says that "The common law . . . not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed." I don't know how a common law expires by its own limitation, and I don't know how it can be altered or repealed except by judicial interpretation.

Is it the intent of the sponsors of this amendment that the judicial shall not be entitled to interpret the common law so that we have a living common law, which is what I think we have now and what I think we ought to have in the future?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I think the conclusion is obvious. The legislature can change any rule of the common law whenever it reaches the conclusion that the rule ought to be changed.

MR. KING: I am aware of that, Judge. How about the Supreme Court of the state of Michigan?

MR. DEHNKE: Well, I think there are some limitations on that.

MR. KING: I oppose these implied limitations.

MR. DEHNKE: The law is, of course, a living organism. It must grow. I can conceive of individual situations in which the court, by reason of the complete change of circumstances and a completely different fact situation, might be justified in holding that the old common law rule ought not to be considered in force in this state any longer. But the other extreme is to use the method of an amendment by judicial decree to an extreme that I personally cannot justify.

MR. KING: I apologize for the personal exchange. I am aware that some people think that this is the way it ought to be. I just hope that by this brief exchange, the issue here has been perhaps somewhat clarified, because I think some people may not be aware of the complete implications of what they are trying to do by this amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. President, I rise to support this amendment. I dislike to vote against the committee recommendation on this but, as I understood Mr. Durst, the only reason actually given for the change of this language was that research had come up with fewer words which they said meant the same thing. I don't think we had better take any chance on this, and I would judge that the committee is not too seriously opposed to the original language.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: The reason, Mr. Iverson and Mr. President, is not for fewer words. All that have been eliminated are 2 or 3. It is to make this section conform to the way the supreme court of this state has interpreted this section to mean.

Now, if we put the same language back, they may continue with the same interpretation, but we raised here this morning that if we reinsert it the same way, it can be logically argued that we do not wish to adopt the interpretation which the supreme court has placed upon this language which does allow this common law to be a living law and to change as needs of the times require.

I think Judge Dehnke has adequately stated the issue. There are some people, lawyers and otherwise, who do not believe the supreme court should have the right to change the common law; this should be done by statute. This is an honest belief on their part. We have operated in this state under a common law that does change by judicial interpretation as the needs of the state require. This is what the committee thinks is a proper interpretation, and we have changed the language to conform to this interpretation.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I rise to support the committee proposal and to oppose the amendment for several reasons: it has been pointed out that the court decisions have settled the question and therefore there is no question. Therefore, it is better to leave the language alone. Normally I would think so, but in this case it seems to me that the language itself is ambiguous. The language we have at the present time, which we are trying to get rid of, is ambiguous. It has caused trouble in the past, and I suggest that if we readopted the same language, somebody will think that we mean exactly what we say and not what the supreme court has said before that we mean. We ought to say what we mean and not what somebody else has construed us to mean.

I call to your attention it is not unknown that supreme courts can change their decisions too. They may say it means a certain thing today; tomorrow they may say it means the opposite. We shouldn't give them the opportunity to do so. We should say what we mean, and what we mean is what is embodied in the committee proposal.

This question has been analyzed by the committee. They made a decision. It was analyzed by eminent professors. They made a decision. It was analyzed by the committee of the whole this morning. We made a decision. Now, I wonder if we are going to rehash the entire question over and over again. It seems to me that once the committee of the whole has made a decision, there is no need to rehash the entire subject matter. I understood the reason for raising the amendment here was that there was some question about whether there had been a large degree of support or a small degree of support. That can be determined by voting. There is no need to introduce new ideas, new arguments.

I think that the convention should sustain the committee of the whole and it should sustain the people who have analyzed this. We won't be sure that we are right if we change our opinion between this morning and this afternoon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen, I suppose one of the reasons they call me a conservative is that I don't like to change just for the fun of it. I like changes that mean improvement. I can't see any improvement that can come from this change of language proposed by the committee. What the supreme court has said, from the reading of the clause in the past, to me is entirely satisfactory, and I would like to have it left that way.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I move the previous question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on ordering the previous question. A division has been demanded. Is the demand supported? A sufficient number up.

The question now is: shall the previous question now be put? Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The question is now on the amendment. Those in favor will vote —

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I call for a record roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A record roll call vote has been demanded. Is there a sufficient number up for that? A sufficient number up.

Now the question is on the amendment. Mr. Chase will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pending is the amendment:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 864.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the votes will be recorded.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

Committee Proposal 44, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 44 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in the constitution of this state, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that:

Sec. a. All laws not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitations, or are altered or repealed.

Sec. b. All writs, actions, suits, proceedings, civil or criminal liabilities, prosecutions, judgments, sentences, orders, decrees, appeals, causes of action, contracts, claims, demands, titles and rights of individuals, partnerships, bodies corporate, and of this state or any subdivision or agency thereof existing on the effective date hereof shall continue unaffected except as modified in accordance with the provisions of this constitution.

Sec. c. All officers filling any office by election or appointment shall continue to exercise the duties thereof, according to their respective commissions or appointments, until their offices shall have been abolished or their successors selected and qualified in accordance with this constitution or the laws enacted pursuant thereto.

Sec. d. The attorney general of the state shall recommend to the legislature at the commencement of the next session such changes in existing laws as may be deemed necessary to adapt the same to this constitution.

Mr. Chase will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 51, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It has been suggested that during the afternoon session, at approximately 3:20 or 3:30, in order to have a little relaxation and rest, the chairman of the committee of the whole will suggest that the committee stand at ease for 5 or 10 minutes. That will be his prerogative.

Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Bentley.

[Whereupon, Mr. Bentley assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The committee will be in order. The pending business before the committee is Committee Proposal 51, the minority report c amendment of Mr. Austin and others to the committee proposal.

For minority report c, see above, page 856.

The Chair has several individuals who have been seeking recognition, but there has been a request from the sponsor of the pending amendment to clarify 1 or 2 items and, without objection, the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin, will be recognized out of order at this time.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I would like you to refer to Journal 73, page 523, and Journal 69, page 404. The minority report is on page 523, and the minority proposal is that "The legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem and other taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of persons or property to which they are applied." A question has been raised by the inclusion of the language "and other taxes" at this point in the committee's proposal, and if you will refer back to page 404, the first sentence of the committee's proposal which the minority proposal seeks to replace is as follows: "The legislature shall provide by law a uniform rule governing the general ad valorem taxation of real property and tangible personal property"; with no reference to "other taxes." The last paragraph of the committee proposal reads, "Every other tax shall be uniform upon the class on which it operates." This is language that the committee included to take care of taxes other than property taxes.

We have 3 minority reports on this same article or this same section. One of our minority report amendments seeks to delete that last paragraph, and since we are suggesting that the last paragraph be deleted, it was necessary that we include in our first sentence the reference to other taxes. I thought this point ought to be made clear because it was raised earlier as to why we did include other taxes in our substitute.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you. Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have a question that I wish to address to Mr. Austin with reference to the minority report amendment that we have under consideration. I would also appreciate any comments that Mr. Van Dusen or other sponsors of the committee report might wish to make following Mr. Austin's comments or answer to my question. Probably in presenting this question, I will display my abysmal ignorance of the subject under consideration, but as I understand it, we are starting from sections 3, 4, 7 and 8 of our present constitution, which I have examined and which seem to refer to the subject of uniformity, either ad valorem or within classes as to specific taxes, on property.

We have had a very enlightening debate this morning on uniformity versus flexibility and classification versus discrimination. So far in this presentation I have heard discussion only as to the matter of classification as it applies to property, except possibly a rather oblique reference in a reply to a question by Mr. Higgs having to do with classification of personal property of industries versus those inventories and so on of stores and other business entities.

My question, Mr. Austin, is this: in your minority report you refer not only to classification of property but you refer also to classes of persons. Would you please elaborate on the meaning of that language in this minority report.

MR. AUSTIN: The reference to persons, again, applies to the last paragraph of the committee report, which states that "Every other tax shall be uniform upon the class on which it operates." The intention of the minority report is to indicate that, in reference to other taxes, there may be some necessity for including language which would indicate that these taxes must be uniform upon the classes of persons to whom they apply.

If, for example, we were going to levy an income tax, you had persons who had incomes, say, of $5,000 and persons with incomes of $10,000, you would be permitted to levy a different rate of tax upon persons in these different classes.

Now, I would certainly assume that anyone who opposes the so called graduated income tax would probably be opposed to uniformity within classes of persons, but this is to make clear what the intent is.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you very much. Then, briefly stated, as I understand it, the language "classes of persons" is necessitated in order to be consistent with the other amendment providing for a graduated income tax?

MR. AUSTIN: Well, let us say it is necessary to the minority report amendment to make sure that a graduated income tax would not be prohibited.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you, Mr. Austin. I am wondering if Mr. Van Dusen, as one of the sponsors and the speaker for the committee on the majority report, would care to comment on Mr. Austin's answer.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Hillsdale yields to the gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I think my only comment, Mr. Chairman, would be that Mr. Prettie's question and Mr. Austin's answer point up the degree of classification and, in my judgment, discrimination which is contemplated by this minority report amendment. That is one of the reasons that the majority feels that uniformity in property taxation is desirable.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I arise to support the position of the minority of the committee. I feel that their position is well taken. And I note with specific interest subsections a, b and c of their report. I feel that the matters contained in subsections a and b have already received some discussion, and I feel that I would like to confine my comments to subsection c, because this is one which I am a little bit more familiar with. We have here a question of encouraging economic climate in Michigan, and I will point out that when you attempt to encourage economic climate, you must recognize the entire scale. And I speak, coming back recently from my community in which last week members of the local chamber of commerce at one of their meetings asked what were we as delegates doing at the convention to attempt to encourage the smaller businessmen to withstand the rivers and the hazards of today's political and economic climate. I told them it was my opinion that we sincerely were going to try to look into these matters that affected them vitally.

And I feel that here we have one that cuts very close into the question of whether they will survive or not survive. I was very fortunate to have in my files a communication dated September 6, 1961, from Bill Crouchman, our city assessor. We didn't anticipate this problem, but we were exploring methods by which we could come in and present to the people at this convention some of the problems confronted by the folks back home. And as of this date, Bill Crouchman, our hometown local assessor, who at that time had, I am sure, no idea that he would appear in the official records of the convention and possibly even make a contribution, gave me a communication. This is addressed to myself from Bill Crouchman, the city assessor of the city of St. Clair Shores. Subject, personal property taxation. He starts out:

> The personal property tax includes such items as stocks, fixtures, furniture, signs, machinery and goods on consignment.

Then there is one paragraph here which I feel is pertinent. He says — and this is quoting Bill:

> Personal property tax seems unfair in many respects, such as neighborhood hardwares that must keep a stock of $20,000 to $30,000 to be successful and pay on this amount. Compare this with the real estate office, which perhaps has a total value of $500 to $800, and pays on that amount. By the end of the year, each may net the same profits, but the hardware man has a much larger investment to do so.
>
> Another example is stock in the process of being machined and must be claimed by the machine shop doing the machining although not owned by the same.
> If you have any further questions, I will be happy to answer them if possible.

Now, one of the arguments that was advanced by the speakers in opposition to the amendment today was the fact that a close look at this type of an assessment would require an assessor that was skilled and knew his job. I don't think that this is an argument that we should hold against this thing, because wherever possible we should encourage people who are doing the assessing work to be skilled and to do a job. I will admit that it may cause a temporary inconvenience to some, but I feel that it may mean survival to a very important segment of our economy, the fellow back home who many of us have contact with who is groping, seeking and searching for methods to survive under today's very difficult economic climate, and certainly I hope that you can take Bill Crouchman's word back home to your heart and try to give him, the small businessman, the relief that he so rightfully needs.

I feel that the minority report amendment does move along in this direction, and I would support it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I am one of the delegates who signed the minority report, and as a matter of fact I was the one who made the motion in the taxation committee to have the minority report included in the present constitution. First I would like to point out that the subject under discussion in this minority report, the 50 per cent limitation on taxation and the prohibition against an income tax, are not interrelated in this discussion. Each was separately treated by the majority of the members, and each is separately treated by the minority reports.

Now, I would like to address myself to some of the statements that were made by previous speakers. Mr. Van Dusen said that most of the businesses that moved out of Detroit that he was familiar with moved out of Detroit because of discrimination in real estate taxes. That has not been my experience. In every instance that I know of where anybody moved out of Detroit because of taxes, it was because of the unfair burden of the personal property taxes.

Now, it is not just a Detroit problem; it is a state problem, and a lot of other states have the same problem with personal property taxes. There exists — or there did exist when I lived in California — a string of warehouses in Arizona whose sole purpose was to hold inventories for California merchants who found it economical to have inventories in Arizona to escape burdensome California personal property taxes.

Now, Mr. Van Dusen referred to the discrimination that might exist if we went to uniformity by classification. I submit that there is no such problem. As a matter of fact, from the standpoint of job producing industry, there is discrimination under the present system. If you invest a thousand dollars in stocks or bonds, you have a lower, more favorable intangibles tax rate, but if you invest that same thousand dollars in job producing machinery, you must pay the same tax that you pay on real estate. This is even more burdensome when you have either inventories or machinery that do not produce income, that are not used in manufacture. For example, I know of several instances where Ohio manufacturers of heavy equipment wanted to establish sales and service warehouses here, bring in equipment, put them under power, merely for the purpose of demonstration, but because of the burdensome personal property rate on that equipment here by comparison with Ohio, they found it more advantageous to keep them in Ohio. Let's assume, for example, you were a distributor or a wholesaler. You were serving Michigan, Ohio, Indiana — there are parts of the state where a matter of a few miles you are in one state or another. These warehouses, where you pay personal property tax on merchandise that just lies there waiting to be shipped, the difference in tax on that merchandise can make a difference in the choice of location of Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Now, some point was made of the fact that if you have uniformity by classifications with separate treatment of personal property, that you would have to have skilled assessors. We hope that in all property that is assessed, the assessors know their business, whether it is real property, personal property or any other property. The same property that is today being assessed will continue to be assessed, but by a different method. On an ad valorem basis it will not require any greater skill to assess it at a different rate than it requires today to assess it on the same rate as real estate because the valuation problem is the same. It is the rate that you apply to the valuation that might conceivably be different.

Now, if we are going to have fairness in taxation, as we are getting in to more and more different kinds of property, the legislature over the next 50 years must have the leeway to classify that property so that it is fair not only to the persons being taxed but to the persons in other classifications so that the tax, while resulting in income to the community, at the same time will not be a deterrent to the growth of our industry and our general business climate.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Detroit desire to yield to the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen, for a question or a reply?

MR. OSTROW: Yes.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Thank you, Mr. Ostrow. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to comment briefly, because Mr. Ostrow did comment on a couple of points which I had made, that I believe Mr. Ostrow has rather eloquently demonstrated the reason why a majority of the committee asserts the need for uniformity. I completely agree with Mr. Ostrow that the discrimination in Detroit is between real property and personal property, with personal property bearing a heavier burden of assessment and a heavier burden of taxation. Every industrial taxpayer who is subject to the personal property tax in the city of Detroit who came before our committee strongly urged uniformity of assessment as between real and personal property. I think that the examples Mr. Ostrow has given eloquently testify to the need for uniformity.

We have operated under a constitution which requires uniformity which has been honored in the breach, particularly in Wayne county — but it is not confined to Wayne county by any means — by an assessment practice which assesses real property at a considerably lower level than personal property. All we are asking is that they be put on a parity. This minority amendment would simply throw the mantle of respectability over the unconstitutional practice of discriminatory assessment which has prevailed for 20 years or more.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Ford, is recognized.

MR. FORD: I simply want to take issue with Mr. Van Dusen's conclusion that the practice has been unconstitutional. This has been tested. All of the local units of government around Wayne county have had the experience of being before the tax commission annually for a number of years now with Detroit Edison, Michigan Consolidated Gas, Ford Motor company and General Motors wherever they own property. We all have had the experience with Detroit Edison and Michigan Consolidated because they go into every community in Wayne county. And for years they have argued as Mr. Van Dusen is arguing now and they have been quite successful before the tax commission in making adjustments in their taxes.

What Mr. Van Dusen is saying in effect is that in those communities where it is now the practice to assess individual homes at a lower level of actual cash value than personal property, such as the inventory in the business and the machinery in an industry, and such as the gas lines in place and the poles and wires of the utilities, we will even this all up, and by evening it all up, he doesn't mean we are going to leave the utilities where they are and bring the others up to them; we will bring them down and we will make up the difference in financing local government by raising the taxes on the individual homeowner. That would be the end result of what the committee is seeking to do with this coupled with the other provision.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Speaking as a member of the taxation and finance committee, we have looked into this matter for many months. I would like to disagree with Dr. Nord's remarks that this is not a discriminatory idea. To me, Dick Austin brought out the point that we were all fearful of in our committee; namely, that a tax commission could give leeway to one industry and not another. If an industry wants to stay in Michigan, he says, we can give them tax relief. However, if he can't leave Michigan, we will tax them at a good rate. This is the thing that uniformity prevents, and I believe that the people of Michigan expect uniformity in the real estate and personal property taxes.

As you note in our committee report, we have attempted to eliminate the wide variety of taxes you can get in this limit by bringing it down to 50 per cent. I know we are not discussing that point at this time, but this is the purpose of the committee's report. The difference that a tax commission or tax authority would give to one business or another, I believe, would be a detriment to our business climate here in Michigan.

So therefore, I believe that it is a discriminatory item that we are concerned with and not just a plain flexibility one.

Yesterday I was arguing for flexibility. I am still arguing for flexibility, but we in this constitution must establish the guidelines for a tax base, and once those are established, then I would like to see our legislature have an entire flexibility to spend the revenues that will be coming in from these taxes that we have established as a guide and as a base. Therefore, I hope that the committee of the whole will oppose this minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from St. Joseph desire to yield to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin?

MR. UPTON: Yes, sir.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Upton. I do feel compelled to respond to Mr. Upton's remarks, because not only his remarks but some of the other remarks made on the floor have tended to confuse the intent of the minority amendment. What the minority amendment suggests is that the legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem taxes. This is not a matter to be left to the discretion of the local administrators. The problem today is that this is exactly what the case is. Under the present constitution, local administrators are in a position to discriminate, and the legislature — and I certainly want to be corrected on this if I am stating it incorrectly — is powerless to do anything about it.

What we are trying to do is to provide that the legislature may by law impose ad valorem taxes which shall be uniform upon classes, and not leave it to these administrators to discriminate. If there is any discrimination as such to be done, it would be done by the legislature.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Dearborn, Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: I have a couple of questions I would like to ask both Mr. Brake and Mr. Austin. I am not quite clear about the effect of this third sentence here, "The legislature may provide by law for the exemption of such property from taxation, or for alternative means of taxation of such property in lieu of general ad valorem taxation, uniform upon the class or classes" and so forth, upon the first sentence, which provides that the legislature shall provide a uniform rule covering general ad valorem taxation of real and tangible personal property. Now, what exactly does this authorize the legislature to do? What effect does this have on the first sentence? And is this a good way to handle it if you are trying to accomplish something, or are there better ways?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Whom do you desire to yield to, Mrs. Cushman?

MRS. CUSHMAN: Either one. Mr. Brake, I guess.

MR. BRAKE: As long as the tax, Mrs. Cushman, is an ad valorem tax, one that is upon property on the basis of its value, this uniformity clause would govern. It would have to be taxed at the same rate regardless of its nature. The provision authorizes the legislature, however, to exempt property from ad valorem taxation and if deemed advisable to tax it in some other way. I think probably the outstanding example that we already have of that is the exemption of the automobile from ad valorem taxes, and instead the placing upon automobiles of a specific tax not based on value. That concept is carried forward in this provision.

MRS. CUSHMAN: What is the advantage of this?

MR. BRAKE: It may be very desirable not to tax all property on the basis of its value, and I think again that is the best example you can have. We avoid the necessity of assessing each automobile as to its value. We go by its weight. It makes the tax very easy to collect. There is no difficulty in the assessment. It is a much more workable thing than it would be to tax it upon the basis of its value. And there may be other property that ought to be handled in the same way. This authorizes the legislature to do it.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Would Mr. Austin agree with this as an interpretation?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mrs. Cushman yields to Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I do agree with this interpretation, and I would add that the minority did not criticize or attempt to change the remainder of this paragraph.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Do you feel this is an adequate way of handling the problem that you are after, or is there something beyond it that you are after that this cannot help solve?

MR. AUSTIN: It is the opinion of the minority that exempting certain properties from the ad valorem taxation does not solve all of the problems. There are some properties that might well be taxed under ad valorem taxation but classified.

And it has been pointed out — I don't want to get into this lengthy discussion about intangibles again, but simply to point out — that if we could classify property, we could classify intangible property and tax it under the ad valorem taxation. But since we are desirous of taxing intangibles at a lower rate than other property, we have to exempt it and then tax it under the specific taxation. But we could apply a lower rate to intangibles if we could classify intangibles for ad valorem tax purposes.

MRS. CUSHMAN: I wanted to get your reaction to this. I asked several people at home about their reaction to this thing, and particularly people in the schools because in Wayne county, as you know, we are already taxing certain kinds of property above this 50 per cent level. I did discuss it with several people, and they felt that this was a matter that could well be of concern to the schools, because they thought it was going to harm the tax base and the income that the schools would be receiving under millage, and this is of considerable concern to me. But I did want to know whether this was an adequate way of handling the particular problems that you run into. It seems to me this is a case where uniformity of treatment does not necessarily mean equality of treatment — just as you get into with sex sometimes. (laughter)

MR. AUSTIN: I think your concern is well founded, Mrs. Cushman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mrs. Cushman, did you desire to yield further time to the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen, for further reply?

MRS. CUSHMAN: Fine.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mrs. Cushman, just to add a few examples to those cited by Mr. Brake, let's take oil and gas, which are beneath the surface of the ground. Nobody knows how much is there. The general ad valorem basis of taxation is not at all appropriate when you can't tell how much property is there, and therefore it is exempted under the present law from the general ad valorem tax and is subjected to a severance tax. The constitution has in the past and at present made special provision for the assessment of utility properties on a statewide basis, and this is a special ad valorem tax because it is impossible to properly value a railroad just taking the segment of its track that runs through one school district to the segment of its track that runs through another. This is another kind of special taxation which could be accomplished under the alternative means suggested by the majority proposal.

Mr. Austin said that it would be necessary to have the minority amendment in order to clarify intangibles. I think this is not true, because quite clearly the majority proposal limits the uniform rule to general ad valorem taxation of real property and tangible personal property, so that intangible property would be a special class under the majority proposal.

Let's just take a little bit of a look at what could be accomplished, however, under the minority amendment and the degree of chaotic classification into which you could get. The legislature could decide, for example, that drug store inventories would be assessed and taxed at one rate, hardware store inventories would be assessed and taxed at another rate, that the property of lawyers would be assessed and taxed at another rate and so on ad infinitum. Anyone who is familiar with the system of personal property tax classification adopted in Ohio is aware that the opportunity for classification is limitless and it lends itself to the problem of the squeakiest wheel before the legislature getting the grease in terms of who gets the favorable classification and who doesn't. That is why uniformity is desirable.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mrs. Cushman, you still have the floor. Do you desire to yield further?

MRS. CUSHMAN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I think Mr. Van Dusen will recognize or at least will appreciate the nature of my remarks and what my intent is. I think that what he is actually doing is making a mockery of what the legislature might do if given the authority to classify. I don't believe that the legislature would make such ridiculous classifications as he has suggested.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ypsilanti, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I don't know whether the question should be addressed to Mr. Austin or Mr. Van Dusen or Mr. Brake, but I have a different angle on this problem, one that I have been interested in for some time. I don't want to get into problems of local government. I am not getting into desirability of annexation, but I am interested in the tax phase of it, and I am wondering if either or both the majority report or the minority would cover the situation where a municipality seeks to enlarge its borders by annexation, take in perhaps vacant land, land that is being used as farm land, perhaps a gas station or similar business, but is unable to extend its services to the area taken in immediately. For instance, it may be unable even to render police or fire protection. It may not be able to extend its water or sewer lines.

Under our present system a great deal of hardship has been caused to some people who even have been annexed unwillingly, because they were unable to prevent it. They have received no immediate benefit, and in some instances for several years found their taxes not multiplied once or twice, but as high, in some instances I know, as 5 times, and the local authorities were claiming that there was nothing they could do about it because it was necessary that that property be taxed on a uniform basis, and since it was within the city, all property within the city had to be treated the same.

I have seen different municipalities — that is, the township and cities within adjoining townships — get into very bitter disputes, fights. I have seen people get out to work against, say, the legitimate expansion of a municipality's borders if it involved their property, particularly because of the fact that they were getting no benefit whatever for their purposes from the annexation, who would, if they could, have some relief in this respect: in other words, be assessed as though they were still in the township until such time as development caught up with them or municipal improvements and services could be rendered.

Now, our cities apparently in various areas are growing. It is my understanding that in California — perhaps Mr. Ostrow may know about this — they can have a different rate of taxation where property does not receive the same benefit, we will say, that downtown or the area immediately surrounding downtown receives. The advantage to the municipality, of course, is that it enables the municipality to control the development. It enables it by zoning, by planning to arrange for the orderly development, the proper use of the property for everybody's benefit if something of this nature can be done.

As I say, I don't want to get into this matter of annexation. That is not my intent. What I am wondering is if either the majority report or the minority report enable a distinction to be made of this nature to help out the situation I speak of.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Whom do you desire to yield to, Mr. Lawrence, for an answer?

MR. LAWRENCE: It doesn't make a bit of difference.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Well, you have the floor.

MR. LAWRENCE: All right, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I will answer first. I am sure Mr. Van-Dusen will want to comment also. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lawrence, I think you have made a very eloquent plea for the minority amendment. (laughter) Incidentally, California is one of my favorite subjects on the matter of taxation. It just happens that California has a number of the provisions that we are objecting to here in Michigan, and California, incidentally, is booming economically.

As to classification, I would say that classification is the answer to the very questions that you raised. Classification would permit orderly development. And I might add that there is a certain amount of classification that is done now which has been — well, I will put it this way: which has been admitted by many of the assessors and supervisors who testified before our committee, but the inference was that these are handled more or less by administration. In other words, there is some leeway that — well, let's say that it is exercised by local administrators on subjects of this kind. But what we are seeking to prevent is that kind of indiscriminate administration. What we would like to do is to put the matter squarely up to the legislature to work this problem out and to provide the types of classifications that are necessary so that it will become a matter of law.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to the gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lawrence, I think the answer to the problem which you have posed — and it is a very real problem — lies not in classification but in good assessment. Now, you suggest that here is property which does not have utilities, which does not have roads, which is not enjoying municipal service. Quite obviously it doesn't have the same value that property has which does have roads, sewers and other municipal services. The problem which you raise can and should be handled under a uniform system of taxation by assessing it at its proper value in relation to other properties which do enjoy the services which you describe.

Now, let's pose the other side of the coin, because this is something which the committee did consider very carefully. Let's suppose that classification is possible and that the legislature, or whatever other authority to whom the classification responsibility is given, determines that it does want to classify vacant and undeveloped land and have it assessed and taxed at a lower rate than developed land. This simply offers a tax subsidy to the land speculator because he is in a position then to simply hang on to his property which is enjoying a lower assessment and a lower tax rate until such time as he is surrounded by the utilities which you have described. His property is actually far more valuable than any assessment which it has under the system of classification and, in effect, all of the other taxpayers are simply subsidizing the land speculator.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Van Dusen, I would like to ask you this question: is it better to have that land speculator stay outside of the city where the city has no control over him and the city gets none of the tax, and keep the land as farm land or vacant land, or is it better to have him within the city? In other words, until his property has increased in value, until those services are available so he can develop it, is there any harm done in taxing at a lower rate?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think, Mr. Lawrence, the answer is that if he is going to have his property fairly assessed, he isn't going to object to annexation. He is only going to object to annexation if the taxing authority is going to assess him as though he had municipal services when in fact he doesn't.

I don't want to protract this, Mr. Chairman, because I think the subject of annexation is one which has been dealt with in local government and will be at length.

MR. HATCH: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. I thought that Mr. Austin this morning agreed to an amendment which would exclude real estate from the minority report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman desire to respond to the point of order?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Hatch, we did not agree to an amendment. There was a suggestion made that perhaps an amendment ought to be made, but we did not agree to an amendment.

MR. HATCH: I thought you stated that you would consent to such an amendment and you weren't concerned with land.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, I might say this: that we would rather get a decision on the present amendment before we get into any other amendments.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Ypsilanti still desire the floor?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes, I again would like to ask Mr. Van Dusen, if the majority report maintains the status quo, then I am afraid that the matter of assessment is not the answer. I shall give you one specific example. Outside of Belleville there was a farm. It continued to be used as a farm, and the city of Belleville wanted it. The owner was willing to bring that land in the city on one condition, that as long as it remained farm land until they got their sewage problems straightened out along the Huron river, that he would use it as a farm and it would be taxed as such. The city — I attended the meeting — agreed to that. The city in good faith agreed to that, they were so desirous for the property. But once he was in, they were told down at the Wayne county building by somebody, some assessor, some equalization group or something else, that they couldn't fulfill the agreement they made between themselves and keep it as farm land, and the man's taxes were raised 5 times as much with absolutely no benefit.

Now, all I am interested in knowing is, does either of these 2 plans allow that sort of thing? I want to know how to vote.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Whom do you yield to, Mr. Lawrence?

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to the gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would suggest, Mr. Lawrence, that the problem which you pose is one which probably deserved some more careful investigation prior to the annexation. But we gave this a lot of consideration in the committee. If the property which you have described was fairly assessed at its land value, then under the majority proposal what you have described would take place. If it was not fairly assessed, if the value which the city ascribed to it was not correct, then he would be also protected under the majority proposal.

But the majority proposal, I repeat, is one which would not permit the subsidization of a land use not related to the real value of the property. If the property has greater value, then it should be assessed at that value.

MR. LAWRENCE: I wonder if I may yield to Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: You may yield to whomever you wish, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. EVERETT: Thank you, Mr. Lawrence. I would like to speak on the same point, because it seems to me Mr. Van-Dusen's answer is not a complete one.

In many suburban areas, the land values, particularly where they are improved, are greater than they are in the city, but it is the tax rate itself which has prevented annexation in many of these cases, the people recognizing that they are not, in the immediate future, going to receive the same services which those in the established community now receive. They may eventually and probably will eventually, but not immediately. So the mere difference in assessments or assessing standards does not solve the problem. For that reason it seems to me there is considerable value to the minority report amendment.

I think there are, however, parts of it which would make it impossible for many of us to vote for it. Mr. Austin himself has indicated because of its relationship with the last paragraph that it would permit a graduated income tax. Now, there are some of us who are caught in the middle here. We are not going to vote for a graduated income tax. In fact, we are going to vote against it. But we certainly don't feel that it has any relationship with this first sentence which the minority has submitted a separate amendment to.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Lawrence, you still have the floor. Do you desire to yield to Mr. Austin?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if they would yield to an amendment which will put this matter squarely up to the delegation as to the subject at hand and to get this other problem of the income tax out of the present minority report amendment?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Lawrence, do you desire to yield to Mr. Austin for the purpose of his offering an amendment to his amendment at this time?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes.

MR. AUSTIN: Will the secretary read my amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin has offered an amendment to the minority amendment:

1. Amend the amendment after "ad valorem" by striking out "and other" and after "classes of" by striking out "persons or"; so that the language will then read, "The legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of property to which they are applied."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Lawrence, do you desire to yield further to Mr. Austin for the purpose of explaining his amendment?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes, I do.

MR. AUSTIN: I believe the amendment is self explanatory. I would also like to apologize for not having seen to it that the delegates had copies of this amendment on the type of paper that we normally furnish to them with line numbers so they could make the changes on their copies. And I might ask, Mr. Secretary, will the delegates in the future be furnished copies of these minority reports where they can make the corrections?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will respond.

SECRETARY CHASE: The secretary has been puzzled about this situation, Mr. Austin, because of the fact that these minority reports are printed in full in the journal, and in order to save some printing expense, we have resorted to the printing of only 200 copies of minority reports. Now, I have referred this matter to Mr. DeVries for the committee on administration to consider, and what their answer is going to be, I have no knowledge as yet, but we will try our best to dovetail these amendments into the amendments that you have in the journal so we hope you can follow it that way. That is the reason that I read your amendment in the form that I did.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Secretary. I don't want to confuse the discussion with that subject matter, but I thought we ought to at least raise the point at this time.

I think the amendment is clear. We are simply attempting at this time to remove any reference at all to other taxes so that we have before us only the matter of classification of property, and I don't think that I will take any more of the time of the delegates to elaborate.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Ypsilanti still retains the floor.

MR. LAWRENCE: I merely was unable to get the amendment. I wondered if you could help me, Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you, Mr. Lawrence. After "ad valorem" strike out "and other", and after "classes of" strike out "persons or".

MR. LAWRENCE: Unfortunately I have the journal. Is that in the first paragraph?

SECRETARY CHASE: After "ad valorem" strike out "and other" and after "classes of" strike out "persons or"; so that the language will then read, "The legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of property to which they are applied."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Lawrence, do you yield the floor?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes, thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on Mr. Austin's amendment to the minority amendment. Does anybody desire to speak on the Austin amendment? Mr. Ford, do you desire to speak on the amendment to the amendment?

MR. FORD: I just want to ask a question.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: You are recognized.

MR. FORD: As I understand it, the words "of persons or" are the words that were stricken, Dick?

SECRETARY CHASE: Just "persons or", so that it reads "classes of property."

MR. FORD: Is it the intent of this amendment, Mr. Austin, that we would be clearly talking about the ability of local governments by legislative mandate or by legislative permission to classify real property as well as the others?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, under this amended language, the local government or, let us say, the legislature — it is the legislature that will provide the laws for doing this — will be able to classify real as well as personal property.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is there further discussion on the amendment to the amendment? If not, the Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the amendment to the amendment will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment to the amendment is adopted.

The Chair is now ready to continue with recognition. He would like to remind the committee that only now are we beginning to recognize persons who requested recognition since 2:00 o'clock. All previous speakers had been recognized during the morning session. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Onondaga, Mr. Davis.

MR. DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a member of the committee on finance and taxation I rise at this time to support the committee proposal and to oppose the minority amendment. I would like to say, however, that I do have respect for the minority amendment. We have discussed this matter at great length in our committee, and I believe that most of the committee was open minded about this particular matter. I don't think that there has been a point which we have heard on the floor but what was considered or something in relation to it within the committee. So I am briefly going to attempt to list a few of the reasons why I like the committee report.

In the first place, I think the property taxes have about gone their limit, particularly in some areas of this state. I think that this particular committee proposal places a ceiling which is realistic and which is meaningful. Second, it offers a means of legal recourse where there is inequity of assessment which is cheaper and easier to attain. Example: a store owner with inventory evaluated at 70 per cent on his personal property, beside the residence which is assessed at 35 per cent of cash value, under our present constitution has had difficulty in gaining any kind of a realistic or cheap solution to his problem. Fifty per cent cash value gives him something now which at least is a tangible means of bringing this back down where it should be.

This committee proposal does provide for exemptions or for alternative means of taxation. I am not going to comment upon this because I think Mr. Van Dusen has covered this in an excellent fashion. The minority amendment would likewise allow this, so this is not a particular difference.

The committee proposal does place some limits on the legislature for broad scale classification, and I think that this is desirable. We have heard exceptions, and I am glad that some of our city friends have recognized that in the case of assessing farm property next to subdivision developments, there is inequity there, and we have considered this in detail and we were quite familiar with this problem. I might say that there are other exceptions, and there are long lists of them. One of them, for example, industrial property which is not being used, has no source of income. And we could go ahead with a long list of these.

We have considered many of these exceptions, and I will not attempt at this time to list more. I would like to say that the uniformity clause as such is of a constitutional nature. It is found in our present constitution and it is present in many other state constitutions. After considering all of the exceptions, the majority opinion of the committee was that we were willing to go along with equality, and we think that this particular committee proposal does give some concrete means of attaining equality in taxation for ad valorem purposes in the state of Michigan. In fact, I think that it provides an orderly, a realistic and a workable approach for ad valorem taxation, and I would like to urge support of the committee proposal and defeat of the minority amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Acting on the earlier suggestion of President Nisbet, the Chair will declare an informal recess for 10 minutes. The committee will reconvene at 3:35. The gentleman from Fennville, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I simply want to raise my objection on the record to this procedure. I am opposed to the committee of the whole recessing for 10 minutes, because if it can recess for 10 minutes, it can recess for 10 hours.

The purpose of the committee of the whole is to keep working, and if the committee of the whole desires a recess, the committee of the whole's only proper action is to rise. Please keep in mind that the convention, acting in committee of the whole, acts, so long as it is in the committee of the whole, only by a greater number of votes for or against anything, and it also acts at the same time that the convention is supposed to be acting. Now, if we fall into what I deem to be the extremely poor parliamentary practice of permitting the committee of the whole to recess for 10 or 15 minutes, in parlimentary law it could completely delay the work of this convention.

I understand that the president stated that this is the course of action that would be taken. I want to object to it strenuously, and I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the motion that the committee do now rise. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed?

The ayes have it. The committee rises.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: A division is demanded. Not sufficient support. The committee has risen.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain items on the general orders calendar of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 51 and has come to no final resolution thereon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I move we recess for 10 minutes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to recess. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are recessed for 10 minutes.

[Whereupon, at 3:28 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 3:38 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for further consideration of the items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Bentley.

[Whereupon, Mr. Bentley assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The committee will be in order. We will continue the discussion of Committee Proposal 51. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, when I asked to be recognized early this afternoon, I did not know Mr. Lawrence was going to bring up the point which he raised and also that the matter of real estate was still left in the proposed amendment, so rather than talking on what I had first intended to speak on in support of the majority report, let me talk to Mr. Lawrence's problem. I think that at first it may appear that there is a great advantage in an old city being able to entice or invite or encourage a new area to come in by having a differential tax base; for example, being able to say to this new area coming in, "We will only tax you at 7 mills and the rest of the city will be at 12" or "you at 10 and the rest at 14," and I suppose you might think that coming from a city, we would be very anxious to do this sort of a thing and make annexation easier. But I would like to tell you that it is the experience of the cities and my own feeling that it doesn't work this way. First, I don't think that it is quite moral or right to try and lure people in by promising something which may not work out and, secondly, I think it invites some problems which first don't meet the eye.

Let's take my own city, for example. We have done some substantial annexation and we still have the same millage rate for the whole city. We have to, under the present constitution and we would have to under the majority report. And, as I say, I favor the majority report on this phase of it. Now, we put in $6 million worth of storm and sanitary sewers. These were specially assessed to the extent of 1½ million, and 4½ million of the cost was shared by the general fund. Who pays out of the general fund? Who pays into the general fund? Well, it is the people of the whole city, and the people of the whole city are largely the old city, the city as it existed before any annexation. If you go in for a graduated tax rate as is the suggestion or the question of Mr. Lawrence, what you do is make the burden even greater on the old residents of the city. Now, it has been burden enough to have, in my city, for example, $4½ million paid out of the general fund, most of which comes from the old city, but what you would do by applying this split tax rate or this classification would be to add onto this burden. I think that this is going to cause as many problems as you think it will solve. Possibly it would turn these annexation votes right around where the outlying area would want to come in and the inside area will say, "No, we don't want you in because you are going to get a different tax rate".

Now, in addition to the problem that is raised in this connection, you have another problem that comes if you have a different classification on taxes. I don't think any city is uniformly street lighted, any city is uniformly street paved, any city has uniformly storm sewers and uniformly sanitary sewers. We still find that we have better street lighting in parts of the city than in the rest. Now, look at the problem that is going to come to your local council if you start having this classification. An area of the city is going to say, "Well, our street lights aren't as good. We want 1 mill less in taxes." Or a small section of the city will say, "Well, we only have a storm sewer and we don't have the sanitary sewer. We want a reduction of 1 mill on taxes." Or another part of the city is going to say, "You still haven't paved with curb and gutter our street, and we want a reduction on taxes." And somebody else says, "You have some parks in your part of the city and we don't over here, and we want a reduction." And I think you invite for your local council all kinds of problems when you invite a nonuniformity rule, and therefore I think on this phase of the report, the majority is right. We forget that the uniformity rule on real estate and personal property just didn't happen overnight. We have had a lot of experience with it. And I don't think we should lightly discard it.

I know it has been criticized, but the principal criticism on our taxation has been on personal property, and it has been because personal property has been assessed at higher rates than real estate — not because of the classification but the entire rate, and this can be corrected under the majority report. This is the evil, not the evil in classification, primarily. And, therefore, speaking to this point, I very strongly think that we would make a mistake and invite a lot of trouble that we don't first think about if we have separate classification for real and personal property.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Kalamazoo desire to yield to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Faxon, who I believe is seeking recognition?

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Faxon saw me in the hall and said he has to catch a plane and asked if I would yield. I do.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields.

MR. FAXON: Thank you, Mr. Allen. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I want to get my words in now before I leave because there are at least certain fundamental issues that have been raised that I would like to get my ideas expressed upon, and that is with regard to what we are doing on this whole tax article.

Now, I heard earlier this morning a reference made to the effect that historical constitutions always included some sort of prohibition upon the legislature with regard to what taxes it may or may not impose. And I like nothing better than to look back into the early charters and early colonial constitutions to see whether this in fact is the case or not.

And as I listen to the debate progress, I hear more and more reference to the evils that may ensue from a legislature that would haphazardly consider the provisions that are being advanced by the Austin amendments, and in this case we see all these evils and we are against it, and they are sort of setting up a strawman in the legislature that is going to go haywire in terms of how it is going to write tax law.

Now, I didn't view the task of constitutional convention delegates as getting into the specifics of tax law, and I would hope that we would find some confidence in the legislative process to insure that these people who are elected and representative of the people of the state — and are elected periodically for that purpose — would be able to write the tax law.

Just to look back into the Pennsylvania Charter of 1696, and, I just read this one sentence because I think this reflects the kind of feeling that people then had in legislative assemblies:

> . . . that the representatives of the free men who, met in assembly, shall have power to prepare and propose to the governor and council all such bills as they or the major part of them shall at any time see needful to be passed into law.

A general statement, nothing dealing with taxation as early as 1696.

We first get into tax reference in the Pennsylvania Constitution of 1776, and I just want to state this one paragraph of the whole charter, the whole constitution. They had just one paragraph dealing with taxation. And I would ask you to compare the historical past to the present with regard to this one paragraph. It says in section 41:

> No public tax, custom or contribution shall be imposed upon or paid by the people of this state except by a law for that purpose, and before any law be made for raising it, the purposes for which any tax is to be raised ought to appear clearly to the legislature to be of more service to the community than the money would be if not collected.

And here is the part I like particularly:

> . . . which, being well observed, taxes can never be burdens.

Now, this is a feeling expressed in the confidence of the legislature to use some wisdom with regard to the imposition of taxes, and that is all that constitution said.

And I looked into the constitutions of New York and New Jersey and North Carolina, and none of them have any reference to different types of taxation which may or may not be done. There was a general feeling of trust in the legislature for making these determinations.

And so I wish we could in some degree revert to some confidence in writing a constitution and not imposing restrictions and to permit flexibility, and what we get into when we don't is the problem of writing tax legislation here on the floor. So let me then in conclusion give my support, whatever that may be worth, to the Austin amendment, and in doing so, I ask that you consider the historic past and the tradition that has been set in early constitutions with permitting no restrictions upon the legislature in terms of tax legislation. Thank you, Mr. Chairman and the committee.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Gladwin, Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I was quite interested a few moments ago in the words that Mr. Ostrow spoke with regard to personal property taxes, and I think Joe Snyder said some of the same things, and at that time I felt moved to come forward and express my views with regard to personal property taxes. I am going to say this about them: I think that something has got to be done about them or small business is not going to exist in this country very long.

However, with reference to the point under discussion, uniformity of taxes, I am in complete support of the committee report. However, I don't think that the committee has done an adequate job of making it possible for the burden at the local level through personal property taxes to be somewhat eased, and I would support the committee report and ask you to vote against the minority amendment. You will hear from me later on personal property taxes again. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Marshall, Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, like Mr. Hubbs, I sought recognition shortly after Mr. Ostrow and Mr. Snyder had spoken. If you will recall, I believe it was Mr. Ostrow who referred to the situation of the man owning the hardware store with $20,000 worth of inventory and the real estate broker who had maybe $800 worth of inventory; that the hardware dealer would pay a substantial personal property tax, whereas the real estate broker would not, and that both men were making substantially the same amount of money. Now, Mr. Ostrow's solution to this problem is to classify personal property.

Well, first of all, you have to look at the evil he was describing. Assuming there was an evil there present, the evil, to my mind, is not that they were both paying taxes based on personal property which was assessed at its fair market value or the same percentage of fair market value; the evils, if any, lie in the fact that both businessmen were making approximately the same amount of money and yet were paying different taxes.

Now, I submit that the solution to the evil is not in classification. Assume further now that there was another hardware store farther down the street that also had $20,000 worth of inventory but which was not making any net income whatsoever. Now if we assume that there were a classification, this of hardware inventories or some such classification, this wouldn't correct the evil which Mr. Ostrow was referring to, because you still would have a man making a considerable amount of money who was paying a given tax and a man making no money paying the same tax. So I submit that classification is not the solution to the evil referred to by Mr. Ostrow.

I think the committee report leaves it open to either exempt or to take certain property out and tax other incidents of that property, which may more directly correct the evil that Mr. Ostrow was referring to. If there is to be a tax on personal property, I think that a machine in one plant should be taxed the same as a machine in another plant, or a desk in a real estate office should be taxed the same as a desk in a hardware concern. So I support the committee report and oppose the minority amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, in a problem of this kind there are always 2 approaches that one, I think, should make. One is his philosophy of government, his principles, the thing he believes in in connection with a particular problem. The other is the matter of public acceptance. I think we would be very remiss if we didn't recognize that that matter of public acceptance is a part of every problem that comes before us.

I work with tax people from one end of this state to the other the year around when I am not in the convention. I don't know of anything in the tax field that would cause more of a shock to the people of this state than the word to go out from here that we have abandoned the uniformity clause. They have tied to that for so many years. We recognize it has never been 100 per cent effective, but we have depended on it, they have depended on it. They think it is something they can tie to, and the reaction is going to be bad if they find we have abandoned it. So much for that.

Now I would like to say something else to you. We have after today, 10 more days before we reach the February 21 deadline that we have set for ourselves. I went over the list last night of the things that I knew about that I think are going to be highly controversial on the floor of this convention and before the committee of the whole. There may be many more that I don't know about. And of course there are always what one may speak of as little things that he thinks are not controversial that turn out to be extremely controversial. I found 15 issues, 14 besides this one, that I thought would take as much time as this one will take, and we have 10 days after today—and it is now 4:00 o'clock today—in which to handle it.

It seems to me we have 1 of 2 choices: either we are going to subject ourselves to an arbitrary limitation of the time we can use, or we are going to have to discipline ourselves and when we have said what is necessary to say, to stop talking and go to voting. I am not saying that with any wish that there should be a lack of scrutiny on anything that comes out of the finance and taxation committee. We are not only willing to have you do it but we want you to do it. If there are bugs, we would rather you would find them here than to have somebody find them afterwards, which would be much more embarrassing. But if we can't discipline ourselves enough to avoid any unnecessary debate, we are either going to break our deadline or we are going to subject ourselves to something that is very arbitrary, and I am sure we always wish to avoid that. This is just one amendment on this thing. We know there are 2 more. I don't know how many others. We are up to 4:00 o'clock on one amendment. Let's say just what has got to be said and nothing more. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Musekgon, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I don't want to get shot by the chairman, but I will be as brief as I can, Mr. Brake. Mr. Austin said that by allowing the legislature to classify, we would eliminate the discretion to ignore the law as to the valuation placed on various classes of property which is now prevalent throughout the state. Business, labor and management all agree that in the Minnesota tax study, where classification ran rampant, this discretion was abused far more than in any state having a uniformity rule, and advocated uniformity.

Secondly, he implied, I think, that in California by classification of assessments, you solve a problem of farm land lying within an incorporated city having a different tax rate. I submit that an examination of the California practice will show that they have cities with multiple tax rates and what they call service districts where they assess for services, and the solution to the problem raised by Mr. Lawrence can be solved by 2 words in the home rule city act, which provides for assessment for public improvements, in adding the words thereafter "and for public services." This is the practice followed in townships, and this solves the problem very neatly. I don't think that we should mislead those people who have farms on the borders of cities that the state legislature under the minority amendment would pass a law which says that farm land subject to a 10 mill city tax will be assessed at 25 per cent of cash value, and that farm land that is subject to a 1 mill township tax will be assessed at 50 per cent of cash value.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Ledge, Mr. Doty.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to point out that Michigan has one of the finest state tax commissions in the country, and this tax commission in the last 10 to 15 years has done a tremendous job in improving and correcting inequities that existed within this state. I think that this is something we should all think about. Remember that a lot of work has been done in this area, and I would urge you to support the majority report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Brake makes a very tough man to follow, and I certainly shall try to be brief. I would suggest that we are overlooking one point. The uniformity clause in the present constitution is actually an illusion. Tax rates and tax assessments are not uniform in this state and have not been for a long time. Now, whether the first sentence of the majority or the minority report is accepted, the balance of it would certainly tighten up this matter, and rightfully so.

In my own community in Battle Creek in 1957 we had a study made of the city and an adjoining township, and to quote very briefly from it, these outside experts found that the tax rate in the city on real property was based on 55 per cent of the 1953 replacement cost, while in the township it was 50 per cent of the 1941 replacement cost. Now, I need hardly remind anybody that the cost of building between 1941 and 1953 went up tremendously.

The assessment rate in the city was 80 per cent of cost on inventory; in the township, half of cost on inventory. In the city, 40 per cent of the cost on machinery and equipment; in the township, 25 per cent of the cost on machinery and equipment. In other words, there has been no uniformity.

To me there are certainly dangers in the minority amendment, but I think there is an overwhelming advantage to it. It does open the door to some effort to classify city services to break down the barriers which now prevent uniform and legitimate annexation. I am not saying this would be done easily. Mr. Allen has pointed out some real obstacles to it, and it would be a very difficult problem for the legislature to come up with classifications which would answer it, but at least we are leaving the door open so that in the future, as there is more experimentation in this field, more study of it and more knowledge of it, the opportunity is then there for classification in this area. I think if proper classification standards could be found and used, it would tend to solve much of the problem of annexation, which did not faze Kalamazoo but does faze most of our cities.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman desire to yield to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin?

MR. EVERETT: I would.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. I believe that most of what is to be said on this subject has been said, and I feel also that perhaps the delegates are ready to vote. I would just like to make this one last comment. The minority report or amendment does not suggest that classifications be made; only that the legislature have the right to do so if in its wisdom it feels that it ought to be done.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Goebel.

MR. GOEBEL: Mr. Chairman, I shall try to be brief, upon orders from our chairman. I think our chairman, Mr. Brake, and Mr. Van Dusen have done a very fine job in presenting the committee's proposal. I want to say that I agree with Mr. Allen in his remarks because I do feel, as he does, that in trying to correct some of the problems that are in this area, we may be causing a lot of headaches in the future.

Now, this is a constitutional limitation, as it should be, but the committee feels—and I certainly feel—that there is adequate flexibility within the limitations of the committee proposal to allow the legislature to come up with a good tax program, and it is my feeling, and I think the feeling of the majority on the committee, that if we raise this limitation or are more generous with it, open it up beyond what the committee has offered, that we will open up a field of taxation which, at least in my judgment, will allow discrimination. The committee report, in my judgment at least, offers the needed flexibility to the legislature, but yet stops short of a situation where taxes could be discriminatory. I oppose the Austin amendment and I am for the committee proposal. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, it appears that anyone who speaks after Mr. Brake does so at the risk of his displeasure (laughter) and I am going to risk his displeasure. I know I had lunch with him yesterday, and maybe I never will be able to again, (laughter) but I believe, nevertheless, that it isn't quite right of Mr. Brake or any other person to stand up repeatedly over and over again various different times and state that now that he is standing up, everyone else should sit down. I don't believe that I need to follow that dictum.

Now, several red herrings have been dragged across this issue repeatedly, and that is the reason I take the floor again, to get rid of the red herrings and find out what the real issue is. Mr. Brake states that we are going to shock a great many people if we abandon the uniformity clause. I have no statistics on the matter. He may be right and he may be wrong. I can't tell. But let's keep this in mind, even if we were to wipe out the uniformity clause entirely—which is not going to be done—it would not be just that that we do. We are adding something at the same time as we are taking something away. We are adding something that is bigger and better than the uniformity clause, and that is equal protection of the laws clause. We didn't have that in this constitution before. That is why we had the uniformity clause. Now we have the equal protection of the laws clause and now there is no need for the uniformity clause. Let's not get nervous that the people will be excited about that. When we explain to them that we have the same provision as the United States constitution—and the United States constitution has not been something undermining our security, as far as I know—people will not get nervous.

The other red herring that has been dragged across this debate is the question of classification, whether we are for classification or against classification. I can say for my part, without any fear of contradiction, that I haven't got the slightest idea whether I am for or against it. I don't know anything about it, and I am not being required to vote on that. We are not in the position to be determining now whether there should be a classification scheme. We are not being asked to write a tax program now that will be good for the state for the next 50 years. If we were asked to do so, we should refuse to do so. We don't know the answers to all the questions that will arise. We don't know how to solve the problems of these different people who have been mentioned on the floor in the last few minutes: little business, farmers, hardware store owners, real estate brokers and others. We are not going to solve all of their problems here. We are not going to solve any of their problems here. The only question is, are we going to set up a framework of government, or are we going to set up a framework of government which could possibly succeed in governing?

As Mr. Austin has pointed out, the issue is not classification. The issue only is whether we want the legislature to determine whether, at any time in the next 50 years, it needs some sort of classification. It seems to me, therefore, that the answer is simply this, the problem not being one of shocking the people by removing something without adding something better; the problem not being one of discrimination because of the equal protection of the laws clause; the problem not being one of classification, it boils down to one thing: flexibility.

Do we want to trust the legislature with anything at all or do we want to be so certain that we know everything that can ever happen in tax law that we are going to settle it all here and now? I believe we should give the legislature some flexibility when we can, and I believe here we can. The minority amendment ought to be adopted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Niles, Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I will be brief because I am in proximity to the person who made the recent statement concerning briefness. I think that this whole issue of whether the constitution should be flexible in this regard or whether it should impose a limitation actually boils down to a very interesting point, and that is this: Senator Hutchinson has time and time again indicated that a constitution should be a limitation on power, and when we come into the area of legislative power, I would assume that it should be a limitation on the power of the legislature in certain areas, and that area, I think, is the power of being partial. And I believe that when you inject the question of flexibility, you are actually saying that the legislature should be so flexible that it can be partial. And I think that is what we must be very careful in considering at this point, whether we should allow the legislature to be so flexible that it can be partial to any group or faction in society.

I think it is very interesting to note a statement that has been made by Mr. Madison in the Federalist Papers number 10, and that statement is this:

> The apportionment of taxes on the various descriptions of property is an act which seems to require the most exact impartiality; yet there is perhaps no legislative act in which greater opportunity and temptation are given to a predominant party to trample on the rules of justice. Every shilling with which they overburden the inferior number is a shilling saved to their own pockets.

I think that the whole question before us at the present time is, are we going to let the legislature be so flexible that it can be partial in the determination of taxes and the requirement that certain individuals pay a greater amount of taxes than other people? I think this is an important question that should be considered.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Ford, in the chamber? If not, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Howell, Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, I agree with Mr. Brake. I don't think there is anything else that could be said that hasn't been said, except I feel a little bit bewildered, like the young fellow that went hunting ducks with his father, his father being a sharpshooter and never missing his mark. They sat all day in the boat, and along towards evening along came a couple of mallard ducks. The father raised up with his double barreled shotgun. Bang! Bang! Nothing happened. The ducks flew away. He turned around to the boy and he said, "Son, you have just witnessed something you will probably never witness again in your life." "What's that, Pop?" "Two dead ducks just flying away!" (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The vote now occurs on the amendment. Mr. Bonisteel, the gentleman from Ann Arbor, is recognized.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, before we vote on this proposition, I think it might be well if we took a good look at the language that is being proposed here by the committee report. I want to read it. It will only take me about 2 minutes. I read it over many times since this debate started.

[The first 2 sentences of Committee Proposal 51 were read by Mr. Bonisteel. For text, see above, page 853.]

This is the part now that I want you to listen to:

[The balance of Committee Proposal 51 was read by Mr. Bonisteel. For text, see above, page 853.]

Now, it is my contention that the language that I read and which I said I wanted you to pay particular attention to is sufficiently broad enough to give this legislature leeway to do the thing that ought to be done, and certainly I don't want to stand in the way of broad discretionary powers, which I believe it has within a workable framework here, to permit it to do the thing that ought to be done by statute, and I think it has this power in the language which I have read to you.

In addition to that, I don't think it is a function of this convention to anticipate what interpretation the supreme court or the courts of this state are going to make upon such legislation as might be submitted for the people of this state by the legislature, and I am going to support the report of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Ford, desire recognition at this time, now that he has returned to the chamber? (laughter)

MR. FORD: I was out there dictating a series of minority reports. (laughter) I just wanted to rise to support the Austin amendment as now amended at the suggestion of Mr. Everett, and I am looking over here at Don Lawrence. This is one of the few times we have an opportunity to agree in the last 3 months, but I think that Don brought up a point that is very important to many of us, and although Mr. Van Dusen indicated that he didn't think that we should consider the local government aspect of this, I believe that many people in the state have considered it.

I represent a suburban area, as does Mr. McCauley and as do both of the Browns and some of the others here who are vitally concerned with what the future might be for us if the legislature was given the authority—and I don't believe that anything in history indicates that this would be flagrantly abused—to create some form of property classification. Now, Glenn Allen has indicated that the way this might apply would be for the residents of one part of a newly annexed territory to be assessed and have a millage of 5 mills and the rest of the city have 10 mills. This isn't what we would contemplate at all. What we would envision is the possibility of classifying, for example, acreage as farm property, and then reclassifying it at the time that it is subdivided and becomes the pawn in the game of real estate speculation that Mr. Van Dusen mentioned and at the time when the city services are extended to it, to the end that we can get out of the bind that some of the large urban townships are in now. We have areas that should and would become cities if it were not for the fact that a substantial part of their total area is occupied by people who are not receiving city services, don't anticipate them in the near future, and resist very violently being incorporated into and as a part of an ultimate city development at a time when they are still farming the land.

I might point out that I don't feel at all uncomfortable about being on the side of the farm bureau in this, but they have given it some consideration, and I would just like to read a short statement here that is contained in the 1962 Policies of the Farm Bureau:

> One of the most serious threats confronting farm owners in some sections of the state is that of becoming rather helplessly involved in annexation procedures which would place their property within the farflung municipal limits of some overly ambitious city or village.

I would like to say parenthetically I think they might well have added, "becoming incorporated into a new city."

> Many farmers are finding their property tax burdens almost confiscatory as a result of being taken into an enlarged school district with an expanding budget. A high tax rate, multiplied by a large assessment of a sizable and well equipped farm, frequently results in a school tax burden which siphons off most of the receipts of the farming enterprise. The situation becomes doubly serious when such a farm is absorbed into a city or village that has to pay added taxes for various municipal services which it may not receive and doesn't desire or doesn't need. Obviously, many cities and villages are continuing to grow and from time to time should absorb property being used for industrial, business and residential purposes. However, the steadfast position of the farm bureaus in matters of this sort is that of opposition to the inclusion of land which is being used solely for agricultural purposes in such annexation projects.

Now, this last sentence is the key to it. One of the things that is standing in the way of the orderly development of the suburban areas of the state of Michigan is the resistance that people in agriculture—understandably, if you look at it from this point of view—put up when we talk in terms of incorporating a township into a home rule city or annexing a sizable area, a sensibly sized area, into the city. The ultimate result of this is very frequently, and all too frequently in Wayne county, we have taken a township and in order to acquire this very desirable home rule status, cut it off from the rest of the township, and we end up with a lot of small cities, small in size and small in ultimate population and small in ultimate future, because there is nothing left in the way of planning. There is nothing left to plan for the future in the way of vacant land.

It is my opinion that if we were in a position down in Wayne county to establish a system of land classification so that the assessed valuation formula, not the millage formula but the assessed valuation formula, could be distinct and different as to the use to which the property is put, that you would very rapidly see the township pass out of existence as a unit of local government down there. And I am not saying that this is altogether a desirable end in and of itself, but for the many problems we have in suburban Wayne county and many other suburbs, I think, around the state, this would be another step in the direction of solving the problem. It would be another way to permit the legislature to help us if it were so inclined.

At the present time there is no sense going to it with such a plan regardless of how well it may be conceived and, as has been said before, we are not asking in this amendment to put a self executing clause in here that says that property will be classified. All we are doing is asking that you permit the legislature at some time in the future when someone does devise a fair and equitable system, however limited it may be, to be in a position to do it and do it at a time when it is very badly needed, not after the next constitutional convention, we hope, 50 years from now.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the Austin minority amendment as amended. Those in favor of the amendment as amended will respond by voting aye. Those opposed, nay.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Division is called for. Is the demand for division supported? It is. The secretary will read the amendment as amended.

SECRETARY CHASE: The minority amendment as now proposed by Mr. Austin and others is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the first sentence of section a and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The legislature may by law authorize or impose ad valorem taxes which shall be uniform within the classes of property to which they are applied.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Those in favor of the minority amendment as read will respond by voting aye. Those opposed by nay.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Stopczynski.

MR. STOPCYNSKI: I would like to get the Chair's vote.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair does not vote in committee of the whole, but he will advise the gentleman that if he was sitting on the floor, he would vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the minority amendment proposed by Mr. Austin and others, the yeas are 50; the nays are 78.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The amendment, as amended, is not adopted.

Does Mr. Austin desire to offer his next amendment to this paragraph at this time? He is recognized for this purpose.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. As I stated earlier, there are 3 minority amendments to the committee proposal. The second deals with the question of the 50 per cent of cash value standard. I feel again that in order to save time and to get the issue squarely before you, it is probably best that I read the report which is very succinctly stated and does present the arguments as clearly as we can do it, and I would like to refer you to page 522 of the journal, and I am wondering if I can ask the secretary to read the amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, it will be read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to minority report B of Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker and Young,

Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 13, after "assessed" by striking out the comma and "which shall not, after January 1, 1966, exceed 50 per cent,".

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Secretary. The effect of this amendment is to delete reference to the 50 per cent limitation on assessments.

[The supporting reasons for minority report B to Committee Proposal 51 were read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 855.]

It is well to point out that wherein there has been in some of our discussion some advocacy for retaining limitations on the legislature, these limitations were expressed by the people in referendums. I submit that this 50 per cent of cash value level does not have the dignity of that type of mandate, and I would move that the minority amendment, which seeks to amend the majority report, be adopted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, it is always unfortunate when you have either in the constitution or in the statutes a law that nobody follows, and I submit to you that at the present time it is absolutely impracticable for our present constitutional limitation to be reached. Were we to go from the 50 per cent at which the state board of equalization is now trying to hold us to the 100 per cent, doubling the tax on property, any advantage in owning property would be gone and we would have on our hands a tax strike of proportions immediately, to say nothing about a loss of property from those who couldn't pay.

As Mr. Austin has pointed out, the aim of the state tax commission and the state board of equalization in recent years has been definitely to fix the state equalized value at 50 per cent, not recognizing the 100 per cent that the constitution calls for.

In a few communities — and it is only a few communities — there has been a problem more difficult, more unfortunate than this, in that they have kept their assessments above the 50 per cent limit as to tangible personal property and below 50 per cent on real estate. Anyone who has felt himself aggrieved in his assessment and who has chosen to try it in court rather than an appeal to the state tax commission, complains that his property is 70 per cent or 80 per cent or 90 per cent, is met immediately by the fact that the law is being complied with. "You are not above 100 per cent. You have got no standing here."

We are trying to put this at a place where it can be followed and where the state tax commission and the board of equalization have been trying to follow it for some time. The fear that putting it at 50 per cent will mean you will go down to 25 per cent, I think, is fully answered by the need for the money which will keep it at 50 per cent. Recognizing that the communities that have been offending by assessing at 70 per cent or even more on tangible personal property can't immediately adjust themselves, this allows 5 years for that adjustment. And, as has been stated earlier in the day, in Wayne county they have been on that program in advance. They have been on a program to reduce, and 3 more years is supposed to get it down to the 50 per cent where it belongs.

I talked to one person who is an assessor of a rather sizable city of this state. Feeling that this was coming, his city didn't wait, but immediately took steps to get that personal property assessment down to where it was, and told us about 2 new industries already coming into the city, and he attributed it in large part to the fact that they had changed their tax program.

We think that what we are suggesting here is sound, that it is practical and that it will be entirely acceptable to the people in many parts of the state. The people have been insisting on this for some years without getting it. We think it is time they had it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question occurs on the second Austin amendment, being minority report B. Those in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted.

There being no additional amendments to the first paragraph, Mr. Austin is recognized for the purpose of offering his third minority report amendment, which is to the second paragraph of the committee proposal.

MR. AUSTIN: The third amendment offered by the minority is found on page 520 of the journal.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Austin, if there is no objection, the secretary will read your amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to minority report A of Messrs. Austin, Binkowski, Pellow, Stopczynski, Walker, Young and Ostrow,

Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 21 and 22; and by striking out all of page 2.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, before I proceed, I should mention that there is an amendment to the committee proposal which the committee had asked me to make on the floor of this committee, and I think it is probably appropriate that I make that amendment so that we will be talking about the proposal as the committee intends us to consider it, and I will tell you what that amendment is.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, Mr. Austin, your amendment will be temporarily withdrawn, and you are recognized for the purpose of offering the committee amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: On line 21, after the word "class" insert "or classes".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will read the proposed amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin, on behalf of the committee on finance and taxation, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 21, after "class" by inserting "or classes"; so that the language will then read, "Every other tax shall be uniform upon the class or classes on which it operates."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman desire to speak on behalf of the committee amendment?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, Mr. Chairman. It was discovered by the committee that by omitting the words "classes" we may be making 1 or 2 of our present statutes unconstitutional. I refer particularly to the inheritance tax and the chain store tax, both of which have a graduated rate structure, and there have been rulings to the effect that because we now refer to class or classes, these statutes are constitutional under the present language. And what the committee has done with the new language is simply to revise it or, let us say, to improve on the language without changing the substance. But it was necessary to include these 2 words to retain the substance of the present language in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the committee amendment. Those in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

The committee amendment is adopted.

The gentleman is now recognized in support of his minority amendment.

[For text of amendment, see above.]

MR. AUSTIN: I am now reading from page 520. I want to make sure I am getting this right:

[The supporting reasons for minority report A to Committee Proposal 51, with the exception of the table, were read by Mr. Austin. For text, see above, page 854.]

If the same opportunity is not available to the state of Michigan to graduate its rate structure, it is quite possible that Michigan taxpayers will find themselves contributing disproportionately to federal projects in other states.

I would like to review this chart with you. This is not a simple subject, and I hope that I will have your close attention as I attempt to analyze this chart. What we have provided here is a chart which shows the comparative income tax on the last $10,000 of a taxable income of $200,000. Now, $200,000 incomes are not unusual in the state of Michigan. We use the figure, though, so that no delegate would feel that we were picking on him. We also use the figure because at the higher income levels, the inference that we are making is very clear.

If we assume 2 different tax rates and that the state tax is deductible in arriving at the federal liability, the chart which follows will show what the relative impact will be of the state income tax and the federal tax on the last $10,000 of this $200,000 income. We are talking about the income above $190,000 for a $200,000 income taxpayer. The first column assumes 1 per cent flat rate and the second column assumes a graduated rate structure up to 10 per cent, a maximum of 10 per cent.

First, let's look at the federal income tax liability on this $10,000. The federal income tax on the last $10,000 of income would be $8,900. The rate of the bracket is 89 per cent. In other words, a taxpayer earning $200,000 pays $8,900 to the federal government from the last $10,000 of his income. If we were to levy a flat 1 per cent income tax at the state level, he would pay to the state $100. If we graduated the rate structure up to 10 per cent, he would pay the state $1,000. The amount borne by the federal government of the $100 would be $89, and the amount borne by the taxpayer would be $11.

If we graduated up to 10 per cent, the amount borne by the federal government would be $890, and the amount the taxpayer would actually pay out of his pocket would be $110.

Now, let's see how that $1,000 would be divided up. The amount going to the federal government under a 1 per cent rate would be $8,811. The state would get $100 and the taxpayer would have left $1,089. If we graduated the rate up to 10 per cent, the federal government would get $8,010. The amount going to the state would be $1,000. And the amount that the taxpayer would have left would be $990.

It was important to make this analysis because we here in our state government can do nothing about the steeply graduated federal rate structure. It is something we live with. And wherein we may have some opposition at the present moment to enacting a graduated income tax, it is quite conceivable that our legislature in the near future, in using the income tax for substantial tax reform, may find it advisable to graduate the rate structure in order to see that Michigan gets its fair share from income taxation. It is the view of the minority that the hands of the legislature should not be tied in this regard. I move that the minority amendment be adopted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, a majority of the committee obviously believes that this limitation, the prohibition against a graduated income tax, is one of the kinds of limitation which the people should impose in a constitution. Some of the reasons for the belief of the majority of the committee are expressed more eloquently than I can express them by an eminent historian, Professor C. Northcote Parkinson. Some of you may be familiar with Professor Parkinson. He is the author of "Parkinson's law." He is known perhaps most recently as a writer of humorous literature, but he is and has been for many years a noted historian. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of London. He has lectured on history all over the world, including some of our major American universities. One of his laws with which you may be familiar and of which we have seen recent demonstration is that the time devoted to debate in any parliamentary body varies inversely with the importance of the subject under discussion. (laughter) And I would suggest that perhaps our debate, operating on the basis of that law, might be quite brief on this topic because this is an important one.

Here are a few of the things that Professor Parkinson calls to our attention in his volume on Parkinson's Second Law — and Parkinson's Second Law, incidentally, is that expenditure rises to meet income, something with which we are all personally familiar, and familiar in terms of its applications in government — but Professor Parkinson discusses the history of the graduated income tax at some length in this volume, and he goes back to one of the early experiments of our federal government with the graduated income tax in 1862, and comments as follows — and this is brief:

> The importance of the act of 1862 lies in its differentiated incidence. In this act we see the beginning of disproportional or progressive taxation. Until that date, the congressman who voted for a tax did so in the knowledge that it would fall as heavily on himself as upon others, a safeguard some might think important, but that principle went in 1862.
> The significance of this was emphasized at about this time by an economist, Mr. J. R. McColloch. He said tax graduation was an evil not to be paltered with, and the savages described by Montesquieu who, to get at the fruit, cut down the tree, are about as good financiers as the advocates of this sort of taxes. Wherever they are introduced, security is necessarily at an end.

Even if taxes on income or otherwise were most unexceptional, the adoption of the principle of graduation would make them among the very worst that could be devised. The moment you abandon, in the framing of such taxes, the cardinal principle of exacting from all individuals the same proportion of their income or their property, you are at sea without rudder or compass and there is no amount of injustice and folly you may not commit.

Just a few additional brief comments. Professor Parkinson says:

Taxes can be grouped, as we have seen, into 2 broad categories: those we impose on ourselves and those we inflict upon other people. Taxes in the first category, examples of which in history are extremely rare, are self limiting. They may rise in time of emergency, but once the crisis is passed, they should tend to fall. The United States in their earlier days offered an example of taxation falling within this category.

On the other hand, most taxes clearly come within the category of burdens imposed by some people upon others. The taxes decreed by ancient monarchies were all of this type, and so are the graduated taxes of today at all levels above the average, being voted indirectly at least by those to whom the heaviest rates will not apply.

One final comment:

The taxes inflicted by some people upon others will inevitably rise as expenditure rises, and expenditure will rise in accordance with Parkinson's second law. Their only limit is the point where the victim refuses to pay, and to that point they will rise by the principle which governs their growth.

That is nearly all I will have to say on the subject of a graduated income tax on behalf of the committee.

Just one final comment. I can think of nothing which we could do in this convention more beneficial to the general impression of Michigan as a state in which to do business than to prohibit the imposition of a graduated income tax.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I am somewhat confused. I was going to get up following Mr. Austin's remarks and state that I felt for the first time I was going to get up and speak for something that was going to pass, and I was going to figure that I had Mr. Van Dusen along with me on this proposition because, as I review the situation in the committee of taxation so far, I remember back when we were talking about keeping a 1946 base for the sales tax, at that time Mr. Van Dusen got up and said, "We don't go for this because, you know, if we got this, there may be a question whether we could take the sales tax off food and drugs." So I thought, gee, that was a very good idea. So I submitted that proposal, fully expecting to have some support on it from the majority party and from Mr. Van Dusen.

And much to my amazement, he came up and talked in terms of flexibility and said that we can't restrict or tie the hands of the legislature; that it has got to be free so it can decide on taxes. So even that made a pretty good argument, I thought, and it may be a good thing to have some flexibility, although I thought that this perhaps was some place that we could give a break, finally, to those in the lower income groups.

And then when we came to this, I thought, by gosh, now we can really go on the flexibility kick and knock this thing out, this outrageous limitation on the hands of the legislature. And yet, what do we find? The great proponents of flexibility coming in here and trying to nail down their philosophy in this constitutional convention. I can only say this: not only are they nailing their philosophy in; they are nailing the coffin on this constitution.

I believe that their clients and my constituents would disagree on this particular thing, but I would remind them of this, when it comes to voting on this constitution, there are more of the kind of constituents I represent than the clients that they are representing at this convention.

I urge you, I implore you, for those that we felt we couldn't take advantage of or give a little break to because we didn't want to tie the hands of the legislature, I now stand where Mr. Van Dusen stood yesterday, pleading and crying for flexibility. I hope I am not a voice in the wilderness and I hope we will vote for the minority amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I imagine perhaps the best defense that can be made for this restriction is Parkinson's second law, but if we must resort to a humorist to defend the proposal, I am going to resort to Hutchinson's first law, which is that everything we put in the constitution is a restriction on the legislature, and it appears that everything in this whole tax program that has come before us is a restriction.

I am very much concerned about the future of Michigan. We are writing a constitution, we hope, for the next 50 years. We have been greatly impressed with the tremendous growing debt. We have been appalled at the problem of the pension funds. We heard a great deal about the problems of higher education. And so I am wondering what we are doing to solve those problems through the financial point of view. All that we have done so far is to put a ceiling on property tax assessment, is to restrict the kinds of taxes that can be put on property by the uniformity clause; and we have kept in the restrictions on the sales tax, given more than half of it away to local governments, and now we say the state cannot levy a graduated income tax.

I am not particularly in favor of a graduated income tax at this time, but I think that we are imposing a very dangerous restriction on the next 2 generations with the growing populations that we certainly must expect. So before I could vote against the amendment and in favor of forbidding an income tax, I would like to hear what positive proposals there are in the tax committee for solving our state's financial problems.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: I would yield the floor to Mr. Brake or to Mr. Van Dusen if they wish to answer Mrs. Judd's remarks because I think they are very pertinent and very germane.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit yields to the gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I am not prepared to replow the ground which we have plowed at some length this week. However, as one who favored the flexibility involved in the elimination of earmarking, as one who favored a general loosening of the uniformity clause embodied in the committee proposal which we have just adopted, as one who strongly supported the committee proposal with respect to the sales tax when the earmarking failed, which does greatly increase the legislature's flexibility in dealing with that problem, I feel that, in general, the recommendations of the committee on finance and taxation, while not exactly what I would have liked, do give to the legislature considerably greater freedom and flexibility in dealing with the state's financial problems now and in the future.

I think it is important that we bear in mind a distinction between limitations on the legislature's power to tax and limitations on the legislature's power to appropriate. In the case of limitations on the power to tax, we are imposing upon those who are elected to represent us the guidelines which we as citizens believe are necessary to protect us as a people, both majority and minority, from excessive, confiscatory, discriminatory or unreasonable taxation.

Each of the limitations which have been prescribed up until now are limitations which go back as far as 100 years in our history. The prohibition against the graduated income tax with which we are now dealing is one which has not been in our constitution up until now largely because the evil of the graduated income tax has not been as apparent until the last 20 years. The progressivity, the steep graduation of our federal system has taught us that this is a problem, and if there is to be some balance in our total tax structure—all of us, after all, are federal taxpayers as well as state taxpayers—this is a limitation which we as citizens of this state may reasonably impose upon our legislature.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Binkowski, has the floor.

MR. BINKOWSKI: In other words, Mrs. Judd, you don't have an answer to your question. I don't think there is any.

However, continuing on, we talked a great deal about flexibility, and we have been provided with a great number of studies by various groups in the hopes and expectations that we would come out with the best possible document. I think that this committee proposal, beyond any question, limits the legislature to a tax program for the next 50 or 75 years which will definitely be regressive in nature.

Someone has labeled this type of language as tax legislation. Well, this sentence, in my mind, is not simply a question of tax legislation; I say it is class legislation. This language of the prohibition of a graduated income tax will only help those people in the upper middle income groups. Furthermore, I think that, beyond any question, the prohibition of a graduated income tax—if you are going to generalize, I have to use a generalization—is nothing more than a scheme to insure that the rich get richer and the poor, poorer.

Now, Mr. Van Dusen brought out the question of the progressivity of the federal tax and it was this argument which I hoped that we would not have to get involved with, because the basic issue as I see it is a question of whether you want to tie the hands of the legislature or not. The merits of a progressive tax are not before us.

Now, last Friday—that is, February 2, 1962— in the Detroit Free Press there appeared an article by Sylvia Porter. I had it reproduced for each and every one of the delegates so that they could see and read and get the facts for themselves. These are not my opinions, but you have an opinion, based upon a very comprehensive study, that the rich people in this country have not lost anything through a federal progressive tax system. And there it is. And if you want to get involved with it, you can argue with the author, not me.

However, this provision not only extends on a state level but, importantly, to us in the Detroit area. Based upon a very exhaustive, very comprehensive, long study of our tax problems, our tax study committee concluded that first we should seek relief on a state level. It appears very doubtful that we will get relief on the state level. Their secondary conclusion was to have then a piggyback income tax. With this provision in our state constitution, the city of Detroit could not enact the type of program that our people thought was best. Now, you talk about local self government, and I say this provision is interfering with our local self government in Detroit.

Again, I am not advocating a graduated income tax. I don't know what the facts are. We haven't had any experience here with the flat rate income tax. But we can look to the over 30 states which do have a graduated income tax structure, and I think that one of the best arguments, if we are going to get involved in the merits, is that if you had a state graduated income tax, you deduct this from your federal income tax, and therefore this is a system and a method for retaining more of the money here in Michigan than sending it to Washington.

Now, the Michigan tax study staff papers are very comprehensive and some of you, I know, have read them, and I am not going to read everything, but I think that at page 505 they talk about the personal income tax, they talk about the mutual deductibility in terms of federal income tax, and I think you should be aware of these facts. I will quote:

> The Minnesota income tax as applied to a single taxpayer may be used as an illustration.

Incidentally, this is one of states that taxed the highest. That is, their graduated income tax goes up to, I think, about 11 per cent.

> In this state, although the statutory rate in the first bracket of taxable income is 1.1 per cent, mutual deductibility lowers the rate, in terms of net cost to the taxpayer, to .71 per cent. At the level of $20,000 of taxable income, the marginal statutory rate is 11 per cent, but mutual deductibility reduces the marginal effective rate to 2.2 per cent.

In other words, a person with a taxable income of $20,000 in terms of a state income tax only pays 2.2 per cent. Quoting further:

> As income rises, the additional tax rate which is attributable to the state tax rate continues to fall and is only 1/10 of 1 per cent at $200,000.

Now, I don't know if you need any more arguments with respect to this.

And again I come back to the basic argument: we are supposed to be writing a document which will allow flexibility in the future. By inserting this sentence, you not only tie the hands of local government but you tie the hands of the legislature. I think that this should be considered very seriously.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I sincerely feel that the delegates here, following the analysis made by Mr. Austin and his minority group, couldn't have helped but be impressed by the effort, work and toil that has gone into the study. This was not a capricious approach to a very serious and fundamental problem; it was an attempt made by sincere people to resolve a problem confronted by us so that we could rise up to our responsibilities. And what was most important in my mind was the effort made by the committee to salvage for the people of this state with their formula a large part of the moneys that was already being lost. I feel that this effort to recoup this money was most admirable.

And I say, without malice, that it would be sheer folly for me to compare this report with the best seller that we are having on the market and one that was used in rebuttal to this very carefully planned report, and I can't see any justification when you counter the report made by Mr. Austin and his committee with the fact that it is a law that the expenditures rise to meet income. I haven't had the opportunity as yet to find time to read this best seller because I felt that my time must be devoted more to the mundane problems that we have facing us at the convention.

Certainly I feel that we have a responsibility here to our citizens, and I say that if you review the report of Mr. Austin, you will find that here is an opportunity to recoup, to bring back to the people at little or relatively low cost some of the money that is going out. We have a responsibility here, and I am only thankful that we have this report, and I have reasons to believe that this report was instituted much prior to this convention. I feel that the work and efforts that have gone into this report represents the cross thinking of many groups and many citizens in many communities in this state. And the report that we have today was a sort of a general feeling that all of the people or many of the people in the state of Michigan felt that this was what they should be having to resolve their problem, and I sincerely hope that you weigh the 2 volumes, Mr. Parkinson's and Mr. Austin's, and you evaluate which you feel would best resolve the problems that we have before us.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Bay City, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, and fellow delegates, I share some of the concern of Delegate Snyder as to that which is lost and I feel the need to salvage some of the money going to Washington. Delegate Binkowski also expressed this as a method of retaining part of the money which would be going to the federal government. And I note also that Delegate Austin in setting forth this schedule at page 522 refers to "amount borne by the federal government." It would seem as though, in reading these statistics, that a big part of this tax will be paid by the federal government. I think this is a form of self delusion. I would assume that if we graduated beyond 10 per cent, to perhaps 80 or 90 per cent, we could retain even more of that money; and the more money we keep back from Washington

I would assume would result in a lowering of the federal budget, if we want to carry the self delusion even further.

Now, I do believe that this report is the result of careful study, but I would be more impressed to have the figures compared if we did not make an assumption of graduation to 10 per cent, because that is not in issue—it is wide open as to what the graduation could be—but assume a graduation equal to the federal government and then see where we are.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Higgs has touched somewhat upon the matter with which I wish to deal. I am impressed with Mr. Austin's very fine report, and particularly, in paragraph 5, his statement that this does not, in effect, need to be a soak the rich or pamper the poor provision. I find, however, that the only example given is on an assumed taxable income of $200,000. My question to Mr. Austin is whether you have made similar comparisons—which I have tried to do here very rapidly—on incomes of, say, $10,000, $20,000 or $30,000 with which I think we would find many more of our constituents concerned.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman yield to Mr. Austin for a reply?

MR. PRETTIE: I do.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Prettie, there are such statistics available, and I did not want to presume upon the time of the committee to quote a lot of statistics. I gave these 2 examples because I thought they expressed the principle that is involved. However, I have plenty of statistics, and I will be prepared in the morning to quote more of them.

MR. PRETTIE: I am wondering, Mr. Austin, if you could accommodate the delegates by making a table similar to the one appearing on pages 521 and 522 of our journal with reference to taxable incomes of, let us say, $10,000, $20,000 or $30,000, which would assume a maximum tax rate in the $20,000 figure of about 30 per cent, and I come up with the fact that the taxpayer is going to have approximately $810 less of keepable income. The federal government's reduction in tax by reason of the mutual deductibility would in that instance be approximately $70.

As an accountant, I would greatly appreciate your verifying my figures and giving us examples on, say, $10,000, $20,000 or $30,000, which I think is more realistic than the hard case that makes bad law that you have cited to us.

MR. AUSTIN: I am not sure that I know exactly what assumptions Mr. Prettie would like us to make in preparing the specific charts that he is interested in. Are you interested in the total liability or just the marginal income?

MR. PRETTIE: Parallel tables to those on pages 521 and 522 with only this change in assumption: a taxable income of $10,000, $20,000 and $30,000 instead of $200,000.

MR. AUSTIN: Very well.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The motion is on the question of whether the committee shall rise. All those in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails and the committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain items of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 51, has adopted 2 committee amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Following the morning session of Thursday, tomorrow, the subcommittee on eminent domain will meet in room G to hear representatives of the highway department. Mr. Paul Mahinske, chairman.

A meeting of the style and drafting committee announced again, 8:00 o'clock tonight in room K.

The committee on local government meeting, which was scheduled immediately after the session today, has been postponed until 1:00 o'clock tomorrow.

We have the following requests for leaves of absence: pursuant to doctor's orders, Mr. Thomson requests leave of absence from Thursday's and Friday's session; Mr. Faxon and Mrs. Conklin request leave from the sessions of Thursday and Friday. They have been invited to judge the ice sculpture contest at the Michigan College of Mining and Technology at the Houghton winter carnival; Mr. Goebel wishes to be excused from the session of tomorrow to attend to University of Michigan business in Ann Arbor; and Judge Leibrand asks to be excused from the convention sessions of Thursday and Friday because of a trial case which has been on call for 4 months and found impossible to adjourn the case to April 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused.

Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, the finance and taxation committee will meet tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, there will be a meeting of the president's select committee to cooperate with the legislature on postconstitutional convention business immediately following the session in the committee on administration room.

PRESIDENT NISBET: In reply to an inquiry, minority reports to committee reports appearing in last Thursday's journal now in the hands of research and drafting will be permitted to be filed as soon as prepared. Minority reports to committee reports appearing in last Monday's journal which are in the hands of research and drafting by the end of the session Thursday will be filed as soon as prepared.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 5:30 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Thursday, February 8, 1962.]

SEVENTY-FIFTH DAY

Thursday, February 8, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

This morning for our invocation we are very happy to have the pastor of Delegate Durst's church, Reverend Doctor Oliver Collins of the First Methodist Church of Adrian. Will you please rise.

REVEREND COLLINS: Shall we pray. Our Father, we thank Thee for the gifts of heart and mind and spirit which have fashioned this state of Michigan which is our home; for the wisdom of the fathers who founded this society conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal; for the strong and good men and women who established this state upon the enduring foundations of religion. We bless Thee for the skill of scientist, inventor, engineer, and all others who have helped to unlock the resources of this state to the end that all might benefit from nature's bounty; for the tenacity of educators who have trained and trusted the common man in order that a government of the people, by the people, for the people might be securely established and extended.

May we never forget the heritage that has come down to us, bought by the blood, toil and tears of others than our own. May we strive valiantly to keep the democracy which has been bequeathed to us by those who dreamed dreams of liberty and freedom and gave the last full measure of devotion to pass the torch on to our hands. For the great character which has been woven into the fabric of this state, blessed be Thy Name. For the great leaders in crucial times who have been lifted up to direct our paths, we thank Thee.

Help us today with clear vision to see the heroes and heroines who have had reverence for life and for Thy Name as a name above every other name. Steady our hands as we grasp the lamp of righteousness today. Make dependable and wise our minds in this constitutional convention to do for the good of the citizens of today and tomorrow that which ought to be done. Free us from partisan politics so we may cross party lines to do that which is best for the people of this state, nation and world. May every delegate sit in the place of every other delegate and try to see the reform measures through the eyes of each other.

O Spirit of the living God, we surrender ourselves and our standards to Thee for cleansing and healing, for Thou art the strengthener and cleanser of all races. We are strong only as we are pure. Today may Thy morality and spirituality become the alternate beats of our own heart and work in our very depths so that we may be safe, serene and secure. May nothing make us inadequate or afraid, for we are possessed where it counts at the center of our being by Thyself.

In all our deliberations today and all other days take our littleness and ally it with Thy greatness, our insignificance and ally it with Thy significance, our love and ally it with Thy love; so whatever changes we shall make in the constitution may be for the greatest good of the greatest number. In His Name we pray together as Thy children. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary; those present, please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is locked and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to the session today, Mr. Mahinske asked to be excused because he was not feeling well.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection he will be excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Dr. Anspach, Mr. Barthwell, Mrs. Conklin, Mr. Faxon, Mr. Goebel, Mr. Habermehl, Mr. Leibrand, Mr. Mahinske, Mr. Romney and Mr. Thomson.

Absent without leave: Mr. Nord.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Nord will be excused.

[During the proceedings, Messrs. Mahinske and Nord entered the chamber and took their seats.]

This camera on the podium will be taking a motion picture this morning for the documentary film of the convention. It will be here for the morning session only and will be the only direct, head on view of the convention that will be included in this film. This camera crew is from Wayne State University, and Wayne is cooperating with the University of Michigan and Michigan State in producing the documentary film. I hope we can have your indulgence for this morning's session in order to get this film for documentary purposes.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: No committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders of the day. The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of further consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Bentley.

[Whereupon, Mr. Bentley assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The committee will be in order. When the committee rose on yesterday, the pending business was Committee Proposal 51 to which 2 amendments have been adopted. The business immediately before the committee was the amendment, pursuant to minority report A, by the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin, and others to delete the second paragraph of that proposal.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 51 see above, page 853.

The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, before we start on the continuing debate on the amendments on 51, may I call your attention to the fact that you have on your desk a redraft of 56, which will be offered as a substitute for the 56 that you have in your books. The changes are mostly just in language for clarity, but if you wish to look them over before we get to that item, which will be, I hope, not long, you will have them.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: At the time the committee rose on yesterday, the Chair had the following names of people who had requested recognition. Without objection, they will be recognized in this order: the gentleman from Marshall, Mr. Hatch; the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Martin; the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs; the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Tubbs; the gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. King; the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Seyferth; the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Marshall. Is the gentleman from Detroit seeking recognition at this time?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of offering a substitute amendment for the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman is recognized for that purpose.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. Will the secretary read the substitute amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin withdraws the previous amendment proposed by the minority report and in lieu thereof offers the following:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "operates.", by striking out the balance of the line and line 1 on page 2. This leaves in the language, "Every other tax shall be uniform upon the class or classes on which it operates."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, the pending minority report amendment will be withdrawn and the gentleman is recognized in support of his new amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the change is to retain the first sentence which will permit classification or will permit uniformity within classes. What we are objecting to principally is a constitutional prohibition to the graduated income tax, and I think by retaining the first sentence we do not alienate anyone who feels that we ought to have a uniformity statement in the constitution but who might otherwise feel that we should not have a prohibition to a graduated income tax; and I move that the amendment be adopted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, the Chair will now proceed to recognize those members who requested recognition yesterday in the order just read. The discussion will be on the new Austin amendment. The gentleman from Marshall, Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I sought recognition yesterday for the purpose of suggesting the amendment to Mr. Austin which he has introduced as a substitute.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Martin, is recognized.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the debate yesterday proceeded on the theory that it is always going to be possible to pass some of this income tax which might be approved here in the state of Michigan on to the federal government. It seems to me that we are operating under a real delusion here because, as the various states increase their state income taxes — and this seems absolutely inevitable — the federal government is going to be increasingly pressed because this reduces its income tax take and sooner or later we probably will find that the deduction for state taxes or for state income tax is no longer available to favor those who have to pay a state income tax. For that reason, I think we delude ourselves if we think that this state income tax is in any way going to be in the long run paid or collected at the expense of the federal government. The federal government just does not act that way in the long run.

I only want to comment briefly on this. The only way in which we can consider the tax burden of the average citizen is to consider his total tax burden. You cannot know what his tax burden is by just considering what state taxes he pays — whether state income tax or otherwise — or what federal income tax he pays; you have to consider the total picture, and the federal income tax which is based upon ability to pay is already used to the maximum possible extent here in this country. Its graduated rates, of course, rise to something like 90 per cent in the top bracket, but they rise very fast in the lower brackets and even in the lower brackets they start at 20 per cent. Now, we have to recognize that this type of graduation gives us in this country one of the most steeply graduated progressive taxes in the world today, and we have to consider that in considering this total tax burden. I think also we have to recognize that the expenses of state government are rising rapidly and will continue to rise in the future, and there is no reason to believe that ultimately state taxes may not be as heavy as the federal tax. If that is so and if the deduction for state taxes in the federal tax program is removed, we will have at far lower rates than we do today a completely confiscatory tax program, and this is the reason I introduced a proposal — and the committee has picked up the same idea — with respect to limitation on a prohibition on a graduated income tax here in Michigan.

I think we have to realize that this is a long range proposition — we are talking about the next 50 years. Taxes have a tendency to rise rapidly — and unfortunately that is true — and, if we have 2 graduated income taxes in the end here for people of this state to pay, and, this is the important thing, on neither of which are the rates fixed with any relation to the other tax, you can expect a level of taxation such as you have never dreamed would be possible here in this state. For that reason it seems to me not only desirable but completely equitable that we place such a prohibition in our state constitution, leaving the use of these highly progressive rates to the federal income tax system.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wish to rise in favor of the Austin amendment and in opposition to the majority report of the committee. I believe that Delegate Austin did an outstanding job in going into the technical details of tax legislation. For that reason and the fact that I do not qualify as a technical expert, I shall not speak in that area but, rather, try to limit myself to the general subject matter.

With all due deference to the other speakers, I think some of us get a little tired of the threadworn discussion about the 90 per cent federal income tax bracket. I believe the Harvard University business magazine recently had an article showing that very often what people would normally think would be in the 90 per cent income tax bracket got over into the long range, long term tax benefit bracket.

What we really have here — and I hope that the delegates will realize what so far we are doing on the tax proposals when we refuse to take off in the constitution the tax on food and drugs in the sales tax on the theory that that was a legislative matter — and from a certain logic I think it can be argued that was a legislative matter — but then we come around and say that we should put a limitation on the legislature in relation to a graduated income tax, which is equally a legislative matter. I am very concerned that this will end up giving the impression of a double standard and that the convention is acting more on its fears.

I believe that Delegate Judd from Grand Rapids very appropriately raised the question yesterday about the positive aspects of this convention. I feel very strongly that she did hit the nail on the head and that we must come out with some positive aspects rather than just the negative ones.

I think in the general field of taxation, we must realize that this is our government. I hope we get some apportionment and get more representation in taxation, but the real solutions to these problems are by what we as voters do, and I just caution those who wish to put the state's financial system in an undue strait jacket and remind such delegates and the public that to the extent we put the state in a financial strait jacket and people have needs that are unmet, we will be forcing people to turn to the federal government to get these problems solved. The overwhelming majority of the American people, I believe, are basically pragmatic, are not too concerned whether something be done by the local, the state, or the federal government so long as it gets done, and if we put provisions in this constitution that will from a financial viewpoint preclude people from solving their problems through local and state government, then we will be forcing people to turn to the federal government for those solutions.

I may not be quite as concerned as others are; I don't happen to fear the federal government, but I do think that there are real responsibilities that can best be met by local and state government, and I hope that we will not preclude the people through our local and state governments from meeting those financial responsibilities. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to rise to second what Mr. Downs has just said. I, too, think that Mrs. Judd gave the best speech on this taxation section yesterday that has been given.

I hope Mr. Hutchinson is still in the hall. I want to say that I do not subscribe to the Hutchinson law that was enunciated a long time ago by him and mentioned yesterday. A constitution is a grant of power. When you put limitations in it, you are telling the people to whom you grant the power that you don't trust them. Personally, I will trust the government, and I would like the well ventilated sentences of sections 2 and 4 of the present article X of the present constitution which, in direct language and without any frills and without any exceptions, grants to the legislature the power to raise money by taxes to run this government. I would like to see that in our new constitution.

Then I come to the statement of the chairman of the committee that we are between the horns of a dilemma, the second horn being public acceptance. Mr. Brake, I will say to you frankly, as a long time friend of yours, that I do not care whether the people accept what we do or not. I say, as I said day before yesterday, I would like to write an ideal constitution. If the people turn it down, it will be their fault and not ours.

Perhaps some of you remember the gentleman from New Jersey, who was a member of the Constitutional Convention of New Jersey of 1947, a judge of one of its courts, and had held other high positions, and he wanted on his tombstone the fact that he was a member of the New Jersey Constitutional Convention of 1947, and nothing else. I feel that I would not want that on my tombstone and, as we are going now, I do not think I would want my friends to know that I was here. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentleman of the committee. First of all, let me say that I favor a graduated income tax — at the federal level. I do not favor what was once known as the Connally amendment, the proposed twenty-third amendment, which now, I guess, will have to be a proposed twenty-fourth and eventually a proposed twenty-fifth, I suppose. I believe that the federal graduated income tax is here to stay.

But I am concerned about this argument concerning the little people. I want to be on the side of the little people, and so I would like to answer that particular type of argument. I would ask the self styled Robin Hoods to consider this point carefully: it is all right to talk about welfare — I think it is wonderful myself — but at best it is a poor substitute for full employment. Now, what will this prohibition do for the little people? That is the concern and should be the concern of each and every one of us as delegates. It will do this: it will serve notice upon the states of this union and the citizens of this union that we in Michigan do not favor a graduated income tax at the state level. This is going to encourage, I think, a sound economic climate here in the state of Michigan. It is going to encourage an atmosphere for the kind of economic growth that we want, and this kind of economic growth is what in effect and in fact really helps the little people.

We as a state are in competition with 49 other separate, sovereign, semi sovereign units of government. If the federal government levies a graduated tax — which, of course, it does and will continue to do — at least it is uniform. It is not discriminatory as between one state and another state, but if some states levy this kind of tax and others don't, I think you can see that people who have freedom of choice, which we still do have in this country, may be inclined to go to those states which offer the best tax advantage as they see it, and the effect of upsetting this competitive balance between the states will ultimately force — and I say force — the federal government into a socialistic position of absolute paternalism in order to provide for the needs of these little people that we are so concerned about. And in the end, these people, the working people of our state, are going to be hurt twice: one, they are not going to have jobs; and two, there is not going to be any source of taxation from which to adequately support the necessary welfare programs which are required when people are unemployed.

So I think we ought to give an awful lot of careful consideration to what we are proposing to do here by Delegate Austin's minority report. I think this is a constructive step forward — and I am assuming that we don't want this paternalistic socialism; I think that is a safe assumption; I think every one of us here can agree with that — I think that we can take a constructive step forward if we will just serve notice upon those who would want to do business in this fine state of ours that we are not in favor of a graduated income tax at the state level.

Now, let us talk about this tying the legislature's hands. I think too much emphasis is put on that: that we are going to tie the hands of the legislature for the next 50 years. Under our system of referendum and initiative petition, I do not think that we are doing that at all. We had a 3 per cent limit on the sales tax. Apparently, it proved inadequate. We went back to the people and raised it to 4. All we are really doing is saying that the people are going to have a voice in this particular matter, and I think that this is a sound, constructive step and I don't think an analogy between what we do at the state level in this regard with what we might do at the federal level, where we have only really had 13 amendments in the last 175 years, is at all valid.

A state constitution should be somewhat more restrictive, somewhat more detailed, and somewhat easier to change. All we are really doing is saying to the people, the little people and the big people — because they all vote — that they are going to have an opportunity to pass on this particular question before we go in that particular direction. I think it is sound.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the new amendment presented by the minority interest did not in effect, at least to my recollection, pull out of the journal the supporting information in regards to their position. In this supporting information found on 521 of Journal 73, we find almost paragraph by paragraph defending a graduated income tax. Now, by merely removing the last sentence on line 22, it does not then, in my estimation, change the picture whatsoever.

It seems to me that we are now talking about our personal beliefs and our personal philosophies, and it boils down simply to this: if our personal philosophies allow us to appreciate and believe in the present graduated federal income tax methods of paying for our country's bills, then we must be in sympathy with the minority report. By the same token, if our philosophies do not accept the graduated federal income tax base as a proper way of taxation, then we must follow the majority report of the committee.

It seems to me that we have all made up our minds based on our individual philosophies a long time ago. Any statement made on this subject for the last 2 or 3 hours, including the one I am making now, certainly is not changing any votes. I would suggest that we get on with the voting, ladies and gentlemen, and proceed.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I want to echo the remarks made by Mr. Seyferth. I do believe that practically all of us — I am sure that most of us — have made up our minds as to what form of income tax that we would prefer if there is to be an income tax. I am not going to express on the floor my own viewpoint as to the form of taxation that I would prefer. I am going to infringe upon your time and patience, either, by any long, extensive remarks, because I believe everything that can be said on both sides of this argument has been said and said more than once.

I do object, however, and I have from the very beginning, and I have done this in committee and I do it here again on the floor and I will probably do it over and over again — I agree with Mr. Tubbs that I think we want to write a sound document, one containing basic, fundamental law. We are, I am afraid, and it is obvious to me and I think it is evident in many of the committee reports — and I think Delegate Hutchinson said it the other day and I agree with him 100 per cent when he said that all of you, well that may be a little too broad a statement but, let's say the overwhelming majority — were acting like legislators instead of writing a constitutional document.

I think it is a mistake to insert into a constitution any restriction, to try and insert into this constitution the philosophical viewpoints of an individual or a political party. At the rate we are going with the amount of restrictions we are placing in it, the do's and the don'ts, we might consider just abolishing the legislature and write everything out in the constitution from now to the next 100 years. I think that we should leave it up to the legislature from time to time to debate the question of taxation upon the needs at that time, leave it to the legislature to enact the form of taxation that they feel is necessary at that particular time.

I want to compliment the distinguished delegate from Birmingham for the very efficient way in which he has been able to insert his thinking and philosophical viewpoint into the committee reports. I might say that he is becoming so efficient that he is going to wind up like the efficiency expert who became so efficient that he only had to say a prayer on January first; the rest of the year he said "ditto" and hopped into bed. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Dearborn, Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, once again I would like to rise and speak for a flexible constitution and good financial management. It seems to me that we are here writing a document that we — some of us at least — hoped would last for 50 or 60 years or more. When we look back over the past 50 or 60 years, we realize that we could not have foreseen the kind of changes that have taken place in the financial areas of state government. We have no more reason to believe that we could foresee the changes that are going to take place in the future in the financial management of this state.

It seems to me that we must realize that we should leave the legislature free to meet these changes as they occur in the best way that it can at that time. We do not know what is going to happen even 20 years in advance, let alone 50. Let us leave the matter of the type, the details, of this tax program to the legislature. Let us not put it into the constitution. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Saginaw, Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it might be well to remember that the year 1909 was when congress first introduced the idea of a federal income tax. It was not until February 25, 1913, that 36 states had ratified that tax and made it operative. It took 4 years. One of the main objections after long, loquacious debating not only in congress but in the various states was the fact that, though they had suggested a 2 per cent tax and on a base much larger than $600, some day it might become too large. The proponents said, well, it might go up a little, possibly to 4 per cent.

Prior to world war II, 32 or 34 of the states had passed resolutions to try to get an amendment through that the tax could not exceed 25 per cent. The war came along and stopped that, since which, of course, it has gone up to 90. About the only relief has been the excess profits tax. One sure way to defeat an income tax would be to leave it wide open on a graduated basis even if you put a top of 10 or 11 per cent.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I just want to explain my vote on this issue when it comes up. I do not consider this just an issue on the question of an income tax or not. If I were voting in the legislature on this question, I would vote against a graduated income tax, but I want to speak a moment to Mr. King's point that this abolishing or prohibiting an income tax will make Michigan economically attractive. If any of you have read the publication from the Upjohn institute called Taxes in Economic Growth, which I think came to most of us before the convention, made up of essays by a number of tax authorities throughout the country, you will remember that almost all of them agreed that what made Michigan unattractive economically was not just its tax system but the friction that is going on within the state and the apparent inability of the state to solve its financial problems.

So my vote on this represents a protest against what seems to me the inadequacy of the tax committee's program for solving these financial problems for the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: That is the second time that Mrs. Judd has brought up that point, and I think it must have an answer from the committee. It is not the business of a constitutional convention and it is not the business of a constitution to set forth a tax program. That is the legislature's business.

A constitution should set the limits, the restrictions — and they should be sound — within which the legislature shall work. I am fully aware that we have offended against that principle in 1 item. The sales tax ought to be a statutory matter; it is in the constitution, but the people put it there and, as has been said before, when they speak they are boss. Outside of that the committee has tried to keep in its own field: the laying down of rules within which the legislature shall act and, as everybody knows, from time to time they will have to act differently and we cannot foresee how they will need to act 25 or 50 years from now.

I think this should be said: the first determination when this topic came up in committee was this: that we must answer yes or no on the question of a graduated income tax. Our old constitution has left that matter hanging in the air. Attorneys over the state have disagreed for years as to whether the legislature could pass a graduated income tax. Attorneys general have ruled on both sides of the question. I think if here we were to determine that we are not going to prohibit a graduated income tax, we should expressly say that it is authorized if the legislature sees fit. There will be lawsuits enough in connection with the new constitution in spite of everything we can do; we ought not to invite lawsuits by intentionally not covering something that we know will be the subject of litigation. So if we are going to say, "No, we don't wish to prohibit it," we should say, "Yes, we expressly authorize the legislature to do it."

Just one other thing in connection with Mr. Tubbs' remarks. I am sorry for his concern about what goes on his tombstone. I suppose that somebody — some radical — will come along and write the word "conservative" on mine (laughter) but I am not fussy about that at all. The only thing that I am fussy about is that nobody shall write it on there too soon! (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the lady from Port Huron, Miss Andrus.

MISS ANDRUS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I wanted to speak yesterday. I wanted to ask Mr. Van Dusen a question. Now, perhaps, I should ask it of Mr. Brake. Ever since the depression and the passage of the 15 mill tax limitation, I have followed — that is about 30 years ago — I have followed our state taxes both locally and in the state with a great deal of interest. The people of Michigan were desperate in 1932 and '33, and this 15 mill tax limitation was to assist them locally. The state generously said that they would go off from their tax on property and they would raise the taxes for their state expenses in some other way.

We, however, have not trusted the legislature. We have earmarked most of those funds. I was very interested in Mr. Van Dusen's statements over and over this week that we should trust the legislature, that we should remove restrictions from its hands and give it a free hand.

Now as I look back — and I did this yesterday during the debate — I saw that we had not restricted — removed these restrictions. We have kept them. We have said we cannot trust the legislature to provide for highways; we have got to have some special funds for highways. We cannot trust the legislature to provide for the cities and the townships. We cannot trust the legislature to provide for the schools. And so we end up — I think all of you realize we are keeping practically all of these restrictions, though many of us came here with an idea and a hope that we could in the future trust our legislature.

Now do any of you remember the one thing we are going to trust the legislature with? That is the teachers' retirement, (laughter) the one thing. And Mr. Van Dusen made a very great plea that we could trust the legislature. Now I want to tell you that the teachers' retirement law was passed many years ago, before 1933, and the legislature was supposed to get money —

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will have to advise the lady from Port Huron that she will be out of order unless she addresses herself to the pending amendment.

MISS ANDRUS: Yes. Well this has a bearing on it. I am sorry if I haven't made myself clear. — so we found we couldn't trust the legislature, that when it didn't have money it couldn't put it in the teachers' retirement fund. That was why, when we passed the sales tax diversion amendment, we provided that there should be a certain percentage of that 2 cents for schools put aside each year, so that when teachers retired there would be some money, if the legislature didn't have money, which so often it didn't seem to have.

Now that is the point that I want to make in connection with the graduated income tax proposal. I hope that most of you are beginning to see the connection now. We felt the other day — I think all of the teachers did — "Well, we are going to trust the legislature; we are surely going to have more money in the future, and the legislature will be able to put it in."

Yet as we earmarked or kept in all these other earmarks, it seems rather pathetic that the retirement fund cannot be kept as a fund. Mr. Spitler made that very clear the other day, I think, to all of you. The fund is something that the people, the taxpayers, put in. They put in a provision so that it would be paid. I think every teacher is grateful that the convention has voted for a definite provision for teachers from now on when the constitution goes into effect, but it does not provide — in fact, it has taken away — the fund which was provided by the people to take care of the teachers who have retired and go up to their retirement period.

Now this is what I would like to ask. We wanted to free the legislature's hands, to trust it. Now we are by our 50 per cent assessment limit saying local governments cannot raise as much — before it was 100 per cent, now it is 50 per cent — we do not trust the legislature to have it 50 or 60 or something. Then we say it cannot pass a graduated income tax. I think we ought to be logical. Either we want to trust the legislature and let it do what it should, or I hope later on you will reconsider. If we limit the legislature in everything except our teachers' retirement, I hope you will reconsider that sometime.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The lady yields to the chairman of the committee for reply.

MR. BRAKE: I rose to answer the question and I didn't hear any, so I will sit down again. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The lady still has the floor.

MISS ANDRUS: If we are not going to trust the legislature, then we should keep in the limitations we had before — and my question of you or Mr. Van Dusen was: do you think we can trust the legislature?

MR. BRAKE: That varies from delegate to delegate. As a former legislator, I trust it a great deal. There are those who do not. Somebody said yesterday and I heard the statement that you cannot expect in politics that anybody is going to be consistent. Maybe this bears that out.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Miss Andrus, before you take your seat, I believe there are 2 or 3 members seeking recognition. Do you yield either to Mr. Van Dusen or to Mr. Tubbs for further reply?

MISS ANDRUS: Yes. Whichever one rose first.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Van Dusen, the gentleman from Birmingham. You still retain the floor, Miss Andrus.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am delighted to learn how many converts to flexibility we have made. I just wish we had made them a little earlier.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Miss Andrus, do you yield to the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Tubbs?

MISS ANDRUS: Yes.

MR. TUBBS: I just rise to a question of personal privilege, Mr. Chairman. I think I am entitled to equal time with Mr. Brake about tombstones. He said something with which I wholly agree. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie, is seeking recognition.

MR. PRETTIE: Yesterday at the conclusion of our afternoon session, I had requested that Mr. Austin give us figures in lower income tax brackets than $200,000, so that we might compare the impact of a state graduated income tax with deductibility as we now have and hope we may have in the future for federal income tax purposes. Mr. Austin and I conferred concerning this subject this morning at breakfast. There has been distributed to each delegate a copy of such a schedule. I think it is informative to the delegates because I believe that more of us and more of our constituents are in the $5 to $50 thousand taxable income bracket than in the $200,000 income tax bracket, and I wish to express my personal thanks and I hope the thanks of all delegates to Mr. Austin for the work that this represents.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the Austin amendment to the committee proposal. The gentleman from Ann Arbor is recognized.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I want to associate myself with the remarks that have been made by the very gracious lady from Grand Rapids and with those made by Mr. Tubbs. I feel that this is an exceedingly important turning point in the work of the convention. Either we slide down the hill to reaction or we go forward on a hopeful note.

I confess to considerable disappointment that this issue, the income tax, has been intruded into the discussion. I don't believe this was necessary. It seems to me that it is not a question of whether we favor an income tax, a graduated income tax, or not; it seems to me it is a question of legislative power and fiscal capacity. In the situation in which the state of Michigan finds itself today, in great fiscal straits, for this convention to forbid the legislature any reasonable means of trying to cope with that situation seems to me to be the height of futility, and I certainly could not approve of it.

Likewise the argument, which I certainly couldn't follow, of Mr. Martin's that because the federal government has preempted this field and because of the interrelationships between state and federal tax systems, that we ought to somehow — I couldn't quite get the thread of the argument — prevent the state of Michigan from adopting a graduated income tax.

Now, I happen to have worked for quite awhile in the field of intergovernmental relations, and I realize full well that the tax problem in the United States is a very, very serious problem and that it is an extremely difficult one for the states; but I think it does not take too much vision to look into the future and to realize that it is possible even with the federal system, for the federal government and the states and localities within our lifetime to work out some kind of a division of tax capacity in the taxation field which would be satisfactory to everybody. In unitary governments this has already been done, because it is somewhat easier; there has been a division. It seems to me that it is not going to help the solution of federal-state-local tax relationships to write into the constitution for the long haul the prohibition against the state legislature from ever enacting a graduating income tax, whether it is tied into the federal one or not.

I think, therefore, that we should vote on this issue not whether we believe in a graduated income tax or not — I am like Mrs. Judd — if I were in the legislature today I would not vote for a graduated income tax; I would vote for a flat rate income tax, in the present situation. But if I were in the legislature I would not want to be forbidden by this constitutional convention to vote any way that the facts seemed to point.

I think, therefore, that we are at a turning point in the convention, and I am sorry that the whole thrust of these proposals from the finance committee instead of looking forward have, as Mr. Brake said a good many times, been looking apparently at the ballot box: what the people will accept. Well, what the people will accept — often you come to the conclusion that you want to come to. I do not know where Mr. Brake is looking; he is not looking in the same direction I am, and I think my view is at least as broad as his. I think what the people of Michigan want us to do is to do the best that we can do. Acceptance will follow if we do a good job. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I had in mind responding to some of the remarks of Mr. Martin, but Dr. Pollock has done that a lot better than I could have done, and I want to thank Dr. Pollock. There has been distributed to you the chart which was requested by Delegate Prettie. I do not believe that you will have any questions, but I felt that I should make myself available to answer any questions that might arise in connection with it.

There is one little detail about this chart which I think you will find interesting. Down under the section "state income tax" on the last $1,000 of income, "amount borne by the taxpayer", in the first column we are dealing with the taxable income of $5,000. If we had a graduated rate structure which approximated that of New York or Minnesota — and I might say that one of the problems in developing a chart of this nature is that you have to make some assumptions as to how the rate structure would be graduated, and the graduations in tax structures throughout the various states are not uniform. In the first column we have $29.60 paid by the taxpayer out of his pocket. The federal government would pay $10.40 and the state would get $40, the sum of the 2. In other words, from a $5,000 income the state would take $40; $29.60 from the taxpayer and, in effect, $10.40 which would be borne by the federal government.

I move over to the last column on the $50,000 income. There the taxpayer would pay $25, the federal government would pay $75, and the state would wind up with $100. The $50,000 taxpayer would actually pay out of his pocket toward the state income tax less money than the $5,000 taxpayer but the state would get $100 in the one case and only $40 in the other case. I thought that that was an interesting observation.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar, seeking recognition?

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I am going to make my remarks brief: let's vote.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I had not completed —

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: I beg your pardon, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, a great deal has been said on this subject. However, I do feel constrained to make a few closing remarks. Inasmuch as it has been necessary for me to get involved in the technical aspects of this, I would like to present just a few comments in regard to the equity and the legislative freedom subjects about which there has been so much discussion.

Anyone — and I do not expect contradiction on this item of analysis — would be tempted to make sure that we write the proper taxes, the proper financial safeguards, into our constitution. This is one article of the constitution that tempts all of us to forget that the constitution is supposed to lay the groundwork for the operation of all branches of our government. One of the good causes for this temptation is part and parcel of the development of any constitution. Taxes pay the cost of government. The people have surprised their representatives by showing their willingness to pay the cost of government and they have used their power of initiative and referendum to prove not only their willingness but their concern as well.

Some of us favor earmarking of revenues; others oppose it. Some of us consider this a matter of good government principle while others regard it as an effect to be reckoned with because of the circumstances which brought about this effect and because this effect is not easily resolved. Regardless of where we stand on each governmental principle involved in each such issue, we will be neglecting our obligation if we fail to combine consideration of all factors of historic precedent, of future need, and yet we must not forget that the people make the final judgment on the new document.

The tax proposals and provisions for finances that have come before the committee on finance and taxation were numerous. They reflected our immediate circumstances. They have been aimed at small specific items and at large general items. They have urged tax relief for everyone. Many have tried to indicate new sources of revenue.

Our implied responsibility should be clear at this time. To succeed we must present within the revised constitution, first, a philosophy on which future fiscal policy shall be based.

We may take it for granted that our historic background rejects taxation without representation, but we should also remember that our historic background stresses equity as a principal ingredient in our fiscal philosophy. A tax structure is considered adequate when it yields sufficient revenue to meet rising costs for providing public service for a growing population and an expanding economy. Obviously, the Michigan tax structure has failed to meet this test. Equity or neutrality in taxation is achieved when equal treatment is given equals and when the distribution of tax burdens among income groups is regarded as fair or proper. The achievement of equity must be sought in consideration of the tax structure as a whole where some progressive levy may have to be included to offset the regressive nature of other taxes.

The Michigan tax and local structure abuses the concept of equity in a variety of ways. There are gross inequalities in the assessment of property for local tax purposes and its impact on business. The sales tax does not treat equals in like manner, because its impact depends on how a taxpayer spends his money; it violates both the concept of horizontal equity and vertical equity; nor does it do justice to low income families and large families. These are glaring inequalities and there are also inequalities in the business activities tax, the franchise tax, intangibles tax, insurance premiums, alcoholic beverages and cigarette taxes. The impact of state and local taxes on business and industry must not deter industrial growth or adversely influence industrial location decisions. Business taxes should be determinable with clarity, should bear some reasonable relation to the volume of public service utilized and should be imposed at a level consistent with that of other states.

Among us are those who are intensely concerned with preventing government encroachment and those who stress more local control and others who argue that services coordinated by the state are more economical. These are the positions that reflect the paradox of our times. To ignore or suppress them would be to ignore our times. But this is the important moment when we must do more. This is the time when we must admit imagination as to the respected participant in our deliberations. We can not know what will face the legislature 5 years from now. To tie their hands would be not only unimaginative but also foolhardy.

The people we represent expect us to achieve the best possible philosophy, to protect their well being, to lay the best possible groundwork for the best possible legislation; but the people we represent also expect our conclusions will be just and fair and equitable and flexible and adaptable and serviceable to all the people, will help provide good government that does not go beyond its proper boundaries but is prepared to give good service whenever and wherever there is need. They have a right to expect this miracle. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Bloomfield Hills, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I would like to ask Mr. Austin a question. Mr. Austin, in this chart which you distributed today and in the one which accompanied your minority report, you did not point out in your oral presentation that this evidence that it costs the big taxpayer less than the little taxpayer is directed only at the last thousand of income. Is that correct?

MR. AUSTIN: That is correct, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: And would you say, would you agree with me that the last column, the $50,000 or the biggest one on the chart that you present this morning, is proof positive that the graduated income tax reaches a point of diminishing returns in the higher brackets?

MR. AUSTIN: I am not quite sure that I understand that question, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Well, in effect —

MR. AUSTIN: Pardon me. Just to make sure that you understand why I am confused. I do not know whether you mean diminishing returns to the state or diminishing returns to the federal government or to the taxpayer.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: The diminishing returns to government from the taxpayer — if, in other words, this thing constitutes an invasion of the federal revenue in the case of the larger taxpayer and relief to the larger taxpayer on the last dollar of income. Isn't that correct?

MR. AUSTIN: That is correct. We are talking about invasion of the federal preemption that has been stressed here on the floor. This is one example of how the state might invade that so called preemption by the federal of the — let's say the income of taxpayers for income taxation.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Well, we're all citizens of the United States as well as the state of Michigan and these governments have to get their revenues from some place, and I think we are deluding ourselves when we think that we are producing revenue by taking it out of the federal treasury, long range, for the state. I think we reach a point of diminishing returns under a graduated income tax.

MR. AUSTIN: With apologies to the Chair for continuing this, I do not believe, Mr. Woolfenden, that this is a delusion. It is a fact. We have over 30 states that have graduated rate structures in their income tax programs. This is a fact which we cannot overlook. It is a fact that we can do nothing about. We can do nothing here, sitting in this constitutional convention, about the graduated rate structure of the federal income tax. This is a fact that we must live with.

Now, having these facts before us, we must consider whether it is advisable to make it possible for our state, our state legislature, to do exactly what the other states are doing in getting what we consider to be the fair share of the revenue from income taxation and to prevent the taxpayers of Michigan from contributing disproportionately to federal programs in other states. Now it is not for us to say here that this ought to be done. We are only interested in saying that we should not prevent the legislature from doing it if it should feel in its wisdom that it is desirable to do so.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: May I speak to the question?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Bloomfield Hills has the floor.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I welcome the opportunity to vote on the morality of a graduated income tax. This is the only time in my lifetime, probably, that I will have the opportunity to record my position on the morality of a graduated income tax.

I don't think 2 wrongs make a right, and that is why I don't think — why I am not impressed by the argument that competitively with other states we should have a graduated income tax if, in fact, it is morally wrong.

This country has been built, in my judgment, in my conviction, because of equality of opportunity and not because of legislative equality. If we want to make equal by legislation, then we should join some socialist government; but I am in favor of equality of opportunity, and I think a graduated income tax which says if my next door neighbor earns twice as much money as I do that he should not pay twice as much, he should pay 4 times as much, is essentially an immoral tax. I am absolutely opposed to it, and I am against this amendment and for the committee proposal. I do not believe we are hamstringing the legislature; I think we are merely stating the American philosophy of free enterprise and equality of opportunity. (applause)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would like to announce, before recognizing the next speaker, that we have 5 more speakers scheduled to speak on this amendment and the secretary advises that there are 4 other pending amendments on the desk to this paragraph. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from St. Joseph, Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: We have heard a great deal about raising revenues to meet our expenditures. I think one of the things we have not talked about is how we can give direction to our legislature as the economy is in our state. Looking at the facts and figures of government finance put out by the tax foundation corporation, we find that Michigan is already paying $101.78 per capita in state taxes.

Ladies and gentlemen of this committee, this compares with our neighboring states of Ohio at $75.33 per capita; Minnesota, $96; Illinois, $75; Indiana, $81. These are our competing states that we are neighbors with, the states that are taking our industry away from Michigan; and if we add to the already overburdened per capita by even talking about a graduated income tax, in my estimation we are not helping our business climate. The people of Michigan have already spoken about their desires for not having an income tax when they voted last year for the 1 cent increase in sales tax. We were hopeful that this would take care of our state requirements but it has not. We should at least give direction to our legislature that the people do not wish it to pass a graduated income tax. This is why I am supporting the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I would like to remind the committee that this proposal before us not only ties the hands of the legislature but ties the hands of all legislative bodies in the whole state of Michigan. I think that I tried to point out yesterday that the city of Detroit in its tax study recommended a piggyback income tax; that is, an individual would first determine his federal income tax and then, for example, take a 3 per cent flat rate of that federal income tax. Now, this proposal would prohibit the city of Detroit or any other local unit of government from doing this, and I submit to you that this proposal, then, interferes with the principle of local self government.

Mr. Woolfenden's plea for equality is, I think, kind of amusing, if you will excuse me, Mr. Woolfenden, for commenting thusly. When we get into the question of reapportionment, I think that we will be talking about equality, too, that is, the theory of one man, one vote. And it is interesting to note that it appears, I would say, that the majority here believe in equality of taxation: that is, everyone should pay the same amount of taxes — their vote should not be the same but they should be able to pay the same amount of taxes. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grosse Pointe Shores, Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members, I should like to address a question to Mr. Austin and then make a brief observation, if I may, through the Chair. Mr. Austin, suppose that each of the 50 states of this union had a graduated income tax of the kind you advocate? Because of the legislative enactment and rates reasonably high — you don't know what they would do over a period of years — what would that do to federal finances? The present administration has a budget of $90 billion dollars per annum. We owe $300 billion.

As Mr. Woolfenden said, we are citizens of the federal government and citizens of each state, the state in which we reside. We are proud members of the United States, as well as being citizens of this state. It seems to me that if this thing is carried to its conclusion, the federal government will not have the money to carry on the wars, hot or cold, or to perform all the other services that they are required to perform because of the nature of that government.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Cudlip, I do not believe that we should be concerned here at this convention about the federal budget and how funds should be raised for the federal government. Our major concern is for the taxpayers of the state of Michigan, and we are concerned to see that the taxpayers of Michigan do not contribute disproportionately to federal projects in other states.

Now, it is conceivable that if every state had a graduated income tax, it would materially reduce the amount of revenue going to the federal government, and it might be necessary for the federal government to take some offsetting measures. At the same time it is also conceivable that by raising additional revenue these states will be able to provide services for themselves that they now ask the federal government to provide.

MR. CUDLIP: Thank you very much, Mr. Austin, but I do not know how we are going to provide money for these services that only the federal government can perform, and one of those is the defense of our nation in these perilous times. We have been in cold wars and hot wars for years and I am very fearful that if we implant this doctrine in each sovereign state, we are going to have dire consequences as respects our federal government, which is our government too.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, if I may, just one more response?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman has the floor. He may yield to you.

MR. CUDLIP: I yield.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. We have to remember that over half of our states have a graduated rate structure; over half. The precedent has already been set. It is not a matter of Michigan starting a stampede in this direction. It is merely a matter of Michigan — if I can put it this way — catching up.

MR. CUDLIP: Two wrongs don't make a right, and this proud state should not continue any lead that might affect the finances of our central government. Thank you.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, would Mr. Cudlip yield? I would like to comment on that question.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Do you want to yield to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Young?

MR. CUDLIP: I yield permanently.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman is inclined to yield; he yields the floor, Mr. Young. You will be recognized in your turn. The Chair feels impelled to make a statement before recognizing the next speaker. He has often heard of the law of diminishing returns, but it certainly does not apply to the number of people who wish to speak. We still have 5 people scheduled on this amendment. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, there are 2 points I wish to make and I will try to make them very brief. The first is on the history of the sales tax. It is true that this was put into the constitution by the people. I think it was done in a period almost, shall we say, of economic desperation that all of us hope we don't return to. It was done in conjunction with limiting the property tax.

Now, I think in trying to look ahead that I would like briefly to comment on comments of 2 of the delegates in particular. I believe Delegate King from Oakland county made a very good point on the so called competitive factor and, if I understood him correctly, he pointed out that federal taxes — while people may not be enthusiastic about paying them — at least have the uniformity concept of taxes, so that no one state was put at an economic disadvantage.

I believe Dr. Pollock, in his usual manner of looking ahead, projected the concept that at some time there would be additional division of revenue between the federal and state and local governments, and I think those 2 concepts are not inconsistent even though they may look so at first blush.

My own thinking, for whatever it is worth, is that we will get to the point in our financing where we quit putting these watertight compartments about forms of taxes and be concerned more with function, specifically. I can see the day when we overcome the so called competitive factor among states that often tends to penalize the state trying to meet its problems by — and I hesitate, Mrs. Judd, to use the word "earmarking" but — perhaps reserving a certain amount of the income of corporation or other federal tax we pay to Washington for the purposes of the states and local communities. This would mean that then we would get revenues on a noncompetitive basis amongst the states and yet keep that state administrative control that is so near and dear to many people's hearts. I cite as an example the highways, and there has been a lot of discussion about roads, but the outstanding feature to one who drives a lot is that we are getting roads in Michigan, and one reason is not only our eminent highway director but is the fact that we have some uniform federal gas tax money coming into Michigan; and it doesn't matter what state we live in, we pay that same amount of federal gas tax so that the charge cannot be made that roads are putting one state at a competitive disadvantage with another.

Now, in writing this document, I do not pretend to spell out just what that federal-state relationship is that Dr. Pollock refers to. As I indicated, my own thinking is that it will be the direction where there are certain federal minimum standards, where there are certain federal assurances of a rebate of money that was collected in various states with the states and local communities handling the administration of the financing. But to do this, I plead with the convention not that we make that blueprint for 50 years ahead but at least that we have a constitution which will permit that type of organic development between the federal and state government that will end up best meeting the needs of the people. I do not know particularly what form it should take, but I do believe we should allow the leeway to have that federal-state relationship develop that Dr. Pollock mentioned. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I would like to bring out a couple of points, and I would like to give an answer to some of the things that have been said here. I sort of begin to worry a little bit myself about the worries of all these people around here who are thinking about socialism creeping into the state of Michigan.

Well, it seems to me that a lot of these people haven't been worrying about how much money they were going to take from Detroit. A couple of days ago they were willing to take it away because they thought that they ought to grab a share of that money that is down there, or a lot of that money that is there. They say that this is going to kill incentive. Kill it? Don't you ever think it is going to kill incentive. Believe me, these people who are worried about how much this is going to cost them and they may just as well quit trying to make any more money because they cannot keep it — believe me, you just step aside a little bit and watch your own brother start stepping into your shoes. They would like to take your place. In fact, if you don't move in a hurry, they are going to run over you, and they will pay that tax; they will pay it in a hurry.

You worry about taking moneys away from the federal government? How silly can you get? Here just a couple of months ago the legislature of this state refused to accept any money from the federal government. You said it was welfare. And when I say you said it was welfare, I would say there are a good many of you here who were telling your partners over in the legislature not to accept it. Well, let me tell you something. If the government had that kind of money to give to the state of Michigan, I think you are mighty foolish, mighty, mighty foolish not to keep it here so that they don't have to give it to you in welfare. Let's keep it here, as I said, then it won't be welfare. Now, let us see what happens to this money when you do not take it. Well, they don't cut your taxes. In Michigan, we have been one of the highest paying tax states in this country. We have always been one of the highest taxpaying states in this country — not here, paying it to our government here; we have been sending it to Washington to give to those states where they will not pay any taxes, where they are doing what you are trying to establish here: where they refuse to pay for the government, their state government. They want the federal government to pay it, want you to pay it. How silly and stupid can you get? Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Jackson, Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I only want to express my position by saying that I am in wholehearted agreement with the statement made by Mr. Woolfenden, and that I am voting in opposition to the amendment of Mr. Austin.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Romeo, Mr. Rush.

MR. RUSH: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I am going to be very brief. I just want to make one statement. I think it is obvious to most of us that our federal income tax has gotten out of hand. And why has that happened? Simply because we didn't put on proper safeguards. It is quite evident that any unit of government will find a way to spend all of the money that comes their way. We have tried to buy friends among all the nations of the world, even buy our enemies. So they will spend all the money they get. Today we are in a position to put in some proper safeguards so that doesn't happen on the state level. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, as one of the sponsors of the minority report, I thought a few minutes ago to answer a question of Mr. Cudlip addressed in the direction of that report, and I am sorry that he did not see fit to yield at that time and, therefore, my reaction will be somewhat delayed. All I want to say in answer to his question is, what would happen if 50 states were to adopt a graduated income tax and thus take advantage of the reduction of the amount of money going to the federal government is that if we pass the proposal, it will be only 49 states because Michigan will be unable to take advantage of this tax rebate. In fact, what we are proposing is to permanently forbid the state of Michigan and the taxpayers of Michigan the possible opportunity of taking advantage of certain federal moneys that can be kept in the state while, at the same time, 33 out of 35 states that presently have an income tax take that advantage.

This is merely another way of increasing the tax burden on the people of Michigan and passing Michigan money out to the other 49 states. Now, that was the reaction to the question.

The other point I want to make, and I will be brief, is that we are now proceeding in the general article on finance to establish what seems to me a political philosophy: to freeze a certain direction of taxation. Now, if there is any legitimacy to the argument that has been advanced here that we need to encourage industry and that industry needs relief, then we must also recognize the fact that the lower income groups in Michigan need relief. I do not think that we should forevermore freeze the philosophy, a trickle down philosophy, into our constitution which is based on the theory that what is good for General Motors is good for Michigan. I think we should give some attention to the fact that there is a necessity for making the maximum amount of money available to those in the lower income brackets, so that they would have enough funds to purchase some of the products that industry seeks to distribute.

Now, in regards to a philosophy, Mr. Van Dusen has advanced Mr. Parkinson's law or laws. Now, I am not too familiar with Mr. Parkinson. I understand he is a full time humorist who in his spare time deals with economic matters, but it is my fond hope that in embracing Parkinson's laws we here in Michigan do not become infected with Parkinson's disease. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Niles, Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I think that this question now before us, the question of whether we are going to adopt the committee proposal or the minority amendment allowing for a graduated income tax, resolves itself to this basic problem and this basic principle: are we going to allow taxation to be used only for the legitimate needs of government or are we going to allow it to be used for the distribution of the wealth?

There are 2 uses of taxes. The one use is to take care of the legitimate needs of government and that is the legitimate use, and the other use that has been seized upon by some people is to use taxation for the principle of distributing wealth. This is what I call a Robin Hood style of government where you take it from the rich and give it to the poor. I do not believe this is the legitimate purpose of taxation and I feel that it is necessary to write into the constitution a prohibition against a government adopting this theory of taking it from the rich and distributing it and leveling all people to the same status in society.

I will say this, that if we allow for a graduated income tax you will never see a time where there will not be a demand for increased services. The only way you can control the demand for increased services is to prevent the adoption of a graduated income tax. I thought it was most interesting to note that 2,300 years ago the Greeks tried the so called progressive income tax—and there is nothing progressive about an income tax, it was tried 2,300 years ago by the Greeks, and a leading scholar of that day, Socrates, made this comment; he said:

> It would appear that success is to be punished; that exorbitant taxes have made it a crime for man to prosper. The end result of such order can only be removal of incentive, the discouragement of our people and the destruction of our free society.

When a few years later the Spartans came and attacked Athens, the Greeks did not seem to feel they had anything to fight for. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair would make an announcement. There is one more speaker on the list. The Chair has been very flexible in allowing remarks on the pending amendment but, as the Chair understands the pending amendment, this is not over the merits or demerits of a graduated income tax; it is only whether or not there should be a constitutional prohibition against such tax. The Chair will feel compelled from now on to hold any future speeches strictly to that interpretation. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you would think that whatever we are going to do in adopting a provision in the constitution at this particular time prevents for all time something being done about a thing that may become apparent or may not become apparent in the years ahead. I want to direct the delegates' attention to the fact that I believe this convention will endorse and approve in the constitution the things we call initiative and referendum, and I believe if the people want to speak on a graduated income tax provision they can speak through the initiative and referendum, and I do not think that we are limiting in any sense the type and kind of taxation that the people of this state might want in the future, because we have the perfect device to answer that question. That is the position, I think, that the delegates should take here.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Hancock, Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wish to oppose the inclusion of this prohibition against the graduated income tax in the constitution. There must be something with which we can entrust the legislature. We have been debating here as if we were passing an income tax. If I were listening in on this, came in on this, I would think we were debating an income tax. Are we going to pass it now today? Are we voting on this subject? We are not voting on any such subject at all.

As a matter of fact, Woodrow Wilson, I think, made the observation that the supreme court is like a constitutional convention in continuous session. Well, maybe what we should do is decide to remain in continuous session at least until the last delegate dies to cover our tracks for mistakes we made by dating our constitution. I think if we put this thing in here, within a matter of 2 years or 5 years they will be tearing apart our constitution, and I think we should try to make it a document which will stand some test of time. Furthermore, in accordance with what President Eisenhower said, by leaving some authority to the legislature, why, we can help to maintain state government and maybe encourage the survival of our federal system of government rather than the unitary system, so that people can look to the state for some things.

I might add that, as somebody mentioned the fact about abolishing the legislature, maybe we should at least suspend it if we are so fearful of its actions. Now, this thing has to be debated and passed by the legislature. Reference has been made to the sales tax—

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman will be out of order unless he confines himself to the pending amendment.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Very well. I just wish to say that I think it would be a very foolish thing if we write this restrictive thing into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question occurs upon the amendment of the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin. As many as are in favor of the pending amendment will respond by saying aye. Those opposed will respond by saying no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: There is a demand for division. Is the demand supported?

SECRETARY CHASE: There is a sufficient number.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Those in favor of the Austin amendment will vote aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted? The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will announce the result.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Austin and other members of the minority, the yeas are 58, the nays are 66.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The amendment is not adopted. Are there other amendments to this paragraph?

SECRETARY CHASE: We have some, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Hodges offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "graduated" by inserting "more than 50 per cent"; so the language will read, "No income tax graduated more than 50 per cent as to rate or base shall be imposed by the state or any of its subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment because there seems to be some feeling we should have a limitation on this and, therefore, I feel it should be a reasonable limitation. I listened to a television show last Sunday in which the proponent talked about a new image for the Republican party, and yet we find the chief spear carriers for the new image voting the same traditional way as we would expect from the Republican party. Now, it seems to me that all this new image amounts to is trying to put the same old tripe in a new package.

A DELEGATE: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman will state the point of order.

A DELEGATE: The speaker is getting into personalities, which are not only out of order but are far beneath the dignity of the committee.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman will proceed in order.

MR. HODGES: I was just saying that the cellophane on the wrapper is pretty thin and we can see pretty much through it. I think Mr. Seyferth and Mr. Woolfenden stated the case clearly. It is for those who believe that even the federal progressive income tax, graduated income tax, is wrong.

A DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: All right, there is a question as to whether the delegate is in order.

MR. HODGES: It was brought up during the debate, Mr. Chairman. I think there is a correlation.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair will rule the gentleman is proceeding in order but will caution him to confine his remarks to the pending amendment.

MR. HODGES: I would only state this, Mr. Chairman: I would hope we can at last get a vote on this thing and a reasonable one. I think those that have voted here recognize that they do not have the votes to return the federal government to the eighteenth century, but they hope to do so for Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I hope that if we cannot get a 50 per cent we can at least get some reasonable limitation on which the state can progress. I ask that the amendment be supported.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, delegates, I happen to be in the party that Mr. Hodges referred to and I voted for the minority amendment last voted upon. Please put that in the record. Also, regarding the amendment of Mr. Hodges, because I voted the way I did on the last amendment, I will vote against this amendment, since, again, it is a restrictive item in this constitution and should therefore be voted down.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I hesitate to be in a cellophane wrapper for fear of embarrassment, but I will agree with Mr. Hodges' position and I will state the reason: because the committee—and I think most of us—believe that there should be some uniformity in taxation; but when we levy a sales tax in Michigan and then are in the future without a doubt to levy an income tax, it is apparent to many of us that if you examine your income there is a point at which you no longer expend your money in such a manner as to be subject to the sales tax. And as I progress into a higher income tax bracket, less and less of my income is subject to the sales tax. There is a point in the middle income tax bracket where I pay both an income tax and a sales tax, and if we continue the committee's proposal that there can be an income tax but uniform in rate, the income tax will bear most heavily on those people with incomes of approximately $5,000 to $10,000.

The Hodges amendment would allow the legislature to integrate the sales and income tax so that it would be a uniform deduction from my or your income whether taxed by means of the sales tax or the income tax, and it would alleviate the abuses which have crept into the use of the income tax for social purposes rather than revenue. In the interest of uniformity in extracting moneys from my income and yours, I believe the Hodges amendment is the proper procedure and should be adopted.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Hodges. Is the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Norris, seeking recognition?

MR. NORRIS: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I wondered, specifically, if we could have not only the language of the Hodges amendment but where it specifically goes in the proposal which we have before us.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The secretary will so report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges' amendment is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "graduated" by inserting "more than 50 per cent"; so the language will read, "No income tax graduated more than 50 per cent as to rate or base shall be imposed by the state or any of its subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: As many as are in favor of the Hodges amendment will respond by saying aye; those opposed? The amendment is not adopted.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Division has been called for. Is the demand for division supported?

SECRETARY CHASE: A sufficient number.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Those in favor of the Hodges amendment will vote aye; those opposed will vote no.

SECRETARY CHASE: Has everyone voted?

The machine is locked and the totals will be recorded. On the adoption of the Hodges amendment the yeas are 47; the nays are 77.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Then the amendment is not adopted. The secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hubbs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "subdivisions.", by inserting "Persons engaged in an occupation, the practice of which does not require substantial investment in personal property or inventory, excluding exempt items, shall be required to pay a city and county tax computed at the same rate as the personal property tax and on a base which shall be equal to the average personal property tax paid by individuals but not corporations, within the city or county where the taxpayer is resident. The herein provided tax shall be known as a fair tax. The legislature shall implement the objective of this section.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Gladwin is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we seem to have happily settled the progressive tax problem. I would like to start out by quoting a little known present day philosopher, "Lack of imagination is a hotbox on the railroad of progress."

To some of the legal minds present, this amendment may seem to be completely unworkable. I do not propose to defend the legal construction. I do desire to point out the gross inequity of the personal property tax with particular reference to its effect on small business and suggest that some remedy can be found to ease the burden of local taxes on business which are borne most unfairly at the local level. Personal property taxes on inventories are highly discriminatory, regressive and are not particularly related to the production of income.

Since there is apparently no hope of eliminating personal property taxes, the objective of this amendment to Committee Proposal 51 is to retain tax money at the local level being drained off to feed the bureaucratic monster in Washington. To retain some of this money at the local level is a plausible effort to reduce the load now being borne so unfairly by small business on the main street of every small town in Michigan.

Unrealistic depreciation schedules, unfair taxation, both state, federal and local, are the chief retardants of the economic growth and development of this state and the nation. I say in closing that one of the most unfair, discriminatory, and regressive taxes is the personal property tax at local level. Personal property taxes are sand in the gears and sugar in the gas, and if not removed or reduced to a fair level the economic machine is headed for the scrap heap.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Is the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. Tubbs, seeking recognition?

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I hate to disagree with my almost namesake, but this amendment sounds like the doctor who, whenever he was in doubt about the condition of his patient, would give him a shot in the arm and when he was asked why he did that, he said, "Why that's to give him fits." "Well, why do you want to give him fits?" "I can cure fits." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the committee, we would oppose Mr. Hubbs' amendment and I would simply point out that the majority proposal does provide that the legislature may provide by law for exemption of property from taxation or for alternate means of taxation of such property in lieu of general ad valorem taxation uniform on the class or classes, and so forth. So that the objective which Mr. Hubbs seeks, of relief from discriminatory personal property taxation, is available through the means of the majority proposal.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question occurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Gladwin. As many as are in favor will respond by saying aye; those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. T. S. Brown offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "subdivisions.", by inserting "In addition, no minority of the people of the state shall impose any tax upon the majority of people of the state.". (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Garden City is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. T. S. BROWN: When you are through laughing, I would like to indicate in all sincerity that I am not trying to be cute. The terminology is very explicit. It means what it says and it says what it means. It is a very simple statement. You all recognize the implications of it. For those of you who don't, I would say that since taxes are expressed through our legislature that the minority of the people through their elected representatives cannot enact a tax oppressive or in any way a tax against the majority of the people acting through their elected representatives.

Now, the sole question is whether or not you believe in that particular principle, and I would not have troubled the committee with this particular amendment had the Austin amendment not failed. I would like to say this in further delineating and, I think, highlighting the dichotomy that exists between what we should be doing and what we are apparently doing and what we have done in the last 2 or 3 days in this convention by saying that if we follow Tom Downs' statement of how the argument regarding taxation has twisted and turned and if we recall when Mr. Ford and Mr. Hodges and I introduced the amendment concerning the elimination of the sales tax on food and drugs how Mr. Staiger said, "When we come to the income tax provision, we will find reasons;" and if you recall the reasons that Mr. Van Dusen urged upon us yesterday afternoon in regard to the limitation on the income tax—and, as you recall, the main thread of the argument was that people should not be allowed arbitrarily and indiscriminately to impose taxes on other people—then you will see that the real meaning of this particular amendment, I think, is in furtherance of the best local implications of the arguments that have been advanced on the other amendments.

I don't think this particular amendment requires a lot of conversation or a lot of debate. It is very explicit, and I am very, very much afraid that as a result of this morning's work, as Dr. Pollock has indicated, we are taking a turning point and the turning point is downhill, and I hope by this amendment and other things which will follow shortly that we may have a chance to begin uphill again.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Garden City. As many as are in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted and the secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Kuhn offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "subdivisions.", by inserting "No governmental subdivision shall impose any income tax except on its own residents; the state, however, may preempt this field of taxation.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, I am one who does not want to limit the cities or townships or counties as far as taxation, but I am one who can remember that we did have a revolution with our mother country over taxation without representation and so, while I do not want to restrict any of these units of government, I certainly want them to limit their taxes to the people who can vote them out of office if they are not happy with the way they determine the tax to be, and, therefore, I offer this amendment to protect everyone. We should have the right to vote for those representatives who levy a tax on us. I think it is as simple as that, and I will not belabor this point.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar, is seeking recognition.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I love this amendment. This is wonderful. I get quite a bang out of it, too. The poor city of Detroit. "C'mon boys, let's jump, they're lying under us right now. We can go ahead, we can build that new Chrysler highway that will extend all the way from Jefferson avenue, cut down along Dequindre avenue, up across the Eight Mile road, and on into Pontiac, where the boys will live"—another one of the bedroom cities. You know, I am not going to say anything much about that because I don't want you to call me out of order because, believe me, if I told you what they really ought to say about what happens out there, well, you would throw me out, you wouldn't just rule me out. (laughter)

Yes, "Mother city, please give us water. Mother city, please give us sewers. Mother city, please help us." You know, I sometimes wonder whether you are not all saying a prayer, those of you who submit these kind of amendments. I get quite a bang out of Mr.—well, the delegate, Mr. Kuhn, who last night told me he was going to throw a bombshell into this convention today. Do you know, he wasn't throwing any bombshell. Why, we have got at least 1½ million people in the city of Detroit who would tell you that this kind of bombshell would be thrown day in and day out—the only reason the rest of them do not believe that there would be this sort of thing happening is because they are too young yet to be able to speak or think for themselves. I am very much in opposition to this amendment. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Madar, yield to the gentleman from Pontiac for the purpose of a reply?

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I am yielding the floor to any and all who wish to reply, but let's just use common sense when we vote.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman declines to yield. The gentleman from Howell, Mr. Sharpe, is recognized.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am real pleased with Mr. Madar's attitude. This is a little different tone of voice than we have been hearing from Mr. Madar. (laughter and applause) I would like to say in regard to this Kuhn amendment that I must go on record in favor of this amendment.

I don't have any fight with the city of Detroit. I am not so sure that the city of Detroit gives too many things away. I understand that they do supply water for a fee, they do supply sewers for a fee to their subdivisions or their outcounty area, but I could never allow this amendment to go unspoken of by myself in regard to an income tax that a city could impose upon the people working there whether they lived there or didn't live there. Well, I do not believe that we should penalize people because they live in Livingston county or Shiawassee county if they work in Flint. I believe that these people have their obligations as far as their taxes are concerned in their own counties and in their own cities.

This, I believe, would be an unjust taxation upon the people and would be considered a penalty because they didn't live in the city. Now, I have not talked against the city of Detroit, and I don't really care if they become a county by themselves; this is all right with me; and if they want to annex themselves to Canada, that would be all right, too. I have no objection so long as the people do what they want to do down there. But I would object to them subjecting my people or the people outside of the city of Detroit to an income tax and thus would be penalizing them for not living in the city. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee. Mr. Kuhn, if we fight about it now your proposed amendment is going to be fought all over again when local government reports, because if you will look on page 438 of the journal the whole subject comes up in connection with a proposal, a committee proposal, that pertains to cities and villages, and I really think if we get into a debate on this amendment now we are just simply going to have to do it all over again when we hit local government, and I would suggest if you would prefer not to withdraw it—and I hope that you would—that this committee might know because we are going to have to go over the whole thing and I think in more detail when we hit local government. In other words, I am suggesting that your proposed amendment would be more in order when we hit local government rather than battling local government, in effect, now. Let's try to finish taxation on the state level first.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. Kuhn, is recognized.

MR. KUHN: If I can have the assurance from the chairman of the committee on local government that this amendment would be in order when that subject comes up, I would be willing to withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Pontiac yields to the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge, Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Kuhn, you have my assurance.

MR. KUHN: I will withdraw my amendment at this time.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn. The secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hodges offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "subdivisions.", by inserting "Further, the head of every family shall come to the state capitol and pay a head tax for every member of his family. The amount to be set by the legislature. Such tax to be uniformly applied.". (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Hodges, is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, it just seems to me that I was trying to get the feeling of the philosophies of the various members of this convention, and I thought that this tax would best represent it. As you know—there was a little bit of noise and you probably did not hear the last part—this is to be applied uniformly; therefore, we can make sure that everybody pays their fair share, and I think there is a lot of historical precedent for this type of tax, as we remember this is what they went to Bethlehem about.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Sheridan is recognized.

MR. GOVER: I would just like to tell Mr. Hodges that back a few decades, about 1933, that tax was declared unconstitutional, the head tax. I paid my $4 at that time and never got it back. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question occurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Hodges. As many as are in favor will say aye. Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted, and the secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 22, after "rate" by striking out "or base"; so the sentence will read, "No income tax graduated as to rate shall be imposed by the state or any of its subdivisions."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Detroit is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't think I need to reiterate that I am opposed to the last sentence of this paragraph. However, if we are to retain that sentence, I think I should call attention to a danger that we have in the language. This question was raised in the committee and the committee sought to allay my fears by including something in the report, and I will refer to that in just a moment.

The purpose of this language as I understand it is to prohibit the state from levying a piggyback tax on the federal tax liability. There would be no prohibition to levying a tax or piggybacking a tax to the federal definition of income including the definition of the adjusted gross income as we know it and, possibly, the deductions. However, there is a possibility that through the use of this language we may be prohibiting exemptions. I checked this matter with some of the law professors at the University of Michigan over the weekend and they, too, were just a little concerned about this language "or base."

Now, to allay the fears of those who may be disturbed about our piggybacking to the federal tax liability which would include graduated rates, I think it well to say that the language without the words "or base" would accomplish that purpose, because if we say that no income tax graduated as to rate shall be imposed by the state or any of its subdivisions, I think we would by indirection forbid the imposition of a tax based on the federal liability which is arrived at through a graduated rate structure; and, since I have a grave fear that the use of the term "or base" might preclude the allowance of exemptions, I feel that the words "or base" should be deleted.

On page 405 of the journal, in the committee reasons it has added a sentence in its report that states, "The legislature could prescribe reasonable exemptions for a flat rate income tax." Now, this is in the report, but it is quite possible that although we have stated it in the report we may by this language be precluding the allowance of exemptions, and I therefore move that these words be stricken.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen, is recognized.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this matter was considered at great length by the committee on finance and taxation, and the reasons for the words "or base" are explained in the committee report as Mr. Austin said. Without the words "or base" you do not really have any protection against an indirectly graduated state income tax, because a flat rate tax imposed upon the federal tax liability would simply pick up all of the graduation of the federal liability. Without these words "or base" there is no question but what in my judgment a nominally flat rate tax could be made a graduated income tax.

We made it very clear in the committee report that a flat rate income tax could be made the subject of exemptions by the legislature. I don't think that anyone has disputed it. The committee report is intended to make that crystal clear. I cannot imagine that any court construing the language in the light of the committee report would doubt or question the right of the legislature to grant reasonable exemptions.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Austin. As many as are in favor will respond by saying aye. Those opposed?

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will report the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Sharpe offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "state" by striking out the balance of the line; so that the sentence will read, "No income tax graduated as to rate or base shall be imposed by the state."

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. SHARPE: In view of the fact that this issue will be taken care of in local government as pertains to cities, I would like the assurance now that it will be handled by local government and will not be put in this section. Mr. Allen spoke about the fact that this is going to be in local government, and I know it is, but we don't want—I am interested in not putting in the constitution that they may levy a tax. I would like to delete these last 6 words, and let us take care of this in the city government.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell yields to the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge, Mr. Elliott?

MR. SHARPE: Yes, sir.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Will the secretary read the amendment?

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: The chairman of local government has no objection to Mr. Sharpe offering the proper amendment to the local government article, or the section that it applies to, at that time.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Howell persist in his amendment?

MR. SHARPE: I would like to have this explained to me now. Mr. Allen can do it if he wants. I see he is on his feet. Is this going to interfere with anything that we might do in amending the article on local government?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell yields to the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I think as a practical matter, the political subdivision should not, for example, be allowed a graduated tax and the state not be permitted. I think that would be very bad and I don't think the convention would vote for it. I also feel that when we put a prohibition against a graduated tax in, that it will apply not only to the state but to all of its children which are the local units. So I think that what this committee has approved does pertain to the local units and that we shouldn't try and make a separation. I think we have made that decision and for practical purposes it means that issue is closed when we get to cities and villages and so on. In other words, I don't think this issue should come up in local government. I will yield to Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell has the floor. Does the gentleman from Howell persist in offering his amendment?

MR. SHARPE: I will yield to Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to the gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Sharpe, I think Mr. Allen has clearly indicated that in terms of whether or not you want anybody, any taxing authority in the state, to be permitted to levy a graduated income tax, this is the time to dispose of that question. If the committee proposal stands, why certainly, an amendment in the local government article which would permit a political subdivision of the state to levy a graduated income tax, being inconsistent with this, would be out of order; but this is the time to settle the issue in terms of a graduated tax. It doesn't deal with any other aspect of the taxing power of local units of government.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell retains the floor. Does he persist in offering this amendment?

MR. SHARPE: I am not so sure, but I think I do. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: All right, the gentleman's amendment is pending business. Does the gentleman desire to proceed?

MR. SHARPE: I think you understand what my fear is, Mr. Chairman, and if this is not substantial, then I will withdraw my amendment; but if it is a substantial fear, then I would not withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair is in no position to rule upon the degree of the gentleman's fear. (laughter)

MR. SHARPE: I would like to ask Mr. Downs, here; he has a city mind.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman has the floor. He yields to the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. If Mr. Sharpe does withdraw the amendment, I shall be glad to reintroduce it. I rise to support the amendment. I believe we should separate here the matter of state finances and local government. I believe the chairman of the finance committee very accurately says that if this amendment is not adopted, then for practical purposes local government would be precluded from discussing the pros and cons of whether a city, for example, has a right to adopt the piggyback tax. I think from the logical development of the convention the matter of the local taxes should more appropriately be taken up when we discuss local government.

I therefore support Mr. Sharpe's amendment and believe that our convention will function in a more orderly fashion if we discuss the subject matter under the subject of the local government report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell.

MR. SHARPE: Thank you, Mr. Downs. I am glad to find some support. Now, I am not an experienced politician and I have found that when a curve ball comes I can hardly distinguish it from a straight one. (laughter) So I think, Mr. Chairman, that I will insist on my amendment being voted on. I think we should delete these words and then I am sure, as you all have been assured, that it will come back again in local government.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman insists upon his amendment. The gentleman from Birmingham.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the committee, I would oppose the amendment. Mr. Allen clearly indicated that we should not make a distinction between state and local units of government in terms of permitting a local unit to graduate an income tax but prohibiting the state from doing so. The principle of graduation or nongraduation is, after all, the only question here and if this committee opposes the principle of a graduated income tax, it seems to me that consistently we must oppose it not only for the state but also for local units of government.

I would point out to Mr. Sharpe that this provision makes no difference at all in terms of the general taxing power of local units of government, and that question will be before us when we get to the local government section. The only question here is whether both the state and local units of government shall be prohibited from graduating any income tax which they seek to impose.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman from Birmingham desire to yield to either the gentleman from Kalamazoo or the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge, who are seeking recognition?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I will yield first to the gentleman from Kalamazoo.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Van Dusen has practically given my speech. I think that we cannot have 2 sets of rates, 1 for the state and 1 for local units. We could constitutionally if Mr. Sharpe's amendment prevailed, but I think it would be very bad and once we have made the decision on the state level we better stay consistent, and I would oppose the Sharpe amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Pleasant Ridge?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I will so yield.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I am persuaded that this particular item requires discussion and decision at this particular time and I would hope that when it is decided, whether we decide it favorably or unfavorably, that there will be no attempt to bring it up in the local government article. We are going to have enough on our hands as it is.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman desire to proceed? If not, the gentleman from St. Clair Shores will be recognized, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise to support the position of Delegate Sharpe, and I want to assure him that this bipartisan support that he is getting is one that is motivated by a desire to work out a problem and not the desire to throw any straight balls or curve balls. We feel that we have a mutual problem here, and here is a problem that I feel in my mind is more sensitive and will be looked at more closely by more people when they evaluate the long range effect of this constitution than any other particular item that we have before us.

I would like to respectfully disagree with the members of the committee on local government that this is an issue that we should set aside. I have pointed out before that I have sponsored a proposal along these lines that Mr. Sharpe speaks of at this point and I didn't feel that I had had an opportunity to present, at the proper time, my feelings to the committee. I was granted an audience with the committee on finance and taxation that did review my matter; they listened very courteously to my argument; but I felt that the die had been cast and I was given an appearance for courtesy's sake.

I honestly feel that we must divide the issues here. The issues are much too complex to throw between these 2 matters. I feel that if we set aside the issue for a later date, the die will be so firmly cast, the decision will be so irrevocable, that we will not be able to make any changes, and I certainly support and appreciate the position of Mr. Sharpe. I feel that we must separate the issues so that we can take them up in their logical order.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The lady from Highland Park is recognized.

MISS DONNELLY: While I am sympathetic with the intent that I believe Mr. Sharpe wishes to reach and be successful in in another instance, I don't think it is pertinent to this issue. This issue is not whether one resident of one city may tax the resident of another city; this issue is how they can be taxed any place in the state. Therefore, I rise to oppose his issue for this reason and wish to support the majority report.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell, Mr. Sharpe, author of the amendment, is recognized.

MR. SHARPE: Now, this is a good, clear example of what this rush, rush, rush business is, in my opinion. Now, this material is coming to us so fast that this is not — to me, this taxation is a blind pig somewhere that I know very little about, and I will admit this, and I don't frequent blind pigs, either; (laughter) but I want to tell you this: that I had to put this amendment in until I knew what we were doing, and I am not so sure that I am so sure of what we are doing yet. But this is a real indication to me. Now, like yesterday, and with all of the reports that Mr. Austin gave — and I respect his judgment tremendously on taxation — I did not know exactly what I was doing and maybe I am the only one that didn't know what they were doing, but this is because I didn't get the minority report until after the minority had started their report. I didn't get a chance to study it. If this is any indication as to what is going to continue, I am sure that there are maybe many of us that will not be voting too intelligently.

Now, if this amendment that I have just offered does not prohibit in the future, before this convention is over, in the discussion on the local government committee proposals the opportunity to offer another amendment which will prohibit a mother city from taxing anyone outside of its own residents, then I will withdraw it; but if it does not, and I do not get this guarantee, then I won't withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Does the gentleman desire to yield to the chairman of the local government committee?

MR. SHARPE: I will be glad to yield to Mr. Brake first and then I will.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: I am afraid, Mr. Sharpe, that you have 2 issues completely confused. What you have offered has nothing to do with whether a mother city may tax the residents of outlying territories. What you are doing is saying any tax in the mother city may be a graduated income tax. You are striking out what we have said that any tax in the mother city may not be a graduated income tax. Your other issue of whether the city can tax nonresidents is not involved in what you propose at all.

MR. SHARPE: I begin to see the light. I am a little bit thick headed, maybe, today. We have had several night meetings here lately. As I am assured, then, Mr. Brake, that later I can offer this again, I withdraw this amendment now and will offer it later on in local government to prohibit the city from — or attempt to prohibit a mother city from taxing its outstate or outcity residents.

MR. BRAKE: All you are going to need is votes. (laughter)

MR. SHARPE: That is all I am going to need.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell has the floor. Does he desire to yield further?

MR. SHARPE: I will yield to my good chairman on the local government committee.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Sharpe, I think your point is exactly the point that Mr. Kuhn was making, and I assured Mr. Kuhn that his amendment would be in order in the discussion of the local government article, and I assure you of the same thing.

MR. SHARPE: I wondered; it would be between Mr. Kuhn and myself. Mr. Kuhn may have been a little sharper this morning than I was. I did not quite catch the point so soon. I would like to yield to my friend over here.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman yields to the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Sharpe. I do not have any strong feelings regarding where the difficult problem that we have before us will be settled. I feel that the conclusion that we arrive at, if we have the opportunity to debate and present our points of view in an uninhibited atmosphere, will be fine, as long as we have that opportunity; so I will withhold any strong feeling that I have of insisting that this matter be resolved at the present time with the assurance that we will have the opportunity to debate and speak on this matter at a later point, and certainly my withdrawal at this particular time will not be prejudicial to my position in the future. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Howell still retains the floor.

MR. SHARPE: I will at this time be glad to withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection it is withdrawn. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, the motion prevails and the committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain items on which the secretary will give a detailed report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 51, has considered several amendments thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

Mr. Elliott has asked that the following announcement be made: the committee on local government will meet at 1:10 this afternoon, a very important meeting, in room A.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the committee on administration has a very important meeting at 1:15 on the post constitutional convention budget. I urge all the committee members to attend.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, a lot was said this morning about creating a new image, so I might tell you that if you want a truly new image I would consider making myself available as the candidate for governor on the Republican ticket. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The chair recognizes Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: On behalf of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedules, I wish to announce that the subcommittee chairman on eminent domain is in the building although he was not in attendance this morning. We will have the meeting with the highway commissioner and other personnel from that department and it is urged that all members of the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule meet immediately following this session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. President, I would like to move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mrs. Hatcher. All in favor say aye.

The motion prevails and we are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 12:05 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m, reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

During the recess Mr. Bledsoe filed with the secretary a request for leave of absence from the afternoon session of today and the session of tomorrow, Friday, since he must be in Marquette to fill a court obligation which was contracted for prior to the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection Mr. Bledsoe will be excused.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of items on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bentley; those in favor say aye, those opposed no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Bentley.

[Whereupon, Mr. Bentley assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The committee will be in order.

MR. DADE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: For what purpose does the gentleman from Detroit wish to speak?

MR. DADE: A point of information, Mr. Chairman. I am wondering if the bell that rings to summon us back could — if there could be a perceptible pause between the time that the secretary says, "Are you ready to vote" and the bell rings. There may be certain business we may be engaged in from which we cannot come back with rapidity. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: I think the secretary should answer that one in person, if he will, please.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you, Mr. Dade, for the suggestion, and we will do our best to comply with the request.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The pending business before the committee is Committee Proposal 51, as amended. For what purpose does the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. DeVries, arise?

MR. DeVRIES: A point of information. The committee on administration 2 days ago passed a motion suggesting to the secretary that we pause 1 minute between the time the bell rings and the vote is taken. I did not have a chance to pass on the information to you.

MR. DADE: Thank you, sir.

SECRETARY CHASE: Thank you, we will observe it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: For what purpose does the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Norris, arise?

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to request personal privilege at this point to address myself to a matter which has been called to my attention in the State Journal, the Lansing newspaper.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Mr. Norris, the secretary believes that you should raise the point of personal privilege in the convention rather than in committee of the whole.

MR. NORRIS: All right.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Are there amendments to the second paragraph of Committee Proposal 51?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Snyder offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 1, after "state" by striking out the balance of the line.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from St. Clair Shores is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I had the opportunity during my lunch period to take in some of the deliberative qualities I thought that this convention required, and I reviewed the matter that we had before us shortly before our recess and, in reviewing the matter, I was of the opinion that we had before us a 2 part problem; and the original decision that I made this morning to back off my problem I felt was one that did not recognize the first part of the problem. It is my feeling that we have before us, one, the question of whether a municipality shall tax the residences of nonresidents on their tax and, two, whether the municipality shall be restricted in its right to levy a certain tax.

Now, it was my intention this morning to take care of the first part by referring it to the committee on local government. I feel confident that I will be granted an audience and be given an opportunity to express to the 143 delegates other than myself of this convention what I feel are some of the problems that we may have should the municipality be permitted to tax nonresidents. This, however, did not take into consideration the other part of the problem, and I must go on record to say that I feel at this time we as delegates have an obligation to all of the people of Michigan that we must recognize some of the problems they have in their immediate communities. I do not feel that we should write anything into the constitution so restrictive that should they desire to raise money within their communities properly they should be restricted in this sense.

So in view of this 2 hour deliberation I have had since our recess, I have resubmitted the amendment that Mr. Sharpe submitted and withdrew, and I urgently ask that the delegates to this convention separate the problem and give the suburban communities the opportunity to express their point of view to the committee on local government but, at the same time, recognize the other segments that need the money and remove from the proposed committee report the restrictive language. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, I think the point was very clearly made this morning that the only question here is whether, having prohibited a graduated income tax for the state, you want to permit it at the local level. The committee would oppose it.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from St. Clair Shores, Mr. Snyder. As many as are in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries and Mrs. Koeze offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 20, after "applied.", by inserting "Exemptions from taxation may be granted only by general laws. Statutes providing for exemptions from taxation may be altered or repealed, except those statutes exempting from taxation real and personal property used exclusively for religious, educational, charitable or cemetery purposes, and owned by any corporation or association organized and conducted exclusively for one of those purposes and not operating for profit, or by an association, corporation, individual or other legal entity in trust for the use and benefit of any religious congregation or for the support, aid and maintenance of any hospital, almshouse, school, seminary, church, parsonage, or for burial grounds or other religious, educational or charitable purposes within this state.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Grand Rapids, Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, I would like permission to approach the rostrum to withdraw the amendment and offer a substitute without yielding the floor.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: Without objection, the permission will be so granted. The gentleman from Grand Rapids, without objection, has withdrawn the amendment and by unanimous consent offers the following as a substitute, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries and Mrs. Koeze offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 20, after "applied.", by inserting "Property held by a nonprofit corporation, association or legal entity and used exclusively for religious, educational, charitable or cemetery purposes shall be exempt from real and personal property taxes.".

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman is recognized in support of his amendment.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the first amendment that was withdrawn was the language of Delegate Proposal 1476. I received a good many notes from delegates who said they were willing to support the concept but that the language was too wordy and that it should be reduced, and that is what Mrs. Koeze and I have attempted to do in this substitute amendment. I would just like to make a brief statement on it. I hope we keep our debate on this short. I think you know exactly what the amendment proposes to do.

Michigan's property tax laws now exempt from taxation certain real and personal property owned by religious, charitable and educational institutions. The adoption of this amendment by the committee would give constitutional status to the exemptions that are now provided by statute. The statutory exemptions to charitable and educational organizations are properly justified, I feel, on the grounds that these institutions supply necessary services which the state would have to provide if they were not provided by these institutions. The exemption for religious organization is based upon the wise judgment that morality is necessary for the stability of government and religious organizations directly advance morality and thereby further the welfare of this state.

The same reasons which justify statutory exemptions are even more valid in support of constitutional exemptions. The constitution properly should concern itself with fundamental things. Protection of religious, educational and charitable institutions from taxation guarantees that the people's wholesome interest in these areas will not be encroached upon by any future legislative action. Constitutional status to these exemptions is consistent with the historical concern of the people that religious, educational and charitable institutions be encouraged and advanced whenever possible. I think that most of you are aware of the periodic attempts to pressure the legislature into discontinuing these worthwhile exemptions. Should such an attempt succeed, it would seriously affect the work of these now exempt institutions. While we do not believe that the legislators now in office will yield to attacks on these exemptions, it does not follow that some legislature in a future time might not use the power to tax to harass these institutions.

This amendment is very similar to a provision adopted by the New Jersey Constitutional Convention of 1947. This amendment is not inconsistent with the present uniformity provision of the state constitution. All it would do is to take a sound principle now expressed in statutory language, a principle which has withstood the test of time, and incorporate that principle into the constitution where it properly belongs. I respectfully urge the committee of the whole to favorably consider adopting this amendment to the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, quite obviously the committee has no quarrel with the objective of this amendment. The amendment in its original form was submitted to and considered at length by the committee, and the committee believed that the proposal was statutory in character and for that reason should not be included in the constitution. In its present form it is less objectionable from that standpoint, the wording having been reduced to a more concise statement of principle.

I think that gives you the background of the committee consideration of the matter. I am unable to speak further for the committee with respect to it. Perhaps Mr. Brake might wish to add something further.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, there was absolutely no difference of opinion in the committee about the propriety of this, of these exemptions. I think every member of the committee agreed that the exemptions are proper and that they should be continued. It was the thinking of the committee that they were properly legislative. They are legislative now.

I call attention to the fact that these particular exemptions are among — my memory may be wrong — but 15 or 20 listed exemptions from taxation. Very likely Dr. DeVries is right in saying this is the most important of all, but there are some others that are rather close to people. A certain amount of your household goods are exempt. Certain animals that the farmer has which are supposed to furnish him with a livelihood are exempt, and there are any number of other exemptions, all statutory. The only issue before us at all is whether or not these should be kept statutory or whether they should be written into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Bay City, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I have a question for Delegate DeVries. Inasmuch as this amendment would incorporate by reference 15 to 20 statutes, if I understand correctly, into the constitution, I wonder whether you have a list of those statutes that we would be writing in or whether we could be supplied with the list. Whenever embarking upon an incorporation by reference, I really do think it is very important that we know exactly what we are doing.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman from Bay City yields to the gentleman from Grand Rapids for a reply.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and Delegate Higgs, I don't think there is any reference involved in the amendment. Let me read it again. It is not 1476; it is the amendment that we are considering.

[The amendment was read by Mr. DeVries. For text, see above, page 897.]

I think it is more a statement of principle, of philosophy, Mr. Higgs, than it is of reference to ohetr legislation.

MR. HIGGS: One further question, if I may. Delegate DeVries, could you answer this question. Is the substance of the amendment which is being offered the existing statutory law?

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and Delegate Higgs, I think it is the intent of the existing statutes, yes sir.

MR. HIGGS: I wonder then, if I could direct one further question to Delegate Brake?

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The gentleman may yield to whom he desires.

MR. HIGGS: Were your comments, Delegate Brake, directed at the amendment which has been read or the amendment which we have on our desks?

MR. BRAKE: The only thing that is before us now is the substitute amendment. If I am anticipating what you are thinking, I have not, of course, had time since this substitute was offered to get the statute and check and see if the wording is the same. Certainly the intent is the same and undoubtedly covers the same subject matter as the statute.

MR. HIGGS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN BENTLEY: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to support the amendment offered by Delegates DeVries and Koeze. I would suggest that this is not purely a statutory matter in that it does limit the right of the legislature to act to remove the exemptions. Dr. DeVries has indicated that it certainly is doubtful that such action would be taken, but it is a clear declaration on the part of the people of the state that they may not take this action whether they wish to or not.
